Tax Relief at the Cost of Additional Complexity: Making Sense of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997

The Taxpayer Relief Bill of 1997 (H.R. 2014), containing the biggest tax cut in more than 16 years, was passed by Congress on July 31, 1997, by an overwhelming bipartisan majority (House: 389-43; Senate 92-8). It was signed into law on August 5, 1997, thereby marking an end to the relatively quick, yet remarkable, journey of this significant legislation. With over 800 Internal Revenue Code amendments and nearly 300 new provisions, 150 of which are already effective, tax professionals must assimilate many changes in a short period of time.

More impressive than the girth of this legislation is the broad range of taxpayers affected by it. The Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 (P.L. 105-34) makes sweeping Code changes affecting individuals, families, and investors, as well as small and large businesses. Key provisions provide for capital gains reductions; child tax credits; educational incentives; savings and investment incentives; alternative minimum tax reform; and estate, gift, and generation-skipping tax reform. In addition to these well-publicized tax breaks, the new law also includes numerous extensions, technical corrections, and simplification and revenue-generating provisions.

This tax relief does not come without a price as the Act introduces additional complexity into the Code. One needs only to ponder the interaction of the new child tax credit provisions with the already complex earned income tax credit, or review the manner in which capital gain breaks are being implemented, to conclude that Congress' previously stated goal of tax simplification has been all but abandoned. Other provisions, such as the phase-in of the new unified credit rates, take place over such an extended period of time that they present a different type of challenge for practitioners—how to provide cost-effective planning services for their clients over the drawn out phase-in periods.

Looking beyond its substance, this Act is also memorable for another reason. It represents the first time a President has canceled provisions from enacted legislation pursuant to his authority granted under the Line Item Veto Act (P.L. 104-130). On August 11, 1997, President Clinton indicated that he was striking two provisions from the Taxpayer Relief Act, as well as one non-tax provision from the Balanced Budget Act. By exercising his authority in this manner, the President suggested he hoped to deter future attempts of using targeted provisions in the tax law that lead to abuse or serve to benefit only a handful of taxpayers rather than the broader public interest.

As we go to press, the final outcome of the canceled provisions remains in question. The uncertainty surrounding it is due in part to the procedures set out in the Line Item Veto Act making it possible for Congress to ultimately override the presidential cancellation with a supermajority in both Houses of Congress; but more importantly, it is also due to the possibility of a successful legal challenge to the constitutionality of the Line Item Veto Act. CCH, in its coverage of the Act, cautions readers with respect to any explanation or amended Code section relating to a canceled provision. In addition, we have included a complete listing of the 79 provisions that were identified by the Joint Committee on Taxation as possible candidates for presidential cancellation at ¶ 12.

In this work, CCH is providing its customers with a single integrated reference tool that covers the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 as well as the tax provisions contained in the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (P.L. 105-33) and the Taxpayer Browsing Protection Act (P.L.105-35). All three Acts were passed by Congress just before the August recess, and each was signed into law by the President shortly thereafter. The Conference Report including the related bill text is available in a separate publication, Taxpayer Relief Bill of 1997 (H.R. 2014), dated July 31, 1997. This publication also includes the relevant bill text and committee reports for the tax-related provisions of the Balanced Budget Bill of 1997 (H.R. 2015).

Taken together, these Acts represent a formidable body of new tax law that will engage the minds and time of tax practitioners for years to come. CCH remains dedicated to helping the tax professional understand and work with these new laws by providing this complete and accurate analysis of the new legislation.

1997 TAX LEGISLATION: LAW, EXPLANATION AND ANALYSIS provides you with a CCH-explanation of the tax provisions of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 (P.L.105-34), the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (P.L. 105-33), and the Taxpayer Browsing Protection Act (P.L. 105-35). In conjunction with CCH editors, practitioners and academics have provided practical guidance and planning strategies and identified pitfalls to be avoided as a result of the 1997 tax law changes. Also included is the text of the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code that were amended, added, or repealed by these Acts, and the relevant controlling Committee Reports. Throughout the LAW, EXPLANATION AND ANALYSIS, references are made to these Acts, as applicable.

Here is a guide to the separate features herein:

HIGHLIGHTS

A summary of the Highlights of the three Acts precedes, and provides references to the CCH Explanations to give you a quick overview of the major provisions of the three Acts. The Highlights are topically arranged by subject and provide a means of entry into the Explanations. See ¶ 5.

CCH EXPLANATIONS

CCH-prepared Explanations of the Taxpayer Relief Act, the Balanced Budget Act, and the Taxpayer Browsing Protection Act have been integrated throughout and are arranged according to subject matter for ease of use. Each Explanation includes a discussion of background or prior law that helps to put the law changes in proper context.

Incorporated throughout the Explanations is expert commentary provided by practitioners and academics. This commentary highlights planning opportunities and strategies engendered by these Acts. Pitfalls to avoid are identified. Charts illustrating the ramifications of specific law changes are incorporated throughout the Explanations. Also, included is an introduction identifying those taxpayers affected by the 1997 tax law changes.

The explanatory paragraphs are followed by boldface amendment lines (1) indicating the Act section of the applicable Act and the Code section, added, amended, or repealed; and (2) providing cross references to the law and to the controlling Committee Reports reproduced. Unless otherwise indicated, all references in the amendment lines are to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997. The CCH Explanations begin at ¶ 65.

INDEX. Because the topical or subject matter approach to new legislation is usually the easiest, you may access the material in the CCH Explanations through an extensive Index that covers all three Acts. See page 1227.

AMENDED CODE PROVISIONS

CCH has reflected the changes necessitated by the Taxpayer Relief Act, the Balanced Budget Act, and the Taxpayer Browsing Protection Act in the Internal Revenue Code provisions affected. Any changed or added portion is set out in italics. The underlying Act making the change is identified for clarity and ease of use. Deleted material or the text of the Code provision prior to amendment appears in the Amendment Notes following each reconstructed Code provision. The applicable date for each Amendment Note is set out in boldface type. At the end of each amended Code provision—and before the Amendment Note—CCH provides references to (1) the corresponding controlling Committee Reports; and (2) the CCH explanation of that amended, added, or repealed Code provision. The text of the Code begins at ¶ 5001.

NON-CODE PROVISIONS

The sections of the Taxpayer Relief Act and the Balanced Budget Act that do not amend the Internal Revenue Code appear in full text in Act section order. The applicable underlying Act is identified. Included is the text of Act sections that amend prior tax acts, such as the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996, the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act, the Uruguay Round Agreements Act (GATT), and the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA).

The text of these provisions appears in Act section order beginning at ¶ 7001.

EFFECTIVE DATES

Charts listing the major effective dates provide you with a reference bridge between Code sections and Act sections and indicate the retroactive or prospective nature of the laws explained. A separate table of effective dates is provided for the Taxpayer Relief Act (see ¶ 15), the Balanced Budget Act (see ¶ 17), and the Taxpayer Browsing Protection Act (see ¶ 19).

SPECIAL FINDING DEVICES

There are tables indicating Code sections added, amended, or repealed (see ¶ 25), provisions of other acts that were amended (see ¶ 35), Act sections not amending Internal Revenue Code sections (see ¶ 45), and Act sections amending Code sections (see ¶ 55), so that you can immediately determine whether a provision in which you are interested is affected. A table cross referencing Code sections to the CCH Explanations is also included (see ¶ 60).

Each Explanation chapter is preceded by a chapter table of contents listing the chapter contents. A detailed Table of Contents for LAW, EXPLANATION AND ANALYSIS is also included for easy identification of subject matter. See page 11.

COMMITTEE REPORTS

The Controlling Committee Reports officially explain the intent of Congress regarding the provisions of the three Acts. These Controlling Committee Reports—House, Senate, and Conference Committee Reports—appear in Act section order for each Act beginning at ¶ 10,001.

CLIENT LETTERS

Client letters explaining the ramifications of the tax law changes are included in the Appendix. These memoranda are intended for use by practitioners to help clients understand the recent law changes and the effect on a client's tax, financial, or estate plan. Sample client letters on: comprehensive tax planning, investment planning, IRA savings opportunities, education tax strategies, and estate planning are provided. See page 1215.

INDIVIDUALS

Standard Deduction. The standard deduction for an individual who can be claimed as a dependent on another taxpayer's return is equal to the lesser of (1) the standard deduction for individuals or (2) the greater of $500 or the sum of $250 and the dependent's earned income . . . . ¶ 101

Charitable Contributions. The deduction for donations of appreciated stock to private foundations has been extended through June 30, 1998. . . . . ¶ 105

Deduction for Charitable Mileage. The standard mileage rate that is to be used in computing the deduction for charitable use of an automobile has been increased to 14 cents per mile for post-1997 tax years . . . . ¶ 107

Home Office Deduction. The definition of a taxpayer's "principal place of business" has been expanded for purposes of claiming a home office expense deduction. The office must be used to conduct business-related administrative or management activities, and there can be no other fixed business location where such activities take place . . . . ¶ 109

Employee Meal Expenses. An increase in the meal expense deduction, from 50% to 80%, will be phased in over a 10-year period for employees subject to Department of Transportation hours-of-service rules . . . . ¶ 111

Travel Costs of Federal Investigators. Unreimbursed travel costs of qualifying federal employees who travel on temporary duty status in connection with the investigation of a federal crime are fully deductible . . . . ¶ 115

Governmental Employees. Certain governmental officials who are compensated in whole or in part on a fee basis can claim an above-the-line deduction for expenses paid or incurred with respect to the performance of services. This provision applies retroactively to post-1986 tax years . . . . ¶ 117

Child Tax Credit. A credit of $400 for 1998 and $500 for subsequent years can be claimed for children under age 17. An additional credit is available to families with three or more qualifying children. Eligibility for the credit phases out based on income levels . . . . ¶ 119

Earned Income Credit (EIC). A 10-year ineligibility period applies to taxpayers who fraudulently claim earned income credits, and a two-year disallowance period applies to those who erroneously claim EICs. Determinations of fraud or of reckless or intentional disregard of the rules and regulations are to be made in deficiency proceedings. Also, failure by a return preparer to comply with due diligence requirements when preparing a refund claim or a return claiming the EIC can result in liability for a $100 penalty . . . . ¶ 127

Sale of Principal Residence. Effective for transactions after May 6, 1997, taxpayers who sell or exchange property that they owned and occupied as a principal residence for at least two of the five years preceding the sale or exchange can elect a $250,000 ($500,000 for joint filers) exclusion from income of gain realized on the sale or exchange. This new exclusion replaces the one-time exclusion from income by taxpayers age 55 or over and the deferral of gain under Code Sec. 1034, which was repealed . . . . ¶ 129

Employer-Provided Parking. Employees will be eligible for an exclusion for employer-provided parking even if their employer offers them a choice between the parking and a cash equivalent. The cash offered is includible in income by employees who take the cash option . . . . ¶ 131

Foreign Earned Income Exclusion. The foreign earned income exclusion available to qualified U.S. citizens residing in foreign countries has been increased for post-1997 tax years . . . . ¶ 133

Police Officers and Firefighters. Full-time police or fire department employees who received payments on account of heart disease or hypertension during 1989, 1990, and 1991 and who separated from service before July 1, 1992, can exclude those benefits from income. Claims for credit or refund of tax overpayments for those years must be filed by August 5, 1998 . . . . ¶ 135

Slain Police Officers. Where public safety officers are killed in the line of duty, an exclusion is allowed for governmentally provided survivor annuities that satisfy the requirements for qualified plans and that are paid to a spouse, ex-spouse, or child of the officer . . . . ¶ 137

College Tuition Credit. Low- and middle-income taxpayers can claim the new HOPE Scholarship Credit for tuition costs incurred during a student's first two years of attendance at a college, university, or vocational school. A Lifetime Learning Credit is also available . . . . ¶ 139

Education Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs). Beginning in 1998, taxpayers can open education IRAs for the purpose of paying qualified higher education costs of the children who are designated trust beneficiaries. Annual contributions are limited to $500, are subject to phaseout, and must be made in cash. No contributions will be accepted after the beneficiary reaches age 18 . . . . ¶ 145

Educational Assistance Exclusion. The exclusion for employer-provided educational assistance has been retroactively reinstated and applies to courses beginning before June 1, 2000 . . . . ¶ 156

Interest on Education Loans. A limited deduction is allowed for interest paid on qualified education loans. This deduction is available to nonitemizers. The maximum deduction for 1998 is $1,000 . . . . ¶ 157

Student Loans. An expanded "forgiveness of loan" exclusion applies to student loans sponsored by exempt organizations . . . . ¶ 159

Roth IRAs. Although contributions to the new, backloaded "Roth IRA" are nondeductible, the buildup of interest and dividends in the account may be tax-free depending on how and when the taxpayer makes withdrawals. Eligibility to make contributions phases out based on the taxpayer's income level. The Roth IRA is available for post-1997 tax years . . . . ¶ 166

IRA Contributions by Active Plan Participants. The adjusted gross income phaseout limits for making deductible IRA contributions while actively participating in an employer-sponsored retirement plan are increased over a number of years. A separate phase-out limit applies to taxpayers who are not active participants but whose spouses actively participate in employer plans; taxpayers will no longer be considered active participants merely because their spouses are plan participants . . . . ¶ 172, 173

Education Expense Withdrawals. Premature distributions from an IRA that are used to pay "qualified higher education expenses" of the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, or their children or grandchildren are not subject to the 10% tax on early withdrawals. Certain reductions to the education expenses apply . . . ¶ 174

Home Purchase Withdrawals. "Qualified first-time homebuyer distributions" from an IRA are not subject to the 10% tax on early withdrawals. These withdrawals are subject to a $10,000 lifetime cap . . . . ¶ 177

Bullion Investments. IRA assets may be invested in certain platinum coins and gold, silver, platinum, or palladium bullion of a requisite fineness, provided that the bullion remains in the possession of the IRA trustee . . . . ¶ 180

Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT). The AMT exemption amount for children under age 14 has been increased and indexed for inflation . . . . ¶ 185

ESTATE AND GIFT TAX AND TRUSTS

Increase in Applicable Credit. The estate and gift tax credit will increase beginning in 1998. This will result in an increase in the applicable exclusion to $1 million in 2006 and thereafter . . . . ¶ 201

Inflation Adjustments. After 1998, the following amounts will be indexed annually for inflation: the $10,000 annual gift tax exclusion; the $750,000 ceiling on special use valuation; the $1 million generation-skipping transfer tax exemption, and the $1 million ceiling on the value of a closely held business eligible for the special low interest rate on installment payments of estate tax . . . . ¶ 204

Gifts From Revocable Trusts Within Three Years of Decedent's Death. Transfers from a revocable trust within three years of the decedent's death will be treated as if made directly by the decedent and, thus, the value of such transfers will not be includible in the decedent's gross estate . . . . ¶ 210

Qualified Conservation Easement. An executor can elect to exclude from a gross estate up to 40% of the value of any land subject to a qualified conservation easement, reduced by the amount of any charitable deduction claimed with respect to the land . . . . ¶ 214

Family-Owned Business Exclusion. Special estate tax treatment can be elected with respect to a family-owned business if the aggregate value of the decedent's interests in the business that pass to qualified heirs exceeds 50% of the decedent's adjusted gross estate and certain other requirements are met. A qualifying estate can elect to exclude the lesser of (1) the adjusted value of the decedent's qualified family-owned business interests or (2) the excess of $1.3 million over the applicable exclusion amount . . . . ¶ 215

Cash-Lease of Specially Valued Property. A decedent's lineal descendant (including a legally adopted child) can now cash lease specially valued real property to another member of the lineal descendant's family who continues to operate the farm or closely held business without disqualifying the property's special-use valuation. This provision is retroactive to 1977 . . . . ¶ 229

Marital Deduction for Survivor Annuities. A nonparticipant spouse's survivorship interest in a participant spouse's annuity arising under the state community property laws may be eligible for qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) treatment if the nonparticipant spouse predeceases the participant spouse . . . . ¶ 239

Waiver of Right to Recover Estate Tax. A surviving spouse's estate can waive the right to recover estate tax on certain QTIP property, as well as on property in which the surviving spouse had retained an interest, only if the surviving spouse's will or revocable trust contains specific language indicating the intent to waive the right of recovery . . . . ¶ 243

Predeceased-Parent Exception. Effective for post-1997 generation-skipping transfers, including taxable terminations and distributions, the predeceased-parent exception has been expanded to include transfers to collateral heirs if the transferor's lineal descendants are dead when the transfer is made . . . . ¶ 249

Gift Tax Filing Requirement Eliminated. Donors are no longer required to file federal gift tax returns for property contributed to a qualified charity in excess of the annual gift-tax exclusion so long as the donor's entire interest in the property was transferred .... ¶ 253

Revaluation of Gifts for Estate Tax Purposes. The IRS may no longer revalue an adequately disclosed gift for which the three-year limitations period has expired to determine the donor's estate tax liability. Rather, within the gift tax limitations period, it must issue a final notice containing its gift revaluation. The donor or the estate may challenge the notice in the Tax Court .... ¶ 255

Revocable Trusts as Part of Estate. Both an estate's executor and the trustee of the decedent's qualified revocable trust may make an irrevocable election to treat and tax the revocable trust as part of the estate for federal income tax purposes .... ¶ 261

65-Day Estate Distribution Rule. An executor can elect to treat distributions paid or credited by an estate within 65 days after the close of the estate's tax year as having been paid or credited on the last day of the preceding tax year .... ¶ 264

Charitable Remainder Trusts. A new 50% maximum annual payout rule and a new 10% minimum value requirement for the remainder interest now apply to charitable remainder annuity trusts and charitable remainder unitrusts .... ¶ 281

Transfers by Charitable Remainder Trusts to ESOPs. A charitable remainder trust can make limited transfers of qualified employer securities to an employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) without adversely affecting the trust's status, and the transfers will be deductible from the decedent's gross estate to the extent of the present value of the remainder interest .... ¶ 284

Taxation of a Funeral Trust's Earnings. The trustee of a qualified funeral trust may elect to pay income tax on the funeral trust's annual earnings using the rates that are generally applicable to estates and trusts............. ¶ 286

BUSINESS AND INVESTMENT

Capital Gains and Losses. Tax rates for individuals' long-term capital gains have been reduced, and the holding period for long-term capital assets has been increased to 18 months. Generally, for sales after May 6, 1997, the maximum capital gains rate is 20%, but an 18% rate applies to assets held more than five years that are sold after December 31, 2000. Lower rates apply to taxpayers in the 15% tax bracket .... ¶ 301-303

Corporate Alternative Tax Computation. The 35% alternative tax rate applies to the lesser of a corporation's net capital gain or its taxable income for tax years ending after 1997 .... ¶ 305

Small Business Stock. Individuals can roll over tax-free gain realized on the sale or exchange of qualified small business stock that was held for more than six months provided that the proceeds are used to purchase other qualified small business stock within 60 days of the sale .... ¶ 306

Terminations With Respect to Property. The "sale or exchange" treatment accorded to gain or loss from the cancellation, lapse, expiration, or other termination of a right or obligation that the taxpayer holds as a capital asset has been extended to all types of property .... ¶ 307

Appreciated Financial Positions. Investors' ability to lock in gains on appreciated financial positions without immediately recognizing income has been limited by a provision that treats certain hedging transactions as constructive sales .... ¶ 308-312

Net Operating Losses. The net operating loss carryback period has been shortened from three to two years, while the NOL carryforward period has been lengthened from 15 to 20 years. The three-year carryback period is retained for certain casualty, theft, and disaster losses, and special rules apply to real estate investment trusts, specified liability losses, excess interest losses, and corporate capital losses .... ¶ 315

Research Credit. The credit for qualified research expenditures has been retroactively reinstated and extended through June 30, 1998 .... ¶ 317

Work Opportunity Credit. The work opportunity tax credit, which can be claimed by employers hiring individuals from certain targeted groups, has been extended to cover wages paid to employees who begin work before July 1, 1998. The credit percentage has been modified and a new targeted group, composed of persons receiving supplemental security income benefits for any month ending within the 60-day period ending on the hiring date, has been added .... ¶ 318

Welfare-to-Work Credit. Employers can claim a new welfare-to-work credit for wages paid to recipients of long-term family assistance who begin work after 1997. The credit is equal to 35% of the first $10,000 of eligible wages in the first year of employment and 50% of the first $10,000 of eligible wages in the second year of employment. .... ¶ 320

Orphan Drug Credit. The credit for qualified clinical testing expenses incurred with respect to certain drugs used to treat rare diseases or conditions has been retroactively reinstated and made permanent .... ¶ 319

General Business Credit. The carryback period for the general business credit has been reduced from three years to one year, and the carryforward period has been increased from 15 years to 20 years for credits arising in tax years beginning after 1997 .... ¶ 321

Exclusion for Qualified Lessee Construction Allowances. Rent reductions or funds received by a lessee from its lessor under a short-term lease of retail space are excludable from income if the amounts are used for qualified construction or improvements to the space in connection with the lessee's trade or business .... ¶ 322

Income Forecast Method of Depreciation. Only film, video tape, sound recordings, copyrights, books, patents, and other property to be specified in regulations are subject to the income forecast method of depreciating trade or business assets. Consumer durables subject to rent-to-own contracts are ineligible for the income forecast method; instead, they have a three-year recovery period and a four-year class life for purposes of the modified accelerated cost recovery system .... ¶ 325

Percentage Depletion for Marginal Production. The 100% taxable income limit on the deduction for percentage depletion with respect to oil and gas properties is temporarily suspended for marginal properties for tax years beginning after 1997 and before 2000 .... ¶ 326

Environmental Cleanup Costs. An election to deduct currently amounts paid or incurred for the cleanup of certain hazardous substances can be made through December 31, 2000. Failure to make such an election will result in classification of the costs as capital expenses .... ¶ 330

Employer-Provided Meals. Employer-provided meals the value of which is excludable by employees under Code Sec. 119 qualify as a de minimis fringe benefit, and the expense is fully deductible by the employer .... ¶ 332

Inventory Shrinkage. A business that normally takes a physical count of its inventories on a regular and consistent basis and that appropriately adjusts the inventories and its methods of estimation does not have to take an actual year-end inventory in order to determine whether shrinkage—inventory loss attributable to undetected theft—has occurred .... ¶ 340

Mark-to-Market Election for Certain Traders and Dealers. In addition to securities dealers, commodities dealers and traders of securities or commodities can now elect to use the mark-to-market accounting method .... ¶ 341

Installment Sales. Manufacturers of tangible personal property will not be able to use the installment method to report income from sales to their dealers in tax years beginning after August 5, 1998 .... ¶ 343

Farmers. An individual engaged in the business of farming can make an irrevocable election to average farm income over a three-year period. One-third of "elected farm income" must be allocated to each of the prior three tax years ... ¶ 361

Installment Method of Accounting. For AMT purposes, farmers may use the installment method of accounting for income from the disposition of property used or produced in the trade or business of farming .... ¶ 363

Livestock Sales. Cash-method farmers who are forced to sell certain livestock due to flooding or other weather-related conditions can elect to defer recognition of gain on the sale or to treat the sale as an involuntary conversion .... ¶ 367

Empowerment Zones. The designation of two new urban-area empowerment zones under the present-law criteria, as well as 20 additional empowerment zones with expanded eligibility criteria, have been authorized. Certain tax incentives for the new zones have been modified or disallowed, and special eligibility rules apply to nominated areas in Alaska and Hawaii. Newly created empowerment zone bonds are not subject to the volume cap applicable to private activity bonds .... ¶ 371-379

District of Columbia Tax Incentives. Additional census tracts located in the District of Columbia that have a poverty rate of 20% or higher have been designated as the District of Columbia Enterprise Zone for a five-year period beginning in 1998. Businesses and individuals residing in the Zone are eligible for special tax incentives .... ¶ 381-387

PARTNERSHIPS AND S CORPORATIONS

Basis Allocation for Distributed Properties. The basis allocation rules applicable to partnership property distributions have been modified. A distributee partner's basis is allocated first to unrealized receivables and inventory items in an amount equal to the partnership's basis in each of the properties and then to other distributed properties to the extent of the partnership's basis in those properties.. ¶ 403

Section 751 Property. The substantial appreciation requirement for inventory is removed from the definition of Section 751 property with respect to sales or exchanges of partnership interests .... ¶ 410

Electing Large Partnerships. Simplified reporting requirements have been established for electing large partnerships. Eligible entities include partnerships that had 100 or more partners, other than service partners, during the preceding tax year. An electing large partnership will not terminate for tax purposes merely because 50% or more of its interests are sold or exchanged within a 12-month period. Most items of partnership income and deductions are combined at the partnership level, and net amounts are passed through to the partners. Passive loss limitation activities must be separately reported .... ¶ 412-420

Special Audit Procedures. A special audit system has been created for qualifying large partnerships that elect to apply the new, simplified flow-through reporting system. A partnership is ineligible to elect simplified reporting if its principal business is the buying and selling of commodities or if substantially all of the partners perform substantial services for the entity . . . . ¶ 421-430

Partnership Representative. Each electing large partnership must designate a partner or other person who will have the sole authority to act on behalf of the entity; if no such designation is made, the IRS can designate any one of the partners as the person authorized to act on the entity's behalf. However, the partnership can subsequently designate another partner to replace the IRS appointee . . . . ¶ 424

Deceased Partner. A partnership's tax year closes with respect to a partner whose entire interest in the entity terminates due to death, liquidation, or otherwise . . . . ¶ 465

Small Business Trusts. Charitable remainder unitrusts and charitable remainder annuity trusts have been added to the list of trusts that do not qualify as electing small business trusts that can hold stock in S corporations . . . . ¶ 473

CORPORATIONS AND SPECIAL ENTITIES

Gain Recognition on Corporate Spin-Offs. New restrictions have been imposed regarding the application of nonrecognition-of-gain treatment with respect to the acquisition and disposition of stock of a distributing or controlled corporation. If either entity is acquired pursuant to a plan or arrangement in existence on the date of distribution, gain is generally recognized by the other corporation as of that date. These new rules limit a company's ability to dispose of a portion of its business to new shareholders without recognizing gain. The-gain recognition provisions apply when one or more persons acquire a 50% or greater interest in either the distributing or controlled corporations pursuant to a plan or series of related transactions . . . . ¶ 503

Dividends-Received Deduction. A corporate shareholder is not entitled to a dividends-received deduction unless the applicable holding period for the dividend-paying stock is met with respect to each dividend received . . . . ¶ 517

Contributions of Computer Technology. Certain gifts of computer technology and equipment by C corporations to elementary or secondary schools qualify for an "augmented charitable deduction" in post-1997 tax years. The donated property must fit productively into the school's education plan . . . . ¶ 519

Alternative Minimum Tax. For tax years beginning after 1997, small corporations that meet a $5 million gross receipts test are not subject to AMT. Liability for AMT applies prospectively only for entities that cease to be small corporations . . . . ¶ 525

Depreciation Adjustment. The recovery periods used for purposes of the AMT depreciation adjustment have been conformed to the recovery periods used for purposes of the regular tax with respect to property, including pollution control facilities, placed in service after 1998 . . . . ¶ 527

Real Estate Investment Trusts (REITs). A number of REIT provisions have been modified, effective for tax years beginning after August 5, 1997. . ¶ 539-561

Penalties for Failure to Ascertain Ownership. For any tax year in which a REIT failed to comply with regulations on ascertaining ownership, it will not be disqualified, but it will have to pay, on notice and at the IRS's demand, a $25,000 penalty ($50,000 for intentional disregard) . . . . ¶ 539

Impermissible Tenant Services Income. A REIT may receive a small amount of impermissible tenant services income without causing all amounts received from the tenant to fail to qualify as rent . . . . ¶ 541

Constructive Ownership of Stock. A special 25% attribution rule will apply when determining whether a partner's stock is attributed to the partnership for purposes of assessing whether a REIT or its shareholders own an impermissible amount of a REIT tenant or independent contractor . . . . ¶ 543

Retention of Long-Term Capital Gains. A REIT may elect to retain, rather than distribute, and pay the tax on its net long-term capital gains. Although the shareholders must then include their proportionate shares of the undistributed gains in income and pay tax on them, they will receive a credit for the amount of tax paid by the REIT . . . . ¶ 545

30% Gross Income Test Repealed. A REIT is no longer subject to the restriction that it derive less than 30% of its gross income from the sale or disposition of stock or securities held for less than one year; certain real property held less than four years; and property in a prohibited transaction . . . . ¶ 547

TAX-EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS

State-Sponsored Health Care Coverage. The category of persons eligible to receive medical care coverage from nonprofit, state-sponsored organizations that provide medical care has been expanded to include the child and spouse of a person who qualifies as a high-risk individual, provided that certain conditions are satisfied . . . . ¶ 603

Provider-Sponsored Organization. An exempt organization can participate in a joint venture with a for-profit organization if the venture furthers a charitable purpose and the sharing of profits and losses does not privately inure to, or substantially benefit, any individual . . . . ¶ 606

Sponsorship Payments. Certain qualified sponsorship payments that are solicited and received by an exempt organization are not subject to the unrelated business income tax. There can be no arrangement between the payor and the organization that results in the payor's receipt of a substantial return benefit . . ¶ 611

Timeshare Associations. Qualifying timeshare associations may elect to be taxed at a rate of 32% on their timeshare association income . . . . ¶ 616

PENSIONS AND QUALIFIED PLANS

Anti-Alienation Rules. A limited exception to the anti-alienation rules permits the reduction of employee pension plan benefits with respect to participants who have breached their fiduciary duty to, or committed criminal acts against, the plan . . . . ¶ 703

Involuntary Cash-Outs. The limit on involuntary qualified plan cash-outs has been increased to $5,000. Thus, when an employee's plan participation terminates, the employer can pay out the balance to the employee's credit without obtaining the employee's consent provided that the present value of the benefit does not exceed $5,000 . . . . ¶ 706

Prohibited Transactions Tax. The initial level of the two-tier tax on prohibited transactions between a qualified plan and a disqualified person has been increased to 15% . . . . ¶ 712

Excess Distribution Tax. Both the 15% excise tax on excess distributions from qualified retirement plans, tax-sheltered annuities, and IRAs and the 15% estate tax on excess retirement accumulations have been repealed . . . . ¶ 714

Full-Funding Limit. The current 150% full-funding limit on contributions that can be made to defined benefit pension plans is incrementally increased over a seven-year period to 170% for plan years that begin in 2005 and later .... ¶ 717

Matching Contributions for Self-Employed Individuals. Matching contributions made to 401(k) plans on behalf of self-employed individuals are not treated as matching contributions for employees and, thus, are not subject to elective contribution limits. This provision does not apply to qualified matching contributions that are treated as elective contributions for purposes of satisfying the average deferral percentage test .... ¶ 729

Savings Incentive Match Plans for Employees (SIMPLEs). Elective contributions of up to $6,000 per year (subject to cost-of-living adjustments (COLAs)) may be made by employees to their SIMPLE IRAs, and the $6,000 employee deferral can be matched by the employer .... ¶ 735-741

SIMPLE 401(k) Arrangements. An employer's deduction for contributions to a SIMPLE 401(k) plan is limited to the greater of (1) 15% of the compensation paid or accrued during the tax year to beneficiaries under the stock bonus or profit-sharing plan or (2) the amount that it is required to contribute to the plan for the year. Contributions that exceed the deduction limit can be carried over and deducted in subsequent years. The $6,000 annual limit on elective deferrals is subject to COLAs .... ¶ 743-749

Permissive Service Credits. When applying defined benefit plan limits, the annual benefit under a state or local governmental plan includes accrued benefits derived from the participant's voluntary contributions to purchase permissive service credits, which are credits for service with another governmental employer .... ¶ 760

HEALTH AND LIFE INSURANCE

Medical Savings Accounts. For AMT purposes, the 15% additional tax on medical savings account (MSA) distributions used for nonmedical purposes is not treated as a tax liability .... ¶ 801

Permitted Coverage. Individuals who have Medicare supplemental insurance are ineligible to maintain MSAs .... ¶ 804

MedicarePlus Choice MSA Pilot Program. A four-year pilot program allowing eligible senior citizens to establish "MedicarePlus Choice MSAs" has been authorized for post-1998 tax years. Funds held in the accounts are to be used only to pay for the account holders' "qualified medical expenses" .... ¶ 817-829

Company-Owned Life Insurance (COLI). The premium deduction limitation applicable to COLI has been modified to deny a deduction for interest paid in connection with insurance policies or annuity contracts covering the life of an individual in whom the taxpayer has an insurable interest. This limitation extends to parties who are or were officers or employees of, or who are or were financially interested in, any trade or business carried on currently or formerly by the taxpayer .... ¶ 845, 848

Variable Rate Contracts. The election of a fixed period during which the applicable interest rate limitation will apply must be made no later than November 3, 1997. It will apply to the taxpayer's first tax year ending on or after October 13, 1995, and to all subsequent tax years, unless revoked with IRS consent .... ¶ 851

Increased Health Insurance Deduction for Self-Employed Individuals. The business expense deduction allowed to self-employed taxpayers for health insurance for themselves and for their spouses and dependents will increase to 100% by 2007. The phase-in schedule for the increased deductibility rates has been accelerated . . . . ¶ 863

Group Health Plans. Provisions of the Newborns' and Mothers' Health Protection Act of 1996 and the Mental Health Parity Act of 1996 relating to group health plans have been incorporated into the Internal Revenue Code. Employers whose group health plans fail to comply with those provisions will be subject to an excise tax of $100 per day for each affected individual . . . . ¶ 865

FOREIGN TAXPAYERS AND INVESTMENTS

Foreign Tax Credit (FTC) Limitation for Individuals. Individuals with $300 or less ($600 or less for joint filers) of creditable foreign taxes can elect to be exempt from the FTC limitation, provided that their only income from foreign sources is passive . . . . ¶ 904

Foreign Tax Credit for AMT Purposes. Exceptions to the rule limiting a taxpayer's foreign tax credit to 90% of the taxpayer's pre-credit tentative minimum tax have been repealed. Also, the FTC limitation formula, for AMT purposes, is simplified so that taxpayers are not required to recompute deductions in arriving at foreign-source AMT income . . . . ¶ 907, 910

FTC Limitations on Dividends from 10/50 Companies. The requirement that a separate FTC limitation be applied to dividends from each 10/50 company has been simplified. Generally, for pre-2003 earnings, dividends from all 10/50 companies are thrown into a single FTC limitation category . . . . ¶ 915

Indirect FTC for Lower-Tier Controlled Foreign Corporations (CFCs). The indirect foreign tax credit is extended to taxes paid or accrued by fourth-, fifth-, and sixth-tier CFCs, provided that stock ownership requirements are met . . . . ¶ 934

Exception to Subpart F Rules for Active Financing Income. The income of a foreign bank or other financial institution, if earned in the active conduct of a financial services business during its 1998 tax year, will not be treated as Subpart F income to U.S. 10% shareholders . . . . ¶ 942

Passive Foreign Investment Company (PFIC) Overlap with CFCs Eliminated. A CFC will not be treated as a PFIC with respect to 10% U.S. shareholders who are subject to income inclusions under Subpart F. The PFIC provisions continue to apply to shareholders not subject to Subpart F and for periods during which a shareholder's ownership is less than 10% . . . . ¶ 944

Mark-to-Market Election for Marketable PFIC Stock. A U.S. shareholder of a PFIC may make a mark-to-market election with respect to marketable PFIC stock. Under the election, the shareholder must include in income the excess of the stock's value over his basis in the stock at the close of the tax year and make a corresponding basis adjustment . . . . ¶ 946

Foreign Sales Corporations (FSCs). Computer software may qualify as export property eligible for FSC tax benefits, even if it has been licensed for reproduction abroad . . . . ¶ 950

Code Sec. 1491 Excise Tax Repealed. The 35% excise tax and related provisions of Code Secs. 1491-1494 are repealed. In general, transfers of property to foreign trusts and estates that had received nonrecognition treatment but were subject to the excise tax are now taxable. Similarly, property contributions to foreign partnerships will be subject to gain recognition to the extent provided by regulations . . . . ¶ 968

Transfers of Intangibles to Foreign Partnerships. Transfers of intangible property to foreign partnerships are made subject to the deemed royalty rule of Code Sec. 367(d) to the extent provided by regulation. In addition, the mandatory treatment of such deemed royalties as U.S.-source income was repealed . . . ¶ 969

Information Reporting for Foreign Entities. In connection with the repeal of Code Sec. 1494(c), information reporting on foreign partnerships, particularly those controlled by U.S. persons, is strengthened and brought into line with the reporting obligations of U.S. shareholders of controlled foreign corporations . . . ¶ 981-990

Treaty Benefits for Hybrid Entities. Under some circumstances, foreign residents in countries that have income tax treaties with the United States are not entitled to the treaty's reduced withholding rate on income that is not taxed in the country of residence and is derived through a partnership or other fiscally transparent entity . . . ¶ 992

COMPLIANCE AND TAX ADMINISTRATION

Waiver of Civil Penalties. The list of penalties that can be waived if a taxpayer establishes reasonable cause and good faith has been expanded . . . ¶ 1001

Sanctions for Unauthorized Browsing. The prohibition against browsing has been expanded. Criminal sanctions and civil damages may be imposed against federal employees, IRS contractors, state employees, and other persons who make willful or negligent unauthorized inspections of any tax returns or return information . . . ¶ 1004, 1007

Clarification of Period for Filing Refund Claims. Taxpayers who failed to file a return prior to the issuance of a deficiency notice and who successfully challenge the deficiency before the Tax Court are eligible to recover overpayments during the three-year period preceding the notice's mailing date . . . ¶ 1010

Liens and Levies. A levy of up to 15% on all specified payments made to, or received by, a taxpayer is continuous from the date on which it is first made until its release. If approved by the Treasury Secretary, workers' compensation payments, certain railroad annuity or pension payments, unemployment benefits, and means-tested public assistance are subject to continuous levy . . . ¶ 1019, 1022

Tax Court Procedure. A Tax Court order requiring the IRS to refund an overpayment is appealable in the same manner as a final decision. However, the court lacks jurisdiction over the validity or the merits of credits or offsets applied to reduce or eliminate a tax refund. Taxpayers may now file motions, rather than petitions, to seek a redetermination of interest in the Tax Court. Also, in limited circumstances, the Tax Court has jurisdiction to make determinations regarding employment status . . . ¶ 1025-1031

Electronic Tax Payments. Small businesses will not be penalized for failing to make federal tax deposits using the Electronic Federal Tax Payment System through June 30, 1998 . . . ¶ 1040

Reporting Requirements for Sale of Residence. Sales of principal residences that generate a gross sales price of $250,000 or less ($500,000 in the case of married sellers) are not subject to the real estate transaction reporting rules provided that certain requirements are met . . . ¶ 1050

Tax Shelters. Certain confidential arrangements are now treated as tax shelters and are subject to the registration and notification requirements. Also, in some instances, persons other than the promoters must satisfy the registration requirements . . . ¶ 1058

IRS-Montana Demonstration Project. For a five-year period, taxpayers in Montana are to report state and federal employment tax information on one form pursuant to a demonstration project developed jointly by the IRS and Montana . . . . ¶ 1064

Disaster Areas. The IRS is authorized to issue regulations postponing, for a period of up to 90 days, certain deadlines applicable to taxpayers affected by Presidentially declared disasters . . . . ¶ 1067

Disclosure of Audits Involving Prospective Jurors. The Treasury Secretary can no longer disclose whether a prospective juror in a criminal or civil tax proceeding has been the subject of an audit or other IRS investigation . . . . ¶ 1070

ESTIMATED TAX, WITHHOLDING, EMPLOYMENT TAXES

Penalty for Underpayment of Estimated Tax. The penalty for underpayment of estimated tax will not be imposed against an individual whose net underpayment for the year is less than $1,000 . . . . ¶ 1101

Estimated Tax Safe Harbor Modified. To avoid liability for the estimated tax penalty, individuals whose adjusted gross incomes exceeded $150,000 for the preceding tax year must pay an amount equal to the lesser of 90% of the current year's tax or 105% of their prior year's tax liability if the preceding year begins in 1998, 1999, or 2000; 112% if the preceding tax year begins in 2001; and 110% if the preceding tax year begins in 2002 or thereafter . . . . ¶ 1103

Tax Payments by Commercially Acceptable Means. The IRS can accept tax payments by any means deemed appropriate in regulations. This may include remittances made using credit cards, debit cards, or charge cards . . . . . . ¶ 1111

Termination Payments to Insurance Salespersons. Post-1997 termination payments made to insurance salespersons who worked as independent contractors are excludable from self-employment net earnings provided that certain requirements are met . . . . ¶ 1117

EXCISE TAXES

Airport and Airway Ticket Taxes. Excise taxes applicable to domestic and international air passengers, air cargo, and aviation fuels have been extended through September 30, 2007. The current 10% tax on domestic passenger transportation is lowered incrementally to 7.5%, and a new flight segment fee is imposed. Also, a $12 arrival and departure tax applies to international flights that begin or end in the United States . . . . ¶ 1201

Diesel Fuel Tax. The diesel fuel tax has been repealed with respect to fuel used in recreational motorboats . . . . ¶ 1209

Heavy Trucks and Luxury Cars. After-market installations of parts and accessories in heavy trucks or luxury cars that exceed a threshold price of $1,000 are subject to an excise tax . . . . ¶ 1241, 1245

LUST Trust Fund Tax. The one-cent-per-gallon Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund tax imposed on certain fuels has been reinstated for the period beginning after September 30, 1997, and before April 1, 2005 . . . . ¶ 1251

Communications Tax. For purposes of the excise tax on long-distance telephone service, the face amount of a prepaid telephone card is treated as the amount paid for such services. Also, payment is considered to be made when the card is transferred by a telecommunications carrier to a noncarrier . . . . ¶ 1253

Tax on Vaccines. A new, single vaccine tax rate of 75 cents per dose is imposed on any listed vaccine component . . . . ¶ 1255

Cigarette Tax. Excise taxes on tobacco products are increased for post-1999 tax years and have been extended to roll-your-own tobacco . . . . ¶ 1257

The following proposed law changes originally included in the House or Senate versions of the Taxpayer Relief Act, were dropped by the conferees. Items Subject to Cancellation Under Line Item Veto Act

¶ 12

On August 11, 1997, President Clinton exercised his authority under the Line Item Veto Act (P.L. 104-130) to "cancel" two tax provisions contained in the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 (P.L. 105-34).

The canceled provisions are:

(1) Act Sec. 968, which would have made the sale of stock of a qualified refiner or processor to a farmer's cooperative eligible for gain deferral under Code Sec. 1042. The item was canceled, according to a White House press release, because the provision was not drafted to ensure that the deferred tax would eventually be repaid. The estimated cost of the canceled provision would have been $98 million over five years. The provision is discussed at ¶ 369.

(2) Act Sec. 1175, which would have amended Code Sec. 954 to temporarily exclude certain overseas income derived in the active conduct of a banking, financing, or similar business from the definition of personal holding company income. This provision was canceled, according to the press release, because it would have permitted substantial abuse and created significant tax loopholes for a small number of major U.S. banks, financing companies, insurance companies, and securities firms. The estimated cost of the provision would have been $317 million over five years. The provision is discussed at ¶ 942.

CCH has included caution lines above the related explanations and Internal Revenue Code law changes to alert readers that these provisions were canceled. It should be noted, however, that the constitutionality of the Line Item Veto Act is uncertain at this time. Although the Act was previously challenged by certain members of Congress in Franklin D. Raines et al. v. Sen. Robert C Byrd, et al., SCt, 97-2 USTC ¶ 50,500, the case was dismissed by the Supreme Court on the grounds that the members of Congress lacked standing. Thus, the canceled provisions may remain effective if the Act is successfully challenged in future litigation or, as explained below, a disapproval bill is enacted.

Line Item Veto Act

The Line Item Veto Act (P.L. 104-130) gives the President the authority to "cancel" limited tax benefits (provisions benefiting 100 or fewer taxpayers) contained in a revenue or reconciliation bill or joint resolution. A canceled provision is "without legal force or effect."

Procedurally, the Joint Committee on Taxation is required by the Line Item Veto Act to prepare a statement identifying each limited tax benefit contained in a bill or resolution. Conferees then determine whether to include the statement in the conference report. If the statement is included, the President may cancel one or more of the provisions identified within five calendar days (excluding Sunday) after enactment of the Act. If the statement is not included, then the President determines which provisions are subject to cancellation under the Act. Cancellation takes effect when the Senate and House receive a "special message" from the President providing notification of the cancellations. Expedited procedures allow the House and Senate to enact a "disapproval bill" which renders identified cancellations as "null and void." A disapproval bill must be enacted within 30 days and is subject to a traditional Presidential veto, which would have to be overridden by a two-thirds majority in each House.

Limited Tax Benefits Subject to Line Item Veto

The conference report for the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 identified the following provisions as subject to cancellation (Act. Sec. 1701 at ¶ 7085; Committee Report at ¶ 14,015). Provisions canceled by President Clinton are in bold.

Introduction: Taxpayers Affected

TAXPAYER RELIEF ACT OF 1997

Broad range of taxpayers impacted.—Billed as "taxpayer relief" and representing the biggest tax cut since 1981, the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 provides significant tax breaks to individuals and small businesses primarily at the expense of corporations and persons subject to excise and FUTA taxes. The basic structure of the new legislation holds closely to the five-year projections in the original budget agreement—$135 billion in tax cuts and $50 billion in revenue increases, for a net tax cut of $85 billion. However, some additional tax reductions were thrown in for good measure that were due, in part, to better-than-anticipated increases in government receipts and reductions in the deficit. As a result, the final five-year tally was $151 billion in tax cuts and $56 billion in revenue raisers, including a controversial tobacco tax increase that was inserted into companion legislation, for a net tax cut of $95 billion.

Certainly, for investors, the cornerstone of the new law is the reduction in individual capital gains rates from 28 percent to 20 percent (10 percent for those in the 15-percent tax bracket). This represents the first significant decrease in the tax rates applicable to capital gains or ordinary income since 1986. The capital gains tax cut (which applies not only to investors but also to unincorporated business) is significant both for the fact of the reduction and also for the planning opportunities that the capital gains-ordinary income tax rate differential will offer. However, like many other changes in the Taxpayer Relief Act, capital gains reduction adds an additional layer of complexity to the Internal Revenue Code and moves a step further away from the tax simplification reforms of 1986. Aside from the capital gains provisions, however, Congress appears to have compounded the problem of complexity by its propensity for creating programs that are identifiable to the public as new benefits when the same effect might have been achieved by working with the existing statutory provisions. Labels such as "HOPE Credit," "Lifetime Learning Credit," "Child Tax Credit," and "Roth IRA" are probably designed as much for the campaign trail as for the tax code.

Although individuals will undoubtedly derive financial benefits from these and other provisions, their long-term reaction may well be frustration and confusion. The legislation provides choices that taxpayers may find difficult to sort through. When is a qualified tuition program better than an education IRA? Does one put an extra $2,000 into a deductible IRA account or a nondeductible, but potentially tax free, Roth IRA? With many of these provisions directed at middle-income taxpayers, it appears that professional assistance will become increasingly important in making the most of the available opportunities.

Small businesses and the self-employed also have gained from the Act, securing a variety of tax benefits for which they actively lobbied, including an alternative minimum tax (AMT) exemption for small corporations and a 100-percent deduction for health insurance for the self-employed that will be phased in over a period of years. Large corporations will not find much to cheer about (with the notable exception of AMT changes), but should be grateful that the original budget proposals from the Clinton Administration were largely left at the legislative wayside.

One way of measuring the significance of any particular provision is to look at its impact on revenues. Based on the overall estimated cost to the federal coffers over the initial five-year period following enactment, the Child Tax Credit has the greatest impact, at an estimated cost of $85 billion, followed by the HOPE and Lifetime Learning Credits at $31 billion, the AMT adjustments for depreciation at $7 billion, and the changes in the estate and gift tax unified credit and expanded IRAs, at $6 billion each. Yet the measure of importance of expanded IRAs and capital gains rate reduction should not be confined to these five-year projections. Expanded IRAs are not expected to show their true revenue drain until tax-free earnings are distributed outside of the five-year period. Similarly, the capital gains rate reduction for the first few years should show a revenue increase as investors cash in their profits earlier than expected, but there will be revenue losses in the long run. Thus, looking at the 10-year projections, the order changes a bit. The Child Tax Credit and education credits remain the most costly benefits at $183 billion and $76 billion, respectively. The IRA changes come next at $34 billion, the unified credit changes follow at $33 billion, and the capital gains changes make the list at $21 billion.

An increase in the airline ticket tax and the cigarette tax, and an extension of the FUTA surtax account for the lion's share of the new revenue.

IMPACT ON TAXPAYERS

Education, retirement, estate tax, home ownership, and health care relief.—The Taxpayer Relief Act is, without a doubt, "family friendly." The general cost of raising children is addressed through the Child Tax Credit (¶ 119). The fully phased-in credit is $500 for each child under age 17. However, when adjusted gross income (AGI) reaches $110,000 ($75,000 for those filing as single taxpayers or as heads-of-households) a credit phaseout is triggered. Other pro-family provisions make it easier to finance an education, buy or sell a home, and pay for health care. New retirement savings incentives are provided. The tax package also includes significant estate tax relief.

Education. The numerous educational incentives contained in the Taxpayer Relief Act may create a new financial planning specialty area. Taxpayers can put education savings into a tax-favored education IRA (¶ 145) or a qualified state-sponsored tuition program (¶ 149). Deductible IRAs, with expanded income limits (¶ 172), and nondeductible Roth IRAs (¶ 166) allow taxpayers to make penalty-free withdrawals for education purposes (¶ 174). Once the college years arrive, taxes can be reduced not only with tax-favored withdrawals from the selected investment vehicles but also with the HOPE Credit for the first two years of college (¶ 139), the Lifetime Learning Credit for later years (¶ 139), a deduction for student loan interest (¶ 157), and utilization of the exclusion for employer-provided educational assistance (¶ 156). Another provision allows forgiveness of student loans sponsored by tax-exempt charitable organizations in return for taking certain public service jobs (¶ 159).

Retirement. Provisions that could make the retirement years a bit more "golden" expand the income eligibility range for deductible IRAs (¶ 172), create new nondeductible, but potentially tax-free, Roth IRAs (¶ 166), and allow spouses to contribute $2,000 to a deductible IRA even if they are married to active participants in pension plans (¶ 173). An additional provision helpful to those with substantial pension assets is the repeal of the excise tax on excess accumulations and distributions (¶ 714). On the planning side, decisions must now be made regarding whether an investment strategy using capital gains works best separately or within a tax-deferred retirement-type plan.

Estate Planning. Several key provisions assist families in estate planning. The phased-in increase in the unified credit will permit a husband and wife, upon the conclusion of a phase-in period and with proper planning, to exclude up to $2 million ($1 million each) from their taxable estates or from taxable lifetime gifts (¶ 201). For a married couple with a qualified family-owned business, the exclusion could total $2.6 million ($1.3 million each) starting in 1998 (¶ 215). Cost-of-living adjustments will be made to a number of dollar limitations, including the $10,000 annual gift tax exclusion (¶ 204). A more detailed list of law changes in the estate and gift tax area appears at ¶ 86.

Home Ownership. Home ownership is encouraged by the provision allowing for penalty-free distributions from individual retirement plans in connection with the purchase of a first home (¶ 177). Also, the new law provides a generous $500,000 exclusion for gain from the sale of a home, which can be claimed as often as every two years (¶ 129). The exclusion is $250,000 for taxpayers who do not file jointly and replaces the rollover provisions of Code Sec. 1034 and the $125,000 gain exclusion that could previously be claimed by taxpayers age 55 or older.

Health Care. The tobacco tax increase in the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, which was passed by Congress in tandem with the Taxpayer Relief Act, will finance expanded health coverage for some children who have no health insurance. Self-employed individuals will also benefit from an increased deduction for their health insurance costs (¶ 863). In addition, eligible seniors may be able to participate in a pilot program that would allow them to pay medical expenses using amounts contributed to "MedicarePlus Choice Medical Savings Accounts" (MSAs) (¶ 817).

Capital gains and other provisions affecting investors.—A provision that is of primary interest to individual investors is the reduction in the capital gains tax rate. Although a reduced capital gains rate is applicable (20 percent generally, 10 percent for individuals in the 15-percent bracket), the long-term capital gains holding period has been increased from one year to 18 months (¶ 301, 302). If an asset is held for five years, the 20-percent and 10-percent rates are cut an additional two percent to 18 percent and eight percent, respectively. Special rules apply in determining the starting date of the five-year holding period (¶ 303). The maximum 28-percent rate continues to apply to capital gains on dispositions of assets that are held more than a year and not more than 18 months. Significantly, the new capital gains rates will not cause taxpayers to become liable for the alternative minimum tax (AMT)—the reduced rates may be used to compute AMT liability (¶ 303). Collectibles are ineligible for the new, favorable capital gains tax rates (¶ 303).

Although proposed modifications to the rules providing a 50-percent exclusion for gain from the sale of qualifying small business stock did not make it into the final law, a provision permitting the rollover of gain from the sale of qualified small business stock if other small business stock is timely purchased was included (¶ 306), opening up an entire new market for venture capital. Traders in securities and dealers in commodities and financial products other than securities have been given the option of electing mark-to-market treatment (¶ 341). The deduction for contributions of appreciated stock to private foundations was also retroactively reinstated and extended for one more year (¶ 105).

On the negative side, investors will likely be adversely affected by additional limitations on tax-free contributions of property to investment companies (¶ 509). Deferral of capital gains will be hampered by restrictions on the use of "selling short against the box" and "equity swap" techniques, unless such positions are closed out within 30 days after the end of the tax year (¶ 308-310). Gains or losses on the lapse, cancellation, expiration, or other termination of a right are treated as capital in nature. This closes a loophole that allowed taxpayers to structure transactions in ways that converted capital losses into ordinary losses (¶ 307).

Provisions affecting small businesses.—Small businesses won many of the provisions that they battled to obtain. One significant exception was a simplified safe-harbor for gaining independent contractor status, which was removed from the bill during final negotiations. The deduction for health insurance expenses of self-employed individuals, however, will be increased incrementally from 40 percent to 100 percent over a nine-year phase-in period that ends in the year 2007 (¶ 863). Another small business victory effectively overturns the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in N.E. Soliman, 93-1 USTC ¶ 50,014) by broadening the availability of the home office deduction in situations where an office is used for administrative and management functions (¶ 109). Family-owned businesses receive a new exclusion from estate and gift taxes that is generally equal to the difference between $1.3 million and the standard estate tax exclusion for the year in question (¶ 215).

The legislation exempts corporations with average annual gross receipts of less than $5 million from the alternative minimum tax (¶ 525), thereby reducing both tax and tax-compliance costs, and also allows these businesses a three-year carryback period for the portion of a net operating loss (NOL) attributable to a Presidentially declared disaster (¶ 315). Otherwise, the Act generally reduces the NOL carryback period from three years to two years for corporate and noncorporate taxpayers. The carryforward period, however, is increased from 15 years to 20 years. The three-year carryback period for NOLs attributable to Presidentially declared disasters also applies to individuals.

The imposition of penalties for the failure of a small business to make electronic funds transfers of tax payments has been delayed until after June 30, 1998 (¶ 1040). Matching contributions on behalf of self-employed individuals to a 401(k) plan or a SIMPLE IRA are not treated as elective contributions and, therefore, are not taken into account in determining whether contributions to the plan exceed the applicable elective contribution limit for the tax year (¶ 729).

Provisions affecting individual taxpayers.—Many of the provisions that affect families and investors are targeted at individuals. In the area of education, funds deposited in a deductible IRA (¶ 145) or in the nondeductible Roth IRA (¶ 166) may be available for penalty-free withdrawals if used for continuing education (¶ 174). The Lifetime Learning Credit (¶ 139), the deduction for student loan interest (¶ 157), and the exclusion for employer-provided educational assistance (¶ 156) may all aid individuals in paying for continuing education expenses. Another provision allows for the tax-free forgiveness of student loans made by tax-exempt charitable organizations provided that the recipients take certain public service jobs (¶ 159).

Retirement-planning possibilities are enhanced by the expanded income eligibility ranges for deductible IRAs (¶ 172) and the new nondeductible Roth IRAs (¶ 166), as well as by the repeal of the penalty tax on excess accumulations and distributions (¶ 714). In the estate planning area, the unified credit equivalent will gradually increase to $1 million (¶ 201), and the $10,000 annual gift tax exclusion, as well as other estate and gift tax limits, will now be adjusted for inflation (¶ 204). Also made available by the legislation are new MedicarePlus Choice Medical Savings Accounts (¶ 817-829).

The capital gains tax rates applicable to individuals are reduced and the holding periods for capital assets are lengthened (¶ 301-302). Capital gains rates also apply for AMT purposes (¶ 303). Home ownership is tax favored through the allowance of penalty-free distributions from IRAs for first-time homebuyers (¶ 177) and a $250,000 exclusion for single filers ($500,000 for joint filers) on the sale of a home (¶ 129), replacing the Code Sec. 1034 rollover provisions and the over-age-55 exclusion rules.

Some other provisions that impact on individual taxpayers include:

Authorizing the payment of taxes by any commercially acceptable means, including credit cards (¶ 1111).

Raising the charitable mileage rate to 14 cents per mile (¶ 107).

Modifying the estimated tax safe harbors (¶ 1103).

Increasing the de minimis threshold for estimated tax payments (¶ 1101).

Waiving estimated tax penalties attributable to Act changes (¶ 1105).

Tightening of earned income credit (EIC) compliance (¶ 127).

Expanding Social Security information collection for tax-enforcement purposes (¶ 1053).

Retaining a three-year carryback period for casualty and theft losses (¶ 315).

Abating interest on tax underpayments by taxpayers in Presidentially declared disaster areas in 1997 (¶ 1009).

Using appraisals to establish disaster losses (¶ 103).

Allowing tax benefits with respect to mortgage financing for residences located in disaster areas (¶ 349).

Increasing the foreign earned income exclusion (¶ 133).

¶ 76

Provisions affecting businesses.—The following provisions in the new tax law have a general impact on business, whether corporations, partnerships, or proprietorships:

Alternative minimum tax depreciation adjustments (¶ 527).

Extension of the research tax credit (¶ 317), the work opportunity credit (¶ 318), and employer-provided educational assistance (¶ 156).

Restrictions on the use of the income forecast method (¶ 325).

Depreciation allowed for rent-to-own property (¶ 325).

Expansion of the requirement that involuntarily converted property be replaced with property acquired from an unrelated person (¶ 334).

Restrictions on deductions with respect to company-owned life insurance (¶ 845).

Modification of NOL carryforward and carryback rules (¶ 315).

New credit for wages paid to welfare recipients (¶ 320).

Extension of the temporary FUTA surtax rate (¶ 1120).

Limitation on the carryback period for general business credits; extension of the carryforward period (¶ 321).

Shrinkage allowance for inventory accounting, with safe harbor for retailers (¶ 340).

Modification of look-back method for long-term contracts (¶ 338).

Employers permitted to offer parking or cash equivalent (¶ 131).

Exclusion for construction allowances provided to lessees (¶ 322).

Exception from the installment sale rules for property sales by a manufacturer to a dealer (¶ 343).

Clarification of the de minimis fringe benefit rules with respect to no-charge employee meals (¶ 332).

Gratuitous transfers made for the benefit of employees (¶ 284).

Denial of an interest deduction with respect to disqualfied debt instruments (¶ 513).

Exclusion extended to assignment of workers' compensation liability (¶ 347).

Appraisals may establish amounts of disaster losses (¶ 103).

Reorganizations and other provisions affecting corporations.—Corporations as a specific group did not fare well under the Act. Instead of reaping tax benefits, corporations are the object of many of the revenue-raising provisions. Nevertheless, the Act did give corporations tax relief primarily in the form of a change in the AMT depreciation adjustment. This change (which also applies to noncorporate taxpayers) conforms the depreciation period used for AMT purposes to the period used for regular tax purposes (¶ 527). Another helpful provision increases the filing thresholds for information returns concerning the ownership of foreign corporations (¶ 990).

Among the corporate provisions with a negative impact is the requirement that gain be recognized on spin-offs of corporate assets followed by a tax-free merger of the spin-off company outside of the corporate group—"Morris Trust" transactions (¶ 503). Another provision taxes certain extraordinary dividends in response to what is commonly referred to as the Seagrams transaction (¶ 501).

Other corporate provisions include:

A tightening of the holding period that is applicable for purposes of claiming the dividends-received deduction (¶ 517).

Tax treatment of redemptions involving related corporations (¶ 505).

Registration and other provisions relating to confidential corporate tax shelters (¶ 1058).

Treatment of certain preferred stock as boot (¶ 507).

Scope of investment company assets increased for purposes of determining whether property transfers result in gain recognition (¶ 509).

Certain notices disregarded under a provision increasing the interest rate on large corporate underpayments (¶ 1108).

Provisions affecting partnerships and other flow-through entities.—A number of important changes impact partnerships. There are a series of provisions that deal with reporting by large partnerships, reporting by foreign partnerships, and simplification issues. Among the more significant provisions are new rules concerning basis allocation of properties distributed by a partnership (¶ 403), elimination of the substantial appreciation requirements for inventory of a partnership (¶ 410), and an extension of the time limit for taxing precontribution gain (¶ 407).

Other partnership provisions include:

Limitations imposed on tax-free contributions to investment partnerships (¶ 509).

Grandfathered publicly traded partnerships may elect not to be taxed as corporations and, instead, pay a publicly traded partnership tax (¶ 401).

Imposition of a one-year moratorium on the issuance of Treasury regulations with respect to the self-employment taxes of limited partners (¶ 463).

Simplified flow-through reporting system established for electing large partnerships (¶ 412-420).

Simplified audit procedures created for large partnerships (¶ 421-430).

Due date set for furnishing information to partners of large partnerships (¶ 430).

Returns to be provided on magnetic media by partnerships with 100 or more partners (¶ 469).

Filing threshold modified for IRA with interest in partnership items (¶ 183).

Changes relating to TEFRA partnership proceedings (¶ 431-461).

Partnership tax year closed with respect to deceased partner (¶ 465).

Information reporting requirements modified with respect to foreign partnerships (¶ 971, 981-990).

Regulations to address determination of partnerships' foreign or domestic status (¶ 467).

Other pass-through provisions include:

Clarification of the statute of limitations for pass-through entities (¶ 1013).

Rules clarified regarding employee stock ownership plans (ESOPs) of S corporations (¶ 752).

Unrelated business income tax (UBIT) rules inapplicable to ESOPs of S corporations (¶ 755).

Provisions affecting tax-exempt organizations.—Two provisions are of particular interest to tax-exempt organizations. One is the modification of the control test and the addition of attribution rules used to determine the UBIT consequences of certain payments of passive income received from subsidiaries of tax-exempt organizations (¶ 613). Another provision that will affect fund-raising clarifies the treatment of sponsorship payments (¶ 611).

Other provisions that impact on tax-exempt organizations include:

Modifications of qualified state tuition programs (¶ 149).

Repeal of the limitation on qualified 501(c)(3) bonds other than hospital bonds (¶ 353).

Denial of interest paid deduction with respect to certain tax-exempt obligations (¶ 513).

UBIT rules inapplicable to ESOPs of S corporations (¶ 755).

Purchases of receivables by tax-exempt hospital cooperative service organizations (¶ 605).

Clarification of tax-exempt status of certain state workers' compensation funds (¶ 601).

Repeal of the $100,000 limitation on unspent proceeds of tax-exempt bond issues under one-year rebate exception (¶ 355).

Exception from rebate requirement applies to earnings on bond proceeds invested in bona fide debt service funds (¶ 356).

Debt service-based limitation on investment in certain nonpurpose investments repealed (¶ 357).

Repeal of expired provisions relating to student loan bonds (¶ 358).

Extension of tax-favored treatment for contributions of appreciated stock to private foundations (¶ 105).

Extend due date for first-quarter estimated tax by private foundations (¶ 623).

Allow timeshare associations to be treated as homeowner associations (¶ 616).

Provide a FUTA exemption for certain religious schools (¶ 1129).

Repeal exceptions from the rules applicable to certain exempt organizations that provide commercial-type insurance (¶ 607).

Provisions affecting foreign taxpayers and investors.—Many changes were made in the foreign area—few were major in and of themselves, but together they make a considerable impact on many foreign operations. Changes affect the treatment of controlled foreign corporations (CFCs) (¶ 932-942), ease the transfer of assets to foreign entities (¶ 968-969), simplify the foreign tax credit (FTC) limitation for individuals (¶ 904), modify the passive foreign investment company (PFIC) provisions to eliminate overlap with Subpart F and to allow for mark-to-market elections (¶ 944-948), and impose new information reporting requirements on foreign partnerships and corporations (¶ 981-990).

Other provisions with an impact on the foreign area include:

Foreign sales corporation (FSC) benefits for computer software (¶ 950).

Increase in the dollar limitation on the exclusion for income earned abroad (¶ 133).

Translation of foreign taxes simplified (¶ 901).

Exception to AMT foreign tax credit limit repealed (¶ 910).

Holding period imposed for crediting foreign taxes associated with foreign-source dividends (¶ 917).

Election to use a simplified AMT foreign tax credit limitation available (¶ 907).

Interest on underpayments reduced by FTC carrybacks (¶ 924).

Determination of limitations period relating to FTCs clarified (¶ 922).

Treatment of personal transactions in foreign currency simplified (¶ 953).

Principal office requirement repealed for foreign entities trading in stock or securities (¶ 955).

Definition of foreign personal holding company income expanded (¶ 936).

Restrictions imposed on like-kind exchanges involving foreign personal property (¶ 336).

FTC limitation for financial services income clarified (¶ 912).

FTC limitations for dividends received from 10/50 companies simplified (¶ 915).

Duty-free treatment under General System of Preferences extended (¶ 993).

Limitation imposed on treaty benefits for transactions involving hybrid entities (¶ 992).

Exceptions from definition of U.S. property apply to certain security positions (¶ 940).

Service income of nonresident aliens earned on foreign ships treated as foreign-source income (¶ 965).

Estate and gift tax treatment of short-term original issue discount (OID) instruments held by nonresident aliens clarified (¶ 212).

Excise tax replaced by recognition of gain on certain transfers to foreign entities (¶ 968).

Transition rule on definition of trust residency applies to certain trusts (¶ 973).

Clarification of authority to withhold Puerto Rico income taxes from salaries of federal employees (¶ 1132).

Miscellaneous clarifications apply to post-1986 foreign taxes deemed paid (¶ 919).

FTC limitation category for financial services income clarified (¶ 912).

Provisions affecting estate and gift taxation.—Among the important provisions affecting estate and gift tax planning are the increases in the unified credit, including exclusions for family-owned businesses and conservation easements (¶ 201, 214, 215), cost-of-living adjustments to such key figures as the annual gift tax exclusion (¶ 204), and modifications to the interest rates charged on deferred payments (¶ 227).

Other provisions affecting estate and gift taxes include:

Extension of treatment of certain rents to lineal descendants (¶ 229).

Judicial review of eligibility for a payment extension (¶ 225).

Statute of limitations on the revaluation of gifts for estate tax purposes (¶ 255).

Repeal of throwback rules for domestic trusts (¶ 275).

Expansion of generation-skipping transfer tax exception applicable to individuals with deceased parents (¶ 249).

Treatment of certain revocable trusts as part of estate (¶ 261).

Limitation on annual payouts of charitable remainder trusts (¶ 281).

Consistency requirement for returns of estate and trust beneficiaries (¶ 273).

Exemption for charitable gifts exceeding $10,000 from gift tax filing requirements (¶ 253).

Waiver of certain rights of recovery of estate tax from qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trusts clarified (¶ 243).

Transitional rules provided for qualified domestic trusts (QDOTs) (¶ 233).

Estate and gift tax treatment clarified for short-term OID instruments held by nonresident aliens (¶ 212).

65-day rule applies to estate distributions (¶ 264).

Separate share rules available to estates (¶ 267).

Estate and beneficiaries treated as related persons for loss disallowance purposes (¶ 270).

Special tax treatment available for funeral trusts (¶ 286).

Adjustments apply to certain gifts made within three years of decedent's death (¶ 210).

Treatment of survivor annuities under qualified terminable interest rules clarified (¶ 239).

QDOT rules apply to forms of ownership that are not trusts (¶ 235).

Authority to waive requirement of U.S. trustee for QDOTs granted (¶ 237).

Effect on Pensions and Employee Benefits

Provisions affecting pensions and employee benefits.—Changes in the pension and employee benefits area fall mainly into the simplification category. A figure that has been around for a number of years—the maximum amount that can be in a pension plan before an employer is prevented from doing an involuntary cash-out—is increased from $3,500 to $5,000 (¶ 706). Another significant provision is the permanent repeal of excess distribution and excess accumulation taxes (¶ 714).

Other provisions that impact on pensions and employee benefits include:

Increase in full-funding limit (¶ 717, 719).

Modification of minimum funding requirements for bus company plans (¶ 721).

Required diversification of plan investments (¶ 727).

Exemption of police and firefighters from Code Sec. 415 dollar limitations (¶ 764).

Exclusion for disability benefits received by certain police and firefighters (¶ 135).

Exclusion for survivor benefits with respect to police officers killed in the line of duty (¶ 137).

Trust's status unaffected by gratuitous transfers for the benefit of employees (¶ 284).

Exclusion for employer-provided parking (¶ 131).

Prohibited transactions excise tax increased (¶ 712).

Basis recovery rules apply to amounts received as an annuity (¶ 781).

Matching contributions for self-employed individuals not treated as elective deferrals (¶ 729).

Plans not disqualified merely due to acceptance of rollover contributions (¶ 701).

Prohibition on assignment or alienation modified (¶ 703).

Paperwork burdens on plans eliminated (¶ 708).

Guidance to address new technologies in retirement plans (¶ 710).

Modifications to Code Sec. 403(b) exclusion allowance to conform to Code Sec. 415 modifications (¶ 776).

Ten-percent tax on nondeductible plan contributions modified (¶ 725).

Permanent moratorium on nondiscrimination rules for governmentally sponsored pension plans (¶ 758).

Filing threshold modified for IRA with interest in partnership items (¶ 183).

UBIT rules inapplicable to ESOPs of S corporations (¶ 755).

Rules clarified regarding ESOPs of S corporations (¶ 752).

Plan amendment effective dates clarified (¶ 790).

Special rules provided for church plans (¶ 766-768).

Tax provisions cover maternity stay and mental health parity rules (¶ 865).

Portability and permissible service credits under government pension plans defined (¶ 760).

Irrigation and drainage districts eligible to maintain 401(k) plans (¶ 731).

Provisions relating to environmental and economic development.—Provisions on additional empowerment zones (¶ 371), designation of new empowerment zones (¶ 372), and incentives for education zones (¶ 161) were added to the tax legislation during the final negotiations. Tax incentives were also included for revitalizing the District of Columbia (¶ 381-387).

Other provisions relating to environmental and economic development issues include:

Estate and gift tax treatment of land subject to a qualified conservation easement (¶ 214).

Expensing Brownfields redevelopment costs in empowerment zones, enterprise communities, and EPA demonstration sites (¶ 330).

Modification of empowerment zone and enterprise community criteria in the event of future designations of additional zones and communities (¶ 373, 379).

Volume cap inapplicable to enterprise zone facility bonds with respect to new empowerment zones (¶ 377).

Eligibility criteria for designation of future enterprise zones in Alaska and Hawaii modified (¶ 375).

Leaking underground storage tank trust (LUST) fund taxes reinstated (¶ 1251).

Effect on IRS Procedures and Practices

Provisions affecting IRS procedures.—Penalties and civil damages for unauthorized inspection of taxpayer information were enacted in the Taxpayer Browsing Protection Act (P.L. 105-35) signed by the President on the same day as the Taxpayer Relief Act ('97 TRA) (¶ 1004, 1007). Another provision with a more widespread impact—this one in the '97 TRA—now authorizes the IRS to accept payment of taxes by any commercially acceptable means (¶ 1111).

Other provisions in the '97 TRA relating to IRS procedures and practices include:

Modification of the levy exemption and allowance for a continuous levy on certain payments (¶ 1019, 1022).

Allowable disclosures of return information (¶ 1046).

Use of appraisals to establish disaster loss valuation (¶ 103).

Reporting of certain payments made to attorneys (¶ 1052).

Clarification of procedure for administrative cost awards (¶ 1016).

Study required on simplified collection of distilled spirit taxes (¶ 1277).

Demonstration study of combined federal and state employment tax reporting by Montana taxpayers (¶ 1064).

Abatement of interest on tax underpayments by taxpayers in Presidentially declared disaster areas in 1997 (¶ 1009).

Allowable return information disclosures for purposes of administering certain Veteran's Administration programs (¶ 1043).

Threshold for reporting payments to corporations performing services for federal agencies decreased (¶ 1055).

Deductible gifts to charities in excess of $10,000 exempt from gift tax filing requirements (¶ 253).

Consistency requirements apply to returns of beneficiaries of estates and trusts (¶ 273).

Simplified flow-through reporting requirements formulated for electing large partnerships (¶ 412-420).

Simplified audit procedures apply to large partnerships (¶ 421-430).

Due date set for furnishing information to partners of large partnerships (¶ 430).

Return filing using magnetic media required for partnerships with 100 partners or more (¶ 469).

Reasonable-cause exception provided for penalties (¶ 1001).

Period for filing claims for refunds clarified (¶ 1010).

Authority to disclose whether a prospective juror has been audited repealed (¶ 1070).

Statute of limitations for pass-through entities clarified (¶ 1013).

IRS authorized to grant exemption from excise tax registration requirements (¶ 1290).

Provisions governing TEFRA partnership proceedings (¶ 431-461).

Partnership tax year closed with respect to deceased partner (¶ 465).

Jurisdiction of Tax Court clarified with respect to overpayment determinations (¶ 1025).

Tax Court jurisdiction clarified with respect to interest determinations (¶ 1028).

Tax Court jurisdiction expanded for independent contractors (¶ 1031).

Application of net worth requirements for award of administrative costs clarified (¶ 1034, 1037).

Due date extended for first-quarter estimated tax payments of private foundations (¶ 623).

Authority to withhold Puerto Rico income taxes from salaries of federal employees clarified (¶ 1132).

Certain notices disregarded for purposes of liability for increased interest rate on large corporate underpayments (¶ 1108).

Restrictions imposed on application of EIC (¶ 127).

Expanded accessibility of Social Security Administration records for use in tax enforcement (¶ 1053).

Federal information sharing allowed for verification of benefit determinations (¶ 1047).

Disclosure of return information relating to Medicare status permitted (¶ 1049).

Effect on Specific Industries

Clarification of exemption from self-employment tax for certain termination payments received by former insurance salesmen (¶ 1117).

Exclusion for construction allowances provided to lessees (¶ 322).

Depreciation for rent-to-own properties (¶ 325).

Real estate investment trusts (REITs)

Monetary penalties for failure to determine ownership (¶ 539).

De minimis rule for tenant services income (¶ 541).

Attribution rules applicable to tenant ownership and independent contractor status (¶ 543).

Credit for tax paid by REIT on retained capital gains (¶ 545).

Repeal of 30-percent gross income test (¶ 547).

Modification of ordering rule for distributions of earnings and profits from non-REIT year (¶ 549).

Treatment of foreclosure property, grace period (¶ 551).

Payments under hedging instruments (¶ 553).

Excess noncash income definition expanded (¶ 555).

Prohibited transaction safe harbor, involuntary conversions (¶ 557).

Shared appreciation mortgages, bankruptcy safe harbor rule (¶ 559).

Wholly owned subsidiaries, definition modified (¶ 561).

Regulated investment companies (RICs)

Repeal of 30-percent gross income test, "short-short" rule (¶ 535).

Farms and farm services

Family-owned business estate and gift tax exclusion (¶ 215).

Income averaging for farmers (¶ 361).

Termination of use of suspense accounts for family farm corporations required to change from cash method to accrual method (¶ 365).

Cash-method farmers use of installment method for AMT purposes (¶ 363).

Tax treatment of livestock sold on account of certain weather-related conditions (¶ 367).

Estate and gift tax treatment of land subject to a qualified conservation easement (¶ 214).

Health care

Treatment of hospitals that participate in provider-sponsored organizations (¶ 606).

MedicarePlus Choice medical savings accounts, pilot program (¶ 817-829).

Purchases of receivables by tax-exempt hospital cooperative service organizations (¶ 605).

Technology

Foreign sales corporation benefits for computer software companies (¶ 950).

Contributions of computer technology and equipment for elementary and secondary school purposes (¶ 519).

Survivor benefits attributable to death of a public safety officer in the line of duty excludable from taxable income (¶ 137).

Exclusion for certain disability benefits paid to former police officers or fire fighters in connection with heart disease or hypertension treated as work-related illness (¶ 135).

Chapter 1

Individuals

DEDUCTIONS

Standard Deduction for Dependents

¶ 101

Background

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the standard deduction for an individual who could be claimed as a dependent on another taxpayer's return was limited to the lesser of:

(1) the standard deduction for a single taxpayer (projected to be $4,250 for 1998); or

(2) the greater of:

Background

(a) $500 (the inflation-adjusted amount is projected to be $700 for 1998), or

(b) the dependent's earned income.

Increased standard deduction for employed dependents.—The new law increases the basic standard deduction for a taxpayer who may be properly claimed as a dependent on another person's tax return and who has earned income in excess of $250 but total income of less than the standard deduction amount. As amended, the basic standard deduction equals the lesser of:

(1) the standard deduction for single taxpayers (projected to be $4,250 for 1998); or

(2) the greater of:

(a) $500 (the inflation-adjusted amount is projected to be $700 for 1998); or

(b) the individual's earned income, plus $250.

The Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 added the $250 amount to the dependent's earned income, effectively increasing the basic standard deduction by $250 for taxpayers claiming regularly employed dependents. The $250 amount is indexed for inflation after 1997.

Example. Eddie Junior, age 17, has $400 of interest income and $1,500 of earned income in 1998. Because Junior is eligible to be claimed by his parents as a dependent (and assuming that the $500 statutory amount increases to $700 for 1998), his standard deduction is $1,750: the greater of $700, or $1,500 earned income + $250.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Joe Guterl, of counsel, Woolson, Sutphen, Anderson & Nergaard, Somerville, N.J., observes that a classic example of a dependent for whom a dependency exemption is allowed on another taxpayer's return is the college student whose parents claim the student as a dependent. The $250 increase in the standard deduction will provide some relief for working students who have managed to maintain some savings. For example, take a student who earned $4,000 over the summer, and who has also saved some money now in a savings account or mutual fund. This year, the student will likely pay tax on the few dollars of interest or other earnings from the bank account or mutual fund. (This is because his standard deduction is equal to the $4,000 the student earned—the student's interest from the bank account or earnings from the mutual fund usually end up being subject to tax). Next year, under the new law, the student's earnings from his investments (up to $250) will not be subject to income tax because the standard deduction will be the $4,000 earned over the summer plus the interest or other earnings. For the many students whose savings and investments generate $250 or less, this means they will not have to pay taxes (although the student may have to file a return to get a refund for taxes withheld from the summer wages).

Effective date. The increased standard deduction for dependents applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Appraisals to Establish Disaster Loss

Background

Disaster losses are deductible only if the taxpayer establishes the amount of the loss. Regulations permit taxpayers to value the amount of loss using either an appraisal or the cost of repairs. Both of these methods have proven problematic for taxpayers coping with a recent disaster. Arranging for an appraisal is yet another task for an already burdened taxpayer, and there are a number of valuation problems particular to disaster situations. The cost of repairs method is easier to use, but the IRS may challenge the amount spent years after the repairs are completed.

Appraisals used for government loans can value disaster loss.—The new law states that the IRS is not prohibited from issuing guidance or other rules allowing an appraisal used to secure a loan or loan guarantee from the federal government to be used to establish the amount of a disaster loss for tax purposes. Should the IRS authorize a new valuation method, it would apply only in a presidentially declared disaster area.

This provision clears the way for the IRS to accept documentation prepared to secure a disaster loan from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) as proof of the amount of a disaster loss. Although FEMA processes disaster relief loans, the actual lender is the Small Business Administration (SBA). In the course of making these loans, the SBA inspects the damage and appraises the amount needed for repairs. The Loss Verification Report (LVR) separates deductible repairs from nondeductible repairs, and taxpayers should find that basing disaster loss deductions on LVRs is far simpler than the currently available methods.

Effective date. The appraisal provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Stock Contributed to Private Foundations

Background

The amount of charitable deduction available for contributions of property to private foundations (other than certain private operating foundations) is generally limited to the taxpayer's basis in the property. However, taxpayers were entitled to deduct the fair market value of appreciated, publicly traded stock donated to private foundations before June 1, 1997, provided the stock would have generated capital gain, rather than ordinary income, to the donor.

Deduction for contributions of appreciated stock to private foundations extended through June 30, 1998.—The deduction for the fair market value of qualified appreciated stock contributed to private foundations is retroactively extended through June 30, 1998. The provision had expired on May 31, 1997.

Only publicly traded stock that is capital gain property is eligible for the deduction.

Effective date. The extension applies to contributions made after May 31, 1997.

Charitable Mileage Rate

Background

When Congress first authorized a charitable contribution deduction for taxpayers who use their own automobiles in volunteer work performed for charities, the statutory charitable standard mileage rate was set at 12 cents per mile. The rate has remained unchanged since it became effective, for tax years beginning after 1984.

Deduction for charitable mileage increased.—The new law increases the deduction for individuals who use their passenger automobiles in volunteer work for qualified charities to 14 cents per mile. The 14 cents per mile charitable standard mileage rate will not be indexed for inflation.

In spite of the increase from 12 cents to 14 cents per mile, the ratio between the charitable mileage rate and the business mileage rate (31.5 cents per mile in 1997) remains greater than it was in 1985 when standard mileage rates were first available. In 1985, the business use of a car generated a deduction of 21 cents per mile (for the first 15,000 miles of business use), while charitable use garnered a deduction of 12 cents per mile. Only if the charitable mileage rate had been raised to 18 cents would the 1985 ratio have been approximated.

Effective date. The increase in the mileage rate applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

EMPLOYEE AND SELF-EMPLOYED BUSINESS EXPENSES

Home Office Deduction

Background

A taxpayer may deduct the expenses of maintaining a home office (e.g., a portion of rent or depreciation, utilities, and repairs). However, stringent conditions are imposed on the deduction. A home office deduction is allowed only for the portion of a home that is used exclusively and regularly:

(1) as the taxpayer's principal place of business;

(2) as a place used to meet with customers, clients or patients in the normal course of the taxpayer's trade or business; or

(3) in the taxpayer's trade or business if the portion used is a separate structure not attached to the dwelling unit.

If the taxpayer is an employee, a deduction is allowed only if the home office is maintained for the convenience of the employer.

In 1993, the U.S. Supreme Court restrictively defined the term "principal place of business" as the place where a taxpayer performed "the essence of the professional service" (N.E. Soliman, 93-1 USTC ¶ 50,014). It used this definition to deny home office deductions to an anesthesiologist who performed the administrative and management functions of his practice in his home office (bookkeeping, correspondence, reading medical journals, and communicating with surgeons, patients and insurance companies), but practiced medicine at various hospitals.

Principal place of business clarified; Supreme Court's decision in Soliman overturned.—One way expenses incurred in connection with a home office are deductible is where the expenses are allocable to a portion of a dwelling unit that is exclusively used on a regular basis as the taxpayer's "principal place of business." The new law expands the definition of "principal place of business." A home office qualifies as a taxpayer's principal place of business under the Act if:

(1) the office is used by the taxpayer to conduct administrative or management activities of the taxpayer's trade or business; and

(2) there is no other fixed location of the trade or business where the taxpayer conducts substantial administrative or management activities of the trade or business.

With this provision, Congress effectively overturned the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in N.E. Soliman (93-1 USTC ¶ 50,014). In Soliman, the Court defined an individual's principal place of business as the place where the primary income-generating functions of the trade or business were performed.

Planning Note. The expanded definition of a principal place of business will enable many taxpayers to deduct the cost of traveling to and from their homes to other locations at which they conduct business (under Rev. Rul. 94-47, 1994-2 CB 18). Under prior law, these travel costs were often classified as nondeductible commuting expenses.

Caution. The expanded definition of a taxpayer's principal place of business does not affect the requirement that home office expenses are deductible only if the office is used by the taxpayer exclusively on a regular basis as a place of business. Also, if the taxpayer is an employee, the taxpayer's use of the home office must be for the convenience of the employer.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Sidney Kess, New York, CCH contributing editor, author and lecturer, observes that the liberalization of the home office deduction rules will make deductibility of home office expenses more widespread. Sole proprietors that use a home office for scheduling appointments, ordering supplies, doing research, or keeping their books will be able to deduct home office expenses as long as there is no other fixed location for such administrative or management activities. However, the new rules may not be any help to employees who choose to work at home where employers make space available to them somewhere else because they may not meet the "convenience of the employer" test that remains unchanged.

If a taxpayer does not meet the new definition, the taxpayer may be entitled to a home office deduction under the current principal place of business exception, or one of the other tests of Code Sec. 280A.

Application of the expanded principal place of business test. Taxpayers who perform administrative or management activities for their trade or business at places other than the home office are not automatically prohibited from taking the deduction. The House Committee Report clarifies that the following taxpayers are not prevented from taking a home office deduction under the new definition:

(1) taxpayers who do not conduct substantial administrative or management activities at a fixed location other than the home office, even if administrative or management activities (e.g., billing activities) are performed by other people at other locations;

(2) taxpayers who carry out administrative and management activities at sites that are not fixed locations of the business (e.g., cars or hotel rooms) in addition to performing the activities at the home office;

(3) taxpayers who conduct an insubstantial amount of administrative and management activities at a fixed location other than the home office (e.g., occasionally doing minimal paperwork at another fixed location); and

(4) taxpayers who conduct substantial *non*administrative and *non*management business activities at a fixed location other than the home office (e.g., meeting with, or providing services to customers, clients or patients at a fixed location other than the home office).

There is no other fixed location where the taxpayer conducts substantial administrative or management activities if the taxpayer does not actually perform such functions at a fixed location other than the home office. In other words, the second prong of the new definition of "principal place of business" can be met regardless of whether the taxpayer chose to perform administrative and management functions at home even though another fixed location was available. However, employees do not have this flexibility; the fact that other space for administrative activities at a fixed location was available to an employee is relevant to determining whether the home office use was for the convenience of the employer.

New definition restores home office deductions to thousands of small business owners. Under the Soliman definition, many taxpayers who performed significant business functions outside their home offices were considered to have no principal place of business even though they managed their business activities from their homes, and were denied any deduction for their home office expenses and were often denied related travel expenses. Affected professionals included doctors (who perform their primary duties in hospitals), salespeople (who spend time visiting their customers' offices), teachers (who also practice their disciplines as a business), and house painters and other tradespeople (who spend much of their time at job sites).

Numerous policy arguments have been made in favor of restoring the home office deduction to pre-Soliman levels. The expanded definition puts small businesses on a more equal footing with larger businesses that lease space and may deduct rent. The deduction is perceived as pro-family, helps cut down on commuting, and conserves energy. It also recognizes advances in technology that encourage operating a home-based business, provides a financial boost to these businesses, and helps create jobs.

Effective date. The new definition applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

Business Meal Expenses

¶ 111

Background

Only 50 percent of the cost of ordinary and necessary business meals are deductible as business expenses. A higher deduction is allowed for food and beverages provided to crew members of certain vessels and offshore oil and gas platforms and drilling rigs. These exceptions to the 50-percent deduction limit are made because there is little chance that meals eaten by these employees have a personal component and there is little chance for abuse of the deduction. Under prior law, no exception was provided for workers in the transportation industry.

Increased deduction for meals provided to employees subject to DOT hours of service limitations.—The deductible percentage of the cost of meals consumed by employees subject to Department of Transportation (DOT) hours of service rules will gradually increase over the next 10 years from the currently allowable 50 percent of otherwise deductible meal expenses to 80 percent. This increase is intended to restore meal deductions to certain workers who are forced to eat away from home and are unlikely to abuse the deduction.

The increased meal deduction is available for food or beverages consumed while away from home by an individual during, or incident to, a period of duty subject to the DOT's hours of service limitations. Individuals subject to the hours of service limitations include:

(1) certain air transportation employees, such as pilots, crew, dispatchers, mechanics, and control tower operators;

(2) interstate truck operators and interstate bus drivers;

(3) certain railroad employees, such as engineers, conductors, train crews, dispatchers, and control operations personnel; and

(4) certain merchant mariners.

Deduction percentage. The increase in the deductible percentage is phased in as follows:

Tax years beginning in:	Deductible percentage:
1998, 1999	55
2000, 2001	60
2002, 2003	65
2004, 2005	70
2006, 2007	75
2008 and after	80

Effective date. The increased percentage applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Rural Mail Carriers

Background

Under a special provision enacted by the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-647), employees of the U.S. Postal Service who furnished their own vehicles for the collection and delivery of mail on rural routes were allowed to compute the deduction for the business use of their cars using a standard mileage rate greater than that provided to other taxpayers. This rate, 150 percent of the standard mileage rate, applied to all business miles driven while performing qualified services. Rural mail carriers covered by collective bargaining agreements are also paid an equipment maintenance allowance (EMA) that, prior to the enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, had to be taken into account in computing the allowable automobile deduction. If the EMA exceeded the carrier's automobile expense deduction, the excess was includible in income. If the EMA was less than the allowable deduction, a deduction was allowable only to the extent that this shortfall (excess of allowable deduction over EMA), when combined with the taxpayer's other miscellaneous itemized deductions, exceeded two percent of the taxpayer's adjusted gross income.

Rural mail carriers' receipt of qualified reimbursements deemed equal to expenses.—The treatment of certain reimbursed expenses of rural mail carriers has been simplified by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997. Under the Act, a rural mail carrier who receives a qualified reimbursement of expenses incurred for the use of his vehicle for performing the collection and delivery of mail on a rural route is allowed a deduction for an amount equal to the qualified reimbursement received. This reimbursement is treated as an amount paid under an accountable plan under Code Sec. 62(a)(2)(A) and, accordingly, is excluded from gross income. The Act repeals the special standard mileage rate and the provisions related to its use by rural mail carriers that were enacted by the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-647).

Qualified reimbursement. A qualified reimbursement is defined as amounts paid by the United States Postal Service to employees as an equipment maintenance allowance under the 1991 collective bargaining agreement between the Postal Service and the National Rural Mail Carriers' Association. Amounts paid as an equipment maintenance allowance by the U.S. Postal Service under later collective bargaining agreements that supersede the 1991 agreement are also considered qualified reimbursements so long as the amounts do not exceed the amounts that would have been paid under the 1991 agreement, as adjusted for changes in the Consumer Price Index (as defined in Code Sec. 1(f)(5)) since 1991.

Effective date. The provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Federal Employees Engaged in Criminal Investigations

Background

Under current law, travel expenses paid or incurred in connection with temporary employment away from home are deductible. A taxpayer who is away from home in a single location for more than one year is considered to be indefinitely, not temporarily, employed and, therefore, may not deduct travel expenses incurred in connection with this employment. If a taxpayer's employment away from home in a single location lasts less than one year, the employment is considered temporary or indefinite depending on the facts and circumstances. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, these rules also applied to federal employees away from home in connection with services performed while investigating a federal crime.

Traveling expenses of federal employees engaged in criminal investigations.—Travel expenses paid or incurred in connection with temporary employment are deductible, while those associated with indefinite employment are generally not deductible. A taxpayer is considered indefinitely employed if he is away from home in a single location for one year or more. If the taxpayer is employed in a single location for less than one year, the employment is considered temporary (and the expenses incurred or paid are deductible) or indefinite (and the expenses incurred are not deductible) based on the facts and circumstances. The Act eliminates the temporary versus indefinite determination in the case of unreimbursed travel expenses incurred by federal employees who are investigating or who are providing support services for investigating a federal crime. In order to qualify under this special provision, the employee must be certified by the Attorney General or his delegate as traveling on behalf of the United States on temporary duty status to investigate or provide support services for the investigation of a federal crime. If the federal employee meets these requirements, travel expenses incurred are fully deductible, regardless of the length of the period for which certification is given, so long as the other requirements for deductibility under Code Sec. 162 are met.

Effective date. The provision is effective for amounts paid or incurred with respect to tax years ending after August 5, 1997.

State and Local Government Employees

Background

Expenses incurred in the performance of services as an employee may not be deducted to determine adjusted gross income (AGI) (above-the-line deduction). These expenses are deductible "below-the-line" as miscellaneous itemized deductions, subject to the two-percent of AGI floor. Employee business expenses are also not allowed in determining alternative minimum taxable income. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, no exception to these rules existed for state and local government officials compensated on a fee basis.

"Above-the-line" deduction for state and municipal employees.—Expenses paid or incurred with respect to services performed by an official as an employee of a State or local government are deductible in computing adjusted gross income (AGI). This "above-the-line" deduction applies provided that the official is compensated in whole or in part on a fee basis. These expenses are also deductible for alternative minimum tax (AMT) purposes.

Planning Note. Due to the retroactive nature of this provision, effective for tax years after 1986, taxpayers may be able to file amended returns for open tax years to deduct these expenses. It is important to keep in mind that this deduction reduces AGI which, in turn, may affect other items with AGI-related thresholds, such as medical expenses, casualty losses and miscellaneous itemized deductions.

Effective date. The provision applies to expenses paid or incurred in tax years beginning after December 31, 1986.

TAX CREDITS

Child Tax Credit

¶ 119

Background

Generally, taxpayers may claim a personal exemption for each dependent child ($2,650 in 1997). The exemption is indexed for inflation and phased out for higher-income taxpayers. Additionally, taxpayers may claim a credit for dependent care expenses, which is also phased out for higher-income taxpayers. However, prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, taxpayers were not allowed a credit based solely on the number of dependent children they had.

Allowance of credit.—Taxpayers who have qualifying children under age 17 are entitled to the new child tax credit. The amount of the credit will be $400 per child in 1998, increasing to $500 per child in 1999 and thereafter.

The credit is allowed only for tax years consisting of 12 months.

Limitation of credit based on AGI. The child credit begins to phase out when modified adjusted gross income (AGI) reaches $110,000 for joint filers, $55,000 for marrieds filing separately, and $75,000 for singles. The credit is reduced by $50 for each $1,000, or fraction thereof, of modified AGI above the thresholds. Thus, the level at which the child tax credit is completely phased out depends on the number of qualifying children.

Planning Note. In 1998, for taxpayers with one child, the child credit is completely phased out when modified AGI exceeds $117,001 for joint filers, $62,001 for marrieds filing separately, and $82,001 for singles.

These thresholds are not indexed for inflation. For phaseout purposes, modified AGI is determined without regard to the exclusions from gross income for foreign earned income and foreign housing costs (Code Sec. 911) and income of residents of Guam, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and Puerto Rico (Code Secs. 931 and 933).

Qualifying child. A "qualifying child" is a child, descendant, stepchild, or eligible foster child for whom the taxpayer may claim a dependency exemption and who is less than 17 years old. The age limitations apply to the child's age as of the close of the tax year. The child must be a U.S. citizen.

Refundable amount of child credit. Taxpayers who qualify for the child tax credit may qualify for a refundable credit known as the supplemental credit. Taxpayers who have three or more qualifying children may also be entitled to an additional credit.

Amount of supplemental credit. The supplemental credit is treated as a component of the earned income credit (EIC). The supplemental child credit equals:

(1) the lesser of:

(a) $500 ($400 in 1998) times the number of qualifying children, or

(b) the taxpayer's regular tax liability (net of all applicable credits except the EIC) over the taxpayer's tentative minimum tax (determined without regard to the alternative minimum tax foreign tax credit); over

(2) the taxpayer's regular income tax liability (net of all applicable credits other than the EIC), plus the employee share of FICA (and one-half any SECA tax liability), less the amount of the EIC.

Planning Note. Generally, a supplemental credit will result only when the taxpayer's EIC exceeds the taxpayer's employee share of FICA (and one half of any SECA tax liability).

Amount of child credit for three or more children. If the taxpayer has three or more qualifying children, the maximum amount of the child credit for a tax year cannot exceed the greater of:

(1) the excess of the taxpayer's regular tax liability (net of applicable credits other than the EIC) over the taxpayer's tentative minimum tax liability (determined without regard to the alternative minimum tax foreign tax credit); or

(2) the excess of the sum of the taxpayer's regular income tax liability (net of applicable credits other than the EIC) and the employee share of FICA (and one-half any SECA tax liability), less the amount of the EIC.

The portion of the credit determined under (2) that exceeds the amount determined under (1) is treated as a refundable credit. The portion of the credit determined under (1) that exceeds the credit determined under (2) is treated as a supplemental credit.

These two rules operate to ensure that a taxpayer with more than two children who claims the EIC will first be able to take the full amount of the EIC, including the refundable portion. If any portion of the EIC is refundable, then the taxpayer is allowed a refundable credit of the portion of the child credit that does not exceed the employee's share of FICA taxes paid by the taxpayer over the refunded EIC. In other words, a taxpayer is allowed a refundable credit to the extent that the FICA exceeds the refunded EIC.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Lee Schwendner, Tax Manager at Dennis Nelson & Company, Ltd., Rolling Meadows, Illinois, observes that some taxpayers who fall below the adjusted gross income threshold may still find the benefit of this new credit to be diminished. The benefit may be reduced if the taxpayer is subject to alternative minimum tax. The credit will only provide a benefit to the extent that regular tax liability exceeds the alternative minimum tax.

Taxpayers who anticipate being in an alternative minimum tax situation may benefit from watching the timing of alternative minimum tax adjustments and preferences. Since the child tax credit is first available in 1998, a potential shift of preference items from 1998 to 1997 (when the credit does not apply) may help preserve a credit for 1998 which otherwise would have been reduced because of alternative minimum tax in 1998.

It should also be noted that since the ability to claim this credit follows the dependency deduction for the qualifying child, certain divorce and multiple support agreement situations will be impacted. A divorced custodial parent who has waived the dependency exemption for a child will now also be passing the potential credit to the other parent. This can make the dependency exemption a slightly higher bargaining chip in divorce agreements.

In some divorce situations, the traditional logic of passing the dependency exemption to the higher income parent may now be reversed. If one parent would expect to be over the Code Sec. 24 adjusted gross income limit, it may be beneficial to give the dependency exemption to the lower income party. Depending on the spread between income tax rates of the two parties, it may be possible to obtain the maximum tax savings by putting the exemption with the lower income taxpayer because the larger credit (not limited for the lower bracket spouse) may exceed the tax detriment of claiming the exemption on the lower tax rate return.

In a multiple support agreement situation, the qualifying child may meet the Code Sec. 24(c)(1)(C) relationship test for some members of the support group but not for others. The support agreement members should consider that the child tax credit may be lost if they allocate the dependency exemption to a member who would not meet the relationship test referred to in Code Sec. 24.

Example. Sally and Paul Smith have three children and earned income of $25,000. Assuming that all amounts are the same as 1997 amounts, their tax liability would be:

Income	$25,000
Standard deduction	($ 6,900)
Personal exemptions	($13,250)
Taxable income	$4,850
Tax on $4,850	$ 727
Earned income credit	$ 904
FICA paid	$1,912.50

The Smith's child credit limitation is $1,735.50, which is the greater of:

(1) $727 regular tax liability – $0 tentative tax liability, or

(2) $1,735.50 ($727 regular tax liability + $1,912.50 FICA – $904 EIC).

They are therefore entitled to the full credit of $1,200 in 1998 or $1,500 in 1999. Because (2) is greater than (1), $473 of the credit in 1998 ($1,200 – $727) or $773 of the credit in 1999 ($1,500 – $727) is treated as a refundable credit. Thus, the Smiths have refundable credits (child credit and EIC) totaling $1,377 in 1998 ($473 + $904) or $1,677 in 1999 ($773 + $904).

Planning Note. The IRS has been instructed to attempt to simplify these calculations.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Professor Karen Kole of the University of Tulsa School of Law notes that the child care credit is yet another provision ostensibly designed to benefit lower and middle class taxpayers but is so complicated and difficult to understand not only by practitioners but also by laypersons that very few deserving taxpayers will benefit from the provision. For example, to ascertain if the credit is available to a taxpayer, definitions such as qualifying child, "modified adjusted gross income" (meaning adjusted gross income increased by certain foreign income under Code Sec. 911, 932, or 933), and exceptions for certain noncitizens make the provision one that only paid tax return preparers will be able to correctly determine. The relatively small amount of the basic child care credit, $500, would end up being reduced by the amount the taxpayer will have to pay to have a preparer figure out the tax. The Supplemental Child Credit, confusing in and of itself, seems designed to benefit only those taxpayers whose Earned Income Credit exceeds the amount of FICA withholding.

Effective date. The credit applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Adoption Tax Credit and Exclusion

Background

Taxpayers are allowed a tax credit of up to $5,000 per child for qualified adoption expenses, including reasonable and necessary adoption fees, court costs, attorney fees, and other expenses directly related to the adoption of an eligible child ($6,000 in the case of a child with special needs). This provision, as promulgated in the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188), did not specify that expenses incurred during the tax year in which the adoption was finalized were allowed only in that tax year. Thus, it appeared to give taxpayers the option of taking the credit during the tax year subsequent to the tax year in which the adoption was finalized.

Conforming treatment of qualified adoption expenses.—Individual taxpayers are allowed a credit for qualified adoption expenses which they pay or incur. The Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 clarifies the tax year for which the credit for adoption expenses is allowed for the payment of qualified adoption expenses. If adoption expenses are paid during a tax year prior to the tax year in which the adoption is finalized, the credit is allowed during the year the adoption is finalized. If adoption expenses are paid during or after the tax year in which the adoption is finalized, the credit is allowed for the tax year in which the expense is paid or incurred. Another technical correction deletes redundant references to other Code sections used in calculating the taxpayer's adjusted gross income for this purpose.

> Example. David and Susan Green begin proceedings to adopt an infant in 1997. During 1997, the Greens incur expenses of $4,000. During 1998, the year in which the adoption is finalized, they incur additional expenses of $2,000. The Greens must wait until the 1998 tax year to claim the tax credit for their 1997 adoption expenses. The 1998 expenses are also claimed on their 1998 tax return because the adoption is finalized in that year. However, the total credit on their 1998 return is limited to $5,000. The $5,000 limit is a per-child limit, not an annual limitation. If the infant qualified as a special needs child, the Greens could claim the entire $6,000 of expenses as a credit on their 1998 tax return.

Effective date. This provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Background

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the phaseout range of the exclusion for employer-provided adoption assistance programs did not conform with the phaseout range of the adoption tax credit.

Conforming language regarding adoption assistance programs.—When an adoption assistance program is provided by an employer, employees may exclude from gross income amounts received for qualified adoption expenses. Similar to the adoption tax credit, the amount excluded from the taxpayer's income may not exceed $5,000 ($6,000 in the case of a child with special needs). The exclusion is proportionately phased out for taxpayers whose adjusted gross (AGI) income exceeds $75,000 and fully phased out for taxpayers whose AGI exceeds $115,000. The Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 conforms the language of Code Sec. 137(b)(1) regarding the dollar limitation for adoption assistance programs with the language of Code Sec. 23(b)(1) regarding the dollar limitation for the adoption tax credit. Code Sec. 137(b)(1) now limits "the aggregate of the amounts paid or expenses incurred which may be taken into account," rather than "the amount excludable from gross income." The effect of the amendment is to conform the phaseout range of the adoption assistance exclusion to the phaseout range of the credit for qualified adoption expenses.

Effective date. This provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Restrictions on Earned Income Credit

Background

Many lower-income workers are entitled to the refundable earned income credit (EIC) if they meet various income and other eligibility requirements. The amount of the credit is determined by the number of children the taxpayer supports and phases out when the taxpayer's earned income (or adjusted gross income, if greater) reaches certain levels. (In 1997, the credit is completely phased out for taxpayers with two or more children when earned income reaches $29,290.) In the past, various studies have indicated that the EIC is widely abused (relative to other Code provisions), and various preventative measures have been implemented (e.g., requiring the social security numbers of qualifying children).

For purposes of the EIC phaseouts, adjusted gross income disregards the following losses: (1) net capital loss (if greater than zero), (2) net losses from trusts and estates, (3) net losses from nonbusiness rents and royalties, and (4) 50 percent of net losses from business.

Although the generally applicable accuracy-related and fraud penalties may apply if a taxpayer improperly claims an EIC, prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, no penalty was aimed specifically at taxpayer abuse of the EIC. Similarly, although income tax return preparers are subject to general penalties for improper return preparation, under prior law, no unique penalty applied to preparers who took improper EICs on behalf of their clients. Additionally, prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, taxpayers who had improperly claimed the EIC were not required to prove their eligibility for the credit in subsequent years.

Changes relating to compliance and phaseout ranges.—The new law contains a number of earned income credit (EIC) "compliance provisions." These provisions deny earned income tax credit eligibility for prior acts of recklessness or fraud, require recertification for eligibility in future years when the credit is denied in a deficiency proceeding, and impose a due diligence requirement on return preparers. The Act also makes modifications to the definition of earned income and the definition of adjusted gross income (AGI) used to phase out the earned income tax credit.

Denial for recklessness or fraud. Taxpayers who negligently or fraudulently claim the EIC are prohibited from claiming future credits for a period of years. The disallowance period is two years after the most recent tax year for which there was a final determination that the taxpayer's EIC claim was due to recklessness or intentional disregard of the rules or regulations (but not due to fraud). The disallowance period increases to 10 years after the most recent tax year for which there was a final determination that the taxpayer fraudulently claimed the EIC.

Caution. The EIC disallowance sanction is imposed in addition to any other penalty (e.g., the accuracy-related penalty or the fraud penalty).

The final determination of fraud or recklessness is made in a deficiency proceeding. Although deficiency proceedings allow for judicial review, a judgment is not a prerequisite for the disallowance; an operative determination, provided it is final, may be made by the IRS. Under the deficiency procedures, a contact letter is sent to the taxpayer. If the taxpayer does not supply the requisite information, the IRS sends a statutory notice of deficiency and the taxpayer has 90 days to file a Tax Court petition. If no petition is filed and there is no other response to the statutory notice, assessment is made and the EIC is denied.

Recertification required for improper EIC claim. A taxpayer who has been denied an EIC in a deficiency procedure may not claim the EIC in any future tax year unless the taxpayer provides the IRS with evidence of eligibility for the credit. Once the IRS certifies entitlement to the EIC, the taxpayer is not required to prove eligibility again unless the IRS again denies the EIC in a deficiency procedure. The IRS will issue guidance detailing the required evidence.

Failure to provide information necessary for recertification is treated as a mathematical or clerical error under Code Sec. 6213. Therefore, a notice on this issue will not be considered a notice of deficiency, and the IRS can summarily assess additional tax under the Code Sec. 6213 procedures without issuing a deficiency notice.

Tax preparer due diligence required. An income tax return preparer must comply with the due diligence requirements for claims for refund or returns they prepare claiming the EIC. Each failure to observe the requirements regarding the amount of, or eligibility for, the EIC will result in a penalty of $100. This penalty is in addition to any other penalty imposed.

Due diligence requirements will be imposed by the IRS through regulations. Current regulations require preparers to make reasonable inquiries about taxpayer-supplied information that appears to be incorrect, inconsistent, or incomplete, and prohibit preparers from signing returns that contain a position that does not have a realistic possibility of being sustained on its merits.

Calculating modified adjusted gross income and earned income for phaseout ranges. The new law includes a taxpayer-friendly amendment that allows more income to be excluded from adjusted gross income (AGI) for purposes of the credit phaseout. Two items of nontaxable income are added to the list of excludable income and the percentage of disregarded losses is increased. Now excluded from a taxpayer's AGI for purposes of the EIC are tax-exempt interest and nontaxable distributions from pensions, annuities, and IRAs (provided these distributions are not rolled over into similar tax-favored vehicles). However, the amount of net business losses that must be disregarded is increased from 50 to 75 percent.

The way earned income is calculated also has been modified. Certain workfare payments earned by the taxpayer are not included in earned income for EIC purposes. These payments are those received for work activities (including work associated with the refurbishing of public housing) if sufficient private sector employment is not available and from community service programs (sections 407(d)(4) and 407(d)(7) of the Social Security Act).

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Professor Karen Kole of the University of Tulsa School of Law observes that Congress seems to be using a sledgehammer to kill a fly regarding the problems of the Earned Income Credit and the fraud that has been associated with the administration of the credit. In fact, Congress may be trying to kill the wrong fly. It is common knowledge that the earned income credit provisions are among the most complicated and difficult provisions in the Code to apply correctly. This is particularly true since taxpayers entitled to the earned income credit tend to be taxpayers at the lower end of the education level and often taxpayers who do not have English as their first language and generally do not understand the tax system or how to fill out tax returns.

The earned income credit would be denied for 10 tax years following a tax year for which there was a final determination that the taxpayer's claim of credit was due to fraud and a denial for two tax years following a tax year for which there was a final determination that the taxpayer's claim of the credit was due to reckless or intentional disregard of rules and regulations (but not due to fraud). Presumably, the IRS would apply the reckless or intentional disregard penalty with a disclosure exception as now encompassed in Treas. Reg. § 1.6662-3(a), but even then how would the uneducated taxpayer possibly understand the subtleties of disclosure? As to fraud, the IRS merely needs to impose the penalty, and the taxpayer would have to fight the determination of fraud. Again, these taxpayers are not the ones who would be in a position, either financially, emotionally, or educationally, to fight back. It would hardly be worth the effort for the taxpayer, even if he or she could come up with the money, to hire a tax attorney, a C.P.A. or E.A. to challenge the IRS determination. On the other hand, income tax return preparers who fail to be diligent in determining the eligibility for the earned income credit will merely be slapped with a $100 penalty for each failure. This certainly seems to be a less "draconian" measure (for income tax preparers) than for the taxpayer who truly may be attempting to comply with these complex provisions and who may be potentially subject to losing thousands of dollars for a significant period of time. These thousands of dollars would presumably be taken away from paying for rent and food and other necessities. It would seem more equitable to subject the taxpayer to a $100 penalty than to totally deny the credit for a substantial period of time. Professor Kole believes that these changes with regard to the earned income credit were enacted with a goal to combat the extensive fraud that is currently inherent in the program. She doubts if these new provisions will substantially increase compliance with the complicated provisions of the earned income credit.

Effective date. The EIC compliance provisions, including those applicable to taxpayers who improperly claimed the EIC and the tax return preparer due diligence requirement, apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996. The changes to the calculation of the amount of a taxpayer's AGI or earned income apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

EXCLUSIONS AND FRINGE BENEFITS

Sale of Principal Residence

Background

Under prior law, an individual could generally defer recognition of gain on the sale of a residence if a replacement residence was purchased within two years before or after the sale of the old residence, both the old and new residences were owned and used by the individual as a principal residence, and the cost of the replacement residence was at least equal to the adjusted sales price of the old residence. Individuals age 55 or older could exclude up to $125,000 of the gain realized on the sale of their personal residence if they owned and used the residence as their principal residence for at least three years during the five-year period ending on the date of the sale.

Exclusion of gain on sale of principal residence.—Unless an individual elects otherwise, the individual may exclude from income up to $250,000 of gain realized on the sale or exchange of a residence. The individual must have owned and occupied the residence as a principal residence for an aggregate of at least two of the five years before the sale or exchange.

This exclusion replaces the rollover of gain provisions of Code Sec. 1034 and the one-time $125,000 exclusion for taxpayers age 55 or older.

Frequency of sales or exchanges limited. The exclusion applies to only one sale or exchange every two years, but pre-May 7, 1997 sales are not taken into account.

Married individuals. The amount of excludable gain is increased to $500,000 for married individuals filing jointly if (1) either spouse meets the ownership test, (2) both spouses meet the use test, and (3) neither spouse is ineligible for exclusion by virtue of a sale or exchange of a residence within the last two years.

When married individuals file a joint tax return, they will be eligible for the $250,000 exclusion, or a prorated exclusion (see "Exclusion prorated," below) if either spouse meets the ownership and use requirements.

Planning Note. The exclusion is determined on an individual basis. Thus, for married couples who do not share a principal residence but file joint returns, a $250,000 exclusion is available for a qualifying sale or exchange of each spouse's principal residence. Also, if a single individual eligible for the exclusion marries someone who has used the exclusion within two years before the marriage, the individual is entitled to a $250,000 exclusion. In other words, the fact that the individual's spouse used the exclusion within the past two years does not prevent the individual from claiming the exclusion.

Planning Note. According to the legislative history of this provision, Congress wanted to make clear that the provision limiting the exclusion to only one sale every two years by the individual does not prevent a husband and wife from filing a joint tax return and each excluding up to $250,000 of gain from the sale of each spouse's principal residence. This rule applies if each spouse would have been permitted to exclude up to $250,000 of gain if they had filed separate tax returns.

Gain recognized to extent of depreciation. The exclusion does not apply, and gain is recognized, to the extent of any depreciation allowable with respect to the rental or business use of a principal residence after May 6, 1997.

Exclusion prorated. If a taxpayer does not meet the ownership or residence requirements, a pro rata amount of the $250,000 or $500,000 exclusion applies if the sale or exchange is due to a change in place of employment, health, or unforeseen circumstances. In such cases, the amount of the available exclusion is equal to the gain that would have been excluded if the ownership and residence requirements had been met, multiplied by the portion that the shorter of (1) the aggregate periods during which the ownership and use requirements were met during the five-year period ending on the date of sale or (2) the period after the date of the most recent sale or exchange to which the exclusion applied bears to two years. The extent to which the exclusion may be prorated due to a sale or exchange involving unforeseen circumstances is to be determined by IRS regulations.

> Example. On September 1, 1997, Al and Lisa Jackson purchase a townhouse in Boston for $450,000. Lisa receives an offer of employment in Atlanta, and on July 1, 1998, the Jacksons sell their townhouse for $480,000 and purchase a home in a suburb of Atlanta for $350,000. The Jackson's realize $30,000 of capital gain on their townhouse. Because they owned and resided in the townhouse for 10 months, they may exclude $12,500 of the gain from income ($30,000 × 10 ÷ 24 = $12,500).

Caution. The Conference Report refers to a proration of the $250,000 or $500,000 exclusion limit rather than a proration of the gain. If the conference report language were applied in the above Example, the entire gain of $30,000 would be excludable.

Certain sales within two years of enactment. A special rule provides that the exclusion may still be claimed even if the individual does not satisfy the two-year ownership and use tests and does not satisfy the requirement that the sale was due to an acceptable reason (e.g., change in the place of employment or unforeseen circumstances). However, in order to satisfy this special rule, the following two requirements must be met:

(1) the individual must have held the residence on the date of enactment (August 5, 1997), and

(2) the sale or exchange must occur during the two-year period that began on the date of enactment (August 5, 1997).

Planning Note. The $250,000 or $500,000 exclusion from income eliminates the need for many homeowners to keep records of capital improvements that increase the basis of their residences. However, records of capital improvements should be kept if there is any possibility that income might be required to be recognized upon the sale of the principal residence. That situation might arise in the following circumstances:

(1) the individuals intend to live in the residence for a long period of time;

(2) the residence is rapidly appreciating in value;

(3) there is a possibility that the owners may claim a depreciation deduction for a home office or rental use of the residence; or

(4) there is a possibility that the owners may not use or own the residence long enough to qualify for the exclusion.

Ownership and use of prior residences. In determining the period of ownership and use of a current residence, taxpayers may include periods of ownership and use of all prior residences with respect to which gain was rolled over to the current residence under former Code Sec. 1034.

Incapacitated taxpayers. If an individual becomes physically or mentally incapable of self-care, the individual is deemed to use a residence as a principal residence during the time in which the individual owns the residence and resides in a licensed care facility (e.g., a nursing home). In order for this rule to apply, the taxpayer must have owned and used the residence as a principal residence for an aggregate period of at least one year during the five years preceding the sale or exchange.

Divorced taxpayers. If a residence is transferred to a taxpayer incident to a divorce, the time during which the taxpayer's spouse or former spouse owned the residence is added to the taxpayer's period of ownership. A taxpayer who owns a residence is deemed to use it as a principal residence while the taxpayer's spouse or former spouse is given use of the residence under the terms of a divorce or separation.

Widowed taxpayers. A taxpayer's period of ownership of a residence includes the period during which the taxpayer's deceased spouse owned the residence.

Remainder interests. The exclusion applies to gain on the sale or exchange of a remainder interest in a principal residence, provided the person acquiring the residence is not a member of the taxpayer's family or other related person as defined by Code Sec. 267(b) or 707(b).

Expatriates. The exclusion is not available to nonresident alien individuals who are subject to Code Sec. 877(a)(1) because they gave up their U.S. citizenship for the principal purpose of tax avoidance.

Involuntary conversions. For purposes of determining the exclusion, the destruction, theft, seizure, requisition, or condemnation of property is treated as a sale or exchange of the residence. In addition, the ownership and use of property acquired in an involuntary conversion generally includes the ownership and use of the property treated as sold or exchanged. For purposes of Code Sec. 1033, the amount realized from the sale or exchange of property is equal to the amount of gain, reduced by the amount of gain that is permitted to be excluded from income under this new provision.

Co-ops. In the situation of a tenant-stockholder of a cooperative housing corporation defined in Code Sec. 216, the residence ownership requirements apply to the ownership of the stock of the corporation and the use requirements apply to the house or apartment which the stockholder was entitled to occupy.

Exception to real estate transaction reporting requirements. An exception to the real estate transaction reporting requirements applies if a residence is sold for $250,000 or less ($500,000 or less if the seller is married) and the person otherwise required to report the transaction receives written assurance:

(1) that the residence is the seller's principal residence;

(2) if it would otherwise be required to report whether there is such assistance, that there is no federally subsidized mortgage financing assistance with respect to the mortgage on the residence; and

(3) that the full amount of the gain on the sale or exchange is excludable from gross income.

See, also ¶ 1050.

Planning Note. The IRS is given authority to increase these threshold reporting requirements (i.e., a sale price of more than $250,000 or $500,000) if it determines that the increase will not materially reduce income tax revenues. If the IRS does take such a step it will further reduce the reporting requirements of those that are otherwise required to report such transactions to the IRS (e.g., title companies or mortgage lenders).

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Sidney Kess, New York, CCH contributing editor, author and lecturer, observes that the new home sale exclusion should prove most helpful to those who downsize or move to parts of the country where homes are less expensive and who would not have qualified under the old rules (those under age 55 who would not have qualified for the old exclusion; those who did not buy replacement homes and, thus, would not have qualified for the old deferral rule).

The new exclusion was designed to eliminate the need to maintain detailed records on home improvements. However, those with considerable appreciation in the value of their homes still need good records to minimize tax on the amount of gain in excess of the exclusion.

The new home sale exclusion is not good news for everybody. Those who would have qualified under the old exclusion and/or deferral rules to avoid or postpone all tax may wind up paying some tax if gain exceeds the new exclusion amounts. Homesellers who, under a transitional rule, have the opportunity to choose between the old and new rules need to figure their tax both ways to determine which option is better for them.

Effective date. The new exclusion and repeal of the capital gains rollover provisions and one-time $125,000 exclusion apply to sales and exchanges after May 6, 1997. Taxpayers may elect to apply prior law to sales or exchanges (1) made before August 5, 1997, (2) made after August 5, 1997, pursuant to a binding contract in effect on August 5, 1997, or (3) when the replacement residence was acquired on or before August 5, 1997, and the rollover provision would apply. Such an election is not available to expatriates subject to Code Sec. 877(a)(1).

Employer-Provided Parking

¶ 131

Background

Under current law, up to $170 of qualified employer-provided parking may be excluded from gross income. Qualified parking is parking provided to an employee on or near the employer's business premises, or on or near a location from which the employee commutes to work using mass transit, a commuter highway vehicle, or carpool. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, however, the exclusion was only available if the parking was provided in addition to any compensation that was otherwise payable to the employee. If the employer offered the employee a choice between cash and employer-provided parking, for example, the parking exclusion was lost.

Employers permitted to offer parking or cash equivalent.—Employers who provide qualified parking for their employees are now permitted to offer the employees a choice between the parking and the cash equivalent without loss of the $170-per-month employee exclusion for employer-provided parking. The amount of cash offered is includible in an employee's income if the employee chooses the cash option. Previously, the exclusion did not apply if a cash option was offered.

Congress made this change because it believed that the old rule that prevented a cash option resulted in an overutilization of employer-provided parking as a fringe benefit. The new rule is expected to increase tax revenue and promote sound environmental and energy policy by reducing the amount of commuting by car.

Effective date. This provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Foreign Earned Income Exclusion

Background

U.S. citizens who reside in foreign countries may be eligible for tax breaks. One such tax break is a credit for foreign taxes paid on foreign source income. Another is an exclusion for foreign-source income and housing costs. Prior to enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the maximum exclusion for foreign earned income for a tax year was $70,000.

Increased dollar limitation on Code Sec. 911 exclusion.—Qualified individual U.S. citizens or residents who reside in foreign countries may be eligible to exclude from their gross income certain foreign earned income and housing costs. The Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 phases in the increase in the limitation on the Code Sec. 911 exclusion amount as follows:

1998	$72,000
1999	$74,000
2000	$76,000
2002 and thereafter	$80,000

For any tax year beginning after 2007, the $80,000 amount will be increased by multiplying the dollar amount of the limitation by the cost-of-living adjustment for the calendar year in which the tax year begins. The increase will then be rounded to the next lowest multiple of $100.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Paul Bodner, Esq., Great Neck, N.Y., notes that the Code Sec. 911 exclusion, which has not kept up with inflation, is only of value to individuals working in tax havens or low tax countries. Other individuals are better off claiming the foreign tax credit. Consequently, as a practical matter, except for individuals working in tax havens, only individuals who find it easier to claim the exclusion will benefit. Often these individuals who do not have access to employer-paid professional help do not realize that in order to claim the exclusion they must file a tax return. The debate continues whether U.S. citizens living abroad for an extensive period of time should be subject to federal income tax. Many of these individuals are also citizens of a foreign country, and in some cases, may not even realize that they are also subject to U.S. taxation. Other countries only tax their residents.

Effective date. The increase in the Code Sec. 911 exclusion applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Disability Benefits of Police and Firefighters

Background

Gross income does not include amounts received under a workers' compensation act. Thus, employees who receive compensation for personal injuries or sickness incurred in the course of employment or survivors of a deceased employee are not taxed on the amount received from workers' compensation. Conversely, nonoccupational death and disability benefits are not excluded from income as workers' compensation benefits. Some recipients of payments made in 1989, 1990, and 1991, on behalf of full-time employees of certain police and fire departments as compensation for heart disease or hypertension, mistakenly assumed that the exclusion for workers' compensation payments was applicable to their situations. However, because of the way their state plans were structured, these recipients were required to include the payments in income.

Disability benefits for former police and fire department employees expanded.—In general, employees who receive benefits under workers' compensation acts for injuries or sickness may exclude that compensation from gross income under Code Sec. 104(a). Former police and fire department employees who received compensation for heart disease or hypertension in 1989, 1990, or 1991 may exclude that compensation from gross income. For individuals in those occupations, such conditions may be treated as work-related personal injuries if certain requirements are met.

Applicable payments. In order for compensation for heart disease and hypertension to be excludable from gross income, the payments received by former police and fire department employees must meet specific criteria. The individual must have been a full-time employee of a police department or a fire department organized and operated by a state, by a state agency or instrumentality, or by any political subdivision of the state, its agency or its instrumentality. State law, as of May 19, 1992, must presume that heart disease and hypertension are work-related illnesses for employees who left their employment before July 1, 1992. Finally, the payments must have been received by the former employee (or the survivors of the employee) during 1989, 1990, or 1991.

Planning Note. The wording of the Act extends the exclusion beyond police officers and firefighters to "full-time employees of a police or fire department."

Statute of limitations waiver. Claims for refunds or credits for overpayment of tax due to this provision may be filed up to one year from the date this law is enacted, regardless of applicable statutes of limitation.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1529. Law at ¶ 7070. Committee Report at ¶ 13,425.

Background

A surviving spouse or surviving dependent child or children of military personnel killed in combat are entitled to survivor benefits which are exempt from taxation. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, similarly situated survivors of public safety officers killed in the line of duty who received survivor annuity benefits under a governmental plan had to include these amounts in gross income unless the amounts were contributed to the plan by the deceased and were originally included in the officer's gross income.

Exemption for survivor benefits paid upon death of a police officer.— An amount paid as a survivor annuity to the spouse, former spouse or child of a public safety officer killed in the line of duty is excludable from the recipient's gross income if the annuity is provided under a governmental plan. The plan must meet the requirements of Code Sec. 401(a) for qualified plans. The annuity is excludable to the extent that it is attributable to the officer's service as a public safety officer.

For purposes of the exclusion, a public safety officer is defined in Section 1204 of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968. Police and law enforcement officers, fire fighters, ambulance crews, and rescue squads are all public safety officers for the purposes of that Act.

Caution. This exclusion does not apply to an officer whose death was caused by the intentional misconduct of the officer or by the officer's intent to bring about his death. The exclusion also does not apply if the officer was voluntarily intoxicated at the time of death or was performing his duties in a grossly negligent manner at the time of death.

Survivor benefits are not excludable from gross income if the recipient's actions were a substantial contributing factor to the death of the officer.

Effective date. This provision shall apply to amounts received in tax years beginning after December 31, 1996, with respect to individuals dying after that date.

EDUCATION INCENTIVES

Credits for Higher Education Tuition

¶ 139

Background

A number of tax breaks are available to help taxpayers pay for the cost of postsecondary education. However, before the Act, tax assistance was very limited for students (or their parents) who continued their education immediately after high school or who prepared themselves for a new line of work without the aid of employer-provided reimbursement. The following tax incentives are still provided for education expenses in addition to the new credit for tuition and related expenses.

(1) Taxpayers could deduct as business expenses the cost of education that maintained or improved a skill required in the taxpayer's current line of business or met express employer or legal requirements (Code Sec. 162).

(2) Employees can exclude up to $5,250 annually for education expenses paid under a qualified employer-provided educational assistance program. The exclusion was unavailable for graduate-level courses beginning after June 30, 1996 (Code Sec. 127).

(3) Taxpayers can exclude interest earned on Series EE bonds issued after 1989 provided that the bond proceeds are used to pay higher education expenses (Code Sec. 135).

(4) Degree candidates can exclude qualified scholarships used for tuition, fees and books at any primary, secondary or postsecondary educational institution (Code Sec. 117).

(5) The forgiveness of certain student loans does not generate cancellation of debt income if the forgiveness was contingent on the student working for a certain period in stipulated professions (Code Sec. 108(f)).

(6) Tax on earnings on amounts paid into qualified state tuition programs (pre-paid tuition programs) is deferred until distribution and, at distribution, is taxed to the student (presumably at their lower tax rate) (Code Sec. 529).

HOPE scholarship credit and lifetime learning credit.—New tax credits may be elected by low- and middle-income individuals for tuition expenses incurred by students pursuing college or graduate degrees or vocational training. The "HOPE scholarship credit" provides a maximum allowable credit of $1,500 per student for each of the first two years of postsecondary education, and the "lifetime learning credit" allows a credit of 20 percent of qualified tuition expenses paid by the taxpayer for any year the HOPE credit is not claimed. Specifically, the HOPE scholarship credit initially allows taxpayers a 100-percent credit per eligible student for the first $1,000 of tuition expenses (but not room, board or books) and a 50-percent credit for the second $1,000 of tuition paid. The 20-percent lifetime learning credit is computed on the amount of tuition paid by the taxpayer and is available for the first $5,000 of tuition for tax years beginning before 2003 and for the first $10,000 thereafter.

Both credits are available for qualified tuition and related expenses incurred for the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, or the taxpayer's dependent. The $1,500 maximum HOPE credit is allowed per student, while the lifetime learning credit maximum is calculated per taxpayer and does not vary based on the number of students in the taxpayer's family. The credits are elective and nonrefundable.

Caution. No double benefit is permitted; the credits are not permitted to more than one taxpayer in the same year (i.e., either parent or dependent child may take the credit), and cannot be claimed for the same expenses for which another tax benefit is also received.

The $1,000 amount of tuition expenses eligible for the HOPE scholarship credit and the amount used to compute the credit under the formula in Code Sec. 25A(b)(1) (discussed below) are adjusted for inflation occurring after the year 2000 (as are the income limitations discussed below). No inflation adjustment is provided for the $5,000 and $10,000 tuition amounts used to determine the amount of the lifetime learning credit.

Income limitations. The allowable amount of the credits is reduced for taxpayers who have modified adjusted gross income (AGI) above certain amounts. The phaseout of the credits begins for most taxpayers when modified AGI reaches $40,000; the credits are completely phased out when modified AGI reaches $50,000. For joint filers, the phaseout range is $80,000 to $100,000.

The amount of the credits that may be claimed for the tax year is reduced (but not below zero) by an amount that bears the same ratio to the amount which would be taken into account as the excess of the taxpayer's modified AGI over $40,000 ($80,000 for a joint return) bears to $10,000 ($20,000 for a joint return). The amount of the reduction can be determined by applying the following formula:

$$\begin{array}{c}\text{Sum of HOPE credit and}\\ \text{lifetime learning credit}\end{array} \times \frac{\text{Modified AGI} - $40{,}000}{$10{,}000}$$

(In the above formula, for joint returns, the $40,000 amount would be replaced with $80,000 and the $10,000 amount would be replaced with $20,000). The taxpayer's allowable credit is the amount of the credits (HOPE and lifetime learning credits) otherwise allowable to the taxpayer reduced by the reduction amount.

For purposes of the new education credits, modified AGI is AGI increased by income earned outside the United States (amounts otherwise excluded from income under Code Secs. 911, 931, and 933). Income earned in Puerto Rico and U.S. possessions is considered to be earned abroad.

The income ranges for the phaseout of the credits will be indexed for inflation occurring after the year 2000.

> Example (1). Carrie Smith, a single mother, has modified AGI of $46,000. In 1998, Carrie's daughter, Sonia, begins studying for her bachelor's degree as a full-time student at State University. On August 1, 1998, Carrie pays $5,000 in qualified tuition for Sonia's first semester. Without the income limitations, Carrie would be entitled to the maximum HOPE credit of $1,500 (100% of $1,000 plus 50% of $1,000). However, taking into account the income limitations, Carrie's otherwise allowable HOPE credit of $1,500 is reduced by $900: [($46,000 − $40,000) over $10,000] × $1,500; or .6 × $1,500. Thus, Carrie is entitled to a credit of $600.

No credit for married taxpayers filing separate returns. The HOPE credit and the lifetime learning credit are not available to married taxpayers who file separate returns. The credits are available to married individuals (as defined in Code Sec. 7703) only if a joint return is filed.

HOPE scholarship credit. The HOPE scholarship credit is available only for the first two years of postsecondary education. Further, the credit can only be elected for two tax years with respect to one student (including elections by the taxpayer or any other individual). (Code Sec. 25A(b)(2)(A)).

The HOPE credit is available in the case of an eligible student (defined below) for whom the taxpayer has elected to claim the credit. The HOPE credit maximum limit is initially computed at $1,500. The amount of the credit is equal to the sum of (1) 100 percent of the qualified tuition and related expenses paid by the taxpayer during the tax year that does not exceed $1,000, plus (2) 50 percent of such expenses so paid as exceed $1,000 but do not exceed the "applicable limit." The "applicable limit" for any tax year is an amount equal to two times the dollar amount for the tax year (initially the dollar amount is $1,000).

The HOPE credit (and the lifetime learning credit) is available only for qualified tuition and related expenses paid during the tax year for education furnished to the student during an academic period beginning during that tax year. If tuition is paid during one tax year for an academic period that begins during the first three months of the following tax year, that academic period is treated as beginning during the year of payment (Code Sec. 25A(g)(4)).

Planning Note. The combination of this prepayment rule with the two-year limit on the HOPE credit may create tax planning opportunities. Under the two-year cap, the credit is allowed for a tax year if the student has not yet completed, before the beginning of the tax year, the first two years of postsecondary education at an eligible educational institution. For a full-time student who enters college in the autumn, that means that the credit is available for two of the first three calendar years the student attends college. In order to use the maximum credit in the earliest tax years possible, a student who enters college in the autumn and is not going to incur sufficient first-semester tuition expenses to use the full $1,500 credit for that year should be sure to pay second-semester tuition before January 1 of the following year. By paying for two semesters of instruction in the first year, these students can maximize their credit in the first calendar year they attend college (and receive only one semester of instruction).

Example (2). Barb and Ken Jones have modified AGI under $80,000. Their daughter Skipper, begins college at State University in September, 1998. Skipper, a promising writer, receives a scholarship that reduces her parents' tuition bill to $1,300 per semester. Barb and Ken make $1,300 payments as follows:

Payment Date	Semester Begins
July 20, 1998	September 5, 1998
January 2, 1999	January 5, 1999
August 15, 1999	September 5, 1999

December 15, 1999	January 5, 2000
August 15, 2000	September 5, 2000
December 15, 2000	January 5, 2001

If Barb and Ken elect to use their HOPE credit for 1998, they will reduce their tax liability by $1,150 (100% of the first $1,000 plus 50% of the second $1,000 they paid in 1998), and be entitled for the full credit of $1,500 for the $3,900 in tuition they pay in 1999. Thus, their two-year benefit from the HOPE credit is $350 less than it would have been had they paid Skipper's second semester tuition just two days earlier (in 1998).

Barb and Ken may be better advised to take the lifetime learning credit for 1998. If they do this, they will maximize their total tuition credit over the five calendar years Skipper is at State U.; they will be allowed credits of $4,049 ($260 + $1,500 + $1,500 + $520 + $260) versus the $3,950 ($1,150 + $1,500 + $520 + $520 + $260) they could claim if they took the HOPE credit for 1998 and 1999.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. David Hudson, professor in the Graduate Tax Program at the University of Florida College of Law in Gainesville, Florida, warns that even though a student is not required to take a full load to be entitled to the HOPE credit (½-time is enough), taxpayers should keep in mind that the credit is available only for two tax years and, as noted in Example (2), above, this also is relevant to full-time students since freshman and sophomore years generally span three tax years.

Hudson also warns that taxpayers should not pay for a winter or spring semester next year until January 1, 1998, since the effective date for being entitled to the credit in 1998 requires not only attendance in 1998 but also payment in 1998.

Caution. No HOPE credit is allowed for qualified tuition and related expenses for any academic period if, before the end of the tax year with or within which such academic period ends, the student is convicted of a federal or state felony consisting of the possession or distribution of a controlled substance.

Lifetime learning credit. The lifetime learning credit is allowed for 20 percent of qualified tuition and fees paid by the taxpayer with respect to one or more students, up to $5,000 of qualified tuition and fees per year for expenses paid after June 30, 1998 ($10,000 in 2003 and later years). This credit is allowed only for tax years in which the HOPE credit is not claimed with respect to the same student's tuition. Generally, the lifetime learning credit is subject to the same limitations and incorporates the same definitions as the HOPE scholarship credit (including the payment rule). However, unlike the HOPE credit:

(1) The lifetime learning credit limit does not vary with the number of students in a taxpayer's household.

(2) The lifetime learning credit is available for an unlimited number of years.

(3) The lifetime learning credit is available for both undergraduate and graduate or professional degree expenses.

(4) The lifetime learning credit may be claimed for any course at an eligible institution that helps an individual acquire or improve their job skills

(Code Sec. 25A(c)(2)(B)). (The HOPE credit requirement that students take one-half of the full-time course load for at least one academic period does not apply.) Thus, both CPE credit and noncredit professional seminars provided by eligible educational institutions may qualify for the credit.

Loans. According to the House Committee Report and the Conference Committee Report, tuition expenses paid with loan proceeds are eligible for the HOPE or lifetime learning credit in the payment year, not the year the loan is repaid.

Dependents. In order to be eligible for the HOPE credit or the lifetime learning credit, tuition must be paid for the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, or the taxpayer's dependent. A student who is not the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse must be a dependent under Code Sec. 151 for the tax year for which the credit is claimed. If the student is claimed as a dependent by another taxpayer for a tax year beginning in the calendar year in which the student's tax year begins, the student is not allowed either credit for that year on the student's own return. If the student is claimed as a dependent by another taxpayer, any qualified tuition and related expenses paid by the student are treated as if they were paid by the other taxpayer (Code Sec. 25A(g)(3)).

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. David Hudson, professor in the Graduate Tax Program at the University of Florida College of Law in Gainesville, Florida, notes that the education tax incentives contained in the new Act make it important for taxpayers with dependent children enrolled in college to reexamine claiming the dependency deduction. The tax credits for qualified higher education expenses may be claimed by the parent, if the child is claimed as a dependent, or by the child if the child is not claimed as a dependent by any taxpayer for the year. Because these incentives were aimed at low- and middle-income families, they are phased out after the taxpayer's modified adjusted gross income passes certain levels. In some situations, therefore, it may be preferable for a parent to forego a dependency deduction and let a child claim the deduction or credit.

Planning Note. The credits are allowed only to a parent who both pays qualified education expenses and is allowed to claim the student as a dependent. Where parents are divorced and one parent pays the tuition and the other claims the dependency exemption under a support agreement, the credit may be lost. To prevent this, support agreements should be drafted to ensure that the parent paying the tuition also claims the dependency exemption.

Qualified tuition and related expenses. Both the HOPE scholarship and the lifetime learning credits are available for tuition and fees required for enrollment or attendance at an eligible educational institution for courses of instruction. The credit is not allowed for books, lodging or meal costs, student activity fees, athletic fees, insurance expenses, transportation or other expenses unrelated to the student's academic course of instruction. Qualified tuition does not include expenses for any course or other education involving sports, games or hobbies (unless the course is part of the student's degree program).

HOPE credit: eligible student defined. In order to claim the HOPE credit (but not the lifetime learning credit) the student must be an "eligible student." An eligible student is one who is enrolled in a program leading to a degree, certificate or other recognized educational credential at an eligible educational institution and who is carrying at least one-half of the normal full-time work load for the course of study being pursued (see below). A student who is studying abroad qualifies for the HOPE credit provided that the program is approved for credit by the institution at which the student is enrolled.

HOPE credit: student must attend at least part-time. The HOPE credit is not available if the student is considered to be attending school less than part-time. For at least one academic period which begins during the tax year, the eligible student must take at least half of the normal full-time course load for the course of study being pursued (Code Sec. 25A(b)(2)(B) and (3)(B)).

Planning Note. Part-time students may claim the HOPE credit with respect to their total tuition bill for a year in which they take one-half of a full course load for one academic period during the year, and take less than one-half of a full course load for other periods during that same year.

Double tax benefits not allowed. Generally, the credits are available for out-of-pocket expenses and no credit is allowed for any expense for which a deduction is allowed (Code Sec. 25A(g)(5)). The amount of any educational assistance paid for the benefit of the student reduces the amount of qualified tuition expense (Code Sec. 25A(g)(2)). Thus, under these rules, credits are not available for the following items that are considered to reduce the amount of qualified tuition:

(1) employer-paid educational expenses that can be excluded from an employee's income under Code Sec. 127;

(2) scholarships and fellowships received tax-free under Code Sec. 117;

(3) amounts deducted by the student as business expenses under Code Sec. 162;

(4) the amount of educational assistance excludable from the gross income of either the student or the taxpayer claiming the credit; or

(5) payments for an individual's educational expenses or attributable to the individual's enrollment at an institution that are excludable from gross income under any U.S. law.

However, the amount of tuition expenses available for the credit is not reduced for educational expenses paid by gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance (income excludable under Code Sec. 102).

Choice of credit or exclusion. For any tax year, a taxpayer is permitted to elect only one of the following with respect to one student: (1) the HOPE credit, (2) the lifetime learning credit, or (3) the exclusion for distributions from an education IRA used to pay higher education costs (Code Sec. 530; see ¶ 145). This election is separate for each student, so a parent might elect to take the HOPE credit for one child and the exclusion for distributions from an education IRA for another child. If a HOPE credit is claimed with respect to a student, then the lifetime learning credit will not be available with respect to that same student for that year (Code Sec. 25A(c)(2)(A)), although the lifetime learning credit may be available with respect to the student in other years.

If the student is not a dependent (and the parent cannot take the HOPE credit for the student), then it is the student who elects whether to take the HOPE credit or the new education IRA exclusion.

Recapture of credit. The IRS is authorized to issue regulations providing for the recapture of the HOPE credit or the lifetime learning credit where there is a refund in a subsequent tax year of any amount taken into account in determining the credit.

Eligible educational institution. Eligible educational institutions are defined in Section 481 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. § 1088). Generally, these institutions are accredited postsecondary educational institutions that offer credit toward a bachelor's degree, an associate's degree or other recognized postsecondary credential. Some vocational institutions and proprietary institutions are eligible educational institutions. The institution must be eligible to participate in student aid programs sponsored by the Department of Education (Code Sec. 25A(f)(2)).

Nonresident aliens. If a taxpayer is a nonresident alien for any portion of the tax year, then the HOPE credit or the lifetime learning credit is available only if the individual is treated as a resident alien by reason of the election available because the person is married to a U.S. citizen or resident (Code Sec. 6013(g) or (h)).

Making the election. The IRS is authorized to prescribe regulations regarding the application and election of the HOPE credit and the lifetime learning credit elections. (The lifetime learning provisions of Code Sec. 25A(c) do not mention an election but it appears that Code Sec. 25A(e)(1) contemplates an election for both credits.) However, neither credit will be allowed unless the name and taxpayer identification number (TIN) of the student are included on the return for the year the credit is taken. Failure to provide a TIN is treated as a mathematical or clerical error on the return, and any notice issued to the taxpayer to the effect that the credit is being disallowed for failure to provide a TIN is not considered a notice of deficiency. Therefore, the taxpayer can have the IRS abate the additional tax by providing the TIN within 60 days or, if the taxpayer ignores the IRS's request for the TIN, the IRS can disregard the claimed credit (and the taxpayer must file an amended return to claim the credit), rather than following the otherwise applicable deficiency procedures (Code Sec. 6213(b)).

Information returns required. Any educational institution that receives qualified tuition and related expenses and any entity which, in the course of a trade or business, reimburses or refunds qualified tuition and related expenses (scholarship programs) must file information returns with the IRS. Entities making reimbursements or refunds include government units or agencies. If amounts are received by one person on behalf of another person, only the person first receiving the funds is required to file the information return.

Under regulations to be prescribed by the IRS, the following information must be reported:

(1) the name, address and TIN of the student with respect to whom payments were received (or paid);

(2) the name, address and TIN of the individual who will claim the student as a dependent; and

(3) the aggregate amounts of payments for qualified tuition and related expenses received with respect to the student during the calendar year, and the aggregate amount of reimbursements or refunds paid to the student during the calendar year.

Both students and persons claiming them as dependents must receive payee statements informing them of the name, address and phone number of the information contact for the person required to file the information return, and the aggregate amounts reported to the IRS. The payee statement must be furnished on or before January 31 of the year following the calendar year for which the return is made.

Penalties for failure to file information returns or payee statements will not be imposed until regulations are issued.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. David Hudson, professor in the Graduate Tax Program at the University of Florida College of Law in Gainesville, Florida, observes that the information reporting requirements that universities must comply with may be too much for many institutions to handle correctly during the first year of reporting. This will not only create an additional hardship for the universities, but also for the taxpayers who may be audited because of the IRS's information return document matching programs.

Coordination with exclusion of interest on educational U.S. savings bonds. The amount of qualified higher education expenses, otherwise taken into account for purposes of computing the exclusion of interest on Series EE U.S. savings bonds that are redeemed during a tax year, is reduced by the amount of such expenses that are taken into account in computing the HOPE credit or the lifetime learning credit.

Effective date. The HOPE scholarship credit and all other provisions except the lifetime learning credit apply to expenses paid after December 31, 1997 (in tax years ending after that date), for education furnished in academic periods beginning after that date. The lifetime learning credit applies to expenses paid after June 30, 1998 (in tax years ending after that date), for education furnished in academic periods beginning after that date.

Education Investment Accounts

Background

A taxpayer receiving a distribution from an individual retirement account (IRA) prior to turning 59½ would generally be liable for a 10-percent penalty on the amount distributed. Although exceptions to the 10-percent penalty exist, under prior law, none applied to IRA distributions made for educational purposes.

Education individual retirement accounts.—The Act creates a new tax-favored vehicle to help low- and middle-income taxpayers save for education expenses. Joint filers with modified adjusted gross income (AGI) below $150,000 ($95,000 for singles) may contribute up to $500 per beneficiary (child) per year to an education individual retirement account (IRA). Earnings on contributions will be distributed tax free provided that they are used to pay the beneficiary's postsecondary education expenses. However, the exclusion is not available for any year in which the HOPE credit or the lifetime learning credit is claimed (see ¶ 139). Amounts remaining in an education IRA may be rolled over into another education IRA for the education of another beneficiary in the beneficiary's family or distributed to the original beneficiary who must include the earnings component of the distribution in income and pay a 10-percent penalty.

The $500 maximum annual contribution is not indexed for inflation. The income exclusion is not a tax preference item for alternative minimum tax purposes.

AGI phaseout ranges. The amount that a taxpayer is permitted to contribute to an education IRA is limited if modified AGI exceeds certain threshold amounts. The $500 annual contribution limit is phased out for joint filers with modified AGI at or greater than $150,000 and less than $160,000, and for all other filers with modified AGI at or greater than $95,000 and less than $110,000. Individuals with modified AGI at or above the $160,000 or $110,000 phaseout limits are not allowed to make contributions to an education IRA on behalf of any other individual.

Planning Note. The $500 limit applies to annual contributions to an education IRA; the phaseout applies per contributor. Thus, two higher-earning divorced parents can potentially contribute the $500 maximum to a single education IRA where, had they been married, their joint contribution would have been limited. In other words, each of two divorced parents can earn up to $95,000 ($190,000) before their contribution begins to phase out, whereas joint filers' contributions are reduced beginning at modified AGI of $150,000.

The $500 maximum annual contribution is reduced by an amount that bears the same ratio to $500 as the excess of the contributor's modified AGI for the tax year over $150,000, or $95,000, bears to $10,000 for joint filers or $15,000 for single taxpayers.

> Example (1). Sylvia Sawyer, a single parent, has modified AGI for the tax year of $104,000. Under the contribution phaseout provision, her annual contribution to the education IRA established for her son is limited to $200. To arrive at this amount, Sawyer must:
> (1) determine the excess of her modified AGI of $104,000 over $95,000 ($104,000 – $95,000 = $9,000);
> (2) determine the ratio that the excess amount of $9,000 bears to $15,000 ($9,000/$15,000 = .6);
> (3) determine the reduction amount by multiplying the maximum amount of $500 by .6 ($500 × .6 = $300); and, finally
> (4) subtract the reduction amount of $300 from the maximum amount of $500 to arrive at her annual contribution limit of $200 ($500 – $300 = $200).
> If Sawyer's ex-husband earns less than $95,000, he may contribute up to $300 to his son's education IRA for the year.

Modified AGI is the taxpayer's adjusted gross income for the tax year, increased by any amount excluded from gross income under Code Sec. 911 (relating to foreign earned income), Code Sec. 931 (relating to income sources within Guam, American Samoa, or the Northern Mariana Islands) and Code Sec. 933 (relating to income from sources within Puerto Rico).

$500 limit cannot be circumvented by multiple education IRAs. The same mechanism that discourages taxpayers from circumventing the $2,000 annual limit on regular IRAs applies to annual contributions greater than the $500 limit on education IRAs. Specifically, Code Sec. 4973 imposes a six-percent excise tax on excess contributions. An excess contribution is (1) the amount by which contributions to all education IRAs for a single beneficiary exceeds $500, plus (2) contributions during the year made to a qualified state tuition program on behalf of the beneficiary. Excess contributions do not include amounts refunded to the contributor before the contributor's return for the year is due (April 15 of the year following the tax year) or rollovers from other education IRAs.

Caution. No contribution can be made by any person to an education IRA established for a beneficiary during any tax year in which contributions are made by anyone to a Code Sec. 529 qualified state tuition program on behalf of the same beneficiary.

Distributions. Generally, contributions to education IRAs are treated as gifts. Thus, distributions from education IRAs can be made only to beneficiaries. Distributions from education IRAs are excludable from gross income to the extent that the distribution does not exceed the qualified higher education expenses incurred by the beneficiary during the year in which the distribution is made. Distributions are tax exempt regardless of whether the beneficiary attends an eligible educational institution on a full-time, half-time, or less than half-time basis. A taxpayer may elect to waive the exclusion of distributions from tax for any tax year.

Caution. Room and board expenses constitute qualified higher education expenses only if the student incurring the expenses is enrolled at an eligible institution on at least a half-time basis. (See the discussion of eligible education expenses, below.)

Distributions are deemed paid from both contributions (which are always tax free) and earnings (which may be excludable). The amount of contributions distributed is determined by multiplying the distribution by the ratio that the aggregate amount of contributions bears to the total balance of the IRA at the time the distribution is made.

> Example (2). Alicia Bryant receives a $1,000 distribution from her education IRA. On the date the distribution is made the account balance is $10,000, and contributions made to the account total $6,000. The amount of the distribution considered to come from contributions is $600 ($1,000 × ($6,000/$10,000 or .6)).

If aggregate distributions exceed expenses during the tax year, qualified education expenses are deemed to be paid from a pro rata share of both principal and interest. Thus, the portion of earnings excludable from income is based on the ratio that the qualified higher education expenses bear to the total amount of the distribution. The remaining portion of earnings are included in the income of the distributee.

Example (3). Alicia Bryant receives a $1,000 distribution from her education IRA. The distribution consists of $600 of contributions and $400 of earnings. Bryant pays $750 in qualified education expenses for the year. The amount of earnings excludable from Bryant's income is $300 ($400 × ($750/$1,000 or .75)). The remaining $100 is included in Bryant's income.

Additional tax on distributions not used for education. The tax imposed on any taxpayer who receives a payment or distribution from an education IRA that is includible in gross income will be increased by an additional 10 percent. The additional 10-percent tax does not apply to distributions:

(1) made to a beneficiary or the estate of a designated beneficiary after the beneficiary's death;

(2) attributable to the designated beneficiary being disabled (as defined under Code Sec. 72(m)(7));

(3) made on account of a scholarship or allowance (as defined under new Code Sec. 25A(g)(2)) received by the account holder to the extent the amount of the distribution does not exceed the amount of the scholarship or allowance; or

(4) that constitute the return of excess contributions and earnings thereon (although earnings are includible in income).

Amounts not distributed from education IRAs; rollovers. Amounts held in an education IRA may be distributed and put into an education IRA for a member of the beneficiary's family. Such distributions will not be included in the distributee's gross income provided the rollover occurs within 60 days of the distribution. Similarly, any change in the beneficiary of an education IRA does not constitute a distribution for gross income purposes if the new beneficiary is a member of the family of the original beneficiary. A person's family members are determined under Code Sec. 529(e)(2) (see ¶ 149).

Planning Note. The term "family" is defined so that amounts can be rolled over from education IRAs for the benefit of children. Therefore, if Parent sets up an education IRA for Child and Child does not use all of the accumulated funds, the education IRA could be rolled over for the benefit of Grandchild (after Grandchild is born). Rollovers do not count toward the annual $500 limit.

Amounts held in an education IRA may also be rolled over into another education IRA for the benefit of the same beneficiary (e.g., to change the investment vehicle).

Qualified higher education expenses. Tuition, fees, books, supplies, and equipment required for the enrollment or attendance of a designated beneficiary at an eligible educational institution fall under the definition of qualified higher education expenses. The term also includes room and board to the extent of the minimum room and board allowance applicable to the student as determined by the institution in calculating costs of attendance for federal financial aid programs. Room and board expenses will be considered qualified higher education costs only if (1) the designated beneficiary is enrolled in a degree, certificate, or other program leading to a recognized educational credential at an eligible educational institution and (2) the student carries at least one-half the normal full-time work load for the course of study pursued.

Qualified higher education expenses are reduced by the amount of any scholarships or other excludable financial aid received (Code Sec. 25A(g)(2); see ¶ 139). However, any amount used to purchase tuition credits or any amount contributed to a qualified state tuition program for the beneficiary is considered a qualified higher education expense.

Qualified education expenses do not include elementary or secondary school expenses.

Eligible educational institution. An eligible educational institution is generally an accredited, postsecondary educational institution offering credit toward a bachelor's degree, an associate's degree, a graduate-level or professional degree, or other recognized postsecondary credential. The new law also treats proprietary and postsecondary vocational institutions, as defined under 20 U.S.C. § 1088, as eligible educational institutions. To be considered eligible, any educational institution must be eligible to participate in the Department of Education student aid program.

Caution. Beneficiaries claiming a gross income exclusion with respect to an education IRA distribution may not also claim a HOPE credit or a lifetime learning credit for the same tax year.

Planning Note. Given the $500 annual contribution limit, it will be some time before education IRAs accumulate enough earnings to make the education IRA exclusion preferable to the HOPE credit or the lifetime learning credit. The higher the education expenses, the more likely that the Code Sec. 25A credits will yield greater benefit, particularly in the near future.

No contribution may be made by any person to an education IRA for a beneficiary during a year in which a contribution is made by anyone to a qualified state tuition program on behalf of the same beneficiary.

Account requirements. An education IRA is a tax-exempt trust created in the United States exclusively for purposes of paying the qualified higher education expenses of the trust's designated beneficiary. The trust must be designated as an education IRA at the time it is created or organized.

The trust instrument must provide that:

(1) no contribution may be accepted by the education IRA after the beneficiary attains age 18;

(2) except in the case of rollover contributions, annual contributions to the education IRA may not exceed $500 (eligible contribution may be less if the taxpayer's income exceeds certain thresholds);

(3) all contributions to the education IRA must be in cash;

(4) the trustee must be either a bank (as defined under Code Sec. 408(n)) or other person who demonstrates an ability to properly administer the trust;

(5) no portion of the trust's assets may be invested in life insurance contracts;

(6) the assets must not be commingled with other property, except in a common trust or investment fund; and

(7) upon the death of the designated beneficiary, any balance remaining to the credit of the beneficiary must be distributed within 30 days to the beneficiary's estate.

Planning Note. A custodial account may be treated as a trust under (4), above.

Prohibited uses of accounts. Like a regular IRA, an education IRA will lose its tax-exempt status if it engages in a prohibited transaction or is pledged as security for a loan. Prohibited transactions include loans and the use of account assets by the beneficiary or a fiduciary (see Code Sec. 4975(c)).

Transfers upon death or divorce. Death or divorce of the designated beneficiary need not cause a taxable distribution to the spouse or ex-spouse. The transfer of a beneficiary's interest in an education IRA to a spouse or ex-spouse under a divorce or separation agreement is not a taxable transfer, and, after the transfer, the interest in the account is treated as belonging to the spouse/ex-spouse.

Similarly, if a spouse acquires a beneficiary's interest in an education IRA because the spouse was the designated beneficiary of the account at the death of the original beneficiary, the education IRA is treated as if the spouse were the account beneficiary. However, if a person other than a spouse is the designated beneficiary, the education IRA terminates at death and the account balance is includible in the beneficiary's income as of the date of death (or, if the beneficiary is the estate, on the deceased's final income tax return).

Estate and gift tax treatment. Any contribution to an education IRA is treated as a completed gift of a present interest from the contributor to the beneficiary at the time of the contribution. Annual contributions are eligible for the gift tax exclusion under Code Sec. 2503(b) and are excludable for purposes of the generation-skipping transfer tax.

Distributions from an education IRA are generally not treated as taxable gifts. Further, if a beneficiary's interest is rolled over to another beneficiary or there is a change in beneficiary, no gift or generation-skipping transfer tax consequences result, provided that two beneficiaries are of the same generation. If a beneficiary's interest is rolled over to a beneficiary in a lower generation (e.g., parent to child or aunt to niece), the five-year averaging rule may be applied to exempt up to $50,000 of the transferred amount. An interest in an education IRA is not includible in the estate of any individual except with respect to amounts distributed on account of the death of the designated beneficiary.

Unrelated business income. Although education IRAs are generally exempt from tax, they are subject to the unrelated business income tax (UBIT) under Code Sec. 511.

Community property laws. The education IRA provisions apply without regard to any community property laws.

Information reporting. The IRS may require a trustee (or custodian) to report to both the IRS and the beneficiary on contributions, distributions, and other matters. A $50 penalty is imposed under Code Sec. 6693(a) for failure to file these reports.

Termination of education IRAs. Although not included in the Act, the Conference Committee Report indicates that when the beneficiary reaches age 30, any balance remaining in the education IRA must be distributed and the earnings portion of the distribution will be includible in the beneficiary's gross income. However, the Conference Committee Report provides that, prior to reaching age 30, the beneficiary may transfer or roll over the balance to another beneficiary who is a member of the original beneficiary's family.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Bill Mears, Executive Vice President, Brown Brothers Harriman Trust Co., New York, N.Y., observes that although IRAs in themselves are not a great opportunity, as the contribution is limited to $500 per child (under age 18) per year, there are no limits on who can contribute. Unused portions can be rolled over to another "Ed" IRA, so families with many children should be able to use multiple "Ed" IRAs by combining them for the use of the younger children under these rollover provisions.

Effective date. The provisions governing education IRAs apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 213(a), adding new Code Sec. 530; Act Sec. 213(b), adding Code Sec. 4975(c)(5), redesignating Code Sec. 4975(e)(1)(E) as (e)(1)(F), and adding new Code Sec. 4975(e)(1)(E); Act Sec. 213(c), adding Code Sec. 6693(a)(2)(D); Act Sec. 213(d), adding Code Sec. 4973(a)(4) and (e); Act Sec. 213(e), redesignating Code Sec. 26(b)(2)(E) through (P) as (b)(2)(F) through (Q) and adding new Code Sec. 26(b)(2)(E), and amending Code Sec. 135(c)(2); Act Sec. 213(f). Qualified State Tuition Programs

Background

Qualified state tuition programs are state established and maintained programs under which a person may (1) purchase, in cash, tuition credits or certificates on behalf of a designated beneficiary that entitle the beneficiary to a waiver or payment of the beneficiary's qualified higher education expenses, or (2) make cash contributions to an account established solely for meeting the qualified higher education expenses of the designated beneficiary. Distributions of earnings are included in the beneficiary's income to the extent they are used to pay for education; earnings distributed to the contributor are included in the contributor's gross income.

Under prior law, qualified higher education expenses did not include room and board. Institutions that could participate were limited to colleges, universities and certain vocational schools. Finally, contributions made to qualified state tuition programs were treated as incomplete gifts for estate tax purposes. Thus, gift tax consequences were determined when a distribution was made from an account and undistributed amounts were included in the contributor's estate if the contributor died before the entire account balance was distributed under the program.

Modification of qualified state tuition programs.—Provisions affecting qualified state tuition programs are clarified and expanded to provide increased benefits to a more broadly defined group of beneficiaries.

Room and board expenses. The definition of qualified higher education expenses is expanded to include room and board. Room and board expenses constitute qualified higher education expenses only if the student is (1) enrolled in a degree, certificate or other program leading to a recognized educational credential at an eligible educational institution and (2) carrying at least half of the normal full-time work load for the course of study the student is pursuing.

Room and board expenses may be considered qualified higher education expenses only to the extent of the minimum room and board allowance applicable to the student as determined by the institution in calculating costs of attendance for federal financial aid programs.

Eligible educational institution. An eligible educational institution is generally an accredited postsecondary educational institution offering credit toward a bachelor's degree, an associate's degree, a graduate-level or professional degree, or other recognized postsecondary credential. The new law also treats proprietary and postsecondary vocational institutions, as defined under 20 U.S.C. § 1088, as eligible educational institutions. To be considered eligible, any educational institution must be qualified to participate in the Department of Education student aid programs.

Family member. For purposes of account rollovers and beneficiary changes, the definition of a member of the beneficiary's family is expanded to include anyone qualifying as a dependent under Code Sec. 152(a) or the spouse of anyone qualifying as a dependent. Family members now include sons, daughters, brothers, sisters, nephews, nieces, certain in-laws, and the spouses of those relations. The requirement that a distribution be transferred to a member of the family and that a change of beneficiary be made only to a member of the family does not apply to a state tuition program contract issued prior to August 20, 1996 (enactment date of Code Sec. 529).

Interaction with HOPE and lifetime learning credits. To the extent that a distribution from a qualified state tuition program is used to pay for qualified tuition and fees, the distributee will be able to claim the HOPE credit or lifetime learning credit under new Code Sec. 25A (see ¶ 139). Similarly, the HOPE and lifetime learning credits may be taken for payments of qualified education expenses that are made in kind from a qualified state tuition program.

Coordination with education savings bonds. Taxpayers are entitled to redeem U.S. Savings Bonds and exclude the earnings under Code Sec. 135 (as if the proceeds were used to pay higher education expenses) if the redemption proceeds are contributed to a qualified tuition program on behalf of the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse or a dependent. In that case, the beneficiary's basis in the bond proceeds contributed on their behalf to the qualified state tuition program will be the contributor's basis in the bonds (i.e., the original purchase price).

Estate and gift tax modifications. Any contribution to a qualified state tuition program is treated as a completed gift of a present interest from the contributor to the beneficiary at the time of the contribution. Annual contributions are eligible for the gift tax exclusion under Code Sec. 2503(b) and are excludable for purposes of the generation-skipping transfer tax, provided that the annual gift tax exclusion limit ($10,000 for a single individual, $20,000 for a married couple electing gift-splitting) is not exceeded. A contributor making a contribution in excess of the exclusion limit may elect to have the contribution treated as if made ratably over five years. A gift tax return must be filed with respect to any contribution in excess of the annual gift tax exclusion limit.

> Example (1). Heinrich Ernst contributes $30,000 to a qualified state tuition program, the designated beneficiary of which is his daughter, Gretchen. At Heinrich's election, the program treats the $30,000 as being paid ratably over a five-year period at $6,000 per year. Heinrich may make up to $4,000 in other gifts to Gretchen per year without exceeding the exclusion. Heinrich must make the election for the five-year averaging on his gift tax return.

If a contributor making a contribution in excess of the gift tax exclusion limit dies during the five-year period, the portion of the contribution that has not been allocated is included in the contributor's estate.

Example (2). Assume that the facts are the same as in Example (1), except that Heinrich dies after the first year. $6,000 is allocated to the first year and $6,000 is allocated to the year of death. The remaining $18,000 is included in Heinrich's gross estate.

If a beneficiary's interest is rolled over to another beneficiary or there is a change in beneficiary, no gift or generation-skipping transfer tax consequences result, provided that the two beneficiaries are of the same generation. If a beneficiary's interest is rolled over to a beneficiary in a lower generation (e.g., parent to child or aunt to niece), the five-year averaging rule may be applied to exempt up to $50,000 of the transfer.

Information reporting. Officers and employees of qualified state tuition programs are required to report contributions to and distributions from program accounts. Failure to make required reports now carries a penalty of $50 per failure.

Transitional rule. For any contract issued prior to August 20, 1996 (the date that Code Sec. 529 was enacted), the provision that allows rollovers and beneficiary changes (Code Sec. 529(c)(3)(C)) applies in tax years ending after August 20, 1996, without regard to the requirement that the distribution be transferred to a member of the family or the requirement that a change in beneficiaries may be made only to a member of the family.

Effective date. Except as otherwise provided, this provision is effective on January 1, 1998. The provision relating to room and board expenses is generally effective for tax years ending after August 20, 1996. The provision relating to the definition of eligible educational institutions is effective for distributions made after December 31, 1997, with respect to expenses paid after that date (in tax years ending after that date), for education furnished in academic periods beginning after that date. The provision coordinating Code Sec. 529 with the education savings bonds provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997. The provision treating contributions as completed gifts and permitting five-year averaging, and the provisions preventing distributions from being treated as gifts and generation-skipping transfers apply after August 5, 1997. The provisions regarding estate tax apply to estates of decedents dying after June 8, 1997.

Background

The Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) provided a special transitional rule for tuition credit or certificate plans many states had established prior to the effective date of the exemption of state tuition programs from most taxes (Code Sec. 529). This special transitional rule provided that if (1) a state maintained on August 20, 1996, a program under which persons could purchase tuition credits on behalf of, or make contributions for education expenses of, a designated beneficiary and (2) such program met the requirements of a qualified state tuition program before the later of (a) August 20, 1997, or (b) the first day of the first calendar quarter after the close of the first regular session of the state legislature that began after August 20, 1996, then the provisions of the Small Business Act would apply to contributions (and related earnings) made before the date the program qualified as a state tuition program, without regard to whether the requirements of a qualified state tuition program are satisfied with respect to such contributions and earnings (e.g., even if the interest in the tuition or educational savings program covers not only higher education expenses but also room and board). Until the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the special rule did not apply to contracts entered into for such programs.

Qualified tuition program amendment.—The rules for granting a tax exemption to a state qualified tuition program, except for the Code Sec. 511 tax on unrelated business taxable income, were enacted by the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996, effective on August 20, 1996. The 1996 Act contained a transitional rule that grandfathered certain state tuition credit programs if such programs met the requirements of a state tuition program within specified dates. The transitional rule applied to contributions (and earnings allocable to contributions) made before the date that the program meets the requirements of a qualified state tuition program. After amendment by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the transitional rule applies to contributions (and earnings allocable to contributions) made pursuant to a contract entered into under the program before the date that the program meets the requirements of a qualified state tuition program.

Effective date. This provision generally applies to tax years ending after August 20, 1996.

Educational Assistance Exclusion

Background

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, educational assistance payments made by an employer under a qualified educational assistance program were excluded from an employee's income only for tax years beginning before June 1, 1997. Further, the exclusion only applied to amounts paid with respect to graduate-level courses that began before July 1, 1996, and with respect to other courses that began before July 1, 1997. The exclusion covers tuition, fees, books, supplies and equipment, but is limited to $5,250 of educational assistance per individual during a calendar year.

Employer-provided educational assistance programs.—The exclusion for employees for employer-provided educational assistance is extended. Expenses paid by an employer for courses beginning before June 1, 2000, are excludable from the employee's income. The excludable amount of tuition, fees, and related expenses is limited to $5,250 per individual per year. Expenses paid for graduate-level courses remain ineligible for the exclusion.

Effective date. The provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Interest on Education Loans

Background

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-514) generally repealed the deduction for personal interest, such as interest on car loans and credit card debt. Thus, under prior law, interest on loans used to fund a student's college education was generally not deductible. Homeowners, however, could apply funds from a home equity loan toward education costs and often receive a deduction for the additional mortgage interest.

Deduction for interest on education loans.—Beginning in 1998, individuals will be allowed to deduct interest paid during the tax year on any qualified education loan. The maximum deductible amount of interest will rise from $1,000 in 1998 to $2,500 in 2001 and thereafter. The maximum deductible amounts of interest on education loans are set forth in the following chart.

Tax year beginning in:	Maximum deductible amount of interest:
1998	$ 1,000
1999	$ 1,500
2000	$ 2,000
2001 and after	$ 2,500

Caution. Although the maximum deductible amounts will increase over a four-year phase-in period, they will not be indexed for inflation.

Qualified education loan. A qualified education loan is any debt incurred to pay the qualified higher education expenses (see below) of the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, or an individual who was the taxpayer's dependent at the time that the debt was incurred. The expenses must be paid or incurred within a reasonable period of time before or after the debt is incurred and must be attributable to education furnished during a period during which the recipient was an eligible student.

An eligible student is defined in new Code Sec. 25A(b)(3) (see ¶ 139) as a student who meets the requirements of section 484 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. § 1091(a)(1)). In general, this means an individual who is enrolled or accepted for enrollment in a degree, certificate, or other program leading to a recognized credential at an eligible institution of higher education.

Caution. In order to qualify, the education expenses must be attributable to a period during which the student was attending an eligible educational institution at least half-time, meaning one-half of the normal full-time work load for the course of study that the student is pursuing.

For purposes of the deduction, a qualified education loan also encompasses debt used to refinance the qualified education loan. However, any debt owed to a related party, as defined in Code Sec. 267(b) or 707(b)(1), is not a qualified education loan. Among the related parties listed in these sections are members of a family, a corporation and an individual who owns more than 50 percent in value of the corporation either directly or indirectly, a partnership and a person owning more than a 50-percent capital or profits interest in the partnership, a grantor and a fiduciary of a trust, a fiduciary and a beneficiary of a trust, a fiduciary of a trust and a beneficiary of another trust if the grantor of both trusts is the same, and fiduciaries of two trusts if the grantor of both trusts is the same.

> Example (1). In 1998, Brian Morris borrows $15,000 from his grandmother to pay for his college tuition for that year. The loan is in writing and requires Morris to pay $1,200 of interest on the loan for the year. None of the interest is deductible because the principal was borrowed from a related party.

Qualified higher education expenses. Qualified higher education expenses are the costs of attending an eligible educational institution (see below), less adjustments for certain nontaxable educational benefits. The costs of attendance are generally the costs of tuition, fees, room and board, and related expenses, such as books and supplies, as defined in section 472 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. § 1087ll).

The adjustments are for amounts excluded from gross income with respect to:

(1) employer-provided educational assistance (Code Sec. 127);

(2) U.S. savings bond interest used to pay higher education costs (Code Sec. 135);

(3) education individual retirement accounts (new Code Sec. 530, see ¶ 145); and

(4) allowances or payments defined in new Code Sec. 25A(g)(2), such as qualified scholarships (Code Sec. 117), educational assistance allowances, and any other excludable payments for education expenses that do not constitute a gift or inheritance (see ¶ 139).

Eligible educational institution. An eligible educational institution is defined in Code Sec. 25A(f)(2) (see ¶ 139). This term includes postsecondary educational institutions and certain vocational schools defined by reference to section 481 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. § 1088). For purposes of this interest deduction, the term also includes an institution conducting an internship or residency program leading to a degree or certificate awarded by an institution of higher education, a hospital, or a health care facility which offers postgraduate training.

Sixty-month limitation. The deduction for interest on a qualified education loan is allowed only with respect to interest paid on the loan during the first 60 months in which interest payments are required. The 60 months do not have to be consecutive. Thus, months in which the loan is in deferral do not count against the 60-month limit. The original loan and all refinancings of the loan are treated as one loan for this purpose.

Special rules. The deduction for interest on qualified education loans is an "above-the-line" deduction that is allowed whether or not the taxpayer itemizes other deductions on Schedule A of Form 1040. However, no deduction is allowed for interest on qualified education loans if the amount is allowed as a deduction under another section of the Internal Revenue Code.

Caution. If a homeowner obtains a home equity loan to fund the costs of education and deducts interest on the loan as mortgage interest, the homeowner may not also deduct the interest as qualified education loan interest.

An individual is not entitled to the deduction if he or she may be claimed as a dependent by another taxpayer for the tax year beginning in the calendar year in which the individual's tax year begins. For married taxpayers, the deduction is allowed only if the taxpayer and the taxpayer's spouse file a joint return for the tax year. Marital status is determined under Code Sec. 7703. Thus, certain individuals who are legally separated under a divorce decree or order of separate maintenance and certain individuals who are living apart are not considered married.

Phaseout of deduction. The amount of interest on a qualified education loan that may be deducted is phased out for taxpayers at moderate income levels, based on the taxpayer's modified adjusted gross income (AGI) (see below). The phaseout begins at a modified AGI level of over $40,000 (over $60,000 for joint return filers). The deduction is completely phased out at a modified AGI level of $55,000 ($75,000 for joint return filers).

In computing the deductible amount, the deduction that would otherwise be allowed is reduced by an amount that bears the same ratio to the amount that would be taken into account as the excess of the taxpayer's modified AGI for the tax year over $40,000 ($60,000 for joint filers) bears to $15,000. The deductible amount cannot be reduced below zero. The amount of the reduction can be determined by applying the following formula:

For joint return filers, the $40,000 amount in the above formula would be replaced with $60,000.

Example (2). Sally Jackson is single and incurs $1,500 of interest on a qualified education loan in 1998. Her modified AGI for the year is $47,500. The maximum deductible amount of interest for 1998 is $1,000, which must be reduced to account for Jackson's excess modified AGI over $40,000. Thus, the amount of her deduction is equal to $1,000 − $1,000 × (($47,500 − $40,000) ÷ $15,000), or $500.

An individual's modified AGI is equal to AGI, determined after application of:

(1) the partial exclusion from income of social security and tier 1 railroad retirement benefits (Code Sec. 86);

(2) the deduction for individual retirement account (IRA) contributions (Code Sec. 219); and

(3) the limitations on passive activity losses and credits (Code Sec. 469);

but without regard to:

(a) the deduction for interest on qualified education loans (Code Sec. 221);

(b) the exclusion from income for U.S. savings bond interest used to pay higher education costs (Code Sec. 135);

(c) the exclusion from income for adoption expenses (Code Sec. 137);

(d) the exclusion for foreign earned income and housing (Code Sec. 911);

(e) the exclusion for income from sources within Guam, American Samoa, and the Northern Mariana Islands (Code Sec. 931); and

(f) the exclusion for income from sources within Puerto Rico (Code Sec. 933).

Caution. Adjusted gross income for purposes of determining the exclusions from income for social security and tier 1 railroad retirement benefits (Code Sec. 86), U.S. savings bond interest used to pay for education (Code Sec. 135), adoption expenses (Code Sec. 137), the deduction for IRA contributions (Code Sec. 219), and the passive activity loss limitations (Code Sec. 469) should not take into account the new deduction for interest on qualified education loans.

Inflation adjustments. The modified AGI limits will be adjusted for inflation for tax years beginning after the year 2002. Thus, for those years, the $40,000 amount ($60,000 for joint filers) will be increased by the product of that dollar amount and the cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) determined under Code Sec. 1(f)(3) for the calendar year in which the tax year begins. However, for this purpose, the COLA for a calendar year is the percentage by which the Consumer Price Index (CPI) for the preceding calendar year exceeds the CPI for calendar year 2001, rather than calendar year 1992. If the product of the $40,000 amount (or $60,000 amount) and the COLA is not a multiple of $5,000, it will be rounded down to the nearest lowest multiple of $5,000.

Reporting requirements. Unless otherwise provided in regulations, a return will have to be filed by any trade or business that receives $600 or more of interest for a calendar year from an individual on one or more qualified education loans. The returns will have to contain: (1) the name, address, and taxpayer identification number (TIN) of the individual with respect to whom the interest was paid; (2) the name, address, and TIN of the taxpayer who will claim the individual as a dependent; (3) the aggregate amount of interest received for the calendar year from the individual; and (4) any other information required by the IRS (see ¶ 139).

Planning Note. According to the Conference Committee Report, it is expected that the IRS will issue regulations setting forth the reporting procedures. Lenders should be prepared to separately report to borrowers the amount of deductible student loan interest, and borrowers should be prepared to certify that the loan proceeds are being used to pay for qualified expenses.

Effective date. The amendments apply to any qualified education loan incurred on, before, or after August 5, 1997, but only with respect to any loan interest payment due and paid after December 31, 1997, and the portion of the 60-month period referred to in Code Sec. 221(d) after December 31, 1997.

Background

Under prior law, gross income included the amount of the forgiveness of student loans made under programs sponsored by tax-exempt charitable organizations, even when the forgiveness was contingent on the student working for a specified period of time in certain professions. Also, under prior law, gross income included the amount of the forgiveness of direct student loans made through the William D. Ford Federal Direct Loan program.

Background

Expanded exclusion for student loan cancellations.—The "forgiveness of loan" exclusion that formerly applied only to certain student loans made directly by governmental organizations or made by educational organizations under government-sponsored programs has been expanded to apply to student loans sponsored by tax-exempt charitable organizations.

An individual's gross income does not include forgiveness of loans sponsored by tax-exempt charitable organizations, such as educational organizations or private foundations if certain conditions are met. The proceeds of such loans must be used to pay costs of attendance at an educational institution or used to refinance outstanding student loans. As is the case with student loans made by governmental organizations or under government-sponsored programs, the exclusion applies only if the forgiveness of the loan is contingent on the student's working for a specified period of time in certain professions for any of a broad class of employers. However, in the case of loans sponsored by tax-exempt organizations, two additional conditions apply (1) the student or former student must work in an occupation or area with unmet needs, and (2) such work must be performed for or under the direction of a tax-exempt charitable organization or a governmental entity.

Caution. According to the House Committee Report, the individual whose student loan is forgiven must not be employed by the lender organization in order for the exclusion to apply. The Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 provides a more specific proscription; it indicates that the exclusion will not apply to the discharge of a student loan if the discharge is on account of services provided to such lending organization, which implies a more direct causal connection between the individual's provision of services and the discharge of the student loan. Although an individual is allowed to fulfill his public service requirement (work in an area with unmet needs) by working for or under the direction of a tax-exempt charity, which presumably could include the lending organization, it would behoove the individual to perform the public service work for or under the direction of another charitable organization or governmental entity so as not to jeopardize the exclusion.

Effective date. These exclusions apply to discharges of indebtedness made after August 5, 1997.

Academy Bond Credit

Background

Under Code Sec. 103(a), interest on bonds issued by state and local governments and political subdivisions of state governments generally is not includible in income. Regulations under Code Sec. 103 provide that school districts and other educational agencies that exercise part of a state's sovereign power are considered a political subdivision of the state. Thus, bonds issued for the support of public schools by properly authorized educational agencies are considered tax-exempt bonds.

Tax credit for holders of qualified zone academy bonds.— As part of the educational incentives provided in the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 and as an additional incentive for empowerment zones, an eligible taxpayer who is holding a qualified zone academy bond on the credit allowance date is entitled to a nonrefundable tax credit for each year in which the bond is held. Although the credit may be claimed against both regular income tax and the alternative minimum tax (AMT), the amount of the credit allowed must be included in the taxpayer's income.

Eligible taxpayers. Taxpayers that may claim the credit are certain financial institutions, including banks, insurance companies and corporations actively engaged in the business of lending money. The credit allowance date for an issue is the last day of the one-year period beginning on the date of issuance and the last day of each successive one-year period thereafter.

Amount of credit. The amount of the available credit is calculated by multiplying the credit rate determined on a monthly basis by the Treasury Department by the face amount of the bond held by the taxpayer. However, the credit is a nonrefundable credit. Therefore, the amount actually allowed to the taxpayer cannot exceed the sum of the taxpayer's regular tax liability and AMT liability, as reduced by the total amount of nonrefundable credits claimed by the taxpayer.

The credit rate is the percentage that the Treasury estimates will permit qualified academy zone bonds to be issued without discount and without interest cost to the issuer of the bonds.

Qualified zone academy bond, defined. A qualified zone academy bond is a bond, or other obligation, issued by a state (including the District of Columbia and U.S. possessions) or local government that meets the following requirements. Ninety-five percent or more of the proceeds of the bond issuance must be used for a qualified purpose with respect to a qualified zone academy that is located within the jurisdiction of the issuing governmental body. In addition, the issuer must designate the bond as a qualified zone academy bond; must certify that it has written assurance that the private business contribution will be met; and must certify that it has the written approval of the eligible local education agency for the bond issuance. Finally, the term of the bond cannot exceed the maximum term established by the Treasury Department for bonds issued during that calendar month.

Qualified zone academy. A qualified zone academy is a public school, or academic program within a public school, that has been established and operated by a local education agency (as defined in section 14101 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965) and whose comprehensive educational plan has been approved by that agency. The school must provide education and training below the postsecondary level and must either be located within an empowerment zone or enterprise community or there must be a reasonable expectation that at least 35 percent of the students will be eligible for free or reduced-cost lunches under the National School Lunch Act. In addition, the school or program must be designed cooperatively with the business community to enhance the academic curriculum and increase graduation and employment rates, as well as better prepare students for college and the work force. Finally, the students in the school or program must be subject to the same academic standards as other students educated by the local educational agency.

Qualified purpose. Ninety-five percent or more of bond issue proceeds must be used for one of four qualified purposes in order for the bond to be a qualified zone academy bond. Rehabilitating or repairing the facility that houses the academy constitutes a qualified purpose. Providing equipment for use at the academy or developing course material for the academy are also qualified purposes. Finally, training teachers and other school personnel in the academy is a qualified purpose.

Private business contribution requirement. To meet the private business requirement, the local educational agency establishing the qualified zone academy must have written commitments from private entities that they will make qualified contributions that have a present value (as of the date of issuance) of not less than 10 percent of the proceeds of the bond issue. The qualified contribution is a contribution of equipment (including state-of-the-art technology and vocational equipment); technical assistance in curriculum development or teacher training; services of employees as volunteer mentors; internships, field trips or other educational opportunities outside of the academy; or any other property or services specified by the local educational agency. In addition, the type and quantity of the contribution must be acceptable to the local educational agency.

Limitations on bond issue. Bond issues are subject to both maximum term limitations and maximum amount limitations. Each calendar month, the Treasury Department will establish the maximum term permitted for bonds issued during the following calendar month. The maximum term will be set so that the present value of the obligation to repay the bond is 50 percent of the face value of the bond. The present value will be determined using, as the discount rate, the average annual interest rate of tax-exempt obligations with a term of 10 or more years that are issued during the month. Where this calculation does not result in a multiple of a whole year, the term will be rounded to the next highest year.

In addition to the term limitation, there is a national dollar limitation on the amount of bonds that can be designated as qualified zone academy bonds. The amount of bonds that can be issued nationwide is $400 million for 1998, $400 million for 1999, and zero for years after 1999. The national amount will be allocated to the states based upon their respective populations of individuals below the poverty line. The amount allocated to the state is then to be allocated by the state's educational agency to qualified zone academies within the state. The maximum aggregate face amount of bonds issued during a year with respect to an academy cannot exceed the amount allocated to that academy. A state is permitted to carry over unused amounts that were allocated to it in 1998 and 1999, and issue bonds based upon that carryover.

Effective date. This provision is effective for bonds issued after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 226(a), redesignating Code Sec. 1397E[D] as Code Sec. 1397F and adding new Code Sec. 1397E; Act Sec. 226(b) and (c). Law at ¶ 5391-5393. Committee Report at ¶ 10,240.

INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS

Roth IRAs

Background

Distributions attributable to contributions to pre-Act nondeductible IRAs are excluded from gross income when withdrawn, but earnings on such nondeductible IRA contributions are subject to ordinary income taxation and to the 10-percent income tax on early withdrawals, unless one of the exceptions applies. Prior to the Act, "Roth IRAs," which enable an individual to take tax-free distributions of the earnings on the nondeductible contributions, did not exist. In addition, prior to the Act, no one over age 70½ could contribute to an IRA or set up a new IRA to receive contributions.

Roth IRAs.—For post-1997 tax years, the Act establishes a new type of tax-favored IRA vehicle. Under this new vehicle, called a "Roth IRA," contributions will be nondeductible. Instead, the tax advantages will be "backloaded." The buildup (e.g., interest and dividends) within the account may be tax free depending on how and when the taxpayer withdraws money from the account. To be treated as a Roth IRA, the account must be designated as such when it is established. A Roth IRA is treated like an ordinary IRA except for the special rules described below.

Contribution limits. The contribution limits on deductible and nondeductible IRAs are coordinated. Also, pre-Act nondeductible IRAs are retained. Thus, an individual who cannot or does not make contributions to a deductible IRA or a Roth IRA can still make contributions to a pre-Act nondeductible IRA. However, the maximum total yearly contribution that can be made by an individual to all IRAs (deductible, pre-Act nondeductible, and Roth) is $2,000, not counting rollover contributions (see below). Unlike deductible IRAs, individuals are allowed to make contributions to a Roth IRA even after age 70½.

Excess contributions to a Roth IRA are subject to the six-percent tax under Code Sec. 4973.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Bill Mears, Executive Vice President, Brown Brothers Harriman Trust Co., New York, N.Y., observes that in evaluating whether to use a deductible IRA or a "Roth" IRA, it is necessary to consider the impact on taxation of social security benefits. Deductible IRA proceeds are part of adjusted gross income and, therefore, will possibly increase tax on social security benefits. Roth IRA proceeds will not have this effect.

Income limits. Roth IRAs are subject to income limits. The maximum yearly contribution that can be made to a Roth IRA is phased out for single taxpayers with adjusted gross income (AGI) between $95,000 and $110,000 and for joint filers with AGI between $150,000 and $160,000.

Example (1). Mary Heaney, a single taxpayer with AGI of $120,000, is ineligible to contribute to a Roth IRA because her income exceeds the legal threshold. However, she may contribute to a pre-Act nondeductible IRA.

If the final result is below $200 but above zero, the deduction limit will be $200. Also, any result which is not a multiple of $10 must be rounded to the next lowest $10.

Taxation of distributions. Qualified distributions from a Roth IRA are not included in the taxpayer's gross income and are not subject to the additional 10-percent early withdrawal tax. To be a qualified distribution, the distribution must satisfy a five-year holding period and must meet one of four requirements (see below).

To satisfy the five-year holding period, the Roth IRA distribution (including distributions allocable to rollover contributions (see below)) may not be made before the end of the five-tax-year period beginning with the first tax year for which the individual (or the individual's spouse) made a contribution to the Roth IRA.

Caution. As is the case with deductible IRAs, a contribution to a Roth IRA for a tax year can be made by the due date for filing the individual's tax return for the year (without regard to extensions). In such a case, the Senate Finance Committee Report notes, the five-year holding period begins to run with the tax year to which the contribution relates, not the year in which the contribution is actually made.

> Example (2). Lisa Hanes makes a contribution to her Roth IRA in February 1999, designating the contribution for 1998. Hanes' holding period thus begins running in 1998, not in 1999 when the contribution was actually made.

In addition to satisfying the five-year holding period, a qualified distribution must be:

(1) made on or after the date on which individual attains age 59½;

(2) made to a beneficiary (or the individual's estate) on or after the individual's death;

(3) attributable to the individual being disabled; or

(4) a distribution to pay for "qualified first-time homebuyer expenses" (see ¶ 177).

> Example (3). Maurice Moore establishes a Roth IRA at age 40 and contributes $2,000 per year to the account for 20 years. The account is now worth $100,000, consisting of $40,000 in contributions plus $60,000 in accumulated earnings. Moore may withdraw the funds in his Roth IRA tax-free because he has held the funds for the requisite five years and is over age 59½. (This example assumes that Moore met the income limits for contributing to the account.)

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Steve Krass of Krass & Lund, P.C., New York, New York, observes that one requirement for a qualified distribution is that it not be made within the five-taxable-year period beginning with the first taxable year for which the individual made a contribution to the Roth IRA.

For example, in 1998, John establishes a Roth IRA and contributes $1,000. John contributes $2,000 in each of 1999 and 2000 and dies in 2001, with his daughter Jane as beneficiary. On December 31, 2001, the IRA is worth $7,500. If Jane withdraws the $7,500 in January, 2002, the $2,500 gain will be taxable to her. However, if Jane withdraws $5,000 in January, 2002 and the balance in January, 2003, both distributions will be income tax free.

The Act provides an ordering rule for purposes of determining what portion of a nonqualified distribution is includible in income. Under this rule, distributions are treated as made from contributions first. Thus, no portion of a distribution is treated as attributable to earnings, or includible in gross income, until the total of all distributions from the Roth IRA exceeds the amount of contributions. Roth IRAs and ordinary IRAs are treated separately under the taxation of distribution rules of Code Sec. 72. An excess contribution which is distributed from a Roth IRA during the tax year is treated as an amount not contributed.

Pre-death distribution rules and incidental death benefit rules do not apply. The pre-death required beginning distribution rules of Code Sec. 401(a)(9)(A) that apply to qualified plans and ordinary IRAs do not apply to Roth IRAs. Thus, the holders of a Roth IRA need not take a distribution by April 1 of the calendar year in which they attain age 70½. Also, the incidental death benefit rules of Code Sec. 401(a)(9)(G) do not apply to Roth IRAs.

Rollovers and conversions. Distributions from one Roth IRA can be rolled over or "converted" tax free to another Roth IRA. Amounts in an ordinary IRA can be rolled over into an Roth IRA, but only if:

(1) the taxpayer's adjusted gross income (AGI) for the tax year does not exceed $100,000 and

(2) the taxpayer is not married filing separately.

In this case, the 10-percent early withdrawal tax does not apply.

The Conference Committee Report makes it clear that AGI is determined before any amount is included in income as a result of the rollover or conversion.

The rollover contribution must meet the general IRA rollover rules of Code Sec. 408(d)(3), such as the 60-day limit. However, rollovers from ordinary IRAs to Roth IRAs are disregarded for purposes of the rule in Code Sec. 408(d)(3)(B) which generally limits IRA rollovers to once a year.

In the case of a rollover from an ordinary IRA to a Roth IRA, the five-tax-year holding period for escaping inclusion in income discussed above begins with the tax year in which the rollover contribution was made.

If a rollover from an ordinary IRA to a Roth IRA is made before January 1, 1999, the amount that would have been included in gross income if the individual had taken a distribution is included in gross income "ratably" over a four-tax-year period beginning with the tax year in which the payment or distribution is made. The Act directs the trustees of Roth IRAs, or trustees of ordinary IRAs, whichever is appropriate, to include in the annual reports required under Code Sec. 408(i) any additional information (as the Treasury Secretary may require) in order to ensure that rollover amounts are included in gross income.

Planning Note. The tax rules described above also apply to a "conversion" of an ordinary IRA into a Roth IRA. The Senate Finance Committee Report notes that an individual may make a conversion without actually taking a distribution. For instance, an individual may make a conversion by simply notifying the IRA trustee. Or, a conversion may be made via a trustee-to-trustee transfer. Note, however, that if a part of an IRA balance is converted into a Roth IRA, the Roth IRA amounts may have to be held separately.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Steve Krass of Krass & Lund, P.C., New York, New York, notes that, if an IRA is rolled over or converted into a Roth IRA during 1998, the amount otherwise includible in gross income due to the IRA distribution or conversion will be includible in gross income ratably over the four-taxable-year period beginning with 1998.

For example, in 1998, John rolls over a $40,000 IRA distribution to a Roth IRA. The amount of $10,000 will be includible in John's gross income in each year of 1998, 1999, 2000, and 2001. The Act contains no provision concerning John's death prior to 2001. Assuming John dies in 1999, is the remaining $30,000 includible in gross income that year; is the legal representative of John's estate required to file income tax returns on John's behalf for 2000 and 2001; does John's estate include the untaxed amounts on its 2000 and 2001 income tax returns; if John was married, must his surviving spouse include the untaxed amounts on her 2000 and 2001 income tax returns?

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Bill Mears, Executive Vice President, Brown Brothers Harriman Trust Co., New York, N.Y., warns that rollover from a deductible IRA to a Roth IRA is probably not an attractive strategy to most clients currently in high tax brackets. To make sense, the loss of the use of the money which is spent on taxes must be exceeded by the tax savings on the distributions. If taxes are paid initially at a high rate, even though the law allows a spread-out over four years, this becomes more difficult to achieve. Computations in making a rollover decision must be predicated on both tax rates and intended withdrawals. The penalty on withdrawal applies if adjusted gross income is greater that $100,000. This, added to the income taxes, makes rollover a very questionable strategy. State income tax laws may add extra tax burdens that make this prohibitive.

Conversion of excess contributions. If a taxpayer transfers amounts contributed to an ordinary IRA (and any earnings allocated to such amounts) to a Roth IRA by the due date for filing the return (not including extensions), the amounts are not included in the taxpayer's gross income to the extent that no deduction was allowed for the contribution.

Spousal IRA rules. The Act provides that, for purposes of the limitation on the spousal IRA deduction under Code Sec. 219(c)(1)(B)(ii), the compensation includible in the gross income of the spouse is reduced by the amount of any contribution made on behalf of the spouse to a Roth IRA.

Effective date. The provisions are effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Increased AGI Limits

Background

Prior to the 1997 Act, if an individual (or an individual's spouse) was an active participant in an employer-sponsored retirement plan, the maximum IRA deduction of $2,000 was phased out in the following way: for married taxpayers filing jointly, the limit was phased out between $40,000 and $50,000 of AGI; for single taxpayers, the limit was phased out between $25,000 and $35,000 of AGI.

Increase in AGI limits for making deductible IRA contributions.—The Act gradually increases the adjusted gross income (AGI) phaseout limits for deductible IRA contributions by individuals who are active participants in employer-sponsored retirement plans.

Active participants below a "threshold level" of income may make deductible IRA contributions. The maximum $2,000 deduction available to active participants is reduced proportionately over a "phaseout" range. Active participants with incomes above the phaseout range are not entitled to any IRA deduction.

The phaseout limits are increased as follows:

Tax years beginning in:	Single taxpayers
1998	$30,000–$40,000
1999	$31,000–$41,000
2000	$32,000–$42,000
2001	$33,000–$43,000
2002	$34,000–$44,000
2003	$40,000–$50,000
2004	$45,000–$55,000
2005 and thereafter	$50,000–$60,000

Tax years beginning in:	Married taxpayers filing jointly
1998	$50,000–$60,000
1999	$51,000–$61,000
2000	$52,000–$62,000
2001	$53,000–$63,000
2002	$54,000–$64,000
2003	$60,000–$70,000
2004	$65,000–$75,000
2005	$70,000–$80,000
2006	$75,000–$85,000
2007 and thereafter	$80,000–$100,000

Planning Note. Starting in 2007, the phaseout range widens to $20,000 (from $80,000 to $100,000) for married couples filing jointly.

> Example. Joe Augusto is a single taxpayer with AGI of $30,000 and is covered under his employer's 401(k) plan. In 1998, he makes a $2,000 IRA contribution. He is entitled to take a full deduction for this contribution. Under prior law, his deduction would have been limited to $1,000, because his AGI would have been subject to a 50-percent phaseout.

Caution. There is a separate phaseout limit that applies to individuals who are not active participants but whose spouses are active participants. See ¶ 173.

Effective date. This provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 301(a), amending Code Sec. 219(g)(2)(A)(ii) and (3)(B); Act Sec. 301(c). Law at ¶ 5085. Committee Report at ¶ 10,255.

Active Participation Rules

Background

Under prior law, if an individual was an active participant in an employer-sponsored retirement plan, his or her spouse was treated as an active participant. Thus, under prior law, the spouse was subject to the phaseout rules for deductible IRAs (see ¶ 172).

Active participant status not attributed to spouses.—An individual will not be considered an active participant in an employer-sponsored plan merely because the individual's spouse is an active participant for any part of a plan year.

Planning Note. This change in the law allows most homemakers to take a full $2,000 deduction for a contribution to an IRA, regardless of whether their spouse is covered under a retirement plan at work.

Income phaseout limits. The maximum deductible IRA contribution for an individual who is not an active participant, but whose spouse is, will now be phased out at adjusted gross incomes between $150,000 and $160,000.

> Example (1). Ralph is covered by a 401(k) plan at work. His wife, Alice, is a full-time homemaker. In 1998, they file jointly and have an AGI of $200,000. Neither Ralph nor Alice is entitled to make deductible contributions to an IRA for the year because they exceed the income threshold.

> Example (2). Assume the same facts as Example (1), except that the combined AGI of Ralph and Alice is $125,000. Alice can make a deductible contribution to the IRA for the year because she is not an active participant, and their combined AGI is below the $150,000 threshold. But Ralph cannot make a deductible contribution because he exceeds the income threshold for active participants (see ¶ 172).

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Steve Krass of Krass & Lund, P.C., New York, New York, points out that the deductible IRA contribution that may be made by each spouse is dependent upon the spouse's adjusted gross income (AGI). Assuming the spouses file a joint income tax return for 1998, it is unclear as to how the AGI of each spouse will be calculated. For example, if the married individuals earn interest on a jointly held bank account, what portion of the interest should be allocated to each spouse? If the married individuals deduct real estate taxes with respect to a home owned by one spouse, will that spouse receive the entire deduction?

Effective date. This provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 301(b), amending Code Sec. 219(g)(1) and adding Code Sec. 219(g)(7); Act Sec. 301(c). Law at ¶ 5085. Committee Report at ¶ 10,255.

Education Expense Withdrawals

Background

Amounts held in an individual retirement account (IRA) are includible in income when withdrawn, except to the extent that the withdrawal represents a return of nondeductible contributions. Amounts distributed from an IRA prior to age 59½ are subject to an additional 10-percent early withdrawal tax, unless the distribution is:

(1) due to death or disability;

(2) made in the form of certain periodic payments for the life or life expectancy of the individual or the individual's beneficiary;

(3) used to pay medical expenses in excess of 7.5% of adjusted gross income; or

(4) used to purchase health insurance of an unemployed individual.

Prior to the 1997 Act, amounts could not be withdrawn penalty-free for the purpose of paying education expenses.

Early withdrawal tax does not apply to IRA distributions to pay for qualified higher education expenses.—The 10-percent tax on early (pre-age 59½) withdrawals from an IRA will not apply to distributions from an IRA if the taxpayer uses the amounts to pay "qualified higher education expenses" of the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, or any child or grandchild of the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse.

Qualified higher education expenses include tuition, fees, books, supplies, and equipment required for the enrollment or attendance at a postsecondary educational institution. The Committee Report makes it clear that qualified higher education expenses include those related to graduate-level courses.

The amount of qualified higher education expenses is reduced by the amounts of any qualified scholarship, educational assistance allowance, or payment (other than a gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance) for an individual's educational enrollment that are excludable from gross income.

Effective date. This provision is effective for distributions made after December 31, 1997, with respect to expenses paid for education furnished in academic periods beginning after that date and in tax years ending after that date.

Home Purchase Distributions

Background

Amounts held in an individual retirement account (IRA) are includible in income when withdrawn, except to the extent that the withdrawal represents a return of nondeductible contributions. Amounts distributed from an IRA prior to age 59½ are subject to an additional 10-percent early withdrawal tax, unless the distribution is:

(1) due to death or disability;

(2) made in the form of certain periodic payments for the life or life expectancy of the individual or the individual's beneficiary;

(3) used to pay medical expenses in excess of 7.5 percent of adjusted gross income; or

(4) used to purchase health insurance of an unemployed individual.

Prior to the 1997 Act, amounts could not be withdrawn penalty-free for the purpose of making first-time home purchases.

Early withdrawal tax does not apply to IRA distributions for "first-time homebuyer expenses."—Under the Act, the 10-percent tax on early (pre-age 59½) distributions from an IRA will not apply to IRA distributions used to pay expenses incurred by qualified first-time homebuyers (up to the first $10,000).

Qualified first-time homebuyer distributions. The early withdrawal tax does not apply to "qualified first-time homebuyer distributions." Qualified first-time homebuyer distributions are withdrawals from an IRA of up to $10,000 during the individual's lifetime that are used within 120 days of withdrawal to buy, build, or rebuild a "first" home that is the principal residence of the individual, his or her spouse, or any child, grandchild, or ancestor of the individual or spouse. Acquisition costs include any usual or reasonable settlement, financing, or other closing costs.

Definition of first-time homebuyer. In order to be considered a first-time homebuyer, the individual (and spouse, if married) must not have had an ownership interest in a principal residence during a two-year period ending on the date that the new home is acquired.

> Example. In 1995, Joe and Mary sold the home in which they both lived and moved into an apartment. In 1998, Joe and Mary take a $10,000 distribution from their IRA to use as a down payment on the purchase of a new home. Because they have not had an ownership interest in a principal residence during the preceding two years, Joe and Mary will not have to pay an additional 10% tax on their IRA withdrawal. The amount is still subject to inclusion in their gross income, however, under the usual IRA rules.

"Acquisition" of first home. Under the law, a first home is considered to be "acquired" on the date on which a binding contract is entered into or the date of which the construction or reconstruction is begun. If there is a delay or cancellation of the purchase or construction of the first home, the amount of the distribution may be contributed back into an IRA within 120 days of receipt.

Effective date. The provisions apply to payments and distributions in tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Background

IRAs may not invest in collectibles. A collectible includes any piece of art, rug, antique, metal or gem, stamp or coin, alcoholic beverage, or other personal property as specified by the Treasury Department. Collectibles do not include coins issued by a state or certain specified gold and silver coins. Prior to the Act, however, platinum coins and gold, silver, platinum, or palladium bullion were not covered under any exception to the rule precluding IRAs from investing in collectibles.

IRAs may invest in bullion.—The Act permits IRA assets to be invested in certain platinum coins and in any gold, silver, platinum, or palladium bullion of a fineness equal to or exceeding the minimum fineness required for metals which may be delivered in satisfaction of a regulated futures contract subject to regulation by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Caution. This provision does not apply unless the bullion is in the physical possession of the IRA trustee.

Effective date. The provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Partnership Items and Filing Requirements

Background

An individual retirement account (IRA) is generally exempt from taxation except for the taxes imposed on any income from an unrelated trade or business. The fiduciary of an IRA is required to file a return on behalf of the IRA only if the IRA has gross income of $1,000 or more that is included in the computation of unrelated business taxable income for the year (Reg. § 1.6012-3(a)(5)). In calculating unrelated business taxable income, an IRA is generally permitted a deduction for expenses directly connected to the carrying on of the unrelated trade or business, as well as a specific deduction of $1,000, under Code Sec. 512(b)(12). Consequently, an IRA with no taxable income, after taking into account the various deductions, can be required to file a return.

Before the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the filing threshold rules that applied to an IRA with an interest in a partnership subject to the TEFRA level audit rules did not take into account that the appropriateness of the deductions could be determined at the partnership level.

Filing threshold modified for IRA with certain partnership interest.—Under the Act, the filing threshold for an IRA with unrelated business taxable income is modified in the case of an IRA with an interest in a partnership subject to the TEFRA partnership-level audit rules. For purposes of determining whether the IRA has met the filing threshold ($1,000 or more of gross income included in computing unrelated business taxable income), the fiduciary of the IRA can treat the IRA's share of the partnership's taxable income as gross income. The fiduciary is not required to file an income tax return if the IRA receives taxable income of less than $1,000 (before the $1,000 specific deduction) from the partnership, and the IRA does not have any other income from an unrelated trade or business.

Effective date. The filing threshold applies to partnership tax years ending on or after December 31, 1997.

Payroll Deductions

Background

An employer that facilitates the establishment or maintenance of IRAs for its employees may be treated as having established a retirement plan that would subject the employer to ERISA's fiduciary rules.

Contributions to IRAs through payroll deductions.—According to the Conference Committee Report, the Secretary of the Treasury is encouraged to continue his efforts to publicize the availability of payroll deduction IRAs. In addition, the Conference Committee Report states that employers that make the decision not to sponsor retirement plans should be encouraged to set up payroll deduction systems for contributions to IRAs to help employees save for retirement.

Caution. The law text does not actually include this provision. It only appears in the Conference Committee Report.

According to the Senate Finance Committee Report, employers have been reluctant to assist their employees with IRAs because such involvement may result in the employers being treated as having maintained ERISA retirement plans. One of the consequences of such treatment is that the employers are subject to ERISA's fiduciary rules. The Senate amendment originally provided for the establishment of a detailed payroll deduction system under which employers would not be treated as having established or maintained an ERISA plan. The Conference Committee Report states, however, that the conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment. Therefore, this issue of employers' exposure to ERISA fiduciary liability is not specifically addressed by the conference agreement, as described in the Conference Committee Report.

Committee Report at ¶ 14,025.

ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX

Children Under Age 14

¶ 185

Background

Single taxpayers are entitled to an exemption from the alternative minimum tax (AMT) of $33,750. However, under prior law, the $33,750 AMT exemption amount that would otherwise apply to a single taxpayer was limited in the case of a child under age 14. The child's AMT exemption amount was limited to the amount of the child's earned income plus the greater of (1) the child's share of the "unused parental minimum tax exemption," which in essence was his share of his custodial parent's unused AMT exemption amount, or (2) twice the amount of the minor child's standard deduction (under Code Sec. 63(c)(5)(A)).

"Kiddie tax" AMT exemption amount indexed for inflation.—The alternative minimum tax (AMT) exemption amount for children under age 14 has effectively been increased and indexed for inflation. The AMT exemption amount in the case of a child under age 14 is equal to the lesser of $33,750 or the sum of the child's earned income plus $5,000 for tax years beginning in 1998. The $5,000 amount is indexed for inflation in post-1998 tax years. The determination of the child's AMT exemption amount is no longer dependent upon the computation of his parent's alternative minimum taxable income or AMT exemption amount.

Effective date. The increase and indexing of the "kiddie tax" AMT exemption amount applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1201(b), amending Code Secs. 59(j) and 6103(e)(1)(A)(iv); Act Sec. 1201(c). Law at ¶ 5035 and 5613. Committee Report at ¶ 12,120.

Chapter 2

Estate and Gift Tax and Trusts

UNIFIED CREDIT AND INFLATION ADJUSTMENTS

Unified Credit Increased

¶ 201

Background

Under prior law, a unified credit of $192,800 was available after 1986 for use against the gift tax on lifetime taxable gifts and the estate tax imposed on transfers at death. The unified credit effectively exempted the first $600,000 of cumulative taxable transfers.

Increase in unified estate and gift tax credit.—The previous unified credit amount is replaced by an "applicable credit amount" for the estates of decedents dying, and gifts made, after 1997. The applicable credit amount is the amount of the tentative tax that would be determined under the rate schedule in Code Sec. 2001(c) if the amount with respect to which such tentative tax is to be computed were the "applicable exclusion amount." The applicable exclusion amount will be $1,000,000 in 2006 when fully phased in. Prior to being fully phased in, the applicable exclusion amount is $625,000 for decedents dying, and gifts made, in 1998; $650,000 in 1999; $675,000 in 2000 and 2001; $700,000 in 2002 and 2003; $850,000 in 2004; $950,000 in 2005; and $1,000,000 in 2006 or thereafter. There is no provision for adjusting the applicable exclusion amount for inflation after 2006.

Effective date. The provision is effective for estates of decedents dying, and gifts made, after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 501(a), amending Code Sec. 2010(a), redesignating Code Sec. 2010(c) as Code Sec. 2010(d), adding new Code Sec. 2010(c), and amending Code Secs. 2001(c)(2), 2102(c)(3)(A), 2505(a)(1), and 6018(a)(1). Law at ¶ 5417, 5419, 5439, 5455, and 5577. Committee Report at ¶ 10,365.

Inflation Adjustments

Background

Under prior law, there were no Code provisions providing for automatic cost-of-living adjustments to the Code Sec. 2503(b) annual gift tax exclusion or the Code Sec. 2032A(a)(2) limitation on the special use valuation reduction in fair market value. Similarly, there were no indexing provisions with respect to the Code Sec. 2631 GST tax exemption or the Code Sec. 6601 ceiling on the value of a closely held business eligible for the special low interest rate available when an executor elected to pay the estate tax in installments.

Cost-of-living adjustments for the annual exclusion for gifts, special use valuation, GST tax exemption and installment payment of taxes.—The $10,000 annual exclusion for gifts, the $750,000 ceiling on special use valuation, the $1,000,000 generation-skipping transfer (GST) tax exemption, and the $1,000,000 ceiling on the value of a closely held business eligible for the special low interest rate when an executor elects to pay the estate tax in installments will all be indexed annually for inflation after 1998.

Computing the cost-of-living adjustment. The cost-of-living adjustment to the annual exclusion for gifts, the ceiling on special use valuation, the GST tax exemption and the ceiling on the value of a closely held business eligible for the special low interest is the percentage, if any, by which the Consumer Price Index (CPI) for the preceding calendar year exceeds the CPI for calendar year 1997. Indexing of the annual gift exclusion is rounded to the next lowest multiple of $1,000 and indexing of the other amounts is rounded to the next lowest multiple of $10,000.

> Example. David Jones dies in 1999 and his estate elects special use valuation under Code Sec. 2032A with respect to his farm. The CPI for 1997 is 195.2000000000 and the CPI for 1998 is 200.4000000000. This results in an inflation adjustment factor of 1.0266393 (1998 CPI ÷ 1997 CPI). The maximum reduction in value of the specially valued farm that the estate is entitled to is $760,000 calculated as follows: $750,000 × 1.0266393 = $769,979 or $760,000 rounded to next lowest $10,000.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Sandy Schlesinger of Kaye, Scholer, Fierman, Hays & Handler, LLP, New York, notes that the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 increases the unified estate and gift tax credit over nine years, resulting in an exemption amount of $625,000 in 1998; $650,000 in 1999; $675,000 in 2000 and 2001; $700,000 in 2002 and 2003; $850,000 in 2004; $950,000 in 2005; $1,000,000 in 2006 and thereafter and caps the new family-owned business exclusion (see ¶ 215) at $1,300,000 annually less the applicable exemption amount (excludes $675,000 in 1998; $650,000 in 1999; $625,000 in 2000 and 2001; $600,000 in 2002 and 2003; $450,000 in 2004; $350,000 in 2005; and $300,000 in 2006 and thereafter).

Year	Applicable Unified Credit (1)	Applicable "Exemption" Amount (2)	Business Exclusion Amount [$1.3 Million – (2)]
1997	$192,800	$ 600,000	None
1998	$202,050	$ 625,000	$675,000
1999	$211,300	$ 650,000	$650,000
2000 and 2001	$220,550	$ 675,000	$625,000
2002 and 2003	$229,800	$ 700,000	$600,000
2004	$287,300	$ 850,000	$450,000
2005	$326,300	$ 950,000	$350,000
2006 and after	$345,800	$1,000,000	$300,000

For the tax years beginning after 1998 there are provisions for indexing the following for inflation (as of the 1997 cost-of-living adjustment): The $750,000 special use valuation under Code Sec. 2032A, the $10,000 annual exclusion for gifts, the $1,000,000 generation-skipping transfer tax exemption, and the $1,000,000 ceiling on the value of a closely held business eligible for a special low interest rate (under the new law, two percent).

The current unified credit amount came into effect in 1987. As can be seen, the new increases are phased in very slowly phased. Moreover, considering inflation, the tax savings will be modest even when the increase is fully phased in. For example, in the year 2006 when the increase in the unified credit is fully phased in, the new exemption amount will be $1,000,000. The savings with respect to a taxable estate of $1,000,000 (the minimum amount required to fully utilize the increased unified credit) or more would be $153,000 (with no adjustment for inflation since 1997). If the new family business exclusion is also fully utilized, there would be additional savings of $124,000. Thus, with respect to an estate of $1,300,000 (the minimum amount required to take full advantage of both the increased unified credit and the new family business exclusion) the maximum potential savings under the new rules (i.e., the increased unified credit and the new business exclusion) would be $277,000. On this basis, taking into account a husband and wife each of whom has a taxable estate of $1,300,000, total savings under the new rules would be $554,000. Obviously, this is not an insignificant amount, and taxpayers should plan their affairs to achieve these savings, to the extent possible. Larger taxable estates could receive additional savings (above the $277,000 amount just described) because the business exclusion will effectively shield assets from the "top" of the estate where the otherwise applicable estate tax rates will be higher. Smaller estates (and taxable estates of any size that cannot utilize the family business exclusion and/or estates of decedents who die before 2006) will achieve less than $277,000 of savings. Therefore, the new rules do not represent a fundamental change in the current system.

These new provisions will also provide some savings in legal and/ or accounting fees and other administration expenses for modest estates which will no longer be required to file federal returns if they are less than the applicable increasing unified credit (not including the family business exclusion).

The phaseout of the unified credit is no longer fixed at a dollar amount of $21,040,000 but, instead, is now set at the amount at which the average tax rate is 55 percent.

Practitioners must carefully review and examine all wills and trusts to verify that the formula clauses relating to the unified credit will self-adjust to the phase-in amounts in each year. Where applicable, references to closely held businesses should be examined and formula clauses should be modified to take into account the new exclusion relating to family owned businesses. In addition, couples who have divided their assets so that each spouse has at least $600,000 may have to readjust their holdings.

All estate plans should be examined to consider whether, in addition to annual exclusion gifts, gifts should be made to utilize the additional amount of unified credit in 1998 and thereafter, with careful attention to those few jurisdictions (Connecticut, Louisiana, New York (repealed January 1, 2000), North Carolina, Tennessee, and Puerto Rico) which still have a state or local gift tax. The changes in the capital gain rates should also be considered in this regard, especially with respect to the substantial increase in the exclusion for gains on the sale of a residence, as it may no longer be advisable to wait until death to dispose of or sell appreciated assets or residences.

Taxpayers holding interests in small businesses and family owned farms may have to choose between the unified credit exemption and the business exclusion (see ¶ 215), which may create planning problems, especially if the business is intended to pass to one child and other estate assets to a different child, or to a spouse. As noted above, taking full advantage of the $1,300,000 exemption and exclusion could save as much as $277,000 in estate taxes. It has been pointed out by commentators that the new changes create an anomaly whereby the effective small business exclusion decreases each year as the exemption amount increases, thereby in effect decreasing the benefits of the small business exclusion from the greatest amount in 1998 dropping to the lowest amount in 2006.

Effective date. These provisions are effective for estates of decedents dying, and gifts made, after December 31, 1997.

GROSS ESTATE

Gifts from Revocable Trusts Within Three Years of Death

¶ 210

Background

Pursuant to Code Sec. 2038, a decedent's gross estate includes the value of any interest in property transferred, in trust or otherwise, if the decedent retained the power to alter, amend, revoke, or terminate the interest, or if such power was relinquished within three years of death. Similarly, the value of any interest in property transferred within three years of death that would have been included in the gross estate under Code Sec. 2038 or that would have been included in the gross estate if such interest had been retained by the decedent is includible in the decedent's gross estate under Code Sec. 2035. Thus, before the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, certain transfers from a decedent's revocable trust within three years of death were not treated as if made directly by the decedent. Therefore, the transfers, including annual exclusion gifts, from such trusts were includible in the decedent's gross estate. On the other hand, if, under the same circumstances, the decedent had revoked the trust or had the property transferred from the trust to himself or herself and then made the gift directly, the transferred property would not have been included in the transferor's gross estate.

Transfers treated as made directly by the decedent.—The value of property transferred to a donee from a decedent's revocable trust within three years of the decedent's death and the value of property in such a trust with respect to which the decedent's power to revoke is relinquished during the three years before death is not includible in the decedent's gross estate. A revocable trust is a trust treated under Code Sec. 676 as owned by the decedent. Transfers from such a trust are treated as if made directly by the decedent for purposes of Code Sec. 2035 and Code Sec. 2038. Accordingly, an annual exclusion gift from a revocable trust is not included in the decedent's gross estate. This change codifies the rules in H. McNeely, CA-8, 94-1 USTC ¶ 60,155, 16 F3d 303, and E. Kisling Est., CA-8, 94-2 USTC ¶ 60,176, 32 F3d 1222.

Effective date. These provisions are effective for the estates of decedents dying after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1310, amending Code Sec. 2035. Law at ¶ 5429. Committee Report at ¶ 12,660.

Short-Term Obligations Held by Nonresident Aliens

Background

Generally, debt obligations of a U.S. person, the United States, or a political subdivision of a state that are held by a nonresident noncitizen are considered to be property located within the United States. Accordingly, such debt obligations are subject to federal estate tax if held at death. However, Code Sec. 2105(b) provides special rules to exclude certain bank deposits and debt instruments from the gross estate of a nonresident noncitizen. These items are also exempt from U.S. income tax under Code Sec. 871(h) and Code Sec. 871(i)(2)(A). After passage of an amendment to Code Sec. 871(h) by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-514) and prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the estate tax exception did not apply to debt obligations that generated short-term original issue discount (OID) income. This resulted in unequal treatment of these debt obligations for U.S. estate tax and income tax purposes.

Short-term obligations treated as property outside U.S.—U.S. debt obligations held by nonresident noncitizens that produce short-term original issue discount income will be treated as property located outside the United States for purposes of the U.S. estate tax imposed on such individuals. Accordingly, qualified debt obligations will not be included in a nonresident noncitizen's gross estate.

Planning Note. This provision serves to equalize the U.S. income tax and estate tax treatment of short-term debt obligations held by nonresident aliens. In doing so, a potential death tax trap for nonresident aliens is removed while the ability of U.S. borrowers to raise money from foreign sources is enhanced.

Effective date. The provision is effective with respect to estates of decedents dying after August 5, 1997.

Land Subject to a Qualified Conservation Easement

Background

A contribution of a qualified real property interest to a charity or other qualified organization exclusively for conservation purposes qualifies for an estate and gift tax deduction under Code Sec. 2055(f) and Code Sec. 2522(d), respectively. However, in order to qualify for the deduction for a conservation contribution, the donor was not allowed to retain an interest in minerals which could be extracted or removed by any surface mining method unless (1) the surface and mineral estates in the property with respect to which the contribution was made were separated before June 13, 1976, and (2) the probability of surface mining on the property with respect to which the contribution was made was so remote as to be negligible. No provision previously existed that allowed an estate to exclude a portion of the value of land subject to a conservation easement from the gross estate.

Estate tax treatment of land subject to a qualified conservation easement.—A charitable deduction is allowed for estate and gift tax purposes for a contribution of a qualified real property interest to a charity exclusively for conservation purposes. If an executor so elects, a new Code provision allows an exclusion from a decedent's gross estate of up to 40 percent (the "applicable percentage") of the value of land subject to a qualified conservation easement, reduced by the amount of any charitable deduction under Code Sec. 2055(f) with respect to the land. The maximum amount that can be excluded is the lessor of the applicable percentage or the "exclusion limitation." The exclusion limitation is $100,000 in 1998, $200,000 in 1999, $300,000 in 2000, $400,000 in 2001, and $500,000 in 2002 or thereafter. This exclusion is in addition to the new qualified family-owned business exclusion provided under Code Sec. 2033A and described at ¶ 215.

The election is made on the estate tax return and, once made, is irrevocable. Land subject to a qualified conservation easement is land that is located (1) in or within 25 miles of a metropolitan area as defined by the Office of Management and Budget, (2) in or within 25 miles of a national park or wilderness area, unless the Secretary determines that such land is not under significant development pressure, or (3) in or within 10 miles of an Urban National Forest as designated by the Forest Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. In addition, the land must have been owned by the decedent or a member of the decedent's family during the three-year period ending on the date of the decedent's death. Further, the land must be subject to a qualified conservation easement granted by the decedent or a member of the decedent's family. However, a post-mortem conservation easement may be placed on the property, provided the easement has been made no later than the date of the election. The Code Sec. 2032A(e)(2) definition of member of the family applies. The transferee of land subject to a conservation easement that is acquired at death receives a carryover basis, to the extent that the value of land is excluded from the taxable estate.

Debt-financed property is eligible for the exclusion to the extent of the net equity in the property. Debt-financed property means property with respect to which there is an acquisition indebtedness on the date of the decedent's death. Acquisition indebtedness includes (1) indebtedness incurred by the donor in acquiring the property, (2) indebtedness incurred before the acquisition of the property if such indebtedness would not have been incurred but for such acquisition, (3) indebtedness incurred after the acquisition of the property if such indebtedness would not have been incurred but for such acquisition, and the incurrence of the indebtedness was reasonably foreseeable at the time of acquisition, and (4) the extension, renewal, or refinancing of an acquisition indebtedness.

Qualified conservation easement. A qualified conservation easement is a qualified conservation contribution, as defined in Code Sec. 170(h)(1). It is a contribution of a qualified real property interest to a qualified organization exclusively for conservation purposes. A qualified real property interest means a restriction, granted in perpetuity, on the use that may be made of the real property. Conservation purposes are defined in Code Sec. 170(h)(4)(A). However, for purposes of the qualified conservation easement exclusion, the preservation of a historically important land area or a historic structure does not qualify as a conservation purpose. In addition, a de minimis commercial recreational activity that is consistent with the conservation purpose, such as the granting of hunting and fishing licenses, will not cause the property to fail to qualify for the exclusion. The Conference Committee Report anticipates that the Secretary of the Treasury will provide guidance regarding the definition of de minimis activities.

Exclusion amount. The exclusion amount is calculated based on the value of the property after the conservation easement has been placed on the property. In addition, the exclusion amount does not extend to the value of any development rights retained by the decedent or the donor. Development rights are defined as any rights retained to use the land for any commercial purpose which is not subordinate to and directly supportive of the land as a farm or for farming purposes within the meaning of Code Sec. 2032A(e)(5). However, if every person in being who has an interest in the land executes an agreement to extinguish permanently some or all of any development rights retained by the donor, on or before the estate tax return is due, the estate tax may be reduced accordingly. If the agreement is not implemented by the earlier of the date which is two years after the decedent's death or the date of the sale of the land, an additional tax is imposed in the amount of the tax which would have been due on the retained development rights that were subject to the agreement.

Applicable percentage. The applicable percentage means 40 percent reduced (but not below zero) by two percentage points for each percentage point (or fraction thereof) by which the value of the qualified conservation easement is less than 30 percent of the value of the land. For this purpose, the value of the land is determined without regard to the value of the easement, and reduced by the value of any retained development rights. As a result, if the value of the easement is 10 percent or less of the value of the land before the easement, less the value of any retained development rights, the applicable percentage will be zero.

> Example. Diane Jones died owning land subject to a qualified conservation easement. She did not retain any development rights in the property. The fair market value of the real property on the date of death was $500,000 without the conservation easement and $400,000 with the easement. Thus, the value of the conservation easement is $100,000 or 20 percent of the value of real property without the easement. The applicable percentage for the estate is 20 percent (40 percent reduced by twice the difference between 30 percent and 20 percent). Therefore, the exclusion amount is $80,000 (20 percent of $400,000).

Special-use valuation property. The granting of a conservation easement does not affect specially-valued property under Code Sec. 2032A. Thus, the granting of a such an easement is not treated as a disposition for purposes of Code Sec. 2032A(c) and does not trigger the additional estate tax. In addition, the existence of a qualified conservation easement does not prevent the property from subsequently qualifying for special use valuation.

Retained mineral interests. A contribution of a permanent conservation easement on property qualifies for a charitable deduction for estate and income tax purposes where a mineral interest has been retained and surface mining is possible, but its probability is so remote as to be negligible. Under prior law, a charitable deduction was available to such a contribution only if the mineral interests were separated from the land prior to June 13, 1976.

Effective date. The estate tax exclusion for land subject to a permanent conservation easement and the amendment to the carryover basis rules are effective for the estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1997. The rules with respect to conservation easement under Code Sec. 2032A and with respect to retained mineral interests are effective for easements granted after December 31, 1997.

QUALIFIED FAMILY-OWNED BUSINESS

Family-Owned Business Exclusion

Background

Before the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, there was no special estate tax provision that excluded a portion of a qualified family-owned business from a decedent's gross estate. However, all decedent's were entitled to a unified credit of $192,800 for lifetime gifts and transfers at death. The unified credit effectively exempted $600,000 in cumulative transfers from estate and gift taxes.

Qualified family-owned business exclusion.—If an estate qualifies, there is excluded from a decedent's gross estate the lesser of (1) the adjusted value of the decedent's qualified family-owned business interests or (2) the excess of $1,300,000 over the applicable exclusion amount in effect with respect to the decedent's estate. Thus, in 1998 when the applicable exclusion amount is $625,000, a maximum of $675,000 of adjusted value of the decedent's qualified family-owned business interests could be excluded from the gross estate. Therefore, only the value of qualified family-owned business interests in excess of $1,300,000 is subject to the estate tax in the decedent's estate. In general, to qualify for the exclusion the aggregate value of the decedent's qualified family-owned business interests that are passed to qualified heirs must exceed 50 percent of the decedent's adjusted gross estate. In addition, the decedent must be a U.S. citizen or resident at the time of death, the executor must elect special tax treatment and file a recapture agreement signed by each person in being having an interest in the property, and certain other requirements must be met. This exclusion is in addition to the effective exemption provided by the unified credit, the special use valuation provisions, and the provisions for the installment payment of estate taxes attributable to a closely-held business.

Ownership requirement. A qualified family-owned business is any interest in a trade or business, regardless of form, with a principal place of business in the United States, the ownership of which is held (1) at least 50 percent by one family, (2) 70 percent by two families, or (3) 90 percent by three families. If held by more than one family, the decedent's family must own at least 30 percent of the trade or business. Members of the individual's family include (1) the individual's spouse, (2) the individual's ancestors, (3) lineal descendants of the individual, of the individual's spouse, or of the individual's parents, and (4) the spouse's of any such lineal descendants.

In the case of a corporation, the ownership test is met if the decedent and family members own the requisite percentage of both the total combined voting power of all classes of voting stock and the total value of all shares of all classes of stock. In the case of a partnership, the decedent and family members are required to own the requisite percentage of the capital interest in the partnership (note that the Senate Committee Report also indicates an ownership requirement in the profits interest of a partnership). Special look-through rules apply in the case of a trade or business that owns an interest in another trade or business. Whether owned directly or indirectly, each trade or business owned by the decedent and members of the family must be separately tested to determine whether the trade or business meets the requirement's of a qualified family-owned business.

Caution. An interest in a trade or business does not qualify if the business's, or a related entity's, stock or securities were publicly-traded at any time within three years of the decedent's death. In addition, the interest does not qualify if more than 35 percent of the adjusted ordinary gross income from the business for the year of the decedent's death was personal holding company income. The second restriction does not apply to banks and domestic building and loan associations.

Valuation. The value of a trade or business qualifying as a family-owned business interest is reduced to the extent that the business holds certain passive assets or cash and marketable securities in excess of the reasonably expected day-to-day working capital need for the trade or business. The Senate Conference Report anticipates that the historic average of a business's working capital needs in the past would provide the basis for determining working capital needs of the business, using an analysis similar to that used in Bardahl Mfg. Corp., 24 TCM 1030, CCH Dec. 27,4949, TC Memo. 1965-200. In addition, accumulations for capital acquisitions is not considered "working capital." Further, certain other passive assets are not considered in valuing qualified family-owned business interests.

The following assets are considered passive assets and are not included in the value of a qualified family-owned business:

(1) assets that produce dividends, interest, rents, royalties, annuities and Code Sec. 543(a) personal holding company income;

(2) assets that are interests in a trust, partnership or real estate mortgage investment conduit (REMIC) (as described in Code Sec. 954(c)(1)(B)(ii));

(3) assets that produce no income (as described in Code Sec. 954(c)(1)(B)(iii));

(4) assets that give rise to income from commodities transactions or foreign currency gains (as described in Code Sec. 954(c)(1)(C) and (D));

(5) assets that produce income equivalent to interest (as described in Code Sec. 954(c)(1)(E)); and

(6) assets that produce income from notional principal contracts or payments in lieu of dividends (as described in new Code Sec. 954(c)(1)(F) and (G)).

However, with respect to regular dealers in property, such property is not considered to produce passive income and, therefore, is not considered a passive asset.

Qualifying estates. In order to qualify for special treatment, the decedent must have been a U.S. citizen or resident at the time of death, and the aggregate value of the decedent's qualified family-owned business interests that are passed to qualified heirs must exceed 50 percent of the decedent's adjusted gross estate. For this purpose, qualified heirs include any individual who was actively employed by the trade or business for at least 10 years prior to the date of the decedent's death, as well as members of the decedent's family. The decedent's qualified family-owned business interests passing to qualified heirs includes lifetime gifts of such interests made by the decedent to members of the decedent's family to the extent that those interests are held by family members (other than the decedent's spouse) between the date of the gift and the date of the decedent's death. Generally, a 50-percent liquidity test is used to determine if this requirement is met. Under this test, the total of all transfers of qualified family-owned business interests made by the decedent to qualified heirs at the time of the decedent's death, plus certain lifetime gifts to family members, is compared to the decedent's adjusted gross estate. If the decedent held qualified family-owned business interests in more than one trade or business, all such interests are aggregated for purposes of applying the 50-percent liquidity test.

50-percent liquidity test. To determine whether the decedent's qualifying interests comprise more than 50 percent of the decedent's adjusted gross estate, a percentage calculation using the following numerator and denominator is used.

The numerator is determined by aggregating the value of all qualified family-owned business interests that are includible in the decedent's gross estate and are passed from the decedent to a qualified heir, plus any lifetime transfers of such interests by the decedent to members of the decedent's family (other than the decedent's spouse), provided such interests have been continuously held by members of the family and were not otherwise includible in the decedent's gross estate. For this purpose, the qualified interests transferred to members of the family during the decedent's lifetime are valued as of the date of the transfer. This amount is then reduced by all the indebtedness of the estate, except for the following:

(1) indebtedness on a qualified residence of the decedent, i.e., a residence that qualifies for the mortgage interest deduction under Code Sec. 163(h)(3);

(2) indebtedness incurred to pay the educational or medical expenses of the decedent, the decedent's spouse, or the decedent's dependents; and

(3) other indebtedness of up to $10,000.

The denominator is equal to the decedent's gross estate, reduced by any indebtedness of the estate and increased by the amount of the following transfers, to the extent not already included in the gross estate:

(1) lifetime transfers of qualified business interests that were made by the decedent to members of the decedent's family (other than the decedent's spouse), provided such interests were continuously held by members of the family; plus

(2) transfers, other than de minimis transfers, from the decedent to the decedent's spouse that were made within 10 years of the date of the decedent's death; plus

(3) any other transfers made by the decedent within three years of death, except nontaxable transfers made to members of the decedent's family.

Planning Note. While consideration should be given, if necessary, to reducing the nonbusiness assets in the gross estate during the decedent's lifetime in order to qualify for the family-owned business exclusion, advanced planning is required. Transfers to the decedent's spouse will not be effective unless made more than 10 years before the decedent's death and transfers to others, except nontaxable transfers to members of the decedent's family, must occur more than three years before the decedent's death.

Participation requirements. The decedent, or members of the decedent's family, must have owned and materially participated in the trade or business for at least five of the eight years preceding the decedent's death in order to qualify for special treatment. In addition, a qualified heir is subject to a recapture tax if the heir, or a member of the qualified heir's family, does not materially participate in the trade or business for at least five years of any eight-year period within 10 years following the decedent's death. The definition of "material participation" provided in Code Sec. 2032A and the regulation thereunder pertaining to special use valuation apply. Accordingly, the principal factors to be considered include physical work and participation in management decisions. Note that the Senate Committee Report states that the material participation requirement will be met with respect to a qualified heir if the heir rents qualified property to a member of the qualified heir's family on a net cash basis, and that family member materially participates in the business.

Recapture tax. An additional tax is imposed if any of the following recapture events occur within 10 years of the decedent's death and before the qualified heir's death:

(1) the qualified heir ceases to meet the material participation requirements;

(2) the qualified heir disposes of any portion of his or her interest in the family-owned business, other than by a disposition to a member of the qualified heir's family or through a conservation contribution under Code Sec. 170(h);

(3) the principal place of business of the trade or business ceases to be located in the United States; or

(4) the qualified heir loses U.S. citizenship.

The Conference Committee Report indicates that the sale or disposition of assets such as inventory or a piece of equipment used in the business in the ordinary course of the business will not trigger the recapture tax.

The recapture tax may be avoided if a qualified heir loses U.S. citizenship, provided the trade or business assets are placed into a qualified trust meeting requirements similar to a qualified domestic trust (QDOT) under Code Sec. 2056A(a) or certain other security arrangements are met. The recapture period may be extended up to two years if the qualified heir does not begin to use the property for a period of up to two years after a decedent's death.

The recapture tax is a personal liability of each qualified heir to the extent of the portion of the additional tax that is imposed with respect to his or her interest in the qualified family-owned business.

Example. John, Beth, and Sue Ingram, inherit equal qualified family-owned business interests from their father, and the father's estate elects special tax treatment under Code Sec. 2033A. Only Sue continues to materially participate in the family business. Such participation, as a family member, causes all three children to meet the participation requirements. However, during the fourth year following the decedent's death, Sue ceases to materially participate in the business and neither John or Beth participates.

As a result, each of the three children would be personally liable for the portion of the recapture tax attributable to his or her interest.

Amount of additional estate tax. The additional estate tax is based upon when the recapture event occurs in relation to the decedent's death. If the recapture event occurs within the first six years of material participation, 100 percent of the reduction in estate tax attributable to the heir's interest is recaptured. Thereafter, the applicable percentage is 80 percent in the seventh year, 60 percent in the eighth year, 40 percent in the ninth year, and 20 percent in the tenth year.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Arthur Sederbaum of Patterson, Belknap, Webb & Tyler LLP, New York, notes that new Code Sec. 2033A has been added by the Act providing that, for estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1997, the executor may elect to exclude the value of certain "qualified family-owned business interests" from the decedent's gross estate. The exclusion may be taken only to the extent that the sum of the exclusion plus the amount of the decedent's taxable estate necessary to generate the maximum unified credit does not exceed $1,300,000. Thus, as the unified credit amount is phased in from 1998 through 2006 and later, the exclusion for family-owned businesses decreases from 1998 through 2006 and later.

In order to be eligible, the value of the qualified family-owned business interests owned at the decedent's death, plus the value of any gifts of such interests made by the decedent during his lifetime to members of his family must exceed 50 percent of the decedent's adjusted gross estate. The term "adjusted gross estate" has a unique definition under new Code Sec. 2033A. It means the decedent's gross estate as reduced only by deductible claims and mortgages under Code Sec. 2053(a)(3) and (a)(4) (but not the deductions allowed for funeral and administration expenses under Code Sec. 2053(a)(1) and (a)(2)), and as increased by the amount of inter vivos gifts not otherwise includible in the decedent's gross estate of (i) qualified family-owned business interests made by the decedent to members of her family, (ii) the amount of any transfers made by the decedent to her spouse within 10 years of the date of the decedent's death, and (iii) the amount of all other gifts made by the decedent within three years of her death (other than gifts which qualify for the annual gift tax exclusion under Code Sec. 2503(b)).

A qualified family-owned business interest is defined as either an interest in a trade or business carried on as a sole proprietorship or an interest in an entity (corporation, partnership or LLC) carrying on a trade or business, provided that ownership of the entity is held at least 50 percent by one family, 70 percent by two families, or 90 percent by three families and provided that the decedent's family owns at least 30 percent of the business interest. The term "member of the family" has the same meaning as in Code Sec. 2032A(e)(2), which is the individual's ancestors, spouse, lineal descendants, spouse's lineal descendants, the spouse of any lineal descendant, and any lineal descendant of the individual's parents. Many other definitions in the new family-owned business exclusion section are borrowed from Code Sec. 2032A. Practitioners who considered Code Sec. 2032A to be narrow in scope and not worthy of attention will now be compelled to master the numerous definitions in that section which are applicable to new Code Sec. 2033A.

There are two keys for qualification for the family-owned business exclusion. First, the interest must be in an entity which carries on a trade or business. Here the regulations, cases and rulings under Code Sec. 6166 will be instructive. Second, the decedent or a member of the decedent's family must have owned and materially participated in the business for five of the eight years prior to the date of the decedent's death, and a qualified heir must have continued material participation for 10 years after the date of the decedent's death. An additional estate tax is imposed if the material participation requirements are not met for the 10-year period following the decedent's death or if the qualified heir disposes of any portion of the interest, other than by transfer to a member of the qualified heir's family. Again, reference is made to Code Sec. 2032A for the definitions of "material participation," and "qualified heir." The fact that the material participation requirement may be satisfied by a member of the decedent's family means that a nonparticipating spouse who owns an interest in the business may also take advantage of the exclusion.

Since 1995, when then-Senator Dole introduced the first measure covering estate tax relief for family-owned businesses, there has been a significant movement in Congress for the enactment of such a measure. Therefore, it is difficult to fathom why the Act ties the family-owned business exclusion to the unified credit amount in an inverse relationship. The impact of the exclusion is thus at its greatest in 1998, and diminishes significantly in 2006 and thereafter. The relationship between the two provisions will create difficulties for those individuals who have, for example, one child in the business and one or more who are not. It is hoped that future legislation will widen the impact of the exclusion and make it independent of the unified credit.

Effective date. The qualified family-owned business exclusion is effective for the estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1997.

INSTALLMENT PAYMENTS AND INTEREST

Judicial Review of Installment Payment Eligibility

¶ 225

Background

Estates of decedents dying on or before the date of enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 (August 5, 1997) that were determined not to be eligible for estate tax relief under the installment payment provisions of Code Sec. 6166, or that were declared to have lost their eligibility, had limited access to judicial review. Estates so impacted were forced to pay any estate tax due before seeking such review.

Eligibility for installment payment of estate tax subject to declaratory judgment.—The estate of a decedent that is denied relief under Code Sec. 6166, pertaining to the installment payment of estate tax, is entitled to seek a declaratory judgment before the Tax Court as to the estate's eligibility for installment payments. This provision applies to both the initial and continued eligibility for installment payment treatment. Provided the IRS's adverse determination is sent by certified or registered mail, a pleading made pursuant to this provision must be filed within 90 days of the mailing.

In order to be eligible for judicial review under this provision, the estate must show that it exhausted all administrative remedies within the IRS. A petitioner will be deemed to have exhausted all available administrative remedies if the IRS fails to make a determination within 180 days of a request for determination, providing all reasonable steps to secure such determination have been made.

Planning Note. Estates that seek installment payment treatment are ordinarily at a financial disadvantage as a result of lack of liquidity. Accordingly, the availability of judicial review of an adverse determination on the issue of eligibility for installment payment of estate taxes without first having to pay the full amount of estate taxes due should prove beneficial to estates with qualified closely held business interests.

Effective date. The provision is effective with respect to estates of decedents dying after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 505, adding Code Sec. 7479. Law at ¶ 5731. Committee Report at ¶ 10,390.

Background

Under prior law, Code Sec. 6601(j) provided a special four-percent rate of interest on a certain portion of the estate tax on a closely held business if an executor elected to pay the tax in installments under Code Sec. 6166. This special low interest rate applied to the amount of deferred estate tax attributable to the first $1,000,000 in value of a closely held business only. The amount of estate tax payable in installments that exceeded the amount subject to the four-percent rate was subject to interest at the Code Sec. 6621 underpayment rate. This underpayment rate is the federal short-term rate plus three percentage points. In addition, the interest paid on the deferred payments was a deductible expense for estate or income tax purposes. However, the interest was only deductible as it accrued, thereby requiring the annual filing of a supplemental estate tax return and complex computations in order to claim the estate tax deduction.

Reduced interest on installment payments.—Interest at the rate of two percent is imposed on the "two-percent portion," i.e., the first $1,000,000 in taxable value, of estate tax attributable to a closely held business when an estate elects the Code Sec. 6166 extension of time for payment of the estate tax. In addition, the interest rate imposed on the amount of the deferred estate tax attributable to the taxable value of the closely held business in excess of the two-percent portion is reduced to an amount equal to 45 percent of the rate applicable to underpayments of tax.

Two-percent portion. The two-percent portion is an amount equal to the amount of the tentative estate tax on ($1,000,000 + the applicable exclusion amount in effect) minus the applicable credit amount in effect. However, if the amount of estate tax extended under Code Sec. 6166 is less than the amount computed above, the two-percent portion is the lesser amount. Thus, in 1998, the two-percent portion is the estate tax attributable to the value of the closely held business between $625,000 and $1,625,000.

> Example. Bob Putnam dies in 1998 when the applicable exclusion amount is $625,000. The estate tax value of Bob's interest in a closely held business is valued at $2,000,000 and the executor of his estate elects, pursuant to Code Sec. 6166, to extend the time for payment of the estate taxes. The amount of estate tax attributable to the value of the closely held business between $625,000 and $1,625,000 is eligible for the two-percent interest rate. The two-percent portion is $410,000, computed as follows: a $612,050 tentative estate tax on $1,625,000 ($1,000,000 + applicable exclusion amount in effect in 1998) minus $202,050 (the applicable credit amount in effect in 1998) equals $410,000. The interest rate imposed on the portion of the deferred estate tax in excess of the $410,000 is equal to 45 percent of the rate applicable to underpayments of tax.

No deductions allowed. No deduction is allowed for estate tax or income tax purposes for the interest paid on estate taxes deferred under Code Sec. 6166.

Election. If the estate of a decedent who died before 1998 elected installment payments under Code Sec. 6166, the executor of the estate may make an irrevocable election to have the amendments made by Section 503 of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 apply to the installments payments that are due after the effective date of this election. However, if this election is made, the two-percent rate will only apply to the amount that was previously eligible for the four-percent rate. The estate will not receive the benefit of the increase in the amount eligible for the Code Sec. 6601(j) interest rate. The election must be made before January 1, 1999, in the manner prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Caution. If the one-time election is made to use the lower interest rates, the estate will forgo the interest deduction for installments due after the date of the election.

Effective date. The two-percent interest and reduced interest provisions are effective for the estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1997.

SPECIAL USE VALUATION

Cash Leases of Specially Valued Property

¶ 229

Background

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, only a surviving spouse could rent specially valued property on a net cash basis without triggering the recapture tax. Under Code Sec. 2032A, an executor may elect to value certain qualified real property used in farming or other qualifying trade or business at its current use value rather than at its highest and best use value. If special use valuation is elected, the qualified heir is subject to an additional tax if he or she disposes of any interest in qualified real property or ceases to use the property for its qualified use within 10 years (15 years for individuals dying before 1982) following the decedent's death. A cessation of qualified use occurs if there is no material participation by the qualified heir or any member of the heir's family in the operation of the farm or other business. Leasing qualified real property on a net cash basis is generally considered a cessation of qualified use because the heir no longer bears the financial risks of the business. However, a special provision provides that a surviving spouse shall not be treated as failing to use qualified real property for a qualified use if such spouse rents property to a member of the spouse's family on a net cash basis.

Cash lease by lineal descendant of the decedent.—Lineal descendants of the decedent may lease specially valued real property to a member of the lineal descendant's family on a net cash basis without subjecting such individual to the recapture tax. A lineal descendent will not be treated as failing to use the qualified real property in a qualified use solely because the individual rents such property to members of his or her family on a net cash lease basis. Members of the lineal descendant's family include that individual's (1) ancestors, (2) spouse, (3) lineal descendants of the individual, of the individual's spouse, or of a parent of such individual, or (4) the spouse of any lineal descendant in (3) above. This rule is similar to the special rule that is currently available to a surviving spouse.

> Example. Jane Nortell inherits a farm from her father for which a special use valuation election is made, and she rents the farm to an unrelated neighbor on a crop share basis. Three years after her father's death, Nortell leases the qualified real property to her nephew on a net cash basis and the nephew continues to operate the farm. The lease of the farm to Nortell's nephew does not result in a cessation of qualified use because Nortell is a lineal descendant of the decedent and her nephew is a lineal descendant of her parent. Thus, Nortell's nephew is a member of the family.

Planning Note. Because the provisions allowing qualified heirs to cash lease specially valued property are retroactive, estates that were previously required to pay the recapture tax may be entitled to a refund if the statute of limitations for filing a claim has not expired. Those estates that would have been liable for the recapture tax under prior law will no longer be subject to the recapture tax for unreported cash leasing arrangements that qualify under the present law. There is no special provision in the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 providing a time frame within which a refund of previously paid recapture taxes with respect to cash leasing by a qualified heir may be obtained.

Effective date. The provision treating certain rents as a qualified use is effective with respect to leases entered into after December 31, 1976.

Correction of Election Statement

Background

An executor may elect to value certain real property used for farming or other qualified businesses at its current use value rather than its highest and best use value under Code Sec. 2032A. In order to make a valid election, certain information is required to be included in the notice of election and each person who has an interest in the property is required to sign an agreement consenting to the imposition of additional estate tax in the event of a failure to use the property for its qualified use within 10 years of the decedent's death. If an election is timely filed and (1) the notice of election does not contain all of the required information or (2) the signature of one or more persons required to sign the agreement is missing or the agreement does not contain all the required information, the executor may provide the missing information or signatures within 90 days of being notified by the IRS. However, before the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, modification of the election and agreement to provide missing information or signatures was only permitted if the original election had substantially complied with the applicable regulations.

Modification of election and agreement.—The requirement that an executor electing special use valuation must have substantially complied with the regulations in order to be entitled to submit missing information or signatures has been deleted from Code Sec. 2032A(d)(3). If the executor submits a timely notice of election and recapture agreement, but the election or agreement does not contain all the required information or signatures, the executor may supply the missing information or signatures within 90 days of being notified by the IRS, without regard to compliance with the regulations.

Effective date. This right to correct certain failures is effective for the estates of decedents dying after August 5, 1997.

QUALIFIED DOMESTIC TRUSTS

Withholding Requirement

Background

For decedents dying after November 10, 1988, the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 (TAMRA) (P.L. 100-647), denies a marital deduction for transfers to a surviving spouse who is not a U.S. citizen unless the transfer is made to a qualified domestic trust (QDOT). TAMRA also required that all trustees of a QDOT be U.S. citizens or domestic corporations. A subsequent modification made by the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-508) stated that at least one trustee must be a U.S. citizen or domestic corporation and that no distribution of corpus may be made unless such trustee has the right to withhold any estate tax imposed on the distribution. The effect of the latter modification was to force the revision of estate planning documents drafted pursuant to the TAMRA provision that did not include the withholding requirement although, even under the earlier rule, a trustee was liable for any estate tax due with respect to a QDOT.

Background

QDOT withholding rule clarified.—A qualified domestic trust (QDOT) drafted in response to changes in the marital deduction rules for transfers to a noncitizen spouse, as made by the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 (TAMRA) (P.L. 100-647), will be deemed to satisfy the withholding requirement if the governing instrument provides that all trustees be U.S. citizens or domestic corporations.

Planning Note. Under the transitional rule, wills and trusts drafted in conformity with the TAMRA requirements for QDOTs, but that do not include the withholding requirement subsequently imposed by the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-508), do not have to be revised.

Effective date. The provision is effective with respect to decedents dying after November 10, 1988.

Act Sec. 1303, amending Act Sec. 11702(g) of the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1990. Law at ¶ 5437. Committee Report at ¶ 12,625.

Arrangements Similar to Trusts

Background

The marital deduction is available for property passing to a surviving spouse who is not a U.S. citizen only if the property passes to the spouse in a qualified domestic trust (QDOT). Under prior law, the definition of a QDOT was limited to a trust that (1) required that at least one trustee of the trust be an individual citizen of the United States or a domestic corporation and (2) provided that no distributions could be made from the trust unless such trustee had the right to withhold the estate tax from such distribution. However, trusts are not authorized in some countries, particularly those governed by civil law. Accordingly, in those jurisdictions the marital deduction would not be available. In addition, in some countries trusts may not have U.S. trustees (see ¶ 237). Therefore, a trust established in such countries could not qualify as a QDOT.

QDOT rules for forms of ownership that are not trusts.—In order to permit the estate of a decedent with a nonresident alien spouse to qualify for the marital deduction in those situations where the use of a trust is prohibited, the Treasury Department is granted regulatory authority to treat as trusts legal arrangements that have substantially the same effect as a trust.

Planning Note. The House Committee Report anticipates that such regulations would permit a marital deduction only with respect to nontrust arrangements under which the United States would retain jurisdiction and adequate security to impose a U.S. transfer tax on transfers by the surviving spouse of the property transferred by the decedent. According to the Committee report, a closing agreement process under which the surviving spouse waives treaty benefits, allows the United States to retain jurisdiction and provides adequate security could be one such arrangement.

Effective date. This provision is effective for the estates of decedents dying after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1312(a), adding new Code Sec. 2056A(c)(3). Law at ¶ 5437. Committee Report at ¶ 12,670.

Waiver of requirement of U.S. trustee for QDOT.— In order to qualify for the marital deduction in those situations where a country prohibits a trust from having a U.S. trustee, the Treasury Department is granted regulatory authority to waive the requirement that a qualified domestic trust (QDOT) have a U.S. trustee.

Planning Note. The House Committee Report anticipates that such regulations, if any, would provide an alternative mechanism under which the United States would retain jurisdiction and adequate security to impose U.S. transfer tax on transfers by the surviving spouse of the property transferred by the decedent. A closing agreement process under which the surviving spouse waives treaty benefits, allows the U.S. to retain taxing jurisdiction, and provides adequate security with respect to the transfer tax could be one possible mechanism.

Effective date. This waiver provision is effective for the estates of decedents dying after August 5, 1997.

MARITAL DEDUCTION

Survivor Annuities

¶ 239

Background

Under the Retirement Equity Act of 1984 (P.L. 98-397), a qualified retirement plan was required to provide automatic survivor benefits in the form of either a qualified joint and survivor annuity or a preretirement survivor annuity. Thereafter, the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-514) repealed the estate tax exclusion for certain interests in qualified plans owned by a nonparticipating spouse that were attributable to community property laws. As a result, the transfer tax treatment of a nonparticipating spouse's interest in an annuity attributable to community property laws was unclear under prior law where the nonparticipating spouse predeceased the participating spouse.

Applicable exclusion amount.—In community property states, a nonparticipant spouse may be treated as having a vested community property interest in his or her participating spouse's qualified plan, individual retirement arrangement (IRA), or simplified employee pension (SEP) plan. Code Sec. 2056(b)(7)(C) clarifies that a nonparticipant spouse's survivorship interest in a participant spouse's qualified plan, IRA, or SEP that is attributable to community property laws may qualify for qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) treatment if the nonparticipant spouse predeceases the participant spouse.

Caution. The House Committee Report notes that this provision is not intended to create an inference regarding the treatment under present law of a transfer to a surviving spouse of the decedent spouse's community property interest in an annuity. The IRS has not yet issued regulations regarding how the requirement that a qualifying income interest must relate to a specific portion of QTIP property is to be applied to annuities of decedent's dying after October 24, 1992.

Effective date. This provision is effective for the estates of decedents dying after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1311(a), amending Code Sec. 2056(b)(7)(C). Law at ¶ 5435. Committee Report at ¶ 12,665.

Background

Under prior law, it was possible for a surviving spouse's estate to inadvertently waive its right to recover from the person receiving qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) any estate tax attributable to inclusion of the property in the surviving spouse's estate. This could happen by the use of certain testamentary language, such as a will provision specifying that all taxes shall be borne by the estate. In addition, the right of a decedent's estate to receive contribution for previously transferred property over which the decedent retained enjoyment or the right to income during life may have been waived by failure to include a specific reference to Code Sec. 2207B in a will or trust document.

Waiver must be specific.—The right of a surviving spouse's estate to recover any estate tax attributable to inclusion of qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) in the surviving spouse's estate from the person receiving the property will no longer be waived by a will provision specifying that all taxes shall be borne by the estate. In order to be effective, such a waiver must specifically refer to QTIP, the QTIP trust, Code Sec. 2044, or Code Sec. 2207A. Similarly, the right of a decedent's estate to receive contribution for previously transferred property over which the decedent retained enjoyment or the right to income during life is waived by a specific indication in a will or trust document. However, a specific reference to Code Sec. 2207B is no longer required.

Effective date. The provisions are effective with respect to estates of decedents dying after August 5, 1997.

GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER TAX

Deceased Parent Exception

Background

Generally, a transfer to a beneficiary at least two generations below that of the transferor is a generation-skipping transfer (GST) and is subject to the GST tax. Therefore, a transfer to a grandchild or persons assigned to a grandchild's generation or younger (a "skip person") is subject to the GST tax. Such a transfer is taxable if made outright, in trust, or in an arrangement similar to a trust.

In determining whether a transfer is a direct skip for purposes of the GST tax, a grandchild of the transferor, whose parent (the child of the transferor) is deceased, will be treated as if he or she were a child of the transferor. In other words, the grandchild, and all succeeding lineal descendants of the grandchild, are moved up a generation (Code Sec. 2612(c)(2)). For transfers occurring prior to January 1, 1998, the exception does not apply to taxable terminations or distributions in trust or to transfers to collateral heirs such as grandnieces or grandnephews.

Exception to GST tax for transfers to individuals with deceased parents.—The predeceased parent exception to the generation-skipping transfer (GST) tax is expanded to include collateral heirs, provided the transferor had no living lineal descendants at the time of the transfer. The exception is also extended to taxable terminations and distributions.

> Example (1). Andrew Turner, who has no living lineal descendants, transfers property to his grandniece Ellen. Ellen's father (Andrew's nephew) is deceased at the time of this transfer. The transfer is not subject to the GST tax.

> Example (2). Elizabeth Owen transfers property to a charitable lead annuity trust for a 10-year term, with the remainder going to Owen's grandson Todd. Todd's father (Elizabeth's son) is deceased at the time the trust was created and the transfer to the trust was subject to gift tax. The termination of the 10-year term would not be a taxable termination subject to the GST tax.

Effective date. The provisions are effective for terminations, distributions, and transfers occurring after December 31, 1997.

GIFT TAX

Gift Tax Filing for Gifts to Charity

¶ 253

Background

Under prior law, a gift tax return was required to be filed for any gift to a single donee in excess of $10,000 per year regardless of whether the gift qualified for a gift tax charitable deduction.

Filing requirement eliminated.—A donor who makes a gift to charity in excess of the annual gift tax exclusion is not required to file a gift tax return if the entire value of the donated property qualifies for a gift tax charitable deduction. This treatment extends to contributions of qualified conservation easements under Code Sec. 2522(d).

Caution. The elimination of the gift tax return filing requirement does not apply to gifts of partial interests.

Effective date. The provision is effective for gifts made after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1301, adding new Code Sec. 6019(3). Law at ¶ 5579. Committee Report at ¶ 12,615.

Background

Gifts made during life, in excess of the annual gift tax exclusion and not otherwise protected by the applicable marital or charitable deduction are subject to gift tax. A person's lifetime taxable gifts are also a taken into account when computing the federal estate tax. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, it was possible for the IRS to successfully argue that a decedent's lifetime taxable gifts be revalued in computing adjusted taxable gifts for estate tax purposes, even if the gift tax statute of limitations had expired and the gift had been adequately disclosed. This discrepancy created administrative and recordkeeping problems for estate administrators and fiduciaries.

Gifts may not be revalued for estate tax purposes after statute of limitations has run.—In computing adjusted taxable gifts for estate tax purposes, the IRS may not revalue gifts made during life if the gift tax statute of limitations has expired. However, in order for this provision to apply, the gift in question must have been adequately disclosed. Accordingly, the gift tax statute of limitations will not run with respect to a gift that is not adequately disclosed even if a gift tax return was filed for other transfers in the same year.

In addition, if the IRS issues a final notice of redetermination of value within the gift tax statute of limitations period, the affected taxpayer may challenge the IRS by filing a motion for declaratory judgment with the Tax Court within 90 days of the date the final notice was mailed. The statute of limitations will be tolled during the pendency of the declaratory judgment proceeding. According to the House Committee Report, it is expected that the IRS will also develop an administrative process to allow taxpayers to challenge a redetermination of value prior to the issuance of a final notice.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Sandy Schlesinger of Kaye, Scholer, Fierman, Hays & Handler, LLP, New York, points out that this provision would reverse the IRS's rulings (Rev. Rul. 84-11, 1984-1 C.B. 201; Technical Advice Memorandum 9718004) to the effect that the IRS has the ability to revalue gifts made during life for purposes of calculating the estate tax due at death. Given this change, taxpayers will be able to be certain that valuations claimed on gift tax returns which are no longer subject to the assessment of tax will not be increased by the IRS on an estate tax audit for purposes of calculating adjusted taxable gifts. This will serve to avoid subjecting an estate to higher estate tax rates. The statute is clear that the value of the gift must have been shown on a gift tax return or disclosed thereon or in a statement attached to the return or in a manner adequate to apprise as to the nature of the gift. In such a case, the value of the gift which is so disclosed may not be redetermined after the expiration of the statute of limitations period. Accordingly, a clear statement of value of an asset should be shown on a gift tax return. It should also be noted that the statutory change is effective only for gifts made after August 5, 1997.

Effective date. The provisions pertaining to revaluation of gifts and declaratory judgments are effective with respect to gifts made after August 5, 1997. The provision requiring adequate disclosure before the statute of limitations begins to run is effective with respect to gifts made in calendar years ending after August 5, 1997.

INCOME TAXATION OF ESTATES AND BENEFICIARIES

Revocable Trusts

¶ 261

Background

Revocable trusts are often used as estate planning devices for reasons that include the avoidance of probate, privacy concerns, or the management of assets in case of incapacity. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, revocable trusts were not accorded equal treatment with a decedent's estate for federal income tax purposes under several provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. This dichotomy served to discourage the use of revocable trusts in certain circumstances.

Revocable trusts to be treated as part of estate.—An election is provided to treat a qualified revocable trust as part of a decedent's estate for federal income tax purposes. The election is effective for two years from the date of the decedent's death, if no federal estate tax return is required to be filed, or, six months after the final determination of estate tax liability, in a case in which a federal estate tax return is required. The election is irrevocable and must be made by both the trustee of the revocable trust and the executor of the decedent's estate, if any, by the due date for filing the estate's income tax return for its first tax year (including extensions). In addition, to provide comparable treatment under the generation-skipping transfer (GST) tax, the definition of a trust for GST tax purposes is modified.

> Example. The trustee of Alice Howe's revocable trust and the executor of her estate make a timely election to treat Howe's revocable trust as part of her estate for income tax purposes pursuant to new Code Sec. 646. Accordingly, the revocable trust is accorded certain income tax treatment that previously would have been available only to a decedent's estate. For example, (1) the trust would be entitled to a charitable deduction for any amount permanently set aside for charity without the requirement that such amount actually be paid first (Code Sec. 642(c)); (2) the active participation requirement under the passive loss rules is waived for two years after Howe's death pursuant to Code Sec. 469(i)(4); and (3) the trust can qualify for amortization or reforestation expenditures under Code Sec. 194(b)(4).

Caution. In order to be a qualified revocable trust the trust must be one that was treated as owned by the decedent as a result of a power held by him or her. A trust treated as owned by the decedent solely because of a power held by a nonadverse party would not qualify.

Effective date. These provisions are effective with respect to estates of decedents dying after August 5, 1997.

Background

For tax years beginning on or before the date of enactment of the Tax Relief Act of 1997 (August 5, 1997), a decedent's estate was restricted in the treatment of distributions to beneficiaries made after the close of its tax year. On the other hand, a trust was able to treat such distributions made within 65 days after the close of its tax year as if they were made on the last day of the tax year. Because both trusts and estates are used as conduit devices, this difference in income tax treatment was considered unwarranted.

Sixty-five-day rule applicable to estates.—A decedent's estate may elect to treat distributions made within 65 days after the close of its tax year as if they were made on the last day of the tax year. Thus, the same income tax rule applicable to trusts is now applicable to estates.

Effective date. The provision is effective with respect to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1306, amending Code Sec. 663(b). Law at ¶ 5201. Committee Report at ¶ 12,640.

Separate Share Rule

Background

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, a decedent's estate could not be divided into separate shares for income tax purposes, even if separate economic interests were created in one beneficiary or class of beneficiaries that were not affected by the economic interests accruing to other beneficiaries or classes of beneficiaries.

Separate share rule applicable to estates.—If, under a decedent's will and applicable state law, separate economic interests are created in one beneficiary or class of beneficiaries that are not affected by economic interests accruing to other beneficiaries or classes of beneficiaries, the separate share rule will apply to the decedent's estate.

> Example. Under the will of Ted Toyner and applicable state law, all of the shares of Toyner Enterprises, a closely held corporation, are to go to Ted's daughter, Emily. In addition, all of the dividends paid to the estate from the Toyner Enterprises stock are to be paid only to Emily and the payment of these dividends does not affect any other amounts that Emily is entitled to receive under the will. The separate share rule would apply in this instance.

Caution. According to the House Committee Report, application of the separate share rule to an estate is not elective. As in the case of a trust, such treatment is mandatory if separate shares exist.

Effective date. The provision is effective with respect to estates of decedents dying after August 5, 1997.

Definition of Related Persons

Background

Before the date of enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, neither Code Sec. 267 nor Code Sec. 1239 treated an executor of an estate and the beneficiary of the estate as related persons. As a result, the Code Sec. 267 provision that disallows an income tax deduction for any loss on the sale of an asset to a person related to the taxpayer did not apply to the sale of property between an executor of an estate and a beneficiary of the estate. Similarly, although the Code Sec. 1239 disallowance of capital gains treatment on the sale of depreciable property to a related person applies to a sale between a trust and the beneficiary of the trust, the provision did not apply to the sale of property between the executor of an estate and a beneficiary of the estate.

Estate and beneficiary.—An estate and a beneficiary of an estate are treated as related persons for purposes of the disallowance of a loss on the sale of an asset to a related person under Code Sec. 267 and the disallowance of capital gain treatment on the sale of depreciable property to a related person under Code Sec.

1239. This rule does not apply, however, in the case of a sale or exchange in satisfaction of a pecuniary bequest.

Effective date. The definition of related persons is effective for tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Consistency Requirement for Beneficiaries

Background

Fiduciaries of domestic trusts and estates are required to furnish beneficiaries with certain information shown on the trust or estate tax return, generally via a Form 1041, Schedule K-1. In addition, a person who is treated as the owner of any portion of a foreign trust is required to ensure that the trust files a return and furnishes certain required information to each U.S. person who is treated as an owner of a portion of the trust, or who receives a distribution from the trust. However, unlike S corporation shareholders or partners, under prior law, trust and estate beneficiaries were not under a duty to file their returns in a manner consistent with the information received from the trust or estate.

Beneficiaries of trusts and estates subject to consistency reporting requirements.—Beneficiaries of an estate or trust must file their returns in a manner consistent with the manner reported on the trust or estate's return or must file a notice of inconsistent treatment with the Secretary of the Treasury that identifies the inconsistent items. Generally, a beneficiary who files a return in accordance with the information received from the estate or trust can elect to be treated as having complied with this consistency requirement. It appears that a beneficiary is also required to file a notice of inconsistent treatment when the entity does not file a return; however, the new law does not indicate what information to include in such a notice.

Caution. If a beneficiary fails to comply with these consistency requirements, any adjustment necessary in order to make the treatment of the items by the beneficiary consistent with the treatment of the items on the entity's return will be treated as a mathematical or clerical error that is subject to summary assessment procedures. Also, the negligence penalty may apply.

Foreign trusts. The return of a U.S. person who is treated as the owner of a foreign trust must be consistent with the information reported by the trust.

Effective date. These consistency requirements apply to returns of beneficiaries and owners filed after August 5, 1997.

TRUSTS

Throwback Rules for Domestic Trusts

¶ 275

Background

Income that is accumulated in a nongrantor trust is taxed at the trust's separate rate schedule. Although, at one time, it was possible to use multiple trusts to successfully shift income from the trusts' beneficiaries to the trusts, this practice was curtailed by the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 (P.L. 98-369). Similarly, relatively compressed tax rates currently applicable to income accumulated in a trust make income shifting techniques less attractive than they once were. However, prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the so-called throwback rules still required that distributions that were previously accumulated and taxed in a trust be included in a trust beneficiary's income if the beneficiary's top average marginal tax rate during the previous five years was higher than that of the trust. In addition, a separate rule required that any gain on the sale of appreciated property contributed to a trust that was sold within two years of its contribution being taxed at the contributor's marginal tax rates.

Throwback rules repealed.—The throwback rules no longer apply to domestic trusts. The rules required that distributions that were previously accumulated in a trust be included in a trust beneficiary's income if the beneficiary's top average marginal tax rate in the previous five years was higher than that of the trust. In addition, the rule that required that any gain on the sale of appreciated property contributed to a trust be taxed at the contributor's marginal tax rates if the property were sold within two years of its contribution is repealed.

Planning Note. The compressed tax rates currently applicable to income accumulated in a trust (for 1997, the 39.6-percent rate applies to taxable income in excess of $8,100) discourage strategies that attempt to use trusts as a means of shifting income away from the trust's beneficiaries. Having otherwise negated these tax avoidance techniques, elimination of the throwback rules and the rule on trusts selling appreciated assets should simplify trust tax preparation.

Caution. The repeal of the throwback rules does not apply to trusts created before March 1, 1984, that would be treated as multiple trusts under Code Sec. 643(f). Nor does the repeal apply to foreign trusts or to domestic trusts that were once treated as foreign trusts (except as provided in regulations).

Effective date. The provision repealing the throwback rules is effective with respect to distributions made in tax years beginning after August 5, 1997. The provision eliminating the rule on the sale of appreciated property contributed to a trust is effective with respect to sales or exchanges occurring after August 5, 1997.

Charitable Remainder Trusts

Background

In general, no charitable deduction is allowed when a donor transfers property to charity while retaining an interest in that property (e.g., an income interest) or transferring an interest in that property for less than full and adequate consideration. An important exception to this rule is made for charitable remainder trusts.

There are two kinds of charitable remainder trusts, a charitable remainder annuity trust (CRAT) and a charitable remainder unitrust (CRUT). A CRAT is a trust that is required to pay, at least annually, a fixed dollar amount equal to at least five percent of the initial value of the trust assets to a noncharitable beneficiary for the life of an individual or for a term of years (not to exceed 20 years). A CRUT is similar except that the amount of the annual payments is a fixed percentage of the trust assets, valued annually.

The character of distributions from a charitable remainder trust is determined according to the following ordering rule:

(1) as ordinary income to the extent of the trust's current and previously undistributed ordinary income for the trust year in which the distribution occurred;

(2) as capital gain to the extent of the capital gain of the trust for the year and the undistributed capital gain of the trust for prior years;

(3) as other income (e.g., tax-exempt income) to the extent of such income of the trust for the year and such undistributed income of the trust for prior years; and

(4) as a distribution of trust corpus.

Distributions are includible in the income of the beneficiary for the year that the annuity or unitrust payment is required to be distributed, even though the annuity or unitrust payment is not made until the end of the trust's tax year.

Under prior law, a literal reading of these provisions led to accelerated charitable remainder trusts being used to convert appreciated assets into cash while avoiding most of the tax on the appreciation. For example, some taxpayers created CRUTs with an annual payout rate of 80 percent and funded them with highly appreciated assets that produce no income. In addition, the trust would make no distribution in Year 1, but would sell all the trust assets at the beginning of Year 2. The proceeds from this sale would then be used to pay the required distribution for the previous year. These taxpayers treated this distribution of 80 percent of the trust assets as a nontaxable distribution of trust corpus under the ordering rule because the trust did not realize any income during its first year.

> Example. May Dodge transfers assets with a fair market value of $1,000,000 and a basis of $0 to a charitable remainder unitrust (CRUT) on January 1, 1995. The assets pay no income, and the trust term is two years. The annual unitrust payout is set at 80 percent of the fair market value of the trust assets valued annually.
> The required payout for 1995 is $800,000 (.8 × $1,000,000). However, no actual payment is made to Dodge during 1995. At the beginning of 1996, all the assets are sold for $1,000,000 and the 1995 unitrust payout amount

Background

($800,000) is distributed to Dodge on January 2, 1996. In 1996, the unitrust payout amount is $160,000 (.8 × the $200,000 remaining in the trust). At the end of 1996, the trust terminates and $40,000 is paid to a qualified charitable organization.

Proponents of the technique argued that the transaction should receive extremely favorable tax treatment under the ordering rules of Code Sec. 664(b). Under this interpretation, distributions are includible in the recipient's income for the year that the payment is required to be made even though the distribution is not made until the following year. As a result, the $800,000 distribution on January 2, 1996 is treated as a nontaxable distribution of corpus because the trust had no ordinary income, capital gain or other income in 1995.

The $160,000 unitrust payout for 1996 would be characterized as capital gain. The tax on this amount would be $44,800 (.28 × $160,000). This would leave the donor with $915,200, $800,000 from 1995 and $115,200 ($160,000 − $44,800) from 1996. Note that if Dodge had sold the property instead, she would have paid tax of $280,000 on the $1,000,000 capital gain, leaving $720,000. By using the high-payout CRUT, the donor is left with $195,200 more ($915,200 − $720,000).

On April 18, 1997, the IRS proposed regulations under Code Secs. 664 and 2702 to address the type of abuse described above and other perceived abuses involving charitable remainder trusts. The regulations included a rule that would require that payment of any required annuity or unitrust amount by a charitable remainder trust be made by the close of the year in which the payment is due.

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the minimum annual payout percentage for a charitable remainder trust was five percent, however, there was no maximum payout percentage. In addition, there was no minimum actuarial value for the remainder interest.

New payout and value of remainder interest requirements.— The Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 imposes new restrictions on charitable remainder trusts. The Act requires that a charitable remainder trust cannot have a maximum payout percentage in excess of 50 percent of the trust's fair market value. In addition, the Act requires that the value of the charitable remainder be at least 10 percent of the net fair market value of property transferred in trust on the date of contribution to the trust.

Percentage payout limitation. A trust will not qualify as a charitable remainder trust if the annual payout exceeds 50 percent. In the case of a charitable remainder annuity trust (CRAT), this means that the annual payout cannot exceed 50 percent of the initial fair market value of the trust's assets. In the case of a charitable remainder unitrust (CRUT), it means that the annual payout cannot exceed 50 percent of the fair market value of the trust assets determined annually. According to the Senate Committee Report, trusts failing this 50-percent test will be treated as complex trusts rather than charitable remainder trusts, and, as a result, all of their income will be taxed to the beneficiaries of the trust.

Minimum charitable benefit. A new 10-percent minimum value requirement is also imposed on charitable remainder trusts. In the case of a CRAT, the value of the remainder interest must be at least 10-percent of the initial fair market value of all property placed in the trust. In the case of a CRUT, the 10 percent minimum applies with respect to each contribution of property to the trust (note that additional deductible gifts may be made to a CRUT under Reg. § 1.664-3(b)). There are several special provisions designed to provide relief for trusts that do not meet the 10-percent test.

Voiding or reformation of trust. A trust that would qualify as a charitable remainder trust but for failure to meet the minimum value test may be declared void ab initio or reformed to bring the value of the remainder interest up to, or above, the 10-percent requirement. If the trust is declared void ab initio, no income tax deduction would be allowed for any transfer to the trust, and any transaction entered into by the trust before it was declared void is treated as entered into by the transferor. For example, income earned on the assets transferred to the trust and capital gains generated by sales of the property transferred would be income and capital gain of the donor, and the donor would not be permitted a charitable deduction with respect to the transfer. The Conference Committee Report states that the statute of limitations applicable to a deficiency of any tax resulting from reformation of the trust will not expire until the date that is one year after the IRS is notified that the trust has been revoked.

The value of the remainder interest can be increased so that it satisfies the 10-percent test by either reducing the payout percentage or shortening the term (or both).

> Example. Bob Smith (age 60) transfers $1,000,000 to a CRAT, while retaining an 11 percent annuity for 15 years. The applicable Code Sec. 7520 rate is 8 percent. Under this scenario, the actuarial value of the remainder interest is $58,455. Because this is only 5.8 percent of the initial fair market value of the trust assets, the CRAT would fail the 10-percent test. If the payout percentage is reduced to 10 percent ($100,000 per year), however, the value of the remainder interest increases to $144,050, enabling the trust to pass the test. The trust term could also be decreased to allow the trust to satisfy the 10-percent test. For instance, if the trust term was reduced to 10 years, the value of the remainder interest would increase to $261,889.

A reformation made to allow the trust to satisfy the 10 percent test would have to be commenced within the period specified in Code Sec. 2055(e)(3)(C)(iii). Thus, the reformation would have to be made no later than the 90th day after the last date (including extensions) for filing the estate tax return, or if no estate tax return was required to be filed, the last date (including extensions) for filing the income tax return for the first tax year for which such return is required to be filed by the trust. The Conference Committee Report states that the statute of limitations applicable to a deficiency of any tax resulting from reformation of the trust will not expire before the date one year after the IRS is notified that the trust has been reformed.

Additional contributions to a unitrust. If an additional contribution is made to a trust that, before the contribution was a charitable remainder unitrust, and the contribution would have the effect of causing the trust to violate the 10-percent rule, such contribution will be treated as a transfer to a separate trust under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary. As a result, such transfer does not affect the status of the original trust as a charitable remainder unitrust.

Effective date. The 50-percent maximum payout limitation applies to transfers in trust after June 18, 1997. The 10-percent limitation on the minimum value of the remainder interest generally applies to transfers in trust after July 28, 1997.

Under a special rule, however, the 10 percent rule will not apply to transfers in trust under the terms of a will or other testamentary instrument executed on or before July 28, 1997, if the decedent (1) dies before January 1, 1999 without having republished the will or amending it by codicil or otherwise or (2) was, on July 28, 1997, under a mental disability to change the disposition of the property and did not regain competency before dying.

Act Sec. 1089(a), amending Code Secs. 664(d)(1)(A) and (2)(A); Act Sec. 1089(b), adding Code Secs. 664(d)(1)(D) and (2)(D), and 2055(e)(3)(J) and amending Code Sec. 2055(e)(3)(G). Law at ¶ 5203 and 5433. Committee Report at ¶ 11,555.

Background

An employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) is a defined contribution plan in the form of a qualified stock bonus plan or a combination stock bonus and money purchase pension plan that is designed to invest primarily in qualifying employer securities for the benefit of employees.

A federal estate tax charitable deduction is allowed for the value of property transfers by a decedent for public, scientific, literary, educational, charitable, or religious purposes. The property for which the deduction is taken must be includible in the decedent's gross estate. If property is transferred for both charitable and noncharitable purposes in a charitable remainder trust, the trust must satisfy the requirements for a charitable remainder annuity trust (CRAT) or a charitable remainder unitrust (CRUT). A CRAT is a trust from which a sum certain or a specified amount, but not less than five percent, of the initial fair market value of the property placed in the trust is paid to the income beneficiary or beneficiaries at least annually. A CRUT is a trust that specifies that the income beneficiary or beneficiaries are to receive annual payments of a fixed percentage, but not less than five percent, of the net fair market value of the trust's assets, valued annually. A CRAT and a CRUT cannot have a noncharitable remainder beneficiary if a deduction is to result. Under prior law, a transfer of a remainder interest in property to an ESOP did not qualify for an estate tax charitable deduction.

Transfers by charitable remainder trusts to ESOPs.—In order to encourage certain transfers of stock to employee stock option plans (ESOPs), a charitable remainder trust may make certain limited transfers of qualified employee securities to an ESOP without adversely affecting the status of the charitable remainder trust under Code Sec. 664. Therefore, a qualified gratuitous transfer of employer securities to an ESOP is deductible from a decedent's gross estate under Code Sec. 2055 to the extent of the present value of the remainder interest in a charitable remainder annuity trust (CRAT) or a charitable remainder unitrust (CRUT).

Qualified gratuitous transfers. A transfer of qualified employee securities to an ESOP is a "qualified gratuitous transfer" if the following requirements are satisfied:

(1) the securities transferred previously passed to a CRAT or a CRUT from a decedent dying before January 1, 1999;

(2) the decedent and members of his or her family owned no more than 10 percent of the value of the outstanding stock of the company, directly or indirectly, at the time of the transfer to the ESOP;

(3) the ESOP owns at least 60 percent of the value of outstanding stock of the company immediately after the transfer to the ESOP;

(4) the ESOP was in existence on August 1, 1996;

(5) the employer consents to the application of the excise tax imposed by Code Sec. 4978 upon certain dispositions of securities by ESOPs and by Code Sec. 4979A upon certain prohibited allocations of qualified securities;

(6) no deduction under Code Sec. 404 is allowable with respect to the transfer; and

(7) the ESOP meets the requirements discussed below.

Plan requirements. In order for a transfer to qualify as a gratuitous transfer, the ESOP must not discriminate in favor of highly paid employees and must provide:

(1) that the plan participants are entitled to direct the manner in which securities transferred and allocated to such participants are to be voted;

(2) for an independent trustee (i.e., a trustee that is not a five-percent owner of the company or a family member of the decedent) to vote securities transferred that are not allocated to plan participants;

(3) that participants have the right to receive distributions in the form of stock and that the participants can require the employer to repurchase any shares distributed under a fair valuation formula (i.e., a formula that does not take into account a discount for minority interests); and

(4) that if the plan is terminated before all the transferred stock has been allocated, the remaining stock is to be transferred to one or more charitable organizations.

Qualified employer securities. "Qualified employer securities" means employer securities, as defined by Code Sec. 409(l), which are issued by a domestic corporation (1) that has no outstanding stock that is readily tradable on an established securities market and (2) that has only one class of stock.

Treatment of transferred securities and allocation rules. The ESOP must treat the transferred securities as employer securities, except for purposes of determining the amount of deductible contributions to the plan otherwise permitted by the employee. In addition, the ESOP is required to allocate the transferred securities up to the Code Sec. 415 limit on contributions and benefits after allocating any other employer contributions for the year. Any of the transferred securities that can not be allocated because of the Code Sec. 415 limits must be held in a suspense account and allocated in the same manner in subsequent years.

If any of the securities transferred to an ESOP by a CRAT or CRUT are allocated to the account of (1) any person related to the decedent or members of the decedent's family or (2) any employee owning more than five percent of any class of outstanding stock of the corporation issuing the securities or the total value of any class of outstanding stock of such corporation, the ESOP shall be treated as having distributed to such person or shareholder the amount so allocated. A person is treated as related to the decedent within the meaning of Code Sec. 267(b). Family members are persons related to the decedent within the meaning of Code Sec. 2032A(e)(2).

If unallocated securities are not transferred to a Code Sec. 170(c) charitable organization as required, a tax is imposed on the employer maintaining the plan equal to the sum of (1) the amount of the increase in estate tax that would have occurred if such securities had not been transferred to the ESOP and (2) interest on such amount at the underpayment rate from the due date for filing the estate tax return.

Effective date. These amendments are effective for transfers made by trusts to, or for the use of, an employee stock ownership plan after August 5, 1997.

Background

A funeral trust is an arrangement whereby an individual purchases funeral services or merchandise from a funeral home prior to his or her death. The payment amount is held in trust and paid to the seller upon the individual's death. Under prior law, a pre-need funeral trust was generally treated as a grantor trust and the annual income earned by the trust was taxed to the purchaser/grantor of the trustee.

Taxation of earnings of pre-need funeral trusts.—If a trustee elects special tax treatment, a pre-need qualified funeral trust is not treated as a grantor trust and the tax on the annual earnings of the trust is payable by the trustee. If the election is made, the Code Sec. 1(e) income tax rate schedule generally applicable to estates and trusts is applied to the trust by treating each beneficiary's interest as a separate trust. However, the trust is not entitled to a Code Sec. 642(b) personal exemption in calculating the tax. The trustee's election must be made separately for each purchaser's trust. No gain or loss is recognized to a purchaser of a pre-need funeral trust contract as a result of any payment from the trust to the purchaser due to the cancellation of the contract.

Qualified funeral trust. A trust is a qualified funeral trust if it meets the following requirements:

(1) the trust arises as the result of a contract with a person engaged in the trade or business of providing funeral or burial services or property necessary to provide such services;

(2) the sole purpose of the trust is to hold, invest, and reinvest the trust funds and to use the funds solely to make payments for such services or property for the beneficiaries of the trust;

(3) the only beneficiaries of the trust are the individuals with respect to whom such services or property are to be provided at their death under the contract;

(4) the only contributions to the trust are contributions by or for the benefit of the trust's beneficiaries; and

(5) the trust has not accepted aggregate contributions by or for the benefit of any individual in excess of $7,000. The $7,000 limit is indexed for inflation for contracts entered into after 1998.

These provisions apply to contracts purchased by one individual to have funeral and burial services or merchandise provided for another individual upon that individual's death, to the extent that such trust would otherwise be treated as a grantor trust.

For purposes of the funding limitation, all trusts having trustees that are related persons are treated as one trust.

Effective date. The special treatment of funeral trusts is effective for tax years ending after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1309, adding new Code Sec. 685. Law at ¶ 5213. Committee Report at ¶ 12,655.

Chapter 3

Business and Investment

CAPITAL GAINS AND LOSSES

Individual Capital Gains Rate

¶ 301

Background

Under prior law, the maximum tax rate on an individual's net long-term capital gain was 28 percent. If the individual's maximum tax rate was less than 28 percent (e.g., 15 percent), then this lower tax rate would be applied to the individual's net long-term capital gain. In addition, prior law provided that if the individual held the property more than 12 months, any gain or loss from the sale or exchange would be treated as long-term.

Revised holding periods and tax rates for long-term capital gains.—The holding periods for long-term capital assets have generally been increased and the tax rates for long-term capital gains have been reduced. The exact holding period to be applied and the tax rate to be used depends upon when the asset was sold or exchanged. The new holding periods are discussed at ¶ 302 and the new tax rates are discussed at ¶ 303.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years ending after May 6, 1997.

Act Sec. 311(a), amending Code Sec. 1(h); Act Sec. 311(d). Law at ¶ 5001. Committee Report at ¶ 10,295.

Holding Period for Long-Term Capital Assets

New holding period for long-term capital assets.—Generally, for sales and exchanges after July 28, 1997, the long-term capital gains rates will only apply if the taxpayer holds the asset more than 18 months. Special low rates for assets held more than five years go into effect after December 31, 2000.

Planning Note. In determining how long an asset was held, the taxpayer begins counting on the date after the day the property was acquired. The same date of each following month is the beginning of a new month regardless of the number of days in the preceding month. For example, if property was acquired on February 1, 1997, the taxpayer's holding period began on February 2, 1997. The date the asset is disposed of is part of the holding period.

Holding period for capital assets sold before July 29, 1997. If an individual sold a capital asset before July 29, 1997, the individual must have held the asset more than 12 months in order for the long-term capital gains rates to apply.

Holding period for capital assets sold after July 28, 1997. If an individual sells a capital asset after July 28, 1997, the individual must have owned the asset more than 18 months in order for the long-term capital gains rate to apply.

Planning Note. A 28-percent maximum tax rate applies to assets sold after July 28, 1997, that were held more than 12 months and not more than 18 months. If the individual is in the 15-percent tax bracket, the 15-percent tax rate will apply. See ¶ 303 for a complete discussion on the new tax rates for long-term capital gains.

Holding period for assets sold after December 31, 2000. The 18-month holding period still applies for assets sold after December 31, 2000. However, if the asset was held more than five years, the individual will generally be entitled to a long-term rate that is lower than the normal long-term rate. These rules are illustrated and discussed in detail at ¶ 303.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years ending after May 6, 1997.

Tax Rates for Long-Term Capital Assets

New tax rates for long-term capital gains.—Generally, for sales of long-term capital assets after May 6, 1997, the maximum capital gains rate is 20 percent (10 percent for individuals in the 15-percent tax bracket). Generally, a special lower rate of 18 percent (8 percent for individuals in a 15-percent tax bracket) applies to transactions after December 31, 2000 when the asset was held more than five years. These rules are discussed in detail in the following material.

Planning Note. The lower capital gains rate applies not only to individuals, but also to estates and trusts. In addition, the lower rate would apply when the taxpayer is determining the regular income tax, as well as the alternative minimum tax.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Martin Nissenbaum, National Director of Personal Income Tax Planning for Ernst & Young LLP, New York, New York, observes that the failure to coordinate the new capital gains rules with other provisions of the Code may lead to unanticipated results for some taxpayers. For example, although the 20-percent comparable capital gains rate for alternative minimum tax (AMT) would appear to be the same as that for ordinary income tax purposes, it does not necessarily result in equal treatment in all cases. Thus, a person with $1 million in taxable long-term gains who paid $100,000 in state and local taxes attributable to those gains may end up paying 20 percent on the entire $1 million and lose the benefit of the deduction that would otherwise flow from the payment of state and local taxes. Mr. Nissenbaum suggests that taxpayers should, if possible, attempt to postpone or accelerate payments for state and local taxes on capital gains into years when they are not subject to the AMT.

A similar problem is presented with respect to incentive stock options (ISOs). For AMT purposes, stock acquired by exercise of an ISO is treated as though it were taxable under the Code Sec. 83 rules governing taxation of property given for services rather than under the Code Sec. 421 rules that govern ISOs for regular income tax purposes. Under the Code Sec. 83 rules, the difference between the value of ISO stock and the price paid for it by the employee upon exercise is includible in AMT when the stock is freely transferable or not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture. No AMT adjustment is necessary if the exercise of an ISO and the disposition of the stock acquired occur within the same tax year. However, the effect of the new capital gains rates on a taxpayer with ISO adjustments who is subject to the AMT is to force accelerated payment at the higher AMT rate rather than the lower rate which would apply when the stock is ultimately sold.

On the brighter side, Mr. Nissenbaum notes that in some situations the failure to coordinate changes in the capital gains rules with other Code provisions may work to a taxpayer's advantage. For example, under the new rules, appreciated property held by a taxpayer for more than 12 months, but less than 18 months, would qualify for an income tax charitable deduction based on fair market value even though gain on the sale of the property would have been taxed at the 28-percent mid-term rate rather than at the 20-percent long-term rate. This result occurs because the new law did not change the definition of long-term property for purposes of the deduction for charitable contributions provided under Code Sec. 170.

Caution. The lower rate applies only to sales or exchanges after May 6, 1997. Thus, if a taxpayer's tax year includes sales or exchanges before May 7, 1997, the taxpayer must determine net capital gain for the period prior to May 7, 1997 and for the period after May 6, 1997. The maximum capital gains rate of 28 percent applies to the net capital gains recognized before May 7, 1997.

Planning Note. Even though the lower rate applies to net capital gain for sales and exchanges after May 6, 1997, the legislative history of this provision states that the lower rate applies to installment payments received on or after May 7, 1997. In addition, if a taxpayer elects to treat any amount of net capital gain as investment interest (i.e., the election allowed under Code Sec. 163(d)(4)(B)(iii)), then that amount is subtracted from the total net capital gain in order to determine the amount subject to the maximum capital gains rate.

Long-term capital gains rates for assets sold after May 6, 1997. When an individual has a net long-term capital gain on an asset sold after May 6, 1997, the maximum long-term capital gains rate is 20 percent (10 percent, if the individual is in a 15-percent tax bracket).

Planning Note. Remember, when applying this new long-term rate, that the holding period for long-term assets changed effective for sales after July 28, 1997. For sales through July 28, 1997, the long-term holding period was met if the individual held the asset more than 12 months. For sales on or after July 29, 1997, the long-term holding period was increased to more than 18 months. However, a special relief provision prevents individuals from paying tax on their gains at a rate higher than they would have if the law had not been changed. See the Examples below for illustrations of how these new rules are applied.

Example (1). On May 8, 1997, John Aubrey sold 10 shares of Gizmo Inc. for $1,000. Aubrey had purchased the shares on January 6, 1996, for $400. If Aubrey is in a 28%, 31%, 36%, or 39.6% marginal tax bracket, he will compute his tax on his $600 of long-term gain by using the long-term rate of 20%. If he is in a 15% marginal tax bracket, he will apply a long-term rate of 10%.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in Example 1, except that Aubrey sold the shares on May 6, 1997. In this situation, he is not entitled to use the new long-term rate of 20% (or 10%) because he did not sell the stock after May 6, 1997. However, because he held the stock for more than 12 months, the former maximum long-term capital gains rate of 28% will be applied against his $600 gain (15% tax rate, if he is in a 15% tax bracket).

Special rates for assets sold after July 28, 1997 that were not held more than 18 months. The determination of the tax rate to be used for computing gain on the sale of assets sold after July 29, 1997, is made more complicated because the new law changed the long-term holding period for assets sold after July 28, 1997. The long-term holding period was increased from "more than 12 months" to "more than 18 months." In determining the tax rate to be applied to the individual's gain on assets sold after July 28, 1997, the following rules should be applied:

(1) If the asset was held 12 months or less, the capital gain is treated as short-term capital gain and taxed as ordinary income.

(2) If the asset was held more than 18 months, the capital gain is treated as long-term capital gain and taxed at the new maximum rate of 20 percent (10 percent, if the individual is in the 15-percent bracket).

(3) If the asset was held more than 12 months but not more than 18 months, the gain is taxed at the former maximum long-term capital gains rate of 28 percent (15 percent if the individual is in a 15-percent tax bracket).

Example (3). On August 1, 1997, Betty Green, who is in a 39.6% marginal tax bracket, sold 100 shares of stock and recognized a net capital gain of $1,000. She had held the stock 15 months. The maximum capital gains rate of 20% does not apply because she sold the stock after July 28, 1997 and she did not hold it for more than 18 months. However, the gain is not taxed at her ordinary income tax rate of 39.6%. Instead, she may apply the former maximum capital gains rate of 28% in order to compute her tax. (If she was in the 15% tax bracket, her tax would be computed by using the 15% rate, not the new 10% rate.)

Planning Note. The Code refers to gain realized after July 28, 1997, from property held more than 12 months but not more than 18 months, as "mid-term gain." It is a term and concept that will play an important part in the computation of an individual's capital gains tax over the next few years.

Long-term capital gains rate for tax years beginning after December 31, 2000. In general, the new capital gains rates of 20 percent or 10 percent will continue to apply after December 31, 2000, provided the regular long-term holding period has been met (i.e., more than 18 months). However, a lower capital gains rate of 18 percent (8 percent for individuals in a 15-percent tax bracket) may be applied if the individual held the asset more than five years.

Planning Note. Another complication is added under the new law because the date that the five-year holding period starts is different for individuals in a 15-percent tax bracket than for individuals in higher brackets. The following rules should be applied in order to determine when the five year holding period begins:

(1) If the individual is in a tax bracket that is higher than 15 percent, the five-year holding period only applies to assets acquired after December 31, 2000. (However, a special election allows these individuals to treat prior acquired assets as acquired on January 1, 2001. See "Special election for capital assets acquired in tax years beginning before January 1, 2001," below.)

(2) If the individual is in a 15-percent tax bracket, the asset does not have to be acquired after December 31, 2000 in order to have the five year period begin.

These rules are illustrated in the Examples below.

Example (4). Bob Bailey is in a 39.6% tax bracket. On January 2, 2001, he purchased 10 shares of stock in Azor Inc. If he holds the stock more than five years and sells it at a gain, his net long-term capital gain will be taxed at a maximum rate of 18%. Conversely, if he holds the stock for more 18 months but not more than five years, his gain will be subject to the maximum capital gains rate of 20%.

Example (5). Jane Smith is in a 15% tax bracket. In 1998, she purchases 100 shares of stock. If she holds the stock more than five years, she may compute her capital gains tax by using the special 8% rate. Because she is in the 15% tax bracket, she did not have to acquire the stock after December 31, 2000, in order to have the five-year holding period apply. Conversely, if she holds the stock more than 18 months but not more than five years, her maximum capital gains rate will be 10%.

Planning Note. In determining when the five-year holding period begins, the Code provides that, if property was acquired under an option or other right to acquire property, the five-year period includes the period of the option.

Special election for capital assets acquired in tax years beginning before January 1, 2001. As a general rule, an individual in a marginal tax bracket higher than 15 percent must acquire an asset after December 31, 2000, in order to have the special lower capital gains rate for five-year property apply to the gain from the asset. However, these individuals may make a special election to treat pre-January 1, 2001, property as being acquired on January 1, 2001, and, thus, make the property eligible for the five-year holding period rule. In order to make the election, the individual must treat the asset as if it were sold on January 1, 2001, (or the next business day) at its fair market value. Any income tax due on the gain from this deemed sale of the asset must be paid. However, if the individual would realize a loss from this deemed sale, the loss is not recognized.

Planning Note. Individuals who want to take advantage of this election may have it apply to readily tradable stock, any other capital asset, and certain property used in the taxpayer's trade or business (i.e., business property defined in Code Sec. 1231(b)).

Example (6). Max Brand is in a 28% tax bracket. He purchases 10 shares of Binnacle Inc. in 1998 for $1,000. He still owns the shares on January 1, 2001. He plans on holding the stock for a few more years and wants to take advantage of the 18% special long-term rate when he sells the stock. He may elect to treat the stock as if he sold it on the next business day and pay any resulting tax. Assume that the stock had a fair market value of $1,500 on January 2, 2001. Max would pay the tax on his deemed $500 gain when he filed his tax return for 2001. His five-year holding period would begin and his basis in the stock would now be $1,500.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Tim Kochis, President, Kochis Fitz Tracy & Gorman, Inc., San Francisco, California, observes that the reduced tax liability on long-term capital gains is likely to have several distinct and far-reaching impacts. Just a few of these will be on individuals' investment decisions, on use of tax-deferred programs such as IRAs and qualified and nonqualified deferred compensation plans, on the design of executive compensation programs, as well as on the relative attractiveness of certain charitable contribution structures.

First, the existing preference for investments that produce returns primarily in the form of capital appreciation, instead of dividends or interest, is greatly increased. Markets could suffer a modest decline in the short term, as pent-up asset value growth in stock portfolios and residential real estate hits the market in an initial selling wave. Nevertheless, the long-term benefits of growth-oriented investments have substantially increased as the tax burden has declined—relative both to what it had been and especially relative to the tax on the alternative form of investment return. This should bode well for equity market performance for the foreseeable future and should further the trend away from distribution of corporate earnings as dividends in favor of internal reinvestment, acquisition, and/or share repurchases, thus reinforcing the capital growth preference.

Ironically, therefore, the relative advantage of tax-deferred vehicles has diminished, since now investments outside IRAs and qualified plans can yield very low tax exposure where the results of deferred investments are generally taxed at potentially much higher ordinary income tax rates. However, so long as a tax deduction is available at the point of entry and the deferral is at least several years, deferral can still overcome the tax disadvantage at exit.

The same cannot be said for nondeductible tax-deferred annuities or traditional nondeductible IRAs. Without a tax deduction at the outset for the contribution, the severe tax disadvantage for the distribution will be virtually impossible to overcome, especially given the higher cost structures associated with the annuity vehicles. This is not to say that annuities, particularly variable annuities, will not continue to provide advantages for some investors. If someone is already invested in such a vehicle, it will almost certainly remain appropriate to stay; and, for some, the insurance protection features could justify a wholly new purchase. But, in general, the popularity of these vehicles will likely wither unless there is a dramatic reduction in their internal costs and/or some major structural modification to deal with the tax albatross they now carry.

Corporate stock incentive programs are likely to resurrect their preference for incentive stock options (ISOs) over the non-qualified version because the benefit of long-term capital gains treatment is so much more advantageous to the employee. And, while the Code Sec. 83(b) election for the grant of restricted stock may now appear more attractive, if faith in the stock's eventual performance would justify the up-front tax, the better course of action will still be to avoid the election and apply the amount of the would-be tax to an additional purchase of the corporate stock on the open market.

Nonqualified deferred compensation plans are likely now to continue their movement toward equity-based growth measures as the general market preference for equity returns is enhanced. Still, some companies may decide to abandon these arrangements and/or employees may decline to participate—given the illiquidity and potential credit risks of these plans—now that their relative advantage over "outside" investment has declined.

The following diagram summarizes these very broad investment/tax generalizations:

	"Outside" of Deferred Vehicles	Tax Deductible Deferrals	Non-Tax-Deductible Deferrals
Income-Oriented Investments	POOR	OK	OK
Capital Growth-Oriented Investments	EXCELLENT	VERY GOOD	GOOD

Finally, the cost of a charitable contribution of appreciated property has gone up since the tax otherwise has gone down. This may sufficiently reduce the attractiveness of the otherwise constrained use of capital gain property to cause contributors to use cash instead. This may be the case especially in the typical charitable remainder trust situation where the threat of a large tax liability on highly appreciated property is often a major motivating factor. The now reduced tax on that appreciation may cause many contributors to choose much simpler and more direct approaches to the twin objectives of diversification and charitable largesse.

Depreciable real estate. Long-term capital gain from the sale or exchange of depreciable real property that would be treated as ordinary income if the property were depreciable personal property (i.e., Code Sec. 1245 property) is taxed at a maximum rate of 25 percent. The balance of the remaining long-term capital gain is taxed at a maximum rate of 20 percent.

Example (7). In 1998, Joe Green sold a building for $125,000. Green had originally paid $50,000 for the building a number of years ago. Over the years that he owned the building, Green had deducted $50,000 in depreciation. Thus, his basis in the building was zero at the time of sale. Of his $125,000 recognized gain, he would pay a maximum rate of 25% on $50,000 (i.e., the amount that had been allowable as depreciation) and a maximum rate of 20% on the remaining $75,000.

Pass-through entities. A pass-through entity (e.g., mutual funds, S corporations, partnerships, estates and trusts) may pass through capital gains to their shareholders or beneficiaries. The pass-through entity must make the determination of when a long-term capital gain is taken into account on its books. Therefore, a gain taken into account by a pass-through entity before May 7, 1997, is not eligible for the new lower capital gains rate.

Collectibles. As a general rule, collectibles do not qualify for the new lower rates. For example, stamps, antiques, gems, and most coins would still be taxed at the maximum rate of 28 percent.

Planning Note. Certain newly minted gold and silver coins issued by the federal government and coins issued under state law are subject to the lower capital gains rate, even though such coins generally qualify as "collectibles."

Small business stock. When a taxpayer sells or exchanges certain small business stock (i.e., Sec. 1202 stock) that the taxpayer has held for more than five years, 50 percent of the gain may be excluded from the taxpayer's gross income. If the small business stock qualifies for this 50-percent exclusion, any recognized gain from the sale or exchange of the stock may not be taxed at the lower capital gains rate.

Planning Note. This provision prevents the taxpayer from reaping a double benefit from the stock (i.e., 50-percent exclusion and the maximum capital gains rate of 20 percent). However, if such stock was sold or exchanged before it was owned five years by the taxpayer, the gain would still be subject to the 20-percent maximum capital gains tax rate.

Tax preference item for small business stock. Under prior law, 50 percent of the exclusion of gain from small business stock was treated as a tax preference item for purposes of calculating the taxpayer's alternative minimum tax liability. The new provision reduces this tax preference item to 42 percent of the excluded gain.

Withdrawals from Merchant Marine capital construction fund. Nonqualified withdrawals from a Merchant Marine capital construction fund by a noncorporate taxpayer are taxed at 20 percent.

Withholding by domestic partnerships, estates and trusts. The IRS, by regulation, may reduce the amount of tax withheld on a foreign person's gain from the disposition of a U.S. property interest to 20 percent. If the IRS does not make such provision in its regulations, the domestic partnership, estate, or trust must withhold tax at a rate of 35 percent. Previously, the IRS had the authority to reduce the withholding from 35 percent to 28 percent.

Planning Note. This provision only impacts U.S. partnerships, estates, and trusts that dispose of interests in U.S. real property and distribute a portion of the gain to a foreign person who is a partner or beneficiary. If the partner or beneficiary is not a foreign person, no withholding is required.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Wally Head, Managing Director, Chicago office of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., Inc., provides these observations regarding how the new 20-percent tax rate on long-term capital gains will impact marketable-security asset allocation decisions by individual investors.

Generally, the lower tax rate on long-term capital gains will increase the long-term, after-tax equity risk premium. This will justify increased allocations to equities by investors who base their asset allocation decisions on risk/return analyses. Conversely, investors who invest in equities — versus cash or bonds—only to the extent necessary to achieve identifiable goals will be able to decrease their allocations to equities.

The lower long-term capital gains tax rate makes contributions to non-tax-deductible deferral strategies (e.g., purchases of commercial annuities) that will be invested in equities much less attractive now from an investment perspective. This lower tax rate reduces somewhat the attractiveness of tax-deductible deferral strategies (e.g., contributions to qualified retirement plans) that will be invested in equities, but this reduction is offset for many investors by the elimination of exposure to the 15-percent excise tax on excess distributions and accumulations. On balance, therefore, most investors will still find it attractive to make maximum contributions to tax-deductible deferral strategies.

Should equities be overweighted in or outside of tax deferral strategies? While the lower rate on long-term capital gains does increase the attractiveness of overweighting equities outside of tax deferral strategies, the answer to this important question remains very fact-specific. In addition to the factors that existed previously, it is important to recognize that only a portion of the return produced by most equity managers—in separately managed accounts or mutual funds—will qualify for the lower rate. Additionally, growth that occurs outside of tax-deferral strategies remains outside of them and is exposed to rates which may be higher in the future. Given the reluctance most investors have to paying taxes any earlier than necessary, the benefits provided to some investors by the repeal of the 15-percent excise tax on excess distributions and accumulations, and the power of compounding returns without current taxation, we don't expect many investors will begin overweighting equities outside of their tax-deferral strategies.

Effective date. This provision generally applies to tax years ending after May 6, 1997.

Corporate Capital Gains Rate

¶ 305

Background

When a corporation has a net capital gain for a particular tax year, the corporation will pay an alternative tax if such tax is less than the income tax computed in the regular manner. Under prior law, the alternative tax imposed a 35-percent tax rate on a corporation's net capital gain.

Alternative tax computation modified.—The alternative tax rate of 35 percent is now applied to the lesser of the corporation's net capital gain or its taxable income. Previously, the 35-percent rate applied only to the corporation's net capital gain.

Planning Note. The alternative minimum tax rate only applies when a corporation's ordinary income tax rate exceeds 35 percent. Therefore, this change has no immediate impact on corporations because the top corporate tax rate is currently 35 percent.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years ending after December 31, 1997.

Small Business Stock

Background

Since the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1993, an exclusion from gross income for individuals is allowed on 50 percent of any gain from the sale of qualified small business stock acquired at original issue and held at least five years. The amount of gain eligible for the exclusion by an individual with respect to a corporation is the greater of 10 times the taxpayer's basis in the stock or $10 million.

In general, to qualify as a small business, the issuing corporation must have had gross assets not exceeding $50 million at the time the stock was issued, it must satisfy an active trade or business requirement, and it must be a domestic Subchapter C corporation. A myriad of conditions and specifics apply in defining stock eligible for the 50-percent exclusion under Code Sec. 1202, all of which is unchanged by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997.

Prior to the Act, no provision specifically addressed the treatment of gain from the sale of small business stock where the sale proceeds were used to purchase other small business stock. Because no rollover provision existed or other relief applied to the purchase of replacement small business stock, such gains were taxable, although the seller could benefit from the 50-percent exclusion if it held the stock sold for more than five years.

Rollover of gain from sale of qualified stock.—An individual may elect to roll over capital gain from the sale of qualified small business stock held for more than six months if other small business stock is purchased by the individual during the 60-day period beginning on the date of sale. Accordingly, gain is recognized only to the extent that the amount realized on the sale exceeds the cost of the replacement small business stock purchased during the 60-day period, as reduced by the portion of such cost, if any, previously taken into account. To the extent that capital gain is not recognized, that amount will be applied to reduce the basis of the replacement small business stock. The basis adjustment is applied to the replacement stock in the order such stock is acquired.

Replacement stock. For purposes of the rollover provision, the replacement stock must meet the active business requirement for the six-month period following its purchase. Except for purposes of determining whether the active business test six-month holding period is met, the holding period of the stock purchased will include the holding period of the stock sold.

> Example. Bill Morgan farms and invests $500,000 in XYZ Corporation, a manufacturer of widgets, on October 5, 1997. XYZ is a qualified small business. On September 1, 1998, Morgan sells his XYZ stock for $750,000. On September 25, 1998, he purchases stock in the newly formed ABC Corporation, a manufacturer of widget components, for $700,000. ABC is also a qualified small business. Thus, Morgan recognizes a $50,000 gain on the sale of XYZ stock. His basis in the ABC stock is $500,000. The holding period of his XYZ stock is tacked onto the holding period of his ABC stock for all purposes except for determining whether ABC Corporation meets the active business requirement. Thus, for applying the 50 percent exclusion of Code Sec. 1202 and other purposes, his holding period for the ABC stock began on October 5, 1997.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. George Jones, Esq., of CCH INCORPORATED, New York, N.Y., observes that this provision opens up a new way to defer tax on the gain of a portion of an investment portfolio—that devoted to qualified startup ventures—indefinitely. The new provision also gives more flexibility to those presently invested in "section 1202" stock: the benefit of the 50 percent gain exclusion on "section 1202" qualified small business stock is not available to anyone until August 12, 1998, since the controlling Code provision requires a more than five-year holding period for qualified small business stock issued after August 10, 1993. The '97 Tax Act provision—through its new reinvestment/rollover option—allows an investor in effect to bail out of a particular section 1202 investment early and preserve tax benefits. The new provision gives a significant boost to small cap companies looking for venture capital and no doubt will create a new marketing opportunity for those brokers who make rollover opportunities more available. And unlike a similar provision under which gain on publicly traded securities can be deferred if the proceeds are invested within 60 days in a specialized investment company (organized under the Small Business Investment Act to encourage business ownership by socially or economically disadvantaged persons), the '97 Tax Act rollover can be directed toward companies with less risk and/or more potential for capital appreciation.

Effective date. The provision applies to sales after August 5, 1997.

Gains and Losses from Terminations of Certain Property

Background

Capital gain or loss treatment requires a "sale or exchange" of a capital asset, which has been more narrowly defined than gain from a "sale or other disposition." Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, taxpayers were effectively provided with an election through case law and Code inconsistencies to achieve either capital gain or ordinary loss treatment in some transactions. The Code specifically deemed "sale or exchange" treatment for some transactions, including the gains and losses attributable to the cancellation, lapse, expiration or other termination with respect to certain personal property. Nonactively traded personal property did not fall under this capital treatment. Further, under prior law, capital treatment was given to gain or loss on the retirement of debt obligations, except for debt issued by a natural person or debt issued before July 2, 1982, by a noncorporate nongovernmental issuer. Also, under prior law, no provisions specifically addressed the tax treatment to be used when the property in a short sale became substantially worthless.

Background

Capital treatment extended.—The "sale or exchange" treatment of gain or loss from the cancellation, lapse, expiration or other termination of a right or obligation with respect to certain property that is a capital asset in the hands of the taxpayer is extended to all property. Specifically, capital treatment of gains and losses under the "sale or exchange" rule of Code Sec. 1234A is extended to cover interests in real property and nonactively traded personal property.

Affected property. An example of how the new tax treatment affects an interest in real property is that capital gains treatment could apply to amounts received to release a lessee from a requirement that the premises be restored on termination of the lease. An example of the new treatment on nonactively traded personal property is that capital treatment could apply to the forfeiture of a down payment under a contract to purchase stock that is a capital asset.

Caution. The House Committee Report states that this provision does not affect whether a right is "property" or whether property is a "capital asset."

Short sales and worthless property. If a taxpayer enters into a short sale of property and the property becomes substantially worthless, the taxpayer recognizes gain in the same manner as if the short sale was closed when the property became substantially worthless. Regulations will be provided as to similar treatment for any option with respect to property, any offsetting notional principal contract with respect to property, any futures or forward contract to deliver any property, and any other similar transaction.

If a short sale remains open when property becomes substantially worthless, the statute of limitations period for the assessment of any deficiency attributable to any part of the gain on the transaction will not expire before the earlier of the date that is three years after the date the IRS is notified by the taxpayer of the substantial worthlessness of the property (in a manner to be prescribed by the Secretary) or the date that is six years after the date the return for that tax year is filed.

Debt issued by natural persons. The new law also repeals the provision that exempts debt obligations issued by natural persons from the rule that treats gain or loss realized on retirement of the debt as gain or loss realized on an exchange. Thus, gain or loss on the retirement of this type of debt is capital gain or loss if the debt is a capital asset. The provision retains the present-law exceptions to "exchange" treatment for debt issued before July 2, 1982, by noncorporations or nongovernments.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Steven Surdell of Jenner & Block, Chicago, Ill., observes that Congress first enacted Code Sec. 1234A in 1981 in order to preclude what it considered the opportunity for elective characterization of gain or loss on non-sale asset dispositions. This opportunity stemmed from the common law distinction between asset dispositions pursuant to a sale or exchange, on the one hand, or pursuant to a lapse, expiration, cancellation, or abandonment, on the other hand. In the latter case, the courts generally held that the gain or loss on the lapse, expiration, cancellation, or abandonment was ordinary. See, e.g., Leh v. Commissioner, CA-9, 58-2 USTC ¶ 9889, 260 F.2d 489; Commissioner v. Pittston Co., CA-2, 58-1 USTC ¶ 9284, 252 F.2d 344. This distinction leads to a possible character arbitrage in which, for example, a taxpayer could enter into corresponding long and short futures positions on the same underlying commodity. After a movement in the commodity's price, the taxpayer could cancel the loss leg of the transaction by a cash settlement (thus recognizing ordinary loss) and sell or assign the gain leg (thus recognizing capital gain). Code Sec. 1234A was enacted to preclude this character arbitrage.

As originally enacted, however, Code Sec. 1234A applied only to actively traded personal property as defined under the straddle rules of Code Sec. 1092. The modification of Act Sec. 1002 broadens Code Sec. 1234A to "property" which is presumably all property. The modification clarifies the character of the gain or loss on some of the more common derivative transactions. For example, if parties enter into a notional principal contract on a nonpublicly traded financial asset (such as an equity swap on a nonpublicly traded stock) and one of the parties makes a termination payment in order to terminate its obligation under the swap agreement, the character of this termination payment was unclear under prior law. It is now clear that the payment will generate capital gain or loss.

Effective date. The extension of the extinguishment rule applies to terminations more than 30 days after August 5, 1997 (September 5, 1997). The short sales provision applies to property that becomes substantially worthless after August 5, 1997. The repeal of the exception for debt issued by natural persons applies to debt issued or purchased (within the meaning of Code Sec. 1272(d)(1)) after June 8, 1997.

APPRECIATED FINANCIAL POSITIONS

Constructive Sale Treatment

Background

In general, gain or loss is not recognized on an asset until the asset is sold, exchanged or otherwise disposed of by the owner. The disposition of the asset shifts the benefits and burdens of ownership to another party and fixes the amount of gain or loss. This amount is the difference between the amount realized and the taxpayer's basis in the asset.

Background

Prior to enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, however, certain hedging transactions were allowed that enabled taxpayers to lock in gain or loss on an asset without current recognition of gain. Such transactions are substantially equivalent to a sale because they shift the opportunity for further gain and the risk of further loss.

The best known of these hedging strategies is the "short sale against the box." In this transaction, a taxpayer who owns appreciated shares of stock borrows identical shares from a broker and sells them. No gain or loss is recognized at the time of the short sale. The proceeds of the sale are held by the broker until the taxpayer closes the transaction by delivering replacement shares. These replacement shares can be either the securities held or newly purchased securities.

Gain or loss is recognized only when the transaction is closed. The amount of gain or loss is the difference between the proceeds the taxpayer received from the short sale and the cost of the shares used to cover the borrowed shares. Note that if the shares originally held by the taxpayer are used to cover the short sale, the amount of the gain was fixed at the time of the short sale. The amount of gain locked in was the difference between the taxpayer's basis in the shares and the amount of the proceeds from the borrowed shares. Characterization of the gain as long-term or short-term depends on the taxpayer's holding period for the original stock as of the time of the short sale.

Other hedging strategies that shift the benefits and burdens of ownership without current recognition of gain are forward contracts and offsetting notional principal contracts. In a forward contract, a taxpayer agrees to sell a specified number of shares of stock at a specified time in the future for a specified price. The amount of gain is the difference between the specified price and the taxpayer's basis. Although this amount is locked in at the time the contract is created, there is no current recognition of gain. Futures contracts are similar to forward contracts except that they are normally traded on an exchange and generally do not have an exact delivery date, the date of delivery being specified by the exchange.

An offsetting notional principal contract is an agreement by one party to pay the investment yield on specified property for a specified time to a counterparty in exchange for the right to be reimbursed for any decline in the value of the property. In effect, one party takes a short position with respect to the property and the other takes a long, or ownership position.

General rule, appreciated financial positions.—Prior to the Act, certain hedging strategies such as "short sales against the box," forward contracts, and notional principal contracts could be used to lock in gains on appreciated financial positions without immediate recognition of income. New Code Sec. 1259 limits an investor's ability to do this by treating certain hedging transactions as constructive sales.

The Act provides that if there is a constructive sale of an appreciated financial position, the taxpayer must recognize gain as if such position were sold, assigned, or otherwise terminated at its fair market value as of the date of the constructive sale and immediately repurchased. Appropriate adjustments would be made in the amount of any gain or loss subsequently realized on the position to reflect the gain recognized on the constructive sale. The taxpayer's holding period in the position would begin as if the taxpayer had first acquired the position on the date of the constructive sale.

Caution. Taxpayers may not recognize any loss on the constructive sale of an appreciated financial position.

Appreciated financial position. The term "appreciated financial position" generally means any position with respect to any stock, debt instrument, or partnership interest where there would be gain if such position is sold, assigned, or otherwise terminated at its fair market value. However, there are two exceptions. One exception is made for any position that is marked to market. A second exception is made for any position with respect to debt instruments if three conditions are satisfied:

(1) the debt unconditionally entitles the holder to receive a specified principal amount;

(2) the interest payments (or other similar amounts) with respect to the debt are payable based on a fixed rate or, to the extent provided in regulations, at a variable rate (Code Sec. 860G(a)(1)(B)(i)); and

(3) the debt is not convertible, either directly or indirectly, into stock of the issuer or any related person.

Constructive sale. A taxpayer is treated as making a constructive sale of an appreciated position if the taxpayer enters into certain types of transactions or attempts to avoid the purposes of Code Sec. 1259 by having a related person enter into one of these transactions. For this purpose, the term "related person" has the meaning given that term under Code Sec. 267 or 707(b). A constructive sale is deemed to occur when a taxpayer does any of the following:

(1) enters into a short sale of the same or substantially identical property;

(2) enters into an offsetting notional principal contract with respect to the same or substantially identical property;

(3) enters into a futures or forward contract to deliver the same or substantially identical property;

(4) has entered into a short sale, an offsetting notional principal contract or a forward or futures contract and acquires the same property as the underlying property for the position (acquires a long position in the same property); or

(5) to the extent prescribed in regulations, enters into other transactions having substantially the same effect as the four types of transactions listed above.

In a short sale, a taxpayer who owns appreciated shares of stock borrows identical shares from a broker and sells them. The proceeds of the sale are held by the broker until the taxpayer closes the transaction by delivering replacements for the borrowed shares. These replacement shares can be either the securities originally held by the taxpayer or newly purchased securities.

In a forward contract, a taxpayer agrees to sell specified property, such as a specified number of shares of stock, at a specified time in the future for a specified price. New Code Sec. 1259 provides that for a forward contract to result in a constructive sale, it need only provide for delivery of a substantially fixed amount of property at a substantially fixed price. There is no constructive sale, however, if there is room for significant variation in the terms of the contract. Note that the Conference Committee Report states that the conferees do not intend that an agreement that is not a contract under applicable contract law will be treated as a forward contract.

An offsetting notional principal contract is an agreement by one party to pay the investment yield on specified property for a specified time to a counterparty in exchange for the right to be reimbursed for any decline in the value of the property. In effect, one party takes a short position with respect to the property while the other takes a long, or ownership position. To result in a constructive sale under new Code Sec. 1259, the contract need only provide a requirement to pay substantially all of the investment yield in exchange for the right to be reimbursed for substantially all of any decline in value in the position.

The Senate Committee Report gives considerable guidance on the types of transactions that the Treasury Department might, in future regulations, deem to have the same effect as the four enumerated transactions included in the statute. Included transactions would be those that eliminate virtually all risk of future loss and opportunity for future gain. For a detailed discussion of what types of transactions might be expected to be included in the regulations see ¶ 311, below.

In addition, the Conference Committee Report states that the conferees intend that the constructive sale provision will generally apply to transactions that are identified as hedging or straddle transactions under other Code provisions (e.g., Code Secs. 1092, 1221 and 1256).

Excluded from the definition of a constructive sale are contracts for the sale of appreciated financial assets that are not marketable securities (within the meaning of Code Sec. 453(f)). The exception only applies, however, if the contract settles within one year after the date it was entered into.

Operation of the general rule is illustrated below.

Example. Mary Smith owns 1,000 shares of ABC stock. The stock has a basis of $75 per share and a current fair market value of $100 per share. Smith decides to enter into a short sale against the box. She borrows 1,000 shares of ABC stock from her broker and sells them for the current market price of $100 per share, making the total proceeds from the sale $100,000. This $100,000 will be held by the broker until Smith delivers 1,000 shares of ABC stock to the broker at some time in the future to cover for the borrowed shares.

Note that immediately after the short sale Smith has effectively locked in her selling price of $100 per share and her total profit of $25,000. Regardless of what happens to the stock price in the future, any change in her long position (holding the original 1,000 shares in the hope that their price will increase) will be exactly offset by a change in her short position (selling the shares). For instance, suppose the price of the stock drops to $80 per share. This would reduce Smith's gain on her long position (the shares she still holds) by $20,000 (100 shares at $20 per share). At the same time, however, Smith can cover her debt to the broker by transferring the 1,000 shares of ABC she owns. Although these shares are worth only $80,000 now, they can be transferred to the broker in exchange for the $100,000 that is being held for her.

Under new Code Sec. 1259, Smith would be treated as having an appreciated position in the ABC stock because she entered into a short sale, and the fair market value of the stock exceeds her basis in the stock. The exception for nonmarketable assets would not apply, and her short sale against the box (one of the listed transactions) should be treated as a constructive sale. Smith would recognize a gain of $25,000 on the sale ($100,000 proceeds minus $75,000 basis in the stock). Smith's basis in the stock would be stepped up to $100,000 to reflect the gain recognized on the constructive sale.

Smith will subsequently transfer her original 1000 shares of ABC to the broker in exchange for her $100,000. The amount of gain recognized on this transaction would be the amount of the proceeds minus the basis of the stock used to cover. Although Smith's original basis in the ABC stock was $75 per share, it should be stepped up to $100 per share because Smith was treated as repurchasing the shares for their fair market value as of the time of the constructive sale. As a result, no gain or loss is recognized at the time the transaction is closed.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Steven Surdell of Jenner & Block, Chicago, Ill., points out that new Code Sec. 1259 descends directly from the various Clinton Administration constructive-sale initiatives which began with the so-called Pearl Harbor Day proposals of December 7, 1995. The earlier proposals responded to what the Administration perceived as the widespread use (or abuse, in the eyes of the Administration) of short against the box and similar transactions to defer, or possibly eliminate, built-in gains on financial assets (e.g. the Estee Lauder transaction). Numerous commentators questioned the breadth of the earlier proposals, suggesting, among other things, that the provisions could have broad and unintended collateral consequences and that the provisions were perhaps inconsistent with certain existing tax code provisions such as the straddle rules of Code Sec. 1092, the wash-sale rules of Code Sec. 1091 and the dividends-received deduction rules of Code Sec. 246.

The final Code Sec. 1259 language is significantly narrower than the original Administration proposals and appears to target a more limited universe of transactions. The constructive sale definition would apply to short against the box transactions, full return equity swaps, forward sales and, under Treasury regulations to be issued, any transactions having substantially the same effect. Based upon the section's definitions, it appears that the constructive sale label generally attaches only to those transactions which eliminate all, or virtually all, of the appreciated position's economic upside and downside (although the definition of an "offsetting notional principal contract" includes any notional principal contract which swaps "all or substantially all" of the underlying asset's yield for a specified period).

Because the final language is narrower than the earlier proposed language, taxpayers may still consider entering into many common risk-minimization techniques—but must do so cautiously. One technique which appears to have gained a limited blessing as a part of the Act is the so-called zero premium collar transaction. Such transactions typically entail the taxpayer's purchase of a put option on the underlying stock (or other appreciated financial asset) and the sale of a call option on the same stock. The put option protects the taxpayer's downside risk—which is often all the taxpayer really desires. Given the relatively high valuation in today's equity markets, many investors seek to protect themselves from downside risk for a fairly limited time period—such as over the next 12 months—but desire to hold the stock long term. Other investors would like to sell stock and recognize the built-in gain, but cannot do so because the stock is subject to transfer restrictions imposed by securities laws or contractual agreements. These investors might consider purchasing a put option on their appreciated shares. Because the put option premium may be significant, however, taxpayers essentially finance the put option premium by selling a call option to the same counter party. The strike price on the sold call option is set so that the option premium received by the taxpayer on the call offsets the option premium paid by the taxpayer on the purchased put option—hence the name zero premium (or zero cost) collar.

The Conference Committee Report expressly notes that Treasury regulations will provide guidance on collar transactions which guidance will "provide standards for determining which collar transactions result in constructive sales." The report notes that the conferees "expect that these Treasury regulations with respect to collars will be applied prospectively, except in cases to prevent abuse." It thus appears that taxpayers may enter into collar transactions but will need to consider whether the collar eliminates excessive amounts of both upside potential and downside risk. Such assessments will need to be made on a transaction-by-transaction basis and will need to take into account such factors as the duration of the collar, how tight the collar is around the applicable financial asset, and the volatility of that asset. These factors, of course, are fundamental to most option-pricing models. As a result, taxpayers should focus particular attention on the options pricing which is incorporated into any collar transaction. In the final analysis, it appears that taxpayers should generally feel comfortable engaging in collar transactions, but only after carefully considering the facts and circumstances as described above.

Steven Surdell also points out that one category of large corporate transactions which clearly appear to have survived the constructive sale chopping block are the so-called DECS®-type of transactions, which allow the holder of an appreciated portfolio stock to hedge its downside risk in the stock and to monetize the appreciation.

Effective date. The provision is generally effective for constructive sales entered into after June 8, 1997. For special transitional rules, see ¶ 312.

Safe Harbor

Safe harbor for short-term hedges.—Code Sec. 1259 provides a safe harbor for certain short-term hedges that would otherwise be treated as constructive sales. Under this exception, a transaction that would otherwise be treated as a constructive sale will be disregarded if three conditions are satisfied:

(1) the transaction is closed before the end of the 30th day after the end of the tax year in which the transaction was entered into;

(2) the taxpayer holds the appreciated financial position throughout the 60-day period beginning on the date the transaction is closed; and

(3) at no time during such 60-day period is the taxpayer's risk of loss with respect to the position reduced by a circumstance that would be described in Code Sec. 246(c)(4) if references to stock included references to such position.

The circumstances referred to in Code Sec. 246(c)(4) are as follows:

(1) the taxpayer has an option to sell, is under a contractual obligation to sell, or has made (but not closed) a short sale of substantially identical stock or securities;

(2) the taxpayer is the grantor of an option to buy substantially identical stock or securities; or

(3) under regulations prescribed by the Treasury Department, the taxpayer has diminished his or her risk of loss by holding one or more other positions with respect to substantially similar or related property.

If a transaction that is closed is reestablished in a substantially similar position, the exception still applies, provided that the reestablished position is closed prior to the end of the 30th day after the close of the taxable year in which the original transaction occurred, and the taxpayer satisfies the two 60-day rules described above.

Planning Note. Although new Code Sec. 1259 prevents taxpayers from locking in gain and reducing future market risk to zero, they need only be exposed to risk for a relatively short period during the year. Further, even during this exposure period, taxpayers with appreciated positions may still be able to enter into other risk-reduction techniques such as certain collars during the time during which they must be exposed to market risk. For an explanation of how collars work, see ¶ 311, below.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Steven Surdell of Jenner & Block, Chicago, Ill., notes that a special rule allows taxpayers to avoid constructive sale characterization if (1) the would-be constructive sale is closed within 30 days after the end of the year in which it was first opened, (2) for 60 days after the transaction is closed the taxpayer holds the appreciated financial position, and (3) during the 60-day period, the taxpayer does not enter into a risk-reduction transaction which would, under Code Sec. 246(c)(4), toll the holding period for dividends-received deduction purposes. Code Sec. 246(c)(4) tolls the holding period of a stock if the holder enters into certain risk-reduction techniques such as having an option to sell, being under an obligation to sell, being a party to an open short sale in respect of the same or substantially identical stock or securities, granting an option to buy substantially identical stock or securities, or, under Treasury regulations, diminishing risk of loss by entering into one or more positions with respect to substantially similar or related property.

Because the Treasury regulations under Code Sec. 246(c)(4)(c) allow parties to enter into certain market hedges which are not deemed substantially similar or related property, the closed transaction provision of new Code Sec. 1259 would not appear to preclude such a hedge. Thus, it appears that a taxpayer may enter into a short against the box (or similar transaction) so long as it is closed out within 30 days of year-end. After closing out the position, the taxpayer must hold the stock for the 60-day holding period prescribed by Code Sec. 1259(c)(3)(A)(iii), but the taxpayer could enter into market or other hedges which would not constitute substantially similar or related property under the Code Sec. 246(c)(4)(c) regulations. Taxpayers would also want to carefully analyze such transactions, however, to assure themselves that their positions pass muster under some of the common-law doctrines, such as substance over form. In addition, the Conference Committee Report states that, under regulations to be issued by the Treasury, either a taxpayer's appreciated financial position or an offsetting position may, in certain circumstances, be considered on a disaggregated basis for purposes of the constructive sale analysis. The prospect of such a disaggregation would also need to be considered in respect of a market hedge.

Effective date. The provision is generally effective for constructive sales entered into after June 8, 1997. For special transitional rules, see ¶ 312.

Special rules, appreciated financial positions.—Special rules are provided for subsequent sales of positions that were deemed sold in constructive sales, certain trust instruments, and multiple positions in property. The Secretary of the Treasury is directed to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of these special rules, as well as the other rules for constructive sales of appreciated financial positions.

Subsequent sales. A transaction that resulted in a constructive sale of an appreciated financial position is not treated as resulting in a constructive sale of another appreciated financial position so long as the taxpayer continues to hold the position that was treated as constructively sold. When the position is sold, assigned or otherwise disposed of, however, the taxpayer is deemed to have entered into the transaction that resulted in the constructive sale at that time.

Example. Tom Johnson holds two appreciated stock positions and one offsetting short sale and identifies the short sale as offsetting one of the stock positions. If Johnson then sells the stock position that was identified, the identified short position would cause a constructive sale of the taxpayer's other stock position at that time.

Certain trust instruments. An interest in a trust that was actively traded (within the meaning of Code Sec. 1092(d)(1)) is generally treated as stock for purposes of the constructive sale rules of Code Sec. 1259. An exception is made, however, if substantially all of the property held by the trust (measured by value) is debt described in the debt exception to the definition of appreciated financial position in new Code Sec. 1259(b)(2)(A). Debt qualifies for this exception if (1) the debt unconditionally entitles the holder to receive a specified principal amount, (2) interest payments with respect to the debt meet the requirements of Code Sec. 860G(a)(1)(B), and (3) the debt is not convertible (directly or indirectly) into stock of the issuer or a related person.

Multiple positions in property. If a taxpayer holds multiple positions in property, the determination of whether a specific transaction is a constructive sale and, if so, which appreciated financial position is deemed sold, is made in the same manner as actual sales.

The Senate Committee Report notes that more than one appreciated financial position or more than one offsetting transaction can be aggregated to determine whether a constructive sale has occurred. For example, it is possible that no constructive sale would result if the appreciated financial position and one offsetting transaction were considered in isolation, but that a constructive sale would result if the appreciated financial position were considered in combination with two transactions.

Where the standard for a constructive sale is met with respect to only a pro rata portion of a taxpayer's appreciated position (e.g., some, but not all shares of stock), that portion would be treated as constructively sold. In addition, if there is a constructive sale of less than all of any type of property held by the taxpayer, the specific property deemed sold would be determined under the rules governing actual sales, after adjusting for previous constructive sales. Finally, the Senate Committee Report notes that the future regulations may provide that either a taxpayer's appreciated financial position or its offsetting transaction, be disaggregated on a non-pro rata basis in some circumstances for purposes of the constructive sale determination.

Effective date. The provision is generally effective for constructive sales entered into after June 8, 1997. For special transitional rules, see ¶ 312.

Act Sec. 1001(a), adding Code Sec. 1259(e); Act Sec. 1001(d). Law at ¶ 5355. Committee Report at ¶ 11,115.

Regulations on definition of constructive sale.—Code Sec. 1259 provides that a taxpayer will be deemed to have made a constructive sale of an appreciated financial position if the taxpayer or a related person enters into any of four enumerated transactions; a short sale, an offsetting notional principal contract, a futures or forward contract, or acquisition of a long position in the same asset. It also gives the Treasury Department authority to issue regulations that are necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this provision, including the regulatory authority to treat other transactions that have the same effect as the enumerated transactions as constructive sales.

The Senate Committee Report sets forth in some detail what should be expected in these regulations. In general, the additional transactions that will be treated as constructive sales are those that have the effect of substantially eliminating both the taxpayer's risk of loss and opportunity for gain with respect to the appreciated financial position. Transactions that do only one should not be included. For example, a taxpayer who has an appreciated financial position and enters into a put option with an exercise price equal to the current market price (an "at the money" option) has eliminated risk of loss, but not opportunity for gain.

> Example (1). Ann Davis owns 100 shares of XYZ stock with a basis of $40 per share. The stock is currently trading for $100 per share. Davis buys a put option with an exercise price of $100. In other words, Davis has the right to sell the shares at $100. Note that Davis has eliminated her risk of loss. If the stock price drops below $100, Ann can exercise the put and still get $100 per share for the stock. On the other hand, Davis has not eliminated her opportunity for gain. If the price of XYZ goes above $100 per share, she can forgo exercising the option and sell the stock for its current market value.

The Senate Committee Report goes on to state that it is anticipated that the regulations will provide specific standards for determining whether common transactions that eliminate only a portion of future risk and opportunity for profit such as collars or "in-the-money" options will be treated as constructive sales. In a collar, a taxpayer sells a call and buys a put with a lower strike price. In other words, the taxpayer is required to sell a position at a fixed price (the call strike price) and has the right to sell the position at a lower price (the put strike price). According to the conferees, it is anticipated that future regulations on collars will be applied prospectively, except for abusive situations.

> Example (2). Bill Stark owns 100 shares of Newco stock. The stock is currently selling for $100 per share. Stark sells a call with a strike price of $110 and buys a put with a strike price of $95. Note that a call is a right to buy at a given price and a put is a right to sell at a given price. Selling a call means selling someone else the right to buy from you at a given price at some time in the future.
> The effect of this transaction is that Stark has transferred the rights to all gains above $110 and all loss below $95. If the stock price rises above $110, Stark is still obligated to sell it for $110 to the party that purchased the call. If the price drops below $95, Stark still has the right to sell the shares for $95.

The collar in Example (1), above, left Stark with substantial risk of future loss and opportunity for future gain. He could lose up to five dollars per share and gain up to $10 per share. The regulations will provide specific rules for determining how much risk of loss and opportunity for gain a collar can allow without resulting in a constructive sale. Relevant variables are the spread between the put and call prices and the period of the transaction.

Rules will also be provided for an "in-the-money" option. This term refers to put options in which the strike price is significantly above the current market price or a call option in which the strike price is significantly below the current market price.

> Example (3). Carol Anderson owns stock with a current price of $100 per share. She buys a put option on the shares with a strike price of $120. In other words, Anderson has the right to sell the stock at $120 per share at some time in the future. The effect of this transaction is to eliminate all risk of loss on the transaction, and to lock in a gain of at least $20. Note that Anderson has not eliminated all possibility of future gain, however. If the price of stock rises above $120, she will forgo exercising the put option and sell the stock for its market price. Purchasing a put option like this would, of course, be quite expensive. The cost of the put option would have to be taken into account in determining the amount of actual gain that could be locked in.

Effective date. The provision is generally effective for constructive sales entered into after June 8, 1997. For special transitional rules, see ¶ 312.

Effective Date

Effective date and transitional rules.— New Code Sec. 1259 generally applies to any constructive sale after June 8, 1997. There are two special transitional rules, however—one for sales of positions held before June 9, 1997, and one for decedents dying after June 8, 1997.

Constructive sales before June 9, 1997. A special rule applies to transactions before June 9, 1997, that would otherwise have been constructive sales under Code Sec. 1259. The positions in such a transaction and the property to which the position relates are not taken into account in determining whether any other constructive sale has occurred after June 8, 1997, if, before the close of the 30-day period beginning on August 5, 1997 or before such later date as the Secretary of the Treasury may specify, such transaction and position are clearly identified as offsetting. This special rule will cease to apply when the transaction is closed or the taxpayer ceases to hold such position.

Decedents. If a decedent dies after June 8, 1997, and there was a constructive sale of an appreciated financial position on or before that date, such position and the related property will be treated as property constituting rights to receive income in respect of a decedent (IRD) if three conditions are satisfied:

(1) the transaction resulting in the constructive sale treatment remains open (with respect to the decedent or any related person) for at least two years after the date of such transaction;

(2) the transaction remains open at any time during the three-year period ending on the date of the decedent's death; and

(3) the transaction is not closed within the 30-day period beginning on August 5, 1997.

Code Sec. 1014(c) (denying a date-of-death basis for IRD items) is inapplicable to the excess of the position's or property's value (as included in the decedent's estate for estate tax purposes) over its fair market value on the date the transaction is closed. In other words, gain with respect to a position accruing after the transaction is closed will not be included in income in respect of a decedent.

NET OPERATING LOSSES

Carryback and Carryforward Periods

¶ 315

Background

Under prior law, a net operating loss (NOL) sustained in a tax year could be carried back three years and carried forward 15 years to offset taxable income in those years.

Net operating loss carryback and carryforward periods modified.—The net operating loss (NOL) of a taxpayer, which is generally the excess of the taxpayer's business deductions over its gross income, may be carried back and applied against taxable income for prior years and then carried forward and applied against taxable income for years after the NOL year. Under the Act, the NOL carryback period is shortened to two years (from three years), but the NOL carryforward period is extended to 20 years (from 15 years). Special carryback rules relating to (1) real estate investment trusts (REITs) that do not receive carrybacks; (2) specified liability losses that are subject to a 10-year carryback; (3) excess interest losses that do not receive carrybacks; and (4) corporate capital losses are not affected by the changes.

The three-year carryback period is retained for the portion of the NOL that relates to casualty and theft losses of individual taxpayers and to NOLs that are attributable to Presidentially declared disasters and are incurred by taxpayers engaged in farming or by a small business. For this purpose, a small business means any trade or business (including one conducted in or through a corporation, partnership, or sole proprietorship) the average annual gross receipts of which are $5 million or less for a three-tax-year period (as determined under Code Sec. 448(c)), and a farming business is defined in Code Sec. 263A(e)(4).

> Example (1). In 1998, Ken Hubbs, the sole proprietor of a small business, has a net operating loss of $66,000. In past years, Hubbs reported the following amounts of taxable income: 1995—$82,000, 1996—$10,000, and 1997—$4,000. The NOL can be carried back two years to 1996 and 1997 and can offset $14,000 ($10,000 + $4,000) of taxable income from those years. The remaining NOL of $52,000 ($66,000 − $14,000) can be carried forward for 20 years.

> Example (2). Assume the same facts as Example (1), above, except that the 1998 NOL was entirely due to a Presidentially declared disaster. In this situation, the NOL can be carried back three years, so that the entire $66,000 NOL can be absorbed in 1995, the first year to which the NOL can be carried.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Stuart J. Offer, of Morrison & Foerster, San Francisco, Calif., notes that as initially proposed by President Clinton, the carryback of net operating losses would have been limited to one year, as opposed to the three-year carryback period provided by pre-'97 Act law. Under the legislation as adopted, the carryback period will be limited to two years, so the new law is only half as bad (or twice as good) as originally proposed.

For many companies, the inability to obtain a refund of taxes paid during the three-year carryback period of pre-'97 Act law will be a real financial hardship. Since the new law is first effective for tax years beginning after the date of enactment, Mr. Offer notes that calendar-year taxpayers who could time loss recognition would be well advised to realize losses in the current year in order to obtain refunds of 1995 taxes, since the 1995 year will not be available for loss carryback in 1998.

The extension of the carryforward period from 15 years to 20 years is unlikely to provide significant benefit to taxpayers. The present value of the future deductions in years 15 through 20 is marginal under any reasonable discount. Moreover, it is likely that before the 20-year period expires, there will be one or more ownership changes which will impose limits on the loss carryforward under Code Sec. 382.

Effective date. The provision is effective for NOLs for tax years beginning after August 5, 1997. The provision does not apply to NOLs carried forward from prior tax years.

TAX CREDITS

Research Credit

¶ 317

Background

Taxpayers are entitled to a research tax credit that generally equals 20 percent of the amount by which research expenditures exceed a base amount. The credit was originally enacted in 1981 and has been modified and extended repeatedly. The credit was last extended by the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) for 11 months. It expired for amounts paid or incurred after May 31, 1997.

The Small Business Act gave taxpayers the option of electing an alternative incremental research credit. Under the alternative method, the taxpayer calculates the amount of the credit under a three-tiered regime that uses reduced credit rates and base amounts. The alternative method can generate higher research credits for companies with dramatically increasing sales figures or stagnant research expenditures. If the taxpayer elected the alternative incremental credit regime for its first tax year beginning after June 30, 1996 (and before July 31, 1997), then all research expenditures paid or incurred during the first 11 months of the tax year are treated as research expenses for purposes of computing the research credit.

Research credit extended through June 30, 1998.—The research tax credit has been retroactively extended, for the period from June 1, 1997 through June 30, 1998.

Taxpayers may elect the Code Sec. 41(c)(4) alternative incremental research credit (enacted by the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996, P.L. 104-188, which last extended the research credit for 11 months), for any tax year beginning after June 30, 1996. The election will apply to the tax year in which the election is made, and to all subsequent tax years. The election may be revoked only with IRS consent.

Alternative incremental credit. Although the new law schedules the research credit to expire on June 30, 1998, if a taxpayer elects the alternative incremental research credit for its first tax year beginning after June 30, 1996, and before July 1, 1997, the alternative credit will be available for the entire 24-month period beginning with that tax year. This period equals the 11-month research credit extension enacted by the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996, plus the 13-month extension granted by this Act. However, to prevent taxpayers from taking more than the 24 months of credits enacted by the '96 Act and this Act combined, the 24-month period a taxpayer may claim the alternative incremental credit is shortened by the number of months after June 1996 for which the taxpayer claimed the regular 20-percent research credit.

Effective date. This provision is effective for amounts paid or incurred after May 31, 1997.

Work Opportunity Credit

Background

An employer who hires an individual from one of seven targeted groups may elect to take a credit for 35 percent of the employee's qualified first-year wages. Generally, the maximum amount of first-year wages (with respect to any individual) that are eligible for the credit is $6,000; thus, the maximum credit per employee is $2,100. No credit is allowed unless the worker is employed by the employer for a minimum of 180 days or completes 400 hours of service. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the credit was scheduled to expire for wages paid to employees who began work after September 30, 1997.

One of the targeted groups is defined as members of families receiving aid to families with dependent children (AFDC). In order to be an eligible employee in the AFDC family targeted group, the individual must be a member of a family eligible to receive AFDC benefits for a nine-month period ending during the nine-month period ending on the hiring date.

Work opportunity credit extended through June 30, 1998.—The work opportunity credit has been extended for nine months and is now scheduled to expire for wages paid to people who begin work for a taxpayer after June 30, 1998. Under prior law, the provision was scheduled to expire for individuals beginning work after September 30, 1997.

Two-tiered credit. Employers of targeted group members are now entitled to a credit of 40 percent (increased from 35 percent) of the qualified first-year wages. The percentage is reduced to 25 percent in the case of wages attributable to individuals meeting only minimum employment levels. In order for an employee's wages to be eligible for the work opportunity credit, the employee must have completed a minimum of 120 hours of service. The hours of service test is the only way the minimum employment period is measured for work opportunity credit purposes; the minimum service requirement can no longer be satisfied by an employee being employed for at least 180 days.

Assuming the employee meets the 120-hour minimum service requirement, the employer is entitled to a credit of 25 percent if an employee performs less than 400 hours of service for the employer. For employees performing 400 or more hours of service, the applicable credit percentage is 40 percent of the employee's wages. Under prior law, a 35-percent credit was allowed after an employee completed 400 hours of service or was employed at least 180 days.

Amendments to targeted groups. A new group has been added to the existing seven targeted groups. The new targeted group is composed of persons certified by a designated local agency as receiving certain Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits for any month ending within the 60-day period ending on the hiring date. SSI benefits for purposes of this provision include benefits under Title XVI of the Social Security Act (including supplemental security income benefits of the type described in section 1616 of such act or section 212 of Public Law 93-66).

The "IV-A recipient" targeted group (aid to families with dependent children or AFDC families targeted group) has been amended. A person is considered a member of the AFDC families targeted group, if for any nine months (consecutive or nonconsecutive) during the 18-month period ending on the hiring date, the person qualifies as a member of the AFDC families targeted group (regardless of whether that person is a veteran). The 18-month period is twice as long as the nine-month period provided under prior law.

Effective date. The amended rules apply to individuals who begin work for the employer after September 30, 1997.

Orphan Drug Credit

Background

A 50-percent tax credit is available for qualified clinical testing expenses incurred in testing certain drugs for rare diseases or conditions. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the enabling Code section included a sunset provision under which the orphan drug credit periodically expired and had to be reinstated by an act of Congress.

Orphan drug credit made permanent.—The orphan drug credit has been made permanent, and will no longer need to be extended periodically. The credit last expired on May 31, 1997, but has been retroactively reinstated.

Effective date. The extension of the credit is effective for qualified clinical testing expenses paid or incurred after May 31, 1997.

Welfare-to-Work Credit

Background

The work opportunity tax credit may be elected by employers that hire individuals from any of seven targeted groups, including members of families receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC). The amount of the credit is 35 percent of the qualified wages for the tax year. "Qualified" wages are those paid or incurred by the employer during the year with respect to an individual who was a member of one of the targeted groups. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, only first-year wages could be deducted. First-year wages are those paid during the one-year period beginning with the day the individual begins work with the employer.

New credit for hiring long-term family assistance recipients.—A new credit, called the welfare-to-work credit, is available for employers for wages paid to long-term family assistance recipients who begin work after 1997. The amount of the credit for a tax year is 35 percent of the qualified first-year wages for such year plus 50 percent of the qualified second-year wages for such year. The credit applies only to the first $10,000 of wages in each year with respect to any individual. Thus, the maximum total credit per qualified employee is $8,500 for the two years.

Wages. The term "wages" is given a broad meaning for purposes of the welfare-to-work credit. In addition to remuneration for employment and the value of certain benefits provided, it includes the following amounts paid or incurred by the employer and excludable from the recipient's income as:

(1) amounts received under accident and health plans (Code Sec. 105);

(2) contributions by employers to accident and health plans (Code Sec. 106);

(3) educational assistance under a Code Sec. 127 program or that would be excludable if not for the expiration of Code Sec. 127; and

(4) dependent care expenses (Code Sec. 129).

The amount treated as wages under (1) or (2) above is limited to the applicable premium amount for health care continuation coverage for the period under Code Sec. 4980B(f)(4). Educational assistance provided by the employer to a related person may not be counted as wages.

In the case of agricultural or railroad workers, wage rules similar to those in Code Sec. 51(h) are applicable, but $10,000 is substituted for $6,000 in the provision on agricultural workers and $833.33 for $500 in the provision on railroad workers.

Qualified first-year and second-year wages. "Qualified" wages are wages paid or incurred by the employer during the tax year to individuals who are long-term family assistance recipients. "Qualified first-year wages" are qualified wages attributable to service rendered by the individual during the one-year period beginning with the day such individual began work for the employer. "Qualified second-year wages" are qualified wages attributable to service rendered during the one-year period beginning on the day after the last day of the period for determining first-year wages.

Long-term family assistance recipients. There are three categories of persons who qualify as long-term family assistance recipients:

(1) members of a family that has been receiving family assistance for at least the 18-month period ending on the hiring date;

(2) members of a family that receives family assistance for at least 18 months beginning after August 5, 1997 of the credit and who have a hiring date not more than two years after the 18-month total is reached; and

(3) members of a family that, after August 5, 1997, are no longer eligible for family assistance because of a limitation imposed under either federal or state law on the maximum duration such assistance is payable and who have a hiring date not more than two years after such eligibility expires.

Caution. In applying the above rules, however, note that the welfare-to-work credit does not apply to individuals who begin work for the employer after April 30, 1999.

For purposes of these rules, a long-term family assistance recipient is a person who is certified by the designated local agency as being a member of a family receiving assistance under a IV-A program (i.e., a program providing aid under Part A of Title IV of the Social Security Act). The term "hiring date" has the meaning given to that term under Code Sec. 51(d), which is the day the individual is hired by the employer.

Coordination with other Code provisions. Rules similar to the special rules of Code Sec. 52 and the provisions in Code Sec. 51 on the election to have the work opportunity credit not apply (Code Sec. 51(j)) and the treatment of successor employers and employees working for another employer (Code Sec. 51(k)) apply to the welfare-to-work credit. In addition, the Code Sec. 51 provisions on certifications (Code Sec. 51(d)(11)), the trade or business employment requirement (Code Sec. 51(f)), notification to employers by the U.S. Employment Service (Code Sec. 51(g)), and ineligible individuals (Code Sec. 51(i)) are applicable as in effect on the day before the enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997.

The welfare-to-work credit is deemed to be part of the general business credit, and references to Code Sec. 51 in Code Secs. 38(b) (current year business credit), 280C (certain expenses for which credits are allowable), and 1396(c)(3) (empowerment zone employment credit) are treated as including references to the welfare-to-work credit. If a welfare-to-work credit is allowed to an employer with respect to an individual for any tax year, the individual is not treated as a member of a targeted group for such tax year for purposes of the Code Sec. 51 work opportunity credit.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Professor Karen Kole of the University of Tulsa School of Law notes that the welfare-to-work credit is basically an incentive for businesses to employ long-term family assistance recipients. Unfortunately, the amount of wages that will qualify is limited to $10,000 per year and then for only a two-year period. The term "long-term family assistance recipient" means any individual who is certified by the designated local agency as being a member of a family receiving assistance under a public aid program for at least the 18-month period ending on the hiring date. It would appear that these provisions are again so detailed and administratively burdensome to an employer that only the larger employers will be willing to work with this provision from a cost/benefit standpoint. Smaller employers (the backbone of the U.S. economy and the group that would be in the most likely position to hire long-term family assistance recipients) will most likely find the provision too difficult to administer to make it worthwhile, given the amount of the credit the employer would receive.

Effective date. This provision applies to individuals who begin work for their employer after December 31, 1997.

General Business Credit Carryover Periods

Background

Before the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, a taxpayer was required to use a three-year carryback and a 15-year carryforward period when the current year's general business credit exceeded the allowable limit. This rule still applies for credits that arose in tax years beginning before January 1, 1998.

New time period for carryback and carryforward of unused general credit.—Taxpayers are now required to use a one-year carryback and a 20-year carryforward period when the current year's general business credit exceeds the maximum limit. This time period replaces the three-year and 15-year period.

Planning Note. The change means that a taxpayer that is unable to use the full amount of the current year's general business credit, will have a total of 21 carryback and carryforward years in which to claim the remaining credit. Under prior law, the total carryback and carryforward period was 18 years. The change may offer some administrative convenience for the taxpayer and the IRS due to the fact that there is only a need for one amended tax return because only one carryback year is involved.

> Example. In 1998, Rapport Inc. had a general business credit of $5,000. The corporation was able to use $1,000 of the credit against its federal income tax liability. Rapport is required to carryback the $4,000 unused credit to offset against its 1997 federal income liability. Any remaining credit would then be applied against Rapport's income tax liability for the years 1999 through 2018.

Planning Note. The carryback and carryforward periods have only been changed for credits that arise in tax years that begin after December 31 1997. Thus, credits that arose in tax years that began before that date are still subject to the three-year and 15-year time limits.

Effective date. The change applies to credits that arise in tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

EXCLUSIONS

Lessee Construction Allowance

¶ 322

Background

The Internal Revenue Code did not specify whether cash payments or rent reductions made by a retail lessor to its lessee for the purpose of making improvements or additions were treated as part of the lessee's gross income. The IRS position, outlined in an October 7, 1996 coordinated issue paper, was that the inducement payments were accessions to wealth except to the extent that the lessor benefited from the improvements. Ownership for federal tax purposes, the IRS said, was determined by applying the "benefits and burdens of ownership" test to the particular transaction.

Conversely, the law did specify that the lessor's gross income does not include income, other than rent, derived from the property on the termination of a lease. Thus, the value of any improvements made by the lessee, including the erection of buildings, is not included in the lessor's gross income.

Construction allowances for retail space additions and improvements.—The Act provides that a retail tenant that receives cash or rent reductions from the lessor of the retail space does not include that amount in gross income if it is used for qualified construction or improvement to the space. The tenant must have a short-term lease on the retail space, and the construction or improvement must be on qualified long-term real property that is used in the tenant's trade or business at the retail space. The amount excluded from gross income must not exceed the amount expended by the tenant for the construction or improvement.

Qualified long-term real property. "Qualified long-term real property" is nonresidential real property that is part of, or present at, the retail space. The property must revert to the lessor at the termination of the lease.

Disposed or abandoned property. Qualified long-term real property constructed or improved for the use of a retail lessee is treated as the lessor's nonresidential real property. Consequently, a construction or an improvement that is irrevocably disposed of or abandoned by the lessor at the time the lessee terminates the lease is treated, for purposes of determining gain or loss, as being disposed of or abandoned by the lessor at the time of disposal or abandonment.

Short-term lease. A "short-term lease" is a lease, or other agreement for occupancy or use of retail space, that has a duration of 15 years or less.

Retail space. "Retail space" is real property leased, occupied or otherwise used by the tenant for the sale of tangible personal property or services to the general public.

Reporting requirements. At a time and manner specified by federal regulations, the lessor and the tenant must provide information to the IRS concerning the amount of cash received or of the rent reduction provided for construction and improvements. The IRS also may promulgate regulations requesting additional information.

Effective date. These provisions apply to leases entered into after August 5, 1997.

DEPRECIATION AND DEPLETION

Income Forecast Depreciation Method

Background

Taxpayers seeking to recover the cost of trade or business property that is not eligible for depreciation under the modified accelerated cost recovery system or that does not qualify as intangible property under Code Sec. 197 may be able to depreciate such property under the income forecast method. Under this method, the depreciation deduction is determined not by reference to a term of years but by multiplying the cost of the property, less any salvage value, by a fraction, the numerator of which is the income generated by the property during the tax year and the denominator of which is the total estimated income to be derived from the property during its useful life.

Under prior law, controversy existed over the types of property that were depreciable under the income forecast method. In a series of rulings, the IRS approved the use of the income forecast method for television and motion picture films, videotapes, sound recordings, book manuscript rights, patents, master recordings, and other property of similar character. In 1995, the IRS issued a ruling (Rev. Rul. 95-52, 1995-2 CB 27) denying application of the income forecast method to consumer goods leased under rent-to-own contracts. It drew a sharp distinction between assets of an artistic or creative character that generate uneven flows of income, for which the income forecast method was suitable, and assets such as consumer durable property (whether or not subject to a rent-to-own contract) having a useful life appropriately measured by the passage of time and not by the income produced.

Subsequently, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit refused to limit the income forecast method to movies and similar assets that can be depreciated only under a method not expressed in a term of years (ABC Rentals of San Antonio, CA-10, 1996-2 USTC ¶ 50,508). It determined that Code Secs. 167 and 168 allowed for depreciation under the income forecast method even when the asset had a discernible useful life. The key factor was not the type of asset, but whether using a depreciation method not expressed in a term of years would provide a reasonable and consistent means of allocating an asset's cost to the years of its contribution.

Use of income forecast method limited.—The income forecast method of depreciating trade or business assets is limited by new law to film, video tape, sound recordings, copyrights, books, patents, and other property to be specified by regulations. The controlling committee report directs that the regulations restrict the use of the income forecast method to instances when the economic depreciation of the property cannot be adequately reflected solely by the passage of time or when the income stream from the property is sufficiently unpredictable or uneven so that the application of another method of depreciation would result in a distortion of income. The income forecast method is not available to intangible property amortizable under Code Sec. 197.

Consumer durable property subject to rent-to-own contracts. The income forecast method cannot be used to calculate the depreciation of consumer durables subject to rent-to-own contracts. Rather, qualified rent-to-own property is subject to depreciation under the modified accelerated cost recovery system (MACRS) and over a three-year recovery period with a four-year class life.

Qualified rent-to-own property and dealers. Qualified rent-to-own property is property held by a qualified rent-to-own dealer for purposes of being subject to rent-to-own contracts. A qualified rent-to-own dealer is a person who, in the regular course of business, provides customers with consumer property subject to the terms of a rent-to-own contract, but only where a substantial portion of those contracts terminate resulting in the return of the goods before the receipt of all payments required to transfer ownership of the property from the dealer to the customer. Consumer property is tangible personal property generally used in the home, such as televisions, camcorders, stereos and furniture.

Dual-use property. Property such as cellular phones and computer equipment, which could be used for both personal and business purposes, may also be considered qualified rent-to-own property. However, in order to qualify, such dual-use property must not represent a significant portion of a dealer's leasing property and the other property leased must be qualified rent-to-own property.

Caution. Rent-to-own dealers for whom dual-use property constitutes a significant portion of their leasing inventory will bear the burden of proving that their dual-use property is qualified rent-to-own property.

Rent-to-own contract. A rent-to-own contract is a lease for the use of consumer property between a rent-to-own dealer and an individual customer. The contract must be titled "Rent-to-Own Agreement" or "Lease Agreement with Ownership Option" or use other similar language. It must provide for a weekly or monthly payment period and a payment rate that in the aggregate generally exceeds the normal retail price of the property plus interest, but in no case may the aggregate payments exceed $10,000 per item. Payments may be level or decreasing, but may be decreasing only where no payment is less than 40 percent of the largest payment. The contract must specify the terms under which title to the property transfers from the dealer to the individual, and the duration of the lease may not exceed 156 weeks or 36 months. Further, the contract must state that the customer has no legal obligation to make all payments set forth under the contract and that, at the end of each weekly or monthly payment interval, the customer may return the property to the rent-to-own dealer in good working order and be free of any further obligations. Also, under the contract, the customer has no right to a return of previously made payments and has no right to sell, sublease, mortgage, pawn or otherwise dispose of the property until all contract payments have been made.

Effective date. The provision applies to property placed in service after August 5, 1997.

Percentage Depletion for Marginal Production

Background

Percentage depletion deductions with respect to oil and gas wells may not exceed 65 percent of the taxpayer's taxable income or 100 percent of the taxpayer's net income from the property. For this purpose, taxable income is computed without taking into account depletion allowances. Under prior law, no exception to the taxable income limitation was provided for oil and gas production from marginal properties. A marginal property is a domestic stripper well or domestic property, substantially all of the production of which is heavy oil.

Taxable income limit temporarily suspended.—The 100-percent taxable income limit on percentage depletion deductions for oil and gas properties has been temporarily suspended for marginal properties for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997, and before January 1, 2000. Thus, during the suspension period, the amount of percentage depletion deductions that may be claimed with respect to marginal production is not limited to 100 percent of the taxpayer's taxable income from the property (computed without allowances for depletion). Marginal production is crude oil or natural gas that is produced from a domestic stripper well or from domestic property, substantially all of the production of which is heavy oil.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Clean Fuel Vehicles

Background

Under Code Sec. 280F, the amount allowed as a depreciation deduction for "luxury" automobiles is limited to the following base amounts: $2,560 for the first tax year in the recovery period, $4,100 for the second year, $2,450 for the third year, and $1,475 for each additional year in the recovery period. These amounts are adjusted for inflation annually. Under prior law, the same limitations applied to electric and clean-burning fuel vehicles. Thus, the maximum deductible amounts were not adjusted to account for the extra cost of such vehicles.

Exemption of the incremental cost of a clean fuel vehicle from the limits on depreciation for vehicles.—The Code Sec. 280F limitations on depreciation for "luxury" automobiles have been modified for electric vehicles and automobiles that have been equipped to qualify as clean-burning fuel vehicles.

For electric passenger vehicles built by an original equipment manufacturer, the base year limitations on depreciation have been tripled to $7,680 for the first tax year in the recovery period, $12,300 for the second year, $7,350 for the third year, and $4,425 for the fourth year. These figures are subject to adjustment for inflation.

For passenger vehicles that initially used nonclean-burning fuel, but were modified to allow them to be propelled by clean-burning fuel, the Code Sec. 280F limitations do not apply to the cost of the installed device that equips the car to use clean-burning fuel. The rest of the vehicle's cost remains subject to the Code Sec. 280F limitations.

Effective date. This provision is effective for property placed in service after August 5, 1997 and before January 1, 2005.

Definition of Indian Reservation

Background

Property located on Indian reservations may be eligible for accelerated depreciation under Code Sec. 168(j)(6). An "Indian reservation" is defined as a reservation under (1) section 3(d) of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1452(d)) or (2) section 4(10) of the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 1903(10)). The Indian Financing Act of 1974 includes all "former Indian reservations in Oklahoma." For historic reasons, this includes most of Oklahoma.

The Code Sec. 45A incremental Indian employment credit also uses the Code Sec. 168(j)(6) definition of "Indian reservation."

Definition of Indian reservation clarified for purposes of depreciation and credit.—The definition of "Indian reservation," for purposes of the incremental Indian employment credit under Code Sec. 45A and the accelerated depreciation allowed under Code Sec. 168(j), has been clarified. "Former Indian reservations in Oklahoma," as defined in section 3(d) of the Indian Financing Act of 1974, only includes lands that are (1) within the jurisdictional area of an Oklahoma Indian tribe as determined by the Secretary of the Interior and (2) recognized by the Secretary as eligible for trust land status under 25 CFR Part 151.

Effective date. The clarification generally applies to property placed in service and wages paid after December 31, 1993. However, the provision does not apply to wages for which the taxpayer claimed the benefit of the Code Sec. 45A incremental Indian employment credit on any original return filed prior to March 18, 1997. The provision also does not apply to property placed in service with a 10-year or less life (without regard to Code Sec. 168(j) which provides for a six-year recovery period), if accelerated depreciation under Code Sec. 168(j), was claimed with respect to the property on an original return filed prior to March 18, 1997.

DEDUCTIONS

Environmental Cleanup Costs

¶ 330

Background

Under prior law, the answer to the question of whether environmental cleanup costs should be classified as currently deductible expenses or capital expenditures was subject to a great deal of uncertainty. Although the IRS addressed the question in Revenue Ruling 94-38 (1994-1 CB 35) and several Technical Advice Memoranda, these pronouncements did not provide much in the way of universal guidance and their holdings were only relevant in certain narrow fact situations. Thus, even after the IRS had issued several determinations on the subject, there were still no clear-cut guidelines concerning the tax treatment of environmental cleanup costs.

Background

Certain environmental cleanup costs are currently deductible.—A taxpayer may elect to currently deduct costs paid or incurred for the cleanup (i.e., remediation) of certain hazardous substances. If the taxpayer does not make the expense election, the costs are classified as capital costs. This election will not be available for expenses paid or incurred after December 31, 2000.

Planning Note. Property that has been contaminated by hazardous substances has come to be called "brownfields." Thus, this new provision is sometimes referred to as the "brownfields amendment" or the "brownfields rule."

Qualified cleanup costs. In order to be a qualified cleanup cost the expense must be:

(1) an expense that would otherwise be charged to a capital account; and

(2) paid or incurred in connection with the abatement or control of "hazardous substances" at a "qualified contaminated site."

Planning Note. If the cleanup expense does not satisfy the definitions of "hazardous substances" and "qualified contamination site" (see below), then the taxpayer is not eligible to elect current deduction.

Caution. The legislative history of this provision makes clear that it does not create any inference concerning the proper tax treatment of environmental cleanup expenses that are not described under the new rules.

Depreciable property. As a general rule, the term "qualified cleanup costs" does not include the cost of depreciable property that is used in connection with qualified cleanup activities. However, the otherwise allowable depreciation deduction for such depreciable property that is allocable to the contaminated site does qualify as a cleanup expense.

Caution. According to the legislative history of this provision, depreciation deductions will qualify as cleanup expenses if the expenses would be allocable to the contaminated site under the principals of Idaho Power Co. (SupCt, 74-2 USTC ¶ 9521), and the uniform capitalization rules of Code Sec. 263A. Thus, the legislative history adds more detail than that contained in the new Code provision. It is likely that when the IRS drafts regulations for this provision that it will incorporate the requirements mentioned in the legislative history.

> Example (1). In 1998, Advet Inc. purchased equipment that will be used in part for the remediation of contaminated land that it recently purchased for use in its business operations. When the equipment is not being used on the remediation project, it will be used for other business activities of the corporation. The portion of the cost of the equipment that would otherwise be allocated to the basis of the land under the holding in Idaho Power Co. will be classified as a deductible cleanup expense of Advet Inc. The remaining portion of the cost of the equipment would be depreciated under the MACRS provisions.

Qualified contaminated site. The term "qualified contaminated site" refers to any area:

(1) that is held by the taxpayer for use in a trade or business, for the production of income, or as a stock in trade or inventory;

(2) that is within a "targeted area"; and

(3) at or on which there has been a release (or threat of release) or disposal of any hazardous substance.

Caution. In order to satisfy requirements (2) and (3) above (i.e., "targeted area" and "hazardous substance"), the taxpayer must obtain a statement from the state's environmental agency. The chief executive officer of a state may consult with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), and designate the appropriate state environmental agency within 60 days after enactment of this new provision. If the chief officer of the state has not designated the appropriate state agency within this 60-day period, the EPA will designate the appropriate state agency.

Planning Note. It is very important to note that the cleanup deduction not only applies to trade and business property, and property held for the production of income, but also property held as stock in trade or inventory.

Example (2). Cleanco is a partnership involved in the business of buying and selling undeveloped land. In 1998, the partnership purchased a 40 acre parcel that was contaminated by a hazardous substance. During the year, Cleanco spent $75,000 in cleaning up the site. Cleanco may either elect to add the $75,000 cost to its basis in the land or it may elect to expense the $75,000 as a deduction for cleanup expenses.

Targeted area defined. In order to make the cleanup election, the contaminated site must be in a targeted area. The term "targeted area" is generally defined as:

(1) any population census tract with a poverty rate of at least 20 percent;

(2) a population census tract with a population of less than 2,000 if more than 75 percent of the tract is zoned for commercial or industrial use, and the tract is contiguous to one or more other population census tracts that have a poverty rate of at least 20 percent;

(3) any empowerment zone or enterprise community (and any supplemental zone designated on December 21, 1994); and

(4) any site announced before February 1, 1997, as being part of the brownfields pilot project of the EPA.

Caution. A "targeted area" does not include any site on, or proposed to be on, the National Priorities List (NPL). The NPL is a listed of contaminated sites that is issued by the President and revised at least on a yearly basis.

Planning Note. The 20 additional empowerment zones authorized by this legislation, as well as the D.C. Enterprise Zone are "targeted areas" for purposes of the environmental cleanup rules.

Hazardous substance. The new provision defines the term "hazardous substance" by referring to the definition contained in the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (CERCLA). In turn, this 1980 Act refers to the definition contained in various other pieces of federal legislation. Generally, the term generally includes toxic pollutants and hazardous chemical wastes.

Planning Note. The legislative history of the election provision makes clear that asbestos and similar substances within buildings, certain natural substances (e.g., radon) and other substances released into drinking water due to deterioration through ordinary use, are considered to be hazardous substances.

Deduction is recaptured. Any cost expensed under the cleanup election that, but for this expense election, would have been capitalized is subject to recapture as ordinary income when the property that was contaminated is sold or otherwise disposed of.

Planning Note. In effect, the amount expensed as a cleanup cost is treated as depreciation on Section 1245 property. Thus, when the property is sold, gain to the extent of the cleanup cost deduction is treated as ordinary income.

> Example (3). In 1998, Sam Waters purchased an acre of land that was contaminated with a hazardous substance. The land cost $1,000 and Sam spent $50,000 in remediation expenses. He elected to claim a current deduction for the $50,000 instead of adding it to his basis in the land. Several years later he sold the land for $60,000. He would be required to treat $50,000 of his gain as ordinary income.

Demolition of structures. The election to expense cleanup costs does not extend to costs incurred in the demolition of structures.

Planning Note. When taxpayers demolish structures that they own, the cost of demolition and/or the any loss sustained because of the demolition may not be deducted. Instead, the cost and/or loss is reflected in the basis of the property. The new provision specifically prevents converting demolition cost and/or loss into a deductible cleanup cost.

> Example (4). In 1998, Jane Croft purchased land upon which an abandoned gas station is located. The land will be used for the production of income. Croft determines that the land and the foundation of the building are contaminated with hazardous substances. She spends $5,000 to have the building torn down and $100,000 for the necessary remediation of the soil. Croft may elect to deduct the $100,000 in cleanup expenses. However, the $5,000 in demolition expenses must be added to her basis in the property.

Mining and solid waste reclamation. In certain circumstances, taxpayers are permitted to claim an advance deduction for the costs that they will incur for certain reclamation and closing costs associated with mines and solid waste disposal properties. The new provision concerning cleanup costs does not extend to these mining and solid waste reclamation costs.

Effective date. This provision applies to expenditures paid or incurred after August 5, 1997, in tax years ending after that date.

Meals Provided for Employer's Convenience

Background

Under current law, only 50 percent of business meal and entertainment expenses are allowed as a business expense deduction. Until the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, no specific statutory provision exempted meals that are provided for the convenience of the employer from the 50-percent limit, even though the cost of these meals are fully excludable from an employee's income under Code Sec. 119.

Employers' deduction for meals provided for convenience of employer.—Meals that are excluded from an employee's income under Code Sec. 119, which deals with meals provided on the employer's premises for the convenience of the employer, are now considered a de minimis fringe benefit under Code Sec. 132. Therefore, meals that are provided at an eating facility for employees are fully deductible by the employer, instead of possibly being subject to the 50-percent limit on deductibility of business meal expenses under Code Sec. 274. For this purpose, the employee is treated as having paid an amount for the meal equal to the direct operating costs of the facility attributable to the meal.

Effective date. The provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

INVOLUNTARY CONVERSIONS AND LIKE-KIND EXCHANGES

Replacement Property from Unrelated Persons

Background

Gain realized by a taxpayer from certain involuntary conversions of property is deferred to the extent that the taxpayer purchases property similar or related in service or use to the converted property within a specified replacement period, which generally begins on the earlier of the date of disposition or the earliest date of the threat or imminence of requisition or condemnation of the converted property and ends two years after the close of the first tax year in which any part of the gain from conversion is realized. The Self-Employed Health Insurance Act (P.L. 104-7) banned C corporations and certain partnerships with corporate partners from using the involuntary conversion gain deferral rules if the replacement property or stock was purchased from a related person, but this ban did not apply to other noncorporate taxpayers. An exception to this related-party rule was provided when the related party had itself acquired the replacement property or stock from an unrelated person within the replacement period.

Expansion of ban on related party acquisition of replacement property.—The ban on the acquisition of involuntary conversion replacement property from related parties that applies to C corporations and certain partnerships with C corporation partners is extended to apply to all other taxpayers (including individuals) who do not meet the $100,000 de minimis exception (see below). Such taxpayers generally cannot defer the recognition of gain from the involuntary conversion of property if the replacement property or stock has been purchased from a related party (as defined in Code Sec. 267(b) or 707(b)(1)) unless the related party acquired the replacement property or stock from an unrelated party during the statutorily provided replacement period. The statutorily provided replacement period generally begins on the earlier of the date of disposition, or the earliest date of the threat or imminence of requisition or condemnation of the converted property and ends two years after the close of the first tax year in which any part of the gain from conversion is realized.

De minimis exception. A $100,000 de minimis exception applies to the rule requiring gain recognition on involuntarily converted property where replacement property is acquired from a related person. The gain realized from such an involuntary conversion can be deferred by taxpayers (other than C corporations and certain partnerships with majority corporate partners) if the aggregate of the amount of realized gain on the property, on which there is a realized gain, is $100,000 or less. In the case of a partnership or S corporation, the $100,000 limitation would apply to both the partnership and each partner and to both the S corporation and each shareholder.

Caution. Although a separate application of the $100,000 limitation to partnerships and their partners has been prescribed, such rule will not affect a partnership or the partners of a partnership in which one or more C corporations own more than 50-percent capital or profits interest in the partnership at the time of the involuntary conversion since such a partnership cannot avail itself of the $100,000 de minimis exception in any event.

Effective date. These provisions apply to involuntary conversions occurring after June 8, 1997.

Act Sec. 1087(a), amending Code Sec. 1033(i); Act Sec. 1087(b). Law at ¶ 5321. Committee Report at ¶ 11,545.

Foreign Replacement Property

Background

Real property is generally treated as like-kind with other real property under Code Sec. 1031 as long as both properties are located either within or outside of the United States. No such requirement applied to personal property prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997.

Foreign and U.S. personal property not like-kind property.—As is currently the case with real property, personal property must now be similar in location of use to be treated as like-kind property for purposes of the Code Sec. 1031 like-kind exchange gain deferral rules. Thus, personal property predominantly used in the United States and personal property predominantly used outside of the United States are not "like-kind" property, even if (1) the exchanged properties are of a "like class," (2) the like-kind exchange gain deferral rules apply to that type of property (i.e., the properties exchanged are not stocks or bonds, inventory, or similar property), and (3) the exchange meets the other requirements of the like-kind exchange rules.

Property described in Code Sec. 168(g)(4) that is used both within and outside of the United States, but which is eligible for accelerated depreciation as if used in the United States, is classified as property predominately used in the United States for the like-kind exchange rules. The predominant use of property surrendered in the exchange is determined based on the use of the property in the two-year period ending on the date the property is relinquished. The predominant use of property acquired in the exchange is based on its use during the two-year period beginning on the date of acquisition.

> Example. On August 1, 1997, Johnston, Inc. relinquished a computer solely used in the U.S. in exchange for a computer that was also solely used in the U.S. Within 20 months after the exchange, Johnston, Inc. will transfer its manufacturing operations to an Eastern European country, and the computer will be one of the assets transferred in the move. As the House Committee Report noted, for Code Sec. 1031 to apply, the property received in the exchange must continue in the same use, either foreign or domestic, for the two-year period immediately after the exchange. Since the computer Johnston, Inc. received in the exchange will not continue to be used in the U.S., the Code Sec. 1031 gain deferral rules will not apply to the exchange. The two-year period is reduced to such lesser time as the taxpayer (or a related person) holds the property relinquished or acquired, unless such shorter holding period is a result of a tax avoidance transaction (or series of such transactions).

Caution. Although the Act did not so specify, it seems apparent that if the exchange of personal property that was thought to be tax-free at the outset later turns out not to be a tax-free exchange because the taxpayer did not continue the same "location of use" after the exchange, the taxpayer would have to file an amended return for the year of the exchange, in order to retroactively report the gain from the exchange. Further, it would seem that the basis of the property would have to be retroactively increased, leading to further complications when computing any allowable depreciation deduction on such property.

Effective date. The "similar in location of use" condition applies to personal property exchanges after June 8, 1997 in tax years ending after such date, unless the exchange is pursuant to a binding contract in effect on such date and at all times thereafter before the disposition of the property. A contract would not fail to be considered to be binding solely because it provided for a sale in lieu of an exchange or the property to be acquired as replacement property was not identified under such contract before June 9, 1997.

Act Sec. 1052(a), amending Code Sec. 1031(h); Act Sec. 1052(b). Law at ¶ 5319. Committee Report at ¶ 11,370.

ACCOUNTING METHODS

Modifications to Long-Term Contract Method

¶ 338

Background

The percentage of completion method relies upon estimated rather than actual contract price and cost to determine gross income from a long-term contract. This use of estimates will inevitably result in the acceleration or deferral of taxes over what would have been reported using actual price and costs throughout the contract term. In order to compensate the taxpayer or the IRS for this difference in taxes, a "look-back" method is applied in the year of contract completion, and is reapplied in later years, for any item of income or cost that is properly taken into account after completion of the contract. The look-back method calculates hypothetical underpayments or overpayments of tax based on actual contract price and costs, to which the taxpayer applies a rate of interest equal to the overpayment rate, compounded daily. Under prior law, this look-back method had to be applied, and related computations had to be made, even when the amounts at issue were de minimis. Furthermore, in some cases, under prior law, it was not clear which interest rate had to be used to compute the "look-back" payment.

Background

Long-term contract look-back method modified.—Under the new law, taxpayers who use a long-term contract method of accounting may elect not to apply the look-back method for a long-term contract and may elect not to reapply the look-back method. Both elections would apply to all long-term contracts completed during the tax year for which the election is made and all subsequent years, unless the election is revoked with the consent of the IRS.

Election not to apply look-back method. A taxpayer may elect not to apply the look-back method for a long-term contract if, for each prior contract year, the cumulative taxable income or loss under the contract, as determined using estimated contract price and costs, is within 10 percent of the cumulative taxable income or loss as determined using actual contract price and costs. Thus, under this election, the taxpayer would not be required to apply the additional steps of the look-back method if the reallocation of gross income upon completion of the contract, using actual rather than estimated contract price and costs, resulted in de minimis changes to the amount of taxable income taken into account for each prior contract year.

> Example (1). Bob Smith enters into a three-year contract, and, upon completion of the contract, he determines that the annual net income under the contract using actual contract price and costs is $100,000, $150,000 and $250,000 respectively for years 1, 2, and 3 under the percentage of completion method. Assuming Smith makes the proper election, he need not apply the look-back method if he reported net income under the contract of between $90,000 and $110,000 as of the end of year 1, and between $225,000 and $275,000 as of the end of year 2.

Election not to reapply the look-back method. A taxpayer may elect not to reapply the look-back method with respect to a contract if, as of the close of any tax year after the contract is completed, the cumulative taxable income or loss under the contract is within 10 percent of the cumulative look-back income or loss as of the close of the most recent year in which the look-back method was applied (or would have applied but for the application of the de minimis exception described above). Amounts that are taken into account after completion of the contract would not be discounted. Thus, an electing taxpayer need not apply or reapply the look-back method if amounts that are taken into account after the completion of the contract are de minimis.

> Example (2). Bob Smith enters into a three-year contract and reports taxable income of $12,250, $15,000 and $12,750, respectively, for years 1 through 3 with respect to the contract. Upon completion of the contract, cumulative look-back income with respect to the contract is $40,000, and 10 percent of such amount is $4,000. After the completion of the contract, Smith incurs additional costs of $2,500 in each of the next three succeeding years (years 4, 5 and 6) with respect to the contract. Under the new provision, assuming Smith makes the proper election, Smith does not have to reapply the look-back method for year 4 because the cumulative amount of contract taxable income ($37,500) is within 10 percent of contract look-back income as of the completion of the contract ($40,000). However, the look-back method must be applied for year 5 because the cumulative amount of contract taxable income ($35,000) is not within 10 percent of contract look-back income as of the completion of the contract ($40,000). Finally, the taxpayer does not reapply the look-back method for year 6 because the cumulative amount of contract taxable income ($32,500) is within 10 percent of contract look-back income as of the last application of the look-back method ($35,000).

Applicable interest rate. For purposes of the look-back method, only one rate of interest will apply for each "accrual period." An accrual period begins on the day after the return due date (without extensions) for the tax year and ends on the return due date for the following tax year. The applicable rate of interest is the overpayment rate in effect for the calendar quarter in which the accrual period begins.

Effective date. These long-term contract elections apply to contracts completed in tax years ending after August 5, 1997. The change in the interest rate calculation applies for purposes of the look-back method applicable to the income forecast method of depreciation in the case of property placed in service after September 13, 1995.

Act Sec. 1211(a), adding Code Sec. 460(b)(6); Act Sec. 1211(b), amending Code Sec. 460(b)(2)(C) and adding Code Sec. 460(b)(7); Act Sec. 1211(c). Law at ¶ 5163. Committee Report at ¶ 12,165.

Background

Traditionally, the IRS has taken the position that a business may not claim a deduction for inventory shrinkage (i.e., inventory loss due to undetected theft, breakage, or bookkeeping errors) if the amount of the shrinkage was not verified by the taking of a physical year-end inventory. However, some recent court decisions have permitted taxpayers to claim the deduction provided the deduction was based upon a sound method of determining the amount of the shrinkage and the taxpayer's income was still clearly reflected (e.g., Dayton Hudson Corp., 101 TC 462, Dec. 49,404).

Estimates for inventory shrinkage permitted.—A business is generally permitted to determine its year-end closing inventory by taking a reasonable deduction for shrinkage (e.g., inventory loss due to undetected theft). Thus, under this new provision, a business is not required to actually take a year-end inventory in order to determine if any inventory shrinkage has occurred. However, the deduction for the estimated shrinkage may only be claimed if the business:

(1) normally takes a physical count of its inventories at each business location on a regular and consistent basis; and

(2) makes proper adjustments to its inventories and to its estimating methods to the extent its estimates are more or less than the actual shrinkage.

Example (1). On January 4, 1998, Afton, Inc., took an inventory of its goods for sale. At year-end, on December 31, 1998, Afton did not take a year-end inventory. However, when it filed its 1998 tax return, the corporation claimed a deduction for inventory shrinkage. Based on these facts, Afton would not qualify for such a deduction because it did not take inventories on a regular and consistent basis.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in Example 1, except that Afton took an inventory every two months during 1998. However, it did not take a December inventory. Based upon these facts, Afton would probably be permitted to make the estimate for inventory shrinkage because it did take inventories on a regular and consistent basis. This would be especially true if Afton took an inventory early in 1999 and made the proper adjustment to reflect the actual amount of inventory shrinkage.

Planning Note. The legislative history to this provision makes clear that Congress did not take a position whether estimates of inventory shrinkage were permitted under prior law. Thus, if a business had been using an estimate for its inventory shrinkage and the IRS has challenged this method, the courts may well sustain the taxpayer's position provided that it used a sound method and its income was not distorted.

Planning Note. According to the legislative history of this provision, Congress expects the IRS to issue safe harbor provisions that may be used for the purpose of estimating inventory shrinkage. The legislative history also outlines a safe harbor which is described below.

Safe harbor provision. Congress anticipates that the following safe harbor provision may be used for taxpayers primarily engaged in the retail trade (i.e., the resale of personal property to the general public). When physical inventories are normally taken at each location at least annually, a safe harbor method will be established by the IRS that will use a historical ratio of shrinkage to sales, multiplied by total sales between the date of the last physical inventory and the year-end. This ratio is to be based on the actual shrinkage established by all physical inventories taken during the most recent three tax years and the sales for the related periods. The ratio is to be separately determined for each store or department in the taxpayer's store. The ratio cannot be adjusted by the taxpayer's judgment or other factors (e.g., floors or caps).

The legislative history shows that Congress expects that the estimated shrinkage determined under the consistent application of the safe harbor method will not be required to be recalculated, through a look-back adjustment or otherwise, to reflect the results of physical inventories taken after the end of the year.

In the situation of a new store or department in the store that has not verified shrinkage by a physical inventory in each of the most recent three tax years, the historical ratio is the average of the historical ratios of the taxpayer's other stores or departments. Retailers using the last in, first out method of inventory are expected to be required to allocate shrinkage among their various inventory pools in a reasonable and consistent manner.

Estimate treated as change in accounting method. If a taxpayer wants to utilize this new provision and begin to estimate its inventory shrinkage, the taxpayer will be treated as if it changed its method of accounting. It is not necessary to secure the permission of the IRS in order to make the change. In addition, any adjustment to income required by Code Sec. 481 because of this change in the method of accounting are required to be reflected over a four- year period.

Effective date. This provision is effective for tax years ending after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 961, amending Code Sec. 471(b). Law at ¶ 5167. Committee Report at ¶ 10,835.

Background

Under prior law, only dealers in securities (e.g., stocks and bonds) used the "mark-to-market" accounting method to compute their income. Generally, under the mark-to-market rules, any securities held by the dealer as inventory must be valued at their fair market value. Any security that is not an inventory item and that is held by the dealer at the end of the tax year is treated as though it had been sold at its fair market value and any gain or loss on the deemed sale is recognized. Gain or loss that is subsequently realized upon the actual sale of the security is adjusted for the gain or loss that was recognized at the earlier date under the mark-to-market rules.

Dealers in commodities and traders in securities or commodities may elect mark-to-market.—Commodities dealers and traders of securities or commodities are now permitted to make an election to use the mark-to-market accounting method. Previously, the mark-to-market rules only applied to securities dealers.

Caution. Dealers in securities are still generally required to use the mark-to-market rules for valuing their inventory. This new provision gives the option to make the mark-to-market election only to commodities dealers and traders in securities or commodities.

Traders v. dealers. Traders are taxpayers who are in the business of actively selling, buying or exchanging securities or commodities in the market. On the other hand, dealers deal directly with their own customers when they regularly buy or sell securities or commodities in the course of their business.

Commodities dealers. When a dealer in commodities elects to use the mark-to-market method for valuing commodities that are held by it in its business, the dealer will generally be subject to the same rules that previously applied only to securities dealers. Basically, these rules provide that a commodity held as inventory must be valued at its fair market value. Any commodity that is not inventory and that is held at the end of the year will be treated as if it was sold at its fair market value.

Commodity defined. For these purposes, a "commodity" is defined as:

(1) any commodity that is actively traded;

(2) any notional principal contract with respect to any commodity that is actively traded;

(3) any evidence of an interest in, or a derivative instrument in, any of the commodities described in (1) and (2), above; and

(4) any position that (a) is not a commodity described in (1), (2), or (3), above; (b) is a hedge with respect to the commodity; and (c) is clearly identified in the dealer's records as meeting these requirements before the close of the day on which it was acquired or entered into.

Caution. With respect to the requirement that the dealer identify the commodity before the close of the day it was acquired or entered into, the IRS has been given the authority to modify the deadline.

Making the election. A commodities dealer may make the mark-to-market election without the consent of the IRS. However, once the election has been made, the election may not be revoked without the permission of the IRS.

Traders in securities or commodities. When a taxpayer engaged in the business of trading securities or commodities makes the election to use the mark-to-market method of valuation, the following rules apply:

(1) the trader is required to recognize gain or loss on any security or commodity held in connection with its business at the close of its tax year;

(2) gain or loss is determined as if the security or commodity were sold at its fair market value on the last business day of the tax year; and

(3) the gain or loss is taken into account by the trader for that tax year.

The IRS is given the authority to modify the time periods set forth above.

Planning Note. The mark-to-market election requires the trader to recognize gain or loss on securities or commodities that it still owns. However, when the trader subsequently sells such property, it may take into account this prior gain or loss in order to determine the amount that it actually realized from the sale.

Caution. The legislative history indicates that Congress did not intend that a securities trader could mark to market loans made to customers, or receivables or debt instruments acquired from customers, that are not received or acquired in connection with its business of being a securities trader.

Securities or commodities held for investment are excluded. When a trader in securities or a commodities trader or dealer makes the election to use the mark-to-market rules, only securities or commodities held by the taxpayer and used in its business are subject to the election. Securities or commodities held for investment and so identified are not subject to the election. In order to have securities or commodities exempt from the mark-to-market rules, the trader must:

(1) establish to the satisfaction of the IRS that the property has no connection to the business activities of the trader; and

(2) clearly identify the investment property in its records.

If a security or commodity is identified as investment property and then becomes business property, the mark-to-market rules apply to changes in the value of the property that occur after the time it became business property.

Caution. Congress was concerned about issues involving the ability of traders to identify securities or commodities held for investment. Thus, the taxpayer must be able to show by clear and convincing evidence that the security or commodity bears no relation to the business activities of the trader in order to avoid the mark to market rule for such property. The legislative history indicates that any security that hedges another security that is held in connection with the trader's business cannot be classified as investment property.

Planning Note. Securities or commodities that are held for investment on the day of enactment must be identified as investment property on or before the 30th day after this provision is enacted into law.

Caution. In order to exclude investment securities or investment commodities from the mark-to-market election, the taxpayer must clearly identify the investment property on its records. In most situations, identification must be made before the close of the day on which the property was acquired, originated, or entered into. The IRS has regulatory authority to modify this time period.

Any security to which the mark-to-market rule applies and which was acquired by the taxpayer in the course of the business of being a security trader is not taken into account when applying the Code Sec. 1259 constructive sales rules on appreciated financial positions.

Making the election. At this time, Congress has not provided any details concerning how a trader is to make the election. However, it is clear that an election must be made for each separate business of the trader.

Caution. The taxpayer does not need the permission of the IRS to make the election. However, once made, the election is irrevocable, unless the IRS grants permission to revoke the election. Thus, care should be exercised before the election is made.

> Example. Marsha Smith owns the following businesses: (1) securities trading and (2) commodities trading. If Smith wants to use the mark-to-market rule for both businesses, she must make two separate elections. On the other hand, she may make an election to use the mark-to-market rule for just one of her businesses.

Accounting change. Any taxpayer that makes the election to use the mark-to-market rules is treated as though it changed its method of accounting. Any adjustment required under Code Sec. 481 as a result of this change in accounting is to be taken into account ratably over four tax years. The four-year period begins with the year in which the election is first effective.

Planning Note. According to the Conference Committee Report, Congress intended that the special rule pertaining to Code Sec. 481 adjustments applies only to taxpayers that make the mark-to-market election for the tax year that includes the date this provision was enacted into law. Any election made in a subsequent tax year is to be governed by rules and procedures that will be established by the IRS.

Effective date. The election applies to tax years ending after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1001(b), redesignating Code Sec. 475(e) as (g) and adding new subsections (e) and (f); Act Sec. 1001(d)(4). Law at ¶ 5169. Committee Report at ¶ 11,120.

Manufacturer-to-Dealer Installment Sale Election

Background

As a general rule, the installment sales method of accounting may not be used by dealers in personal property. However, under prior law, if specific requirements were met, a manufacturer of tangible personal property could use the installment sales method to report the income from sales of property to its dealers. In order to be able to use the installment sales method, it had to be intended that the property was to be sold or leased by the dealer. In addition, the dealer had to be obligated to make principal payments only when it sold or rented the property, and the manufacturer had to have the right to repurchase the property at a fixed or determinable price within nine months of selling the property to the dealer.

Repeal of special installment sales rule.—The special provision that allowed manufacturers of tangible personal property to use the installment method to report income from sales to their dealers has been repealed.

Repeal treated as change in method of accounting. A manufacturer that is affected by the repeal of this provision will be treated as though it changed its method of accounting. The change will be treated as though the IRS has given its consent. Any adjustments required by this change in accounting method must be taken into account ratably over four tax years. The four-year period begins with the first tax year that starts after the date that the repeal is enacted into law.

Planning Note. Because the required change in accounting is treated as though the IRS has already given its permission, the manufacturer need not file Form 3115, Application for Change in Accounting Method.

Caution. Even though the manufacturer need not file Form 3119 with the IRS asking for permission to change its method of accounting, it is possible that the IRS, at a later date, will require taxpayers to indicate on their tax returns that the change was made.

Effective date. The repeal is effective for tax years beginning more than one year after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1088(a), repealing Act Sec. 811(c)(2) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986; Act Sec. 1088(b). Law at ¶ 7034. Committee Report at ¶ 11,550.

Pooled Debt Obligations

Background

Real estate mortgage investment conduit (REMIC) interests, mortgages held by REMICs, and debt instruments whose principal payments may be accelerated are subject to a special rule for computing original issue discount (OID) on the debt. Under this rule, if a borrower can reduce the yield on the debt by prepaying it, the amount of OID on such debt is determined by making a reasonable assumption regarding the portion of the debt that will be prepaid. Under prior law, a taxpayer that held pooled debt instruments, such as a pool of credit card receivables, was not subject to this rule. Thus, the holder was able to assume that all of the debt would be timely paid and avoid accrual of interest income on the debt.

OID on pooled debt.—The rule for determining original issue discount (OID) on interests in and mortgages held by real estate mortgage investment conduits (REMICs) and on other debt instruments whose principal payments may be accelerated now applies to pooled debt instruments. Pooled debt instruments are debt instruments whose yield may be affected by prepayments or other events to the extent set forth in regulations. One example of pooled debt is a pool of credit card receivables on which interest must be paid if the borrowers do not pay their account balances by a particular date.

Under the rule, interest or OID must be accrued on pooled debt based on a reasonable assumption regarding the timing and portion of the debt that will be prepaid. According to the House Committee Report, if payments occur soon after the end of the year and before the taxpayer files its tax return for the year, interest may be accrued according to the taxpayer's actual payment experience, rather than on reasonable assumptions.

> Example. A credit card issuer charges interest on account balances that are not paid within 21 days after the close of the billing period but not on account balances that are timely paid. The taxpayer holds pooled debt of $1,000,000 on December 31, 1998, which will not be considered overdue until January 15, 1999. The taxpayer must accrue interest for 1998 based on a assumption that a portion of the $1,000,000 will not be paid on time. However, the accrued amount may be adjusted in 1999 to reflect the actual payment of the outstanding credit account balances.

Specifically, the daily portion of OID on pooled debt, as well as on REMIC interests, REMIC mortgages, and debt on which payment may be accelerated, is determined by allocating to each day in an accrual period the ratable portion of the excess of: (1) the present value of the remaining payments plus payments during the accrual period of amounts included in the stated redemption price of the debt instrument, over (2) the adjusted issue price of the debt instrument at the beginning of the period.

Planning Note. A small business engaged in the trade or business of selling tangible personal property at retail will not be subject to this rule for debt instruments incurred in the ordinary course of its trade or business while the debt is held by the business.

Change in accounting method. For any taxpayer who is required to change its method of accounting for the first tax year beginning after August 5, 1997 in order to comply with the new rules for pooled debt obligations, the change will be treated as initiated by the taxpayer and made with the IRS's consent. The net amount of Code Sec. 481 adjustments required to effect the change must be taken into account ratably over four tax years beginning with the first tax year beginning after August 5, 1997.

Caution. The Conference Committee Report clarifies that the IRS has discretion over whether or not to grant permission for taxpayers to change their method of accounting for pooled debt where the requests are pending for years before August 5, 1997.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Assignment of Workers' Compensation Liability

¶ 347

Background

Under prior law, the exclusion under Code Sec. 130 for qualified personal injury liability assignments did not include amounts assigned for assuming a liability to pay compensation under a workers' compensation act.

Assignment of workers' compensation liability.—The exclusion under Code Sec. 130 for qualified personal injury liability assignments has been extended to amounts assigned for assuming a liability to pay compensation under any workers' compensation act. The exclusion is available to the assignee for the amount received to the extent that it does not exceed the aggregate cost of any qualified funding asset. The liability must be assumed from a person who is a party to the workers' compensation claim. Also, the periodic payments made under the assignment must be fixed and determinable as to amount and time of payment; they cannot be subject to acceleration, deferral, increase or decrease by the recipient; the assignee's obligation cannot be greater than that of the person whose liability is assumed; and the payments must be excludable from the recipient's gross income under Code Sec. 104(a)(1).

Effective date. The provision is effective for workers' compensation claims filed after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 962(a), amending Code Sec. 130(c). Law at ¶ 5053. Committee Report at ¶ 10,840.

STATE AND LOCAL BONDS

Mortgage Subsidy Financing

Background

Current law allows an exemption from tax for interest earned on qualified mortgage revenue bonds. Generally, limitations restrict the availability of mortgage subsidy bonds on first-time buyers and also impose limits on income and purchase prices. These limits do not apply if the loans are made to finance homes in targeted distressed areas. However, under prior law, no exception to the requirements existed for bonds used to finance rebuilding of homes in Presidentially declared disaster areas.

Financing for residences in disaster areas.—Interest on mortgage revenue bonds, qualified mortgage bonds, and qualified veteran's mortgage bonds is tax exempt, provided certain requirements are satisfied. Currently, three requirements that are normally applicable in order to qualify for tax exemption on mortgage revenue bonds do not apply if the financing is used for homes in a statutorily prescribed economically distressed area. The Act now waives these requirements for loans made to finance homes in Presidentially declared disaster areas as well. The first requirement that is waived exempts participants from meeting a three-year nonownership requirement. Second, the purchase price requirement or the income limitations are applied as if the residence were a targeted area residence. Thus, the purchase price of a bond-financed residence may not exceed 110 percent of the average area purchase price. Third, with respect to income limitations, one third of the financing may be provided without regard to income limitations set forth for other mortgage financing.

A residence is located in a disaster area if the area is determined by the President to warrant assistance from the federal government under the Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, as in effect on August 5, 1997. Financing must be provided within two years after the date the disaster is declared.

Effective date. The provisions are effective for loans financed with bonds issued after December 31, 1996 and before January 1, 1999.

Act Sec. 914, adding Code Sec. 143(k)(11). Law at ¶ 5061. Committee Report at ¶ 10,615.

Virgin Island Bonds

Background ___

A governmental bond that is issued after 1985 may generally be advance refunded one time. Currently, Virgin Islands bonds are required to be secured with a priority first lien claim on specified revenue streams instead of being permitted to issue multiple bond issues secured on a parity basis by a common pool of revenues.

Refunding rules for certain tax-exempt bonds modified.—Governmental bonds issued by the Virgin Islands that were first advance refunded before June 9, 1997, are allowed one additional advance refunding. The refunding is allowed if the Virgin Islands debt provisions are changed to repeal the current priority first lien requirement. An advance refunding is any refunding where all of the refunded bonds are not redeemed within 90 days after the refunding bonds are issued.

Effective date. The non-Code law change that would provide for an additional advance refunding is effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 967. Law at ¶ 7015A. Committee Report at ¶ 10,865.

Background ___

Interest on private activity bonds issued on behalf of Code Sec. 501(c)(3) organizations other than hospitals is not taxable, subject to certain restrictions. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, one restriction limited the aggregate face amount of bonds issued on behalf of a 501(c)(3) organization to $150 million.

Repeal of $150 million limit on qualified 501(c)(3) bonds.—The Act terminates the $150 million limitation in the case of bonds issued after August 5, 1997 if the bonds are part of an issue, 95 percent or more of the net proceeds of which are to be used to finance capital expenditures incurred after such date.

The Conference Committee Report clarifies that, because the provision applies only to bonds issued with respect to capital expenditures incurred after August 5, 1997, the $150 million limitation will continue to govern issuance of other nonhospital qualified Code Sec. 501(c)(3) bonds (for example, refunding bonds or new-money bonds for capital expenditures incurred before August 5, 1997). The IRS is expected to provide guidance and interpretative rules on the application of this limit.

Effective date. The provision applies to bonds issued after August 5, 1997 to finance capital expenditures incurred after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 222, adding Code Sec. 145(b)(5). Law at ¶ 5063. Committee Report at ¶ 10,220.

ARBITRAGE PROFITS

Limitation on Unspent Proceeds

¶ 355

Background

Interest on private activity bonds (bonds issued by a state or local government to finance private parties) is generally taxable, unless the financed activity is specified in the Code and at least 95 percent of the proceeds are used to finance the specified activity. State and local bond issuers must also satisfy arbitrage restrictions for issued bonds. Arbitrage profits from investing bond proceeds in investments unrelated to the governmental purpose of the bond must be rebated to the federal government. No rebate is required if the gross receipts of an issue are spent for the governmental purpose of the borrowing within six months after the date of issuance. Until the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, this six-month exception was deemed to be satisfied by issuers of certain government bonds and qualified Code Sec. 501(c)(3) bonds if (1) all the proceeds other than the amount not exceeding the lesser of five percent, or $100,000, are so spent within six months and (2) the remaining proceeds were spent within one year after the bond was issued.

Repeal of $100,000 limitation on unspent proceeds under one-year rebate exception.—Under the Act, the $100,000 limit on proceeds that may remain unspent after six months is eliminated. Thus, if at least 95 percent of the proceeds of these bonds are spent within six months after their issuance, and the remainder in one year, the six-month rebate exception is deemed to be satisfied and the arbitrage restrictions will not apply.

Effective date. The provision is effective for bonds issued after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1441, amending Code Sec. 148(f)(4)(B)(ii); Act Sec. 1445. Law at ¶ 5065. Committee Report at ¶ 12,915.

Construction Issues

¶ 356

Background

Under current law, arbitrage rebate requirements do not apply to certain construction bond issues if the issues are spent at specified rates during the 24-month period after the bonds are issued. Under prior law, the exception did not apply to bond proceeds invested after the 24-month period as part of a reasonably required reserve or replacement fund, a bona fide debt service fund, or to other investments such as sinking funds. Issuers of construction bonds could elect to comply with a penalty scheme in lieu of rebating arbitrage profits if the spending requirements were not met.

Rebate exception under construction bond rules.—Earnings on bond proceeds invested in bona fide debt service funds are excepted from the arbitrage rebate requirement and the penalty requirement of the 24-month exception if the spending requirements of Code Sec. 148(f)(4)(C)(2) are met. According to the House Committee Report, the short-term nature of investments in bona fide debt service funds results in only a limited potential for generating arbitrage profits. The administrative complexity of calculating rebate on construction bond proceeds prompted the exemption from the rebate rules in cases where the spending requirements of the arbitrage rebate rules are met.

Effective date. The provision applies to bonds issued after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1442, adding Code Sec. 148(f)(4)(C)(xvii); Act Sec. 1445. Law at ¶ 5065. Committee Report at ¶ 12,920.

Nonpurpose Investments

Background

Under current law, the direct investment of profits earned on a bond issue in certain high-yield nonpurpose investments may cause such bonds to be classified as arbitrage bonds. Prior law provided that one exception to this rule allowed bond proceeds to be invested at materially higher yields at any time during a bond year to 150 percent of the debt service for that bond year. This restriction was enacted before the imposition of other rules restricting the amount of arbitrage profits earned on nonpurpose investments.

Repeal of debt service yield restriction.—The new law repeals the exception to arbitrage bond classification, which allowed private activity bond proceeds to be invested at materially higher yields provided they did not at any time exceed 150 percent of the debt service for the bond year. According to the House Committee Report, the 150-percent rule, which was enacted prior to other arbitrage bond restrictions, is no longer necessary. Bonds must continue to comply with comprehensive yield restrictions and arbitrage rebate requirements and must maintain reserve funds within the limits prescribed under Code Sec. 148.

Effective date. The provision applies to bonds issued after August 5, 1997.

¶ 358

Expired provisions.—Two exceptions to the arbitrage rebate requirement and the pooled financing requirement for arbitrage bonds exist for certain qualified student loan bonds issued before January 1, 1989. These provisions have been repealed as deadwood.

Effective date. The provision is effective for bonds issued after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1444(a), striking Code Sec. 148(c)(2)(B) and redesignating Code Sec. 148(c)(2)(C), (D) and (E) as Code Sec. 148(c)(2)(B), (C) and (D); Act Sec. 1444(b), striking Code Sec. 148(f)(4)(E); Act Sec. 1445. Law at ¶ 5065. Committee Report at ¶ 12,930.

Arbitrage Rebate Exception

Background

Under prior law, the "small issuer" exception to tax-exempt bond arbitrage rebate rules could not apply when a governmental unit expected to issue more than $5,000,000 of tax-exempt bonds during a calendar year.

Expansion of the arbitrage rebate exception for certain bonds.—The dollar limit of the "small issuer" exception to the rule requiring a tax-exempt bond issuer to rebate arbitrage profits earned on investments unrelated to the purpose of the bond issuance is raised for tax-exempt bonds issued after 1997 that are used to finance public school capital expenditures. As was the case under prior law, the bonds cannot be private activity bonds and must be issued by a governmental unit with general taxing powers. The $5,000,000 per calendar year limit on the amount of such tax-exempt bonds that can be issued under the "small issuer" exception is raised by up to an additional $5,000,000, equal to the aggregate face amount of the bonds issued that is attributable to financing the construction of public school facilities. Thus, according to the Senate Committee Report, small issuers will continue to benefit from the exception to arbitrage rebate if they issue no more than $10 million in governmental bonds per calendar year and no more than $5 million of the bonds is used to finance expenditures other than for public school capital expenditures.

Caution. The Senate Committee Report indicates that the bonds must be issued to finance public school capital expenditures incurred after December 31, 1997.

Effective date. The expansion of the arbitrage rebate exception applies to bonds issued after December 31, 1997.

FARMERS

Income Averaging

¶ 361

Background

Under prior law, farmers could not average income over any period of years. Prior to the Tax Reform Act of 1986, individuals could reduce their tax liability by averaging income over a number of years.

Income averaging available to farmers.—An individual engaged in a farming business may elect to average farm income over three years. The tax imposed in any tax year will equal the sum of the tax computed on taxable income reduced by "elected farm income" plus the increase in tax that would result if taxable income for each of the three prior tax years were increased by an amount equal to one-third of the elected farm income. The Conference Committee Report states that the election is irrevocable, except as will be provided in regulations.

Farming business and income. Elected farm income means the amount of taxable income attributable to any farming business that is specifically subject to this three-year averaging election. Gain from the sale or disposition of property, other than land, regularly used by the farmer for a substantial period in such a farming business is treated as attributable to a "farming business." A farming business is the trade or business of farming, including operating a nursery or sod farm, or the raising or harvesting of trees bearing fruit, nuts or other crops, or ornamental trees.

Planning Note. The three-year income averaging election is provided in recognition of the sometimes erratic nature of the farming business. Farmers are confronted with numerous variables beyond their control that greatly affect cash-flow, profits, losses and ultimately tax liability. This provision is designed to smooth out the economic disparities that may occur from year to year. However, it is important to keep in mind that the farmer should "do the math" because this election will not always be beneficial. For example, a farmer who suffered low-income years followed by a very good year will benefit as farm income taxed at the 28-percent rate or higher is shifted to the 15-percent bracket, while a farmer consistently in the 28-percent tax bracket would be worse off by averaging farm income.

Guidelines. An adjustment under this election for any tax year is taken into account when applying this provision to subsequent tax years. Also, the election is not available to estates or trusts, and, according to the Conference Committee Report, it does not apply for employment tax or alternative minimum tax purposes. Moreover, the Conference Committee Report suggests that the provision does not require the recalculation of the tax liability of any other taxpayer, including a minor child required to use the tax rates of his or her parents under Code Sec. 1(g). Further, regulations will be provided regarding the order and manner in which items of income, gain, deduction or loss, or limitations on tax will be taken into account, as well as the treatment of any short tax years.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997, and before January 1, 2001.

AMT and Installment Sales

Background

Under prior law, it was not clear whether farmers could use the installment method to account for dispositions of property used or produced on a farm for purposes of computing their alternative minimum tax (AMT) liability. For regular tax purposes, dealers in personal property cannot use the installment method to account for the sale of such property. Under the regular tax system, dealer dispositions do not include sales of property used or produced in the trade or business of farming. However, no similar exception applied under the AMT system. Under the AMT, the installment method could not be used to account for the disposition of any property that was the stock in trade of the taxpayer or any other property of a kind that would have been properly included in the inventory of the taxpayer if held at year-end, or property held by the taxpayer for sale to customers.

Background

The IRS held in IRS Letter Ruling 9640003 that the installment method could not be used for sales of property produced on a farm, for purposes of computing an AMT liability. Later, the IRS announced that it would not apply this position for tax years beginning before 1997 (Notice 97-13, January 28, 1997), so long as the farmer changed its method of accounting for installment sales in post-1996 tax years. Congress intended to resolve this issue in favor of the farmer.

Treatment of installment sales for AMT purposes.—Code Sec. 56(a)(6), which generally provides that the installment method may not be used to compute alternative minimum tax liability in the case of a post-March 1, 1986 disposition of stock in trade, inventory, or property held primarily for sale to customers is repealed. The repeal should primarily benefit farmers insofar as dealers of personal property (with the exception of farmers) are not allowed to use the installment method for regular tax purposes (Code Sec. 453(l)(2)(A)).

Effective date. The repeal applies to dispositions in tax years beginning after December 31, 1987. However, under a special rule, the repeal also applies to cash-basis farmers in the case of a tax year beginning in 1987.

Suspense Accounts for Family Farm Corporations

Background

A family farming corporation with gross receipts that exceed $25,000,000 is required to use the accrual method of accounting for the farming business. Generally, a family farming corporation is one where at least 50 percent of the stock is owned by the same family. Under prior law, when a family corporation was required to change to the accrual method it was permitted to establish a suspense account. The suspense account acted as a relief provision in that its purpose was to permit the corporation to defer reporting the income that resulted from the required change in its accounting method.

Suspense accounts may no longer be established.—When a family farm corporation is required to change from the cash method to the accrual method in the year that its gross receipts exceeds $25,000,000, the corporation may no longer establish a suspense account to defer reporting the income that results from the change in its method of accounting. Instead, such corporations are now subject to the same rules as large farming corporations. That is, the income adjustment caused by the change in accounting (i.e., the "Code Sec. 481(a)" adjustment) is spread over a period of 10 years beginning with the year of the change in the method of accounting.

Example (1). Silo, Inc., is a family farm corporation that files its corporate tax return on a calendar year basis. The corporation's gross income has always been $25,000,000 or less, and it has used the cash method of accounting. However, in 1997 its gross receipts will exceed $25,000,000. As a result, Silo, Inc. must convert to the accrual method of accounting. Any additional income that results from this change in its method of accounting may no longer be placed in a suspense account. Instead, the corporation must recognize the income over a 10-year period as required by Code Sec. 447(f)(3).

Existing suspense accounts will be phased out. Generally, a family farm corporation with an existing suspense account will be required to include a portion of the suspense account in its gross income over a number of years. The amount to be included in each year's gross income is equal to the lesser of:

(1) the amount that would ratably reduce the remaining amount in the suspense account to zero over the first 20 tax years; or

(2) 50 percent of the taxable income of the corporation's taxable income for the year, or if the corporation has no taxable income for the year, the amount of its net operating loss for the tax year.

For any tax year during the period over which a suspense account is being phased out, a corporation's taxable income or net operating loss will be determined without regard to any amount included in income from the suspense account.

Example (2). Tiller, Inc., is a family farm corporation that files on a calendar year basis and that was required to change from the cash method of accounting to the accrual method a few years ago. For the year of the change, Tiller was able to place $50,000 in a suspense account. Under the new law, the suspense account will be phased out. For 1997, Tiller's taxable income is $100,000. As a result, Tiller must include $2,500 of the suspense account in its gross income because this amount is the lesser of $50,000 ÷ 20 years ($2,500) or 50% of $100,000 in taxable income ($50,000).

Planning Note. The rule that required the acceleration of the recovery of suspense accounts when the gross receipts of the taxpayer decreased, has been repealed.

Amounts remaining in suspense accounts after 20 years. If any amount remains in a suspense account after 20 years, the amount to be included in the corporation's gross income on a yearly basis is to be computed under the same formula used for the first 20 years.

Planning Note. According to the legislative history, it is the intent of Congress that in the case of a family farm corporation that elects S corporation status, the net operating loss and 50 percent of taxable income limitations are to be determined by taking into account all the items of income, gain, deduction and loss of the corporation, whether or not such items are separately stated under Code Sec. 1366.

Effective date. This provision is effective for tax years ending after June 8, 1997.

Weather-Related Livestock Sales

Background

A cash method taxpayer whose principal trade or business is farming and who is forced to sell livestock due to drought conditions may elect to include income from the livestock sale in the tax year following the year of the sale. In addition, the sale of livestock, other than poultry, that is held for draft, breeding, or dairy purposes in excess of the number of livestock that would have been sold but for the drought conditions is treated as an involuntary conversion. Consequently, gain from the sale of such livestock could be deferred by reinvesting the sale proceeds in similar property within a two-year period. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, this election to defer the recognition of gain until the tax year following the year of the sale of livestock, and the "involuntary conversion" election to defer gain through the reinvestment of livestock sale proceeds, only applied to sales on account of drought conditions; it did not apply to sales on account of flood or other weather-related conditions that resulted in an area being designated as eligible for federal assistance.

Livestock sold on account of weather-related conditions.—The election to defer the recognition of income from the sale of livestock sold on account of drought, or to treat the sale of livestock sold on account of drought as an involuntary conversion, is extended to sales that occur as a result of flood or other weather-related conditions that resulted in the area being designated as eligible for federal assistance. Thus, the sale of livestock, other than poultry, that are held for draft, breeding, or dairy purposes in excess of the number of livestock that would have been sold but for the weather-related conditions is treated as an involuntary conversion. Similarly, a cash basis taxpayer whose principal trade or business is farming and who is forced to sell livestock due to drought, floods or other weather related conditions may elect to include income from the sale of the livestock in the tax year following the year of sale. This elective deferral is available only if the taxpayer establishes that, under the taxpayer's usual business practices, the sale would not have occurred but for the adverse weather-related conditions.

> Example. William Robert Smith, a calendar year taxpayer, normally sells 100 head of beef cattle per year. As the result of flood conditions existing during 1997, Smith sells 135 head during that year. Smith realizes $35,100 of income from the sale of the 135 head. On August 9, 1997, as a result of the flood, the affected area was declared a disaster area and thereby eligible for federal assistance. The amount of income which Smith may defer until 1998, presuming the other applicable conditions are met is $9,100 ($35,100, the total income from sales of beef cattle, divided by 135, the total number of beef cattle sold, multiplied by 35, the excess number of beef sold (135 − 100)).

Effective date. These livestock-sale provisions apply to sales and exchanges after December 31, 1996.

→ Caution: Act Sec. 1175 was canceled by President Clinton on August 11, 1997, pursuant to his authority under the Line Item Veto Act (P.L. 104-130). As we go to press, this provision is deemed to be stricken from the Act. However, under the procedures set out in P.L. 104-130 (or as the result of a successful challenge of its constitutionality), this provision may be reinstated at a later date.←

Background

If certain requirements are satisfied, a taxpayer may defer recognition of gain on the sale of qualified securities to an employee stock ownership plan ("ESOP") or to an eligible worker-owned cooperative, to the extent that the taxpayer reinvests the proceeds in qualified replacement property. Gain is recognized when the taxpayer disposes of the qualified replacement property. One of the requirements that must be satisfied for deferral to apply is that, immediately after the sale, the ESOP must own at least 30 percent of the stock of the corporation issuing the qualified securities. In general, qualified securities are securities issued by a domestic C corporation that has no stock outstanding that is readily tradable on an established securities market. Deferral treatment does not apply to gain on the sale of qualified securities by a C corporation. Before the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, there was no similar gain deferral provision that applied to the sale of stock of a qualified refiner or processor to an eligible farmers' cooperative.

Nonrecognition of gain on sale of stock to farmers' cooperatives.—A taxpayer may elect to defer the recognition of gain from the sale of stock of a qualified agricultural refiner or processor to an eligible farm cooperative under the Code Sec. 1042 gain deferral rules that apply to the sale of stock to employee stock ownership plans (ESOPs) or to worker-owned cooperatives. Assuming the proper election is made and the other applicable conditions satisfied, the gain from the sale will generally not be recognized to the extent that the sale proceeds are timely invested in qualified replacement property, which is generally the stock, or security, of an unrelated domestic operating corporation that did not have excessive passive investment income. The basis of the qualified replacement property is reduced by the gain not recognized. Thus, the recognition of such gain is deferred until the qualified replacement property is sold.

Qualified refiner or processor and eligible farmer' cooperative. Generally, a qualified refiner or processor is a domestic corporation, substantially all of the activities of which consist of the active conduct of the trade or business of refining or processing agricultural or horticultural products. However, such a corporation is qualified only if, during the one-year period ending on the date of sale, it buys more than one-half of such products to be refined or processed from the eligible farmers' cooperative that is purchasing its stock or from the farmers who make up such cooperative that is purchasing its stock. An eligible farmers' cooperative is an organization that is treated as a cooperative for federal income tax purposes and that is engaged in the marketing of agricultural or horticultural products.

Special rules for sale of qualified refiner or processor stock. There are a few differences between the gain deferral rules that apply to the sale of stock to an ESOP or a worker-owned cooperative and the gain deferral rules that apply to the sale of stock of a qualified refiner or processor. The eligible farmers' cooperative is treated in the same manner as an eligible worker-owned cooperative, except that the majority of its board of directors does not have to be elected by the members on the basis of one person, one vote. Also, deferral from the sale of a qualified refiner or processor's stock is available only if, immediately after the sale, the eligible farmers' cooperative owns 100 percent of the qualified refiner or processor. Furthermore, the determination of whether any stock in the domestic corporation is a qualified security is made without regard to whether the stock is an employer security. Moreover, the gain deferral provision applies even if the stock of the qualified refiner or processor is publicly traded or is sold by a C corporation.

Effective date. The nonrecognition rules apply to sales after December 31, 1997.

EMPOWERMENT ZONES

Additional Empowerment Zones

¶ 371

Background

In an attempt to provide economic revitalization to distressed urban and rural areas, special tax incentives are provided for nine empowerment zones (three rural and six urban) and 95 enterprise communities (30 rural and 65 urban). Certain criteria relating to each area's population, degree of distress, size, and rate of poverty must be met for an area to be designated as an empowerment zone under current law. In addition, prior to amendment by the Act, the aggregate population of all urban zones could not exceed 750,000 persons.

The six urban empowerment zones are Atlanta, Baltimore, Chicago, Detroit, New York City, and Philadelphia-Camden. The three rural empowerment zones are Kentucky Highlands, Kentucky; Mid-Delta, Mississippi; and Rio Grande Valley, Texas. These areas were designated in 1994. The designations remain in effect for 10 years, or until the date designated in the nominating document, unless revoked for modification of the area's boundaries or failure to comply with the agreed strategic plan. In addition to the nine empowerment zones, two supplemental urban zones, Los Angeles and Cleveland, receive economic development grants but not special tax incentives.

Qualified businesses operating in empowerment zones are eligible to finance property using enterprise zone financing bonds, which are considered exempt facility private activity bonds. Two additional incentives are available in empowerment zones. Specifically, qualifying businesses are entitled to expense up to an additional $20,000 under Code Sec. 179 (Code Sec. 1397A), and employers are entitled to a tax credit with regard to wages paid to certain zone employees (Code Sec. 1396).

Two additional empowerment zones authorized.—Two additional urban-area empowerment zones may be designated by the Secretary of Housing and Urban development. This increases the number of empowerment zones authorized for urban areas from six to eight. The number of empowerment zones authorized for rural areas is not increased and remains at three. Although the designations must be made within 180 days of August 5, 1997, the designation can not take effect before the year 2000.

In contrast to the 20 additional empowerment zones permitted under new Code Sec. 1391(g) (see ¶ 372), these two additional empowerment zones are subject to the same eligibility criteria as applied to the original six zones. However, in order to accommodate the increased number of zones, the present-law aggregate population limitation for all empowerment zones of 750,000 has been increased to one million.

In general, the same tax incentives apply to the two additionally authorized zones as apply to the original six zones. For example, the additional expensing allowances and special tax-exempt financing would apply. However, modifications are made to the applicable percentage of wages taken into account in determining the amount of the wage credit for the two newly authorized zones.

2000—2004	20%
2005	15%

These modifications extend the years for the phase out of the applicable percentage, thus enabling employers within the newly authorized empowerment zones to claim a larger empowerment zone employment credit than would be the case under the present percentage phase out that reduce to zero in 2005.

Effective date. This provision takes effect on August 5, 1997. Designations of new empowerment zones pursuant to this provision must be made during the 180-day period beginning on August 5, 1997 (February 1, 1998). No designation made under this provision can take effect before January 1, 2000.

Act Sec. 951(a), amending Code Sec. 1391(b); Act Sec. 951(b), amending Code Sec. 1396(b); Act Sec. 951(c). Law at ¶ 5379 and 5385. Committee Report at ¶ 10,735.

New Empowerment Zones

Background

Certain criteria relating to an area's population, degree of distress, size, and rate of poverty must be met for an area to be designated as an empowerment zone under current law.

An urban empowerment zone's maximum population is limited to the lesser of either (1) 200,000 residents or (2) the greater of 50,000 residents or 10 percent of the population of the most populous city in the nominated area. Also, prior to amendment by the Act, the aggregate population of all urban zones could not exceed 750,000 persons. The population of a rural empowerment zone could not exceed 30,000 persons.

Whether urban or rural, an eligible area must have a condition of pervasive poverty, unemployment and general distress. In addition to being in general distress, the area must meet a three-part poverty rate test: (1) each of the census tracts in the area must have a poverty rate of at least 20 percent; (2) at least 90 percent of the census tracts must have a poverty rate of at least 25 percent; and (3) at least 50 percent of the census tracts must have a poverty rate of at least 35 percent. Census tracts with fewer than 2,000 people and at least 75-percent zoned for commercial or industrial use are treated as satisfying the 20- and 25-percent criteria. Each noncontiguous parcel located within an area must satisfy the poverty rate criteria separately.

An urban empowerment zone cannot exceed 20 square miles; rural empowerment areas cannot exceed 1,000 square miles. Urban areas must be located entirely within no more than two contiguous states and must have either a continuous boundary or be composed of not more than three noncontiguous parcels. Rural areas must not be located in more than three contiguous states.

Expanded eligibility criteria for new empowerment zones.—In addition to the two new empowerment zones authorized with the present-law criteria (see ¶ 371), 20 additional empowerment zones with expanded eligibility criteria are authorized. The Secretary of Housing and Urban development is authorized to designate up to 15 urban areas as new empowerment zones, while the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to designate up to five new rural empowerment zones. The designations must be made after August 5, 1997 and before January 1, 1999.

Modified eligibility criteria. The eligibility criteria are expanded for these additional 20 empowerment zones. The Act indicates that the aggregate population limitation applicable to existing urban empowerment zones (including the two zones newly authorized under existing criteria) set forth in Code Sec. 1391(b)(2) does not apply to these empowerment zones. Thus, these zones are subject to the 750,000 population limitation rather than the one million limitation provided for the two new zones. These new zones may include areas within an Indian reservation. (A nomination for designation made by a reservation governing body is treated as a nomination by a state or local government.) In addition, previously designated enterprise communities may be included as one of these new zones, in contrast with the prohibition against double designations for existing empowerment zones and enterprise communities. To be eligible for designation, an area must satisfy modified poverty rate and size limitation requirements.

Poverty rate. An area meets the poverty rate requirement only if (a) the poverty rate for each census tract within the area is not less than 20 percent and (b) the poverty rate for at least 90 percent of the population census tracts within the area is not less than 25 percent. The 35-percent test under existing law does not apply to empowerment zones designated under this provision.

The special rule for determining the poverty rate for census tracts with small populations has been modified. A census tract with a population of less than 2,000 is treated as having a poverty rate of not less than 25 percent if (a) more than 75 percent of the tract is zoned commercial or industrial use and (b) the tract is contiguous with one or more census tracts that have a poverty rate of not less than 25 percent determined without regard to this clause. The current law requiring that at least 50 percent of the tract have a poverty rate of 35 percent or more does not apply.

Two exceptions from the poverty rate requirement have been provided. Up to three noncontiguous parcels that could be developed for commercial or industrial purposes that are located in a nominated area may be excluded from the poverty rate requirement. However, the aggregate area of these noncontiguous parcels can not exceed 2,000 acres. In addition, not more than one rural empowerment zone may be designated without regard to the poverty rate requirement, provided that the area satisfies emigration criteria established by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Size limitations. Although the size limitations imposed upon empowerment zones generally apply to these new zones, certain aspects have been modified. The three noncontiguous developable parcels that are excludable from the poverty rate requirement, discussed above, are also not taken into account for purposes of the size limitations placed on empowerment zones. Thus, these parcels are not included in determining whether either the square-mile limitation (20 for urban zones and 1,000 for rural zones) or the limitation on the number of noncontiguous parcels has been exceeded. In addition, a special exception to the continuous boundary requirement has been provided for certain rural areas. If a population census tract in a rural area exceeds 1,000 square miles or includes a substantial amount of federal, state, or local government land, the excess square mileage or governmentally owned land may be excluded without violating the continuous boundary requirement.

Effective date. This provision is effective upon August 5, 1997, except that designations of new empowerment zones made as a result of amendments shall be made during the 180-day period beginning on August 5, 1997. No designation under an amendment shall take effect before January 1, 2000.

Act Sec. 952(a), adding Code Sec. 1391(g); Act Sec. 952(d), amending Code Sec. 1391(c), (e), and (f). Law at ¶ 5379. Committee Report at ¶ 10,735.

Background

Special tax incentives have been provided for distressed urban and rural areas that qualify as enterprise zones. Among the incentives provided are an empowerment zone employment credit (Code Sec. 1396) and an increased Code 179 expensing allowance (Code Sec. 1397A).

Employers that locate operations in an empowerment zone are allowed a credit against income tax liability based on the first $15,000 of qualified wages paid to employees that are residents of the empowerment zone and who perform substantially all of their work within the empowerment zone. The credit is calculated by multiplying the qualified wages by an applicable credit percentage. The applicable credit percentage is set at 20 percent through the year 2001. Beginning in 2002, the rate will be phased out by 5 percent each year, until it is reduced to zero in the year 2005.

The deduction allowed under the Code Sec. 179 expensing election is increased by a maximum of $20,000 for qualified zone property that is placed in service by an enterprise zone business. Thus, for property placed in service in 1997, the maximum amount allowed is $38,000: $18,000 allowed under Code Sec. 179, plus the additional $20,000 allowed under Code Sec. 1397A.

Tax incentives limited for newly authorized empowerment zones.— While the 20 newly authorized empowerment zones generally are eligible for the tax incentives provided for presently authorized zones, certain incentives have been modified or disallowed. The employment credit that is available to employers for wages paid to workers in an empowerment zone is not available for the 20 empowerment zones authorized under this provision. In addition, even though the increased Code Sec. 179 expensing limitation applies to these 20 new zones, the increased limitation is not available for any parcels included in the empowerment zone under the special provision for noncontiguous developable parcels (see ¶ 372).

Effective date. This provision is generally effective upon August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 952(b), adding Code Sec. 1396(e); Act Sec. 952(c), adding Code Sec. 1397A(a). Law at ¶ 5287 and 5385. Committee Report at ¶ 10,735.

Enterprise Zone Business

¶ 374

Background

To qualify for the increased expensing allowance and the tax-exempt bond financing provisions (but not the empowerment zone employment credit), businesses must be "enterprise zone businesses." A business qualifies as an enterprise zone business for the tax year if:

(1) in the case of a corporation or partnership, every trade or business of the entity is in the active conduct of a qualified business within an empowerment zone;

(2) at least 80 percent of its total gross income is derived from the active conduct of such trade or business;

(3) substantially all of its tangible property is used within an empowerment zone;

(4) substantially all of its intangible property is used in, and exclusively related to, the active conduct of the business;

(5) substantially all of its employees' services are performed within the empowerment zone;

(6) at least 35 percent of the employees are residents of the empowerment zone; and

(7) less than five percent of the average of the aggregate unadjusted bases of its property is attributable to either collectibles not held for sale to customers in the ordinary course of business or nonqualified financial property (such as debt or stock).

These criteria are modified for purposes of qualified enterprise zone bonds. The term empowerment zone is treated as including an enterprise zone as well. For purposes of determining whether the proceeds of the issuance are used for a qualified zone facility, enterprise zone business includes a business located in a zone or community that would qualify as an enterprise zone business if it were separately incorporated. For example, an outlet of a national retail chain could qualify under this definition.

Qualified businesses. Generally, any trade or business can qualify as an enterprise zone business. However, the rental of tangible personal property may be a qualified business only if substantially all of the rental of the property is by enterprise zone businesses or by residents of an empowerment zone. Any trade or business that consists primarily of the development or holding of intangibles for sale or license cannot be an enterprise zone business (Code Sec. 1397B(d)).

Requirements for qualification as an enterprise zone business relaxed.—In order to qualify as an enterprise zone business, and thereby become eligible for tax incentives available only to such businesses, a business must meet criteria designed to ensure that it is actively conducting business within an empowerment zone (or enterprise community for purposes of qualified enterprise zone bonds). Among these criteria are requirements regarding the percentage of gross income derived from the conduct of the business within the empowerment zone, the use of the business's property and employee services within the zone, and the type of business operated.

The requirements for qualification as an enterprise zone business have been modified for all empowerment zones and enterprise communities, including the new zones authorized under the Act (see ¶ 371 and 372). The requirement that 80 percent of the business's total gross income be derived from the conduct of business within the empowerment zone is relaxed to a 50-percent requirement. The "substantially all" test that required that substantially all of the business's use of tangible and intangible property and employee services take place within the zone is replaced with a less stringent "substantial portion" of use test. In addition, the requirement that the use of intangible assets be "exclusively related" to the business has been eliminated.

Property rental rules. A business engaging in renting tangible property to others can qualify as an enterprise zone business if at least 50 percent of the rental of such property is by residents of an empowerment zone or community or by an enterprise zone business. Again, this relaxes the requirement from a "substantially all" test. An enterprise zone business that leases commercial property to others is entitled to rely on the lessee's certification that the lessee is an enterprise zone business.

Businesses straddling census tract lines. If a business uses property located within an empowerment zone, as well as property located outside of the empowerment zone, all business activities, including services performed by employees and use of tangible and intangible property, will be considered to occur within the empowerment zone if two conditions are met. First, the amount of real property located within the zone must be substantial compared to that located outside of the zone. Second, the real property within the zone must be contiguous with all or part of the real property located outside of the zone.

Effective dates. The modifications apply to tax years beginning on or after August 5, 1997. For purposes of enterprise zone facility bonds, these modifications apply to obligations issued after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 956(a), amending Code Sec. 1397B(b), (c), and (d) and adding Code Sec. 1397B(f). Act Sec. 956(b). Law at ¶ 5389. Committee Report at ¶ 10,735.

Background

An area nominated for designation as an empowerment zone or enterprise community must meet certain eligibility criteria. The eligibility criteria include specified population limitations, geographic size limitations and poverty-rate criteria for census tracts within the empowerment zone or enterprise community. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, nominated areas in Alaska and Hawaii were subject to the same eligibility criteria that applied to nominated areas in other states.

Special eligibility rules for Alaska and Hawaii.—The eligibility criteria that must be met by an area nominated for designation as an empowerment zone or enterprise community are modified for nominated areas located in Alaska and Hawaii. Nominated areas in Alaska and Hawaii are not subject to the general size limitation and poverty-rate criteria. Instead, a nominated area in Alaska or Hawaii will be eligible for designation as an empowerment zone or enterprise community if, for each census tract or block group within the area, at least 20 percent of the families have income that is 50 percent or less of the statewide median family income. Statewide median family income is determined under the Code Sec. 143 rules that define certain mortgage bonds.

Effective date. The special eligibility criteria for Alaska and Hawaii are effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 954, adding Code Sec. 1392(d). Law at ¶ 5381. Committee Report at ¶ 10,735.

Background

Enterprise zone financing bonds, a type of tax-exempt facility bond, can be used to finance property located in an empowerment zone or enterprise community. To qualify as an enterprise zone financing bond, the issuance must be designated as such and at least 95 percent of the net proceeds of the issuance must be used to finance qualified zone property that is used primarily by a qualified zone business.

Because these bonds are considered private activity bonds, they are subject to the volume cap. In addition to the volume limitations applicable to all private activity bonds, there are specific limitations on the aggregate amount of enterprise financing zone bonds that can be issued. The aggregate amount of enterprise financing zone bonds per qualified zone business may not exceed $3 million of each zone. Additionally, the total outstanding qualified zone financing for each qualified zone business cannot exceed $20 million for all zones.

Volume cap not applicable to new enterprise zone facility bonds.—The Act creates a new category of financing bonds—empowerment zone bonds. Empowerment zone bonds are similar to the existing enterprise zone bonds in that they include any bond issued as part of an issue where at least 95 percent of the proceeds are used to provide an enterprise zone facility. However, for purposes of determining what constitutes an enterprise zone facility, only the 20 newly authorized empowerment zones are considered when applying the definitions of enterprise zone business and qualified zone property.

The new empowerment zone bonds differ from enterprise zone bonds in two significant ways. They are not treated as private activity bonds under Code Sec. 146 and, therefore, are not subject to the volume cap imposed on issuances of private activity bonds. In addition, they are not subject to the $3 million per empowerment zone or enterprise community and $20 million total for all empowerment zones or enterprise communities limitations on issue size imposed upon enterprise bonds. The new empowerment zone bonds issued are not to be taken into account to determine whether the enterprise facility bond limitation has been exceeded.

Designation and amount. Each empowerment zone bond issuance must be so designated by the state or local government that nominated the empowerment area for which the bonds are issued. Although the existing enterprise zone bond limitations do not apply, there is a limitation on the maximum amount of empowerment zone bonds that can be issued per empowerment zone. The maximum aggregate face amount of bonds issued for a rural empowerment zone can not exceed $60 million. For urban zones with a population under 100,000, the maximum amount is $130 million per zone; this maximum is increased to $230 million per zone for zones with a population of 100,000 or more. Current refunding is not taken into account in determining the maximum amounts so long as the amount of the refunding bond is less than the outstanding amount of the refunded bond and the refunded bond is redeemed no later than 90 days after the refunding bonds is issued.

Effective date. This provision applies to obligations issued after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 953(a), adding Code Sec. 1394(f). Act Sec. 953(b). Law at ¶ 5383. Committee Report at ¶ 10,735.

Background

To qualify for the increased expensing allowance and the tax-exempt bond financing provisions (but not the empowerment zone employment credit), businesses must be "enterprise zone businesses." A business qualifies as an enterprise zone business for the tax year if:

(1) in the case of a corporation or partnership, every trade or business of the entity is in the active conduct of a qualified business within an empowerment zone;

(2) at least 80 percent of its total gross income is derived from the active conduct of such trade or business;

(3) substantially all of its tangible property is used within an empowerment zone;

(4) substantially all of its intangible property is used in, and exclusively related to, the active conduct of the business;

(5) substantially all of its employees' services are performed within the empowerment zone;

(6) at least 35 percent of the employees are residents of the empowerment zone; and

(7) less than five percent of the average of the aggregate unadjusted bases of its property is attributable to either collectibles not held for sale to customers in the ordinary course of business or nonqualified financial property (such as debt or stock).

Background

Generally, any trade or business can qualify as an enterprise zone business. However, the rental of tangible personal property may be a qualified business only if substantially all of the rental of the property is by enterprise zone businesses or by residents of an empowerment zone.

Definition of enterprise zone business for qualified enterprise/empowerment zone bonds.—The Code Sec. 1397B definition of enterprise zone business is modified for purposes of determining eligibility for tax-exempt bond financing with either existing enterprise bonds or the newly created empowerment zone bonds. In addition to continuing the present law modifications that the term empowerment zone includes enterprise communities and that an enterprise zone business includes any trade or business that would qualify if separately incorporated, two additional modifications are provided.

Startup period. The requirement that 95 percent or more of the bond issuance proceeds be used by an enterprise zone business is waived during a startup period. The startup period is defined with respect to when property is provided by a bond issuance. The startup period can not be longer than the beginning of the first taxable year after the later of either (1) the date of the bond issuance providing the property or (2) the date the property was placed in service. In no event can the startup be later than three years after the date of the bond issuance. To qualify for such a waiver, it must be reasonably expected from the outset that the business will qualify as an enterprise zone business at the end of the startup period, and the business must make bona fide efforts to meet the enterprise zone business definition.

Reduced residency requirements. For purposes of qualified enterprise/empowerment zone bonds, all requirements, except that at least 35 percent of the employees of the business be residents of an empowerment zone or enterprise community, are waived after a testing period is completed. The testing period is the first three tax years beginning after the startup period.

Effective date. This provision applies to obligations issued after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 955(a), amending Code Sec. 1394(b)(3); Act Sec. 955(c). Law at ¶ 5383. Committee Report at ¶ 10,735.

Modifications to Qualified Zone Property

Background

Qualified zone property is defined as depreciable tangible property that meets certain acquisition and use tests. The property must have been acquired by the taxpayer after an area has been designated as an empowerment zone or enterprise zone. The original use of the property must have been in an empowerment zone. Substantially all of the property's use must be in an empowerment zone and in the active conduct of a qualified trade or business.

Where the property is substantially renovated by the taxpayer, the requirement that the property be acquired after the area was designated as an empowerment zone and originally used in an empowerment zone is waived. However, during any 24-month period after the designation, the additions to the taxpayer's basis in the property must exceed the greater of 100 percent of the taxpayer's basis in the property at the beginning of the period or $5,000.

Definition of qualified property modified for bond purposes.—For purposes of issuing enterprise zone or empowerment zone bonds, the requirements for qualified zone property are relaxed with respect to substantial renovations. Under present law, property that is substantially renovated by the taxpayer need not have been acquired by the taxpayer after the area had been designated as an empowerment zone or enterprise community and need not have been originally used by the taxpayer within the zone. However, the amount that must be expended on renovations during each two-year period is reduced. Under the relaxed rule, the additions to the taxpayer's basis during any 24-month period after the zone or community designation must exceed the greater of 15 percent of the taxpayer's basis at the beginning of the period or $5,000.

Effective date. This provision applies to obligations issued after August 5, 1997.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA TAX INCENTIVES

District of Columbia Enterprise Zone

¶ 381

Background

In 1994, portions of the District of Columbia were designated as an enterprise community pursuant to Code Sec. 1391. As an enterprise community, qualified businesses operating within those portions of the District of Columbia became eligible to finance property with tax-exempt facility bonds under Code Sec. 1394. Although enterprise communities are only eligible for the exempt facility bonds incentive, empowerment zones are eligible for two additional tax incentives. Under Code Sec. 1397A, qualifying empowerment zone businesses are entitled to an increase in the Code Sec. 179 expensing limitation of up to $20,000, and qualifying empowerment zone employers under Code Sec. 1396 are entitled to a 20-percent credit for the first $15,000 of wages paid to zone residents who also work in the zone. Under Code Sec. 1391(d), the designations of areas as enterprise communities or empowerment zones was to remain in effect for a 10-year period unless an earlier termination date was provided in the document nominating the area for designation as an enterprise community or an empowerment zone or the designation was revoked.

Under prior law, the District of Columbia was not specifically entitled to any tax incentives other than those associated with the designation as an enterprise community. Moreover, there was no special capital gains rate or first-time homebuyer credit which applied specifically to the District of Columbia.

Establishment of District of Columbia Enterprise Zone.—In addition to the census tracts located in the District of Columbia that are already part of an enterprise community under Code Sec. 1391, all other census tracts located in the District of Columbia that have a poverty rate of 20 percent or higher are now designated as the District of Columbia Enterprise Zone ("D.C. Zone"). The D.C. Zone is treated as an empowerment zone for purposes of Code Secs. 1391 through 1397C. The designation of the D.C. Zone applies for the period of January 1, 1998, through December 31, 2002. The designation of certain census tracts located in the District of Columbia as enterprise communities prior to the designation of the D.C. Zone also terminates on December 31, 2002.

Application of empowerment zone employment credit. The empowerment zone employment credit under Code Sec. 1396 is now available to employers located in the D.C. Zone, with certain modifications. Although Code Sec. 1396(d)(1)(B) requires qualified zone employees to reside in the empowerment zone, for purposes of the D.C. Zone, the credit is available with respect to all employees whose principal place of abode is in the District of Columbia, but not necessarily in the D.C. Zone. Further, the applicable wage credit rate under Code Sec. 1396(b) remains at 20 percent for the period 1998 through 2002. The wage rate does not decrease to 15 percent in the year 2002 as it does for other empowerment zones. The applicable wage rate for the D.C. Zone applies with respect to qualified zone employees, as determined by treating no area other than the D.C. Zone as an empowerment zone or enterprise community. Moreover, no portion of the unused business credit that is attributable to the D.C. Zone employment credit may be carried back to a tax year ending before August 5, 1997.

Application of enterprise zone business definition to the D.C. Zone. The definitions of qualified business entity in Code Sec. 1397B(b) and qualified proprietorship in Code Sec. 1397B(c) are applied, for purposes of the D.C. Zone, without regard to the requirement for other empowerment zones that at least 35 percent of the entity's employees must be residents of the empowerment zone.

Effective date. The District of Columbia tax incentive provisions are effective on August 5, 1997.

Economic Development Bonds

¶ 383

Limit on amount of tax-exempt economic development bonds.—For purposes of the District of Columbia Enterprise Zone ("D.C. Zone"), the limitation on the amount of qualified enterprise zone bonds per qualified enterprise zone business under Code Sec. 1394(c)(1)(A) has been increased from $3 million per zone or community to $15 million. The increase in the limitation applies to bonds issued during the period of January 1, 1998, through December 31, 2002.

Effective date. The District of Columbia tax incentive provisions are effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 701(a), adding Code Sec. 1400A; Act Sec. 701(d). Law at ¶ 5397. Committee Report at ¶ 10,465.

Zero-Percent Capital Gains Rate

¶ 385

Zero-percent capital gains rate.—A capital gains rate of zero percent applies to qualified capital gains from the sale or exchange of District of Columbia Enterprise Zone ("D.C. Zone") assets held for more than five years. A D.C. Zone asset includes D.C. Zone business stock, D.C. Zone partnership interests, and D.C. Zone business property.

D.C. Zone business stock. D.C. Zone business stock is any stock in a domestic corporation originally issued after December 31, 1997, as long as:

(1) the stock is acquired before January 1, 2003, by the taxpayer at its original issue solely in exchange for cash;

(2) the corporation was a D.C. Zone business at the time the stock was issued or, in the case of a new corporation, the corporation was being organized for purposes of being a D.C. Zone business; and

(3) during substantially all of the taxpayer's holding period of the stock, the corporation qualified as a D.C. Zone business.

Caution. A rule similar to the rule of Code Sec. 1202(c)(3), that treats stock acquired in certain redemptions as failing to qualify as small business stock, applies.

D.C. Zone partnership interest. A D.C. Zone partnership interest is any capital or profits interest in a domestic partnership that is originally issued after December 31, 1997, if:

(1) the interest is acquired before January 1, 2003, by the taxpayer from the partnership solely in exchange for cash;

(2) the partnership was a D.C. Zone business at the time the interest was acquired or, in the case of a new partnership, the partnership was being organized for purposes of being a D.C. Zone business; and

(3) during substantially all of the taxpayer's holding period for the interest, the partnership qualified as a D.C. Zone business.

Caution. A rule similar to the rule that treats stock acquired by a corporation in a significant redemption as failing to qualify as D.C. Zone business stock (see above) will apply to D.C. Zone partnership interests.

D.C. Zone business property. D.C. Zone business property consists of tangible property purchased by the taxpayer after December 31, 1997, and before January 1, 2003. The original use of the property in the D.C. Zone must commence with the taxpayer, and substantially all of the property's use must be in the taxpayer's D.C. Zone business during substantially all of the taxpayer's holding period for the property.

With respect to business property (and any land on which the property is located) that is substantially improved by the taxpayer before January 1, 2003, the property need not be acquired by the taxpayer after December 31, 1997, and the original use of the property need not commence with the taxpayer in order to be treated as D.C. Zone business property. A property is substantially improved if, during any 24-month period beginning after December 31, 1997, additions to basis of the property in the hands of the taxpayer exceed the greater of (1) an amount equal to the property's adjusted basis at the beginning of the 24-month period in the hands of the taxpayer or (2) $5,000.

Subsequent purchasers. A D.C. Zone asset also includes property that was a qualified D.C. Zone asset in the hands of a prior owner, provided that, at the time of acquisition and during substantially all of the subsequent purchaser's holding period (1) in the case of D.C. Zone business property, substantially all of the use of the property is in a qualified D.C. Zone business or (2) in the case of D.C. Zone business stock or D.C. Zone partnership interests, the property is an ownership interest in a qualified D.C. Zone business.

Five-year safe harbor. If property or an ownership interest ceases to be a D.C. Zone asset after the five-year period beginning on the date the taxpayer acquired the property because the property is no longer used in a D.C. Zone business or because the corporation or partnership no longer qualifies as a D.C. Zone business, that property continues to be treated as a D.C. Zone asset. However, the amount of the gain eligible for the zero percent capital gain rate upon the sale or exchange of the property cannot exceed the amount that would be qualified capital gain had the property been sold on the date the property ceased to be a D.C. Zone asset.

D.C. Zone business. A D.C. Zone business is any entity that is an enterprise zone business, as defined in Code Sec. 1397B, with certain modifications. The requirement that at least 35 percent of the entity's employees be residents of the empowerment zone does not apply. The requirement that at least 50 percent of the total gross income of the entity be derived from the active conduct of a qualified business within the empowerment zone is increased to 80 percent. Finally, the determination of whether the entity is an enterprise zone business is made by treating no area other than the D.C. Zone as an empowerment zone or enterprise community.

Definition of D.C. Zone for zero capital gains rate provision. For purposes of applying the zero percent capital gains rate rule, the D.C. Zone includes all census tracts located in the District of Columbia that have a poverty rate of 10 percent or higher.

Qualified capital gain. A qualified capital gain is any gain recognized on the sale or exchange of a capital asset or property used in a trade or business as defined in Code Sec. 1231(b) (for example, depreciable property and real property used in the business and not held for sale to customers). Gain attributable to periods before January 1, 1998, or after December 31, 2007, is not qualified capital gain. Qualified capital gain does not include gain that would be treated as ordinary income under the Code Sec. 1245 or 1250 depreciation recapture provisions if Code Sec. 1250 applied to all depreciation rather than the additional depreciation.

Gain attributable to real property or an intangible asset that is not an integral part of a D.C. Zone business is not qualified capital gain. Qualified capital gain also does not include gain attributable, directly or indirectly, in whole or in part, to a transaction with a related person as described in Code Sec. 267(b) or 707(b)(1). Related parties include, but are not limited to, family members, a corporation and an individual who owns more than 50 percent in value of the corporation either directly or indirectly, a partnership and a person owning more than a 50 percent capital or profits interest in the partnership, two partnerships in which the same persons own more than 50 percent of the capital or profits interests either directly or indirectly, and a fiduciary and a beneficiary of a trust.

With respect to the sale or exchange of an interest in a partnership or stock in an S corporation that is a D.C. Zone business during substantially all of the period the taxpayer held the interest or stock, the amount of qualified capital gain is determined without regard to (1) gain attributable to real property or an intangible asset that is not an integral part of a D.C. Zone business and (2) gain attributable to periods before January 1, 1998, or after December 31, 2007.

Certain other applicable rules. Rules similar to those of Code Sec. 1202(g), relating to the treatment of pass-through entities; Code Sec. 1202(h), relating to certain tax-free and other transfers; Code Sec. 1202(i)(2), relating to the treatment of certain contributions to capital; and Code Sec. 1202(j), relating to the treatment of certain short positions, apply.

Effective date. The District of Columbia tax incentive provisions are effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 701(a), adding Code Sec. 1400B; Act Sec. 701(d). Law at ¶ 5399. Committee Report at ¶ 10,465.

First-Time Homebuyer Credit

First-time homebuyer credit for the District of Columbia.—A first-time homebuyer of a principal residence in the District of Columbia is entitled to a tax credit of up to $5,000 of the amount of the purchase price of the residence. The amount of the credit is phased out for individual taxpayers with modified adjusted gross income (AGI) between $70,000 and $90,000 ($110,000 and $130,000 for joint filers).

In computing the credit, the amount of the credit is reduced by an amount that bears the same ratio to $5,000 as the excess of the taxpayer's modified AGI for the tax year over $70,000 ($110,000 for joint filers) bears to $20,000. The amount cannot be reduced below zero. In other words, for every $1,000 of modified adjusted gross income above $70,000 for an individual ($110,000 for joint filers), the credit is reduced by $250.

The amount of the reduction can be determined by applying the following formula:

$$$5{,}000 \times \frac{\text{Modified AGI} - $70{,}000}{$20{,}000}$$

For joint return filers, the $70,000 amount in the above formula would be replaced with $110,000.

> Example. Richard and Melanie Stevens purchase their first home in the District of Columbia for $200,000. Their modified adjusted gross income for the year is $120,000. The maximum credit of $5,000 must be reduced to account for their excess modified AGI over $110,000. Thus, the amount of their credit is equal to $5,000 − $5,000 × (($120,000 − $110,000) ÷ $20,000), or $2,500.

An individual's modified AGI is AGI plus any amount excluded from income under:

(1) the exclusion for foreign earned income and housing (Code Sec. 911);

(2) the exclusion for income from sources within Guam, American Samoa, and the Northern Mariana Islands (Code Sec. 931); and

(3) the exclusion for income from sources within Puerto Rico (Code Sec. 933).

An individual qualifies as a first-time homebuyer if that individual and that individual's spouse had no present ownership interest in a principal residence in the District of Columbia during the one-year period ending on the date of the acquisition of the residence. Moreover, if an individual is treated as a first-time homebuyer with respect to a principal residence, that individual cannot be treated as a first-time homebuyer with respect to any other principal residence. A principal residence has the same meaning for purposes of the District of Columbia first-time homebuyer credit as it does in Code Sec. 121 for purposes of the exclusion of up to $250,000 of gain on the sale of a principal residence ($500,000 for joint filers). The credit is treated as a nonrefundable personal credit, and any excess credit over the Code Sec. 26(a) limitation can be carried over to the succeeding tax year.

For married taxpayers filing separately, the maximum amount of the credit is $2,500 each. The IRS has been authorized to issue regulations to determine the allocation of the credit among unmarried individuals who purchase a principal residence together in the District. However, the total amount of credit allowed to all such individuals cannot exceed $5,000.

The principal residence cannot be acquired from a person whose relationship to the purchaser would result in a disallowance of losses under the related taxpayer rules of Code Sec. 267 or the rules for the sale or exchange of property with respect to controlled partnerships under Code Sec. 707(b). However, in applying the relationships listed in Code Sec. 267(b) and the constructive ownership of stock rules of Code Sec. 267(c), a family of an individual only includes a spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants; it does not include brothers and sisters as provided in Code Sec. 267(c)(4). Moreover, the basis of the principal residence in the hands of the purchaser cannot be determined, in whole or in part, by reference to the adjusted basis of the residence in the hands of the seller or under Code Sec. 1014(a), relating to the basis of property acquired from a decedent. Furthermore, a residence that is constructed by the taxpayer is treated as purchased by the taxpayer.

The purchase price is equal to the adjusted basis of the principal residence on the date of acquisition. The basis of the principal residence is reduced by the amount of the first-time homebuyer credit allowed. If the IRS requires information reporting under Code Sec. 6045 to verify the eligibility of taxpayers for the first-time homebuyer credit, the exception under Code Sec. 6045(e)(5) for the sale or exchange of certain principal residences does not apply.

Caution. The District of Columbia first-time homebuyer credit does not apply to property that is purchased after December 31, 2000.

Effective date. The District of Columbia tax incentive provisions are effective on August 5, 1997.

Chapter 4

Partnerships and S Corporations

PUBLICLY TRADED PARTNERSHIPS

Election to Continue Partnership Status

¶ 401

Background

A publicly traded partnership (PTP) is a partnership whose interests are (1) traded on an established securities market or (2) readily traded on a secondary market or the substantial equivalent. Code Sec. 7704, enacted as part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 (P.L. 100-203), generally treats publicly traded partnerships as corporations for federal tax purposes (Code Sec. 7704(a)). A partnership may be exempt from treatment as a corporation if 90 percent of its gross income is passive-type income, such as interest, dividends, real property rents, gains from the disposition of real property, and similar income or gains.

When the PTP rules were enacted in 1987, a 10-year grandfather rule exempted certain existing partnerships from corporate treatment. The grandfather exception applies until tax years beginning after December 31, 1997. An existing PTP is generally defined as any partnership that was actually a PTP on December 17, 1987, or that had appropriately filed a federal registration statement or a state application indicating its intent to become a PTP on or before December 17, 1987.

An existing PTP qualifying under the grandfather rule will cease to be treated as an existing PTP as of the first day after December 17, 1987, that it adds a substantial new line of business (Reg. § 1.7704-2; P.L. 100-203, Act Sec. 10211(c)(2)(B)). If the PTP's grandfathered status ceases to apply, and if the passive-type income exception is also inapplicable, then the PTP is treated as a corporation for federal tax purposes.

From a nontax perspective, the process of converting from a publicly traded partnership to a corporation is costly and time-consuming, involving consultations with investment bankers, securities regulators and tax lawyers, as well as the cost of appraisals and the burden of multiple filings with federal and state securities agencies. Also, the value of PTP interests may be adversely affected by a conversion to corporate status.

Grandfathered publicly traded partnership may elect to continue partnership status.—A publicly traded partnership (PTP) that is currently exempt from corporate tax under the grandfather exception may elect to continue its partnership status beyond the original 10-year window. The grandfather exception generally provides that a PTP will not be taxed as a corporation in tax years beginning before 1998 if the partnership existed as a PTP or is treated as having existed as a PTP on December 17, 1987, and does not add a substantial new line of business during the 10-year window. The grandfather exception is scheduled to expire for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997 (Act Sec. 10211(c) of P.L. 100-203). A grandfathered PTP electing to continue its partnership status must agree to pay an annual 3.5-percent tax on any income from active businesses.

Electing 1987 partnership. A grandfathered PTP may elect to continue its partnership status as an "electing 1987 partnership." An electing 1987 partnership is subject to a 3.5-percent annual tax on gross income from the active conduct of any trades or businesses (Code Sec. 7704(g)(3)(A)). The 3.5-percent tax imposed under this provision cannot be offset by any tax credits (Code Sec. 7704(g)(3)(C)).

An electing 1987 partnership will not be treated as a corporation for federal tax purposes (Code Sec. 7704(g)(1)).

In order to be an electing 1987 partnership, a PTP must fulfill the following three requirements: (1) the entity must be an "existing partnership" (as defined by Act Sec. 10211(c)(2) of the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1987, P.L. 100-203); (2) Code Sec. 7704(a) has not applied (and without regard to Code Sec. 7704(c)(1) would not have applied) to the partnership for all prior tax years beginning after December 31, 1987 and before January 1, 1998; and (3) the partnership properly elects to be subject to this provision and consents to the application of the 3.5 percent tax for its first tax year beginning after December 31, 1997. Note that partnerships that have been exempt from corporate treatment solely due to the passive-type income exception under Code Sec. 7704(c)(1) do not qualify as electing 1987 partnerships.

New line of business will terminate status. An electing 1987 partnership, like other grandfathered partnerships under the Code Sec. 7704 provisions, will lose its partnership status as of the first day after December 31, 1997 on which the partnership adds a substantial new line of business (Code Sec. 7704(g)(2)).

Gross income of electing partnership. For an electing 1987 partnership holding an interest in another partnership, gross income includes the partnership's distributive share of any gross income from the other partnership's active conduct of a trade or business. A similar rule applies in the case of lower-tier partnerships (Code Sec. 7704(g)(3)(B)).

Election may be revoked. The election, once made, applies to the tax year for which it has been made and for all subsequent tax years, until revoked by the electing partnership. IRS consent is not needed to revoke the election. However, once revoked, the election cannot be reinstated (Code Sec. 7704(g)(4)).

Effective date. These provisions are effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 964(a), adding Code Sec. 7704(g); Act Sec. 964(b). Law at ¶ 5749. Committee Report at ¶ 10,850.

DISTRIBUTIONS OF PARTNERSHIP PROPERTY

Allocation of Basis

Background

A carryover basis rule generally applies to property distributed to a partner other than in liquidation of the partner's partnership interest, subject to a limitation (Code Sec. 732). In a nonliquidating distribution, the distributee partner's basis in the property is equal to the partnership's adjusted basis in the property immediately before the distribution, but not to exceed the partner's adjusted basis in the partner's partnership interest (reduced by any money that may have been distributed in the same transaction).

A substituted basis rule generally applies to property distributed to a partner in liquidation of the partner's interest. Thus, the total basis of all property received in a liquidating distribution is equal to the partner's adjusted basis in the partner's partnership interest immediately before the distribution (as reduced by any money that may have also been distributed in the same transaction).

Background

When multiple properties are distributed by a partnership to a partner in a liquidating distribution, or when the limitation on carryover basis applies, an allocation provision is needed in order to assign a portion of the partner's basis in the partner's partnership interest to each distributed asset. Prior to amendment by the Act, Code Sec. 732(c)(1) first allocated basis to unrealized receivables and inventory items (as defined by Code Sec. 751) in an amount equal to the partnership's adjusted basis in each such property and, to the extent of any remaining partner basis, then among any other distributed properties in proportion to their adjusted bases to the partnership (former Code Sec. 732(c)(2)).

Since this allocation provision failed to take into account the actual fair market values of the partnership's distributed assets, a partner was indirectly encouraged to engage in tax planning when receiving distributed property pursuant to a liquidation of the partner's interest. Under prior law, following a liquidating distribution, the distributee partner could have a basis in the distributed property (other than unrealized receivables and inventory) that exceeded the partnership's own basis in that property. This prior rule led to numerous basis shifting transactions in which basis was allocated so as to increase basis artificially, giving rise to either inflated depreciation deductions or artificially large losses.

Distributed property basis allocation changes to fair market value standard.—A partner's substituted basis in distributed partnership property will be allocated among multiple properties based on the unrealized appreciation or depreciation of the distributed properties. Allocations based on the partnership's proportionate basis in the distributed properties will no longer be used. In a substituted basis transaction, distributed properties assume the same basis as the partner's basis in his partnership interest. Substituted basis is used when the partner's interest is liquidated. Substituted basis also applies when a partner receiving a nonliquidating distribution cannot carry over the partnership's basis in the property because the carryover basis exceeds the partner's basis in the partnership.

Allocate first to unrealized receivables and inventory. A distributee partner's substituted basis is first allocated to any unrealized receivables or inventory items that were distributed as part of the transaction. Basis is allocated to unrealized receivables and inventory to the extent of the partnership's basis in these items (Code Sec. 732(c)(1)(A)). Unrealized receivables and inventory are defined in Code Sec. 751(c) and Code Sec. 751(d)(2), respectively.

Insufficient basis to cover unrealized receivables and inventory. If the partner does not have enough available basis to cover the full amount of the partnership's basis in unrealized receivables and inventory, the shortfall in available basis must be allocated among the unrealized receivables and inventory. The difference between the partnership's basis in the unrealized receivables and inventory and the partner's substituted basis available for allocation is treated as a basis "decrease." The decrease is allocated first to properties with unrealized depreciation (Code Sec. 732(c)(3)(A)). This formula is designed to reduce the partner's basis in depreciated property, and will prevent excessive losses when the property is disposed of.

Other distributed properties. Basis remaining after allocations to inventory and unrealized receivables is allocated to other properties to the extent of the partnership's basis in those properties. After this amount, basis increases are allocated first to properties with unrealized appreciation. A decrease in basis is required if the partner does not have sufficient basis to allocate the partnership's full basis in the properties.

Basis decrease formula. The basis decrease is first allocated to property with unrealized depreciation to the extent of the unrealized depreciation in each property (Code Sec. 732(c)(3)(A)). If insufficient basis is available to decrease the partner's basis by the full amount of depreciation in each property, the available basis is allocated to the properties in proportion to their respective amounts of unrealized depreciation. Any remaining decrease is allocated to the properties in proportion to their respective adjusted bases (Code Sec. 732(c)(3)(B)). The decrease made in proportion to the properties' bases is calculated taking into account any basis decreases made to depreciated property.

> Example (1). The Lindisfarne Partnership, which has two assets, C and D, distributes them both in liquidation to a partner, Sabina, whose basis in her partnership interest is $2000. Neither asset is inventory or an unrealized receivable. Asset C has a basis to the partnership of $1500 and a fair market value of $1500, and asset D has a basis to the partnership of $1500 and a fair market value of $500.
> Under the new provisions, Sabina's basis is first allocated to the extent of the partnership's basis in each distributed property, or $1500 to each distributed property, for a total of $3000. However, since Sabina's basis in her interest is only $2000, a downward adjustment of $1000 ($3000 – $2000) is required. The entire amount of the $1000 downward adjustment is allocated to asset D due to its unrealized appreciation, reducing its basis to $500. Thus, the basis of asset C is $1500 in Sabina's hands, and the basis of property D is $500 in Sabina's hands.

Basis increase. Any basis adjustment remaining after the partnership's basis has been fully carried over is first allocated among those properties with unrealized appreciation to the full extent of each property's unrealized appreciation. Allocations in an amount less than the full appreciation are allocated in proportion to the properties' respective amounts of unrealized appreciation. To the extent that the increase is not fully allocated at this point, it is allocated in proportion to the properties' respective fair market values (Code Sec. 732(c)(2)).

> Example (2). The Wadsworth Partnership makes a liquidating distribution of asset A and asset B to a partner, Sean. Sean's basis in his partnership interest is $5500. Neither asset is inventory or unrealized receivables. Asset A has a basis to the partnership of $500 and a fair market value of $4000, and asset B has a basis to the partnership of $1000 and a fair market value of $1000.
> Sean's basis is first allocated to asset A in the amount of $500 and to asset B in the amount of $1000 (their adjusted bases to the partnership).
> The remaining basis adjustment is an increase of $4000 (that is, Sean's $5500 basis minus the partnership's total basis in the distributed assets of $1500). Sean's remaining basis is next allocated to asset A in the amount of $3500, its unrealized appreciation. However, there is no basis allocation to asset B attributable to unrealized appreciation because its fair market value equals the partnership's adjusted basis.

The final basis adjustment of $500 (that is, $4000 – $3500) is allocated in the ratio of the two assets' fair market values—$400 to asset A (for a total basis of $4400) and $100 to asset B (for a total basis of $1100).

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Chuck Levun of Levun, Goodman & Cohen, Northbrook, Illinois, notes that Section 1061 of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 changes the manner in which a partner's basis in his partnership interest is allocated among multiple properties distributed by the partnership to a partner whose partnership interest is being completely liquidated. The basic import of the change is for the basis allocation to take account of the relative unrealized appreciation or unrealized depreciation contained in the distributed assets, when there is a difference between a partner's outside basis for his partnership interest and his share of the inside basis of the partnership assets distributed to him. For distributions occurring on or prior to August 5, 1997, basically the law had been to allocate basis to distributed properties in proportion to their relative adjusted bases in the hands of the partnership.

For example, assume a partner had a $1,800 basis for his partnership interest and receives a distribution from the partnership in liquidation of his interest consisting of Investment Property A, with a basis in the hands of the partnership of $300 and a fair market value of $1,200, and Investment Property B, with a basis in the hands of the partnership of $700 and a fair market value of $800. (This example does not contain a distribution of unrealized receivables or inventory items because under both old and new law the partner's basis is first allocated to these items to the extent of the partnership's basis immediately prior to the distribution). Under old law, Investment Properties A and B would take a basis in the hands of the distributee of $540 and $1,260, respectively (i.e., based upon their respective 30 percent and 70 percent relative adjusted bases in the hands of the partnership, multiplied by the partner's $1,800 basis for his partnership interest). Under new law, the basis allocation would be made as follows:

	Investment Property A	Investment Property B
First $1,000 of basis—equal to partnership's adjusted basis	$ 300	$700
Remaining $800 of basis—based upon relative unrealized appreciation in the distributed properties ($900 vs. $100)	720	80
	$1,020	$780

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Andrew N. Berg, of Debevoise & Plimpton, New York, N.Y., remarks that this section of the Act targets an abuse sometimes referred to as the "million dollar pencil." Prior to its amendment by the Act, Code Sec. 732(c) apportioned a partner's basis in its partnership interest (after accounting for hot assets and cash) among assets received by that partner in liquidation of its partnership interest in proportion to the adjusted bases of such assets. Since this apportionment was somewhat arbitrary, in that it did not take the fair market value of the distributed assets into account, odd results could occur. One common situation involved the liquidation of a partnership with a relatively small amount of tangible assets (a pencil, for example) and a large amount of zero basis goodwill. Upon the purchase of a partnership interest followed by liquidation, former Code Sec. 732(c) apportioned the bulk of the purchase price to the pencil, which could then either be recovered through depreciation or sold for a taxable loss. Code Sec. 732(c), as amended by the Act, eliminates this result.

Berg notes, however, that even as amended, Code Sec. 732(c) does not apportion basis in accordance with relative fair market values. Rather, it uses a formulation somewhat similar to the regime for allocating basis adjustments under Code Sec. 755 following a Code Sec. 754 election. The practical result is that in a partnership that has both appreciated and depreciated assets, in cases where the distributee partner's basis in its partnership interest is equal to fair market value, the depreciated assets will not get stepped down and the appreciated assets will not be fully stepped up to fair market value.

Effective date. These provisions apply to distributions after August 5, 1997.

Precontribution Gain

Background

Prior to amendment by the Act, Code Sec. 704(c)(1)(B) provided that if appreciated (or depreciated) property that had been contributed to the partnership was subsequently distributed by the partnership to another partner within five years of the contribution, the contributing partner was required to recognize the taxable precontribution gain (or loss). Similarly, Code Sec. 737 previously provided that the contributing partner must generally include any precontribution gain in income to the extent that the value of other property distributed by the partnership to the contributing partner, within five years after the contribution of the appreciated property, exceeded the contributing partner's adjusted basis in its partnership interest.

Recognition period extended to seven years.—The period in which a contributing partner will recognize precontribution gain from a distribution of contributed property is extended from five to seven years after the contribution. The seven-year recognition period applies to (1) a partnership distribution to a partner of appreciated property previously contributed by another partner (Code Sec. 704(c)(1)(B)) or (2) a partnership distribution to a contributing partner of other property, the value of which exceeds the contributing partner's basis in the partner's partnership interest (Code Sec. 737(b)(1)).

The House Committee Report anticipates that this extension of time will limit the inconsistency between the treatment of partnership sales and partnership distributions of property previously contributed by the partners. The House Committee Report also expects the legislation to reduce opportunities for partners to circumvent the rule requiring that any precontribution gain on contributed property be allocated to the contributing partner.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Michael Cohen of Levun, Goodman & Cohen, Northbrook, Illinois, points out that the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 amends Code Sec. 704(c)(1)(B) and Code Sec. 737 to increase the "taint" on property contributed to a partnership from five years to seven years, effective for property contributions to a partnership occurring after June 8, 1997. In general, Code Sec. 704(c)(1)(B) provides that if a partner contributes property to a partnership and, within the proscribed period (now seven years), the contributed property is distributed to someone other than the contributing partner, the contributing partner will be responsible for recognizing the remaining Code Sec. 704(c) precontribution gain contained in the property. Concomitantly, Code Sec. 737 provides for gain recognition by the contributing partner where such partner receives a distribution of other partnership property within the proscribed seven-year period after having contributed the property to the partnership.

The effect of this legislative change is to make it more difficult to engage in what are commonly known as "mixing bowl" transactions. These transactions involve the contribution of appreciated property to a partnership by a person who desires to eventually divest himself of the property on a tax-free basis by receiving a nontaxable distribution of other partnership property. Now, the contributing partner will have to wait seven years before exiting the partnership to avoid the taint of Code Sec. 737.

Effective date. These provisions are generally effective for property contributed to a partnership after June 8, 1997. However, these amendments will not apply to any property contributed pursuant to a written binding contract in effect on June 8, 1997, and at all times thereafter before such contribution, if such contract provides for the contribution of a fixed amount of property.

PARTNERSHIP INTEREST SALES

Treatment of Inventory Items

¶ 410

Background

Prior to amendment by the Act, Code Sec. 751(a) provided that upon the sale or exchange of a partnership interest, any amount received that was attributable to unrealized receivables, or to inventory that had "substantially appreciated," was treated as an amount realized from the sale or exchange of property that was not a capital asset (that is, the amount received was treated as ordinary income). The inventory of a partnership was treated as "substantially appreciated" only if the fair market value of the inventory exceeded 120 percent of the adjusted basis of the inventory to the partnership (see prior Code Sec. 751(d)(1)(A)).

With these two rules, Congress had attempted to provide a de minimis exception to the usual ordinary income treatment of all partnership inventory items so as to avoid subjecting every partnership to the complexities of Code Sec. 751, unless there was a material abuse of the capital gains rules. However, taking advantage of the opportunity, partners and their partnerships began to manipulate and plan around the substantial appreciation of partnership inventory requirement. Despite subsequent legislative efforts to reduce such manipulation and avoidance, such activities continued. Furthermore, it became apparent that this "safe harbor" requirement was ineffective at insulating a partnership from the potential complexity of the Code Sec. 751(b) disproportionate distribution rules. Complexity remained because the substantial appreciation requirement applied only to inventory items and not to unrealized receivables. The substantial appreciation requirement also operated to exclude ordinary income for partnerships with profit margins below 20 percent.

Inventory treatment conformed to treatment of unrealized receivables.—The substantial appreciation requirement for inventory is removed from the definition of Code Sec. 751 property for purposes of sales or exchanges of partnership interests. The amount received in exchange for the partner's interest that is attributable to unrealized receivables or inventory is treated as ordinary income. It is no longer necessary for the partnership's inventory to be substantially appreciated in order to give rise to ordinary income following a sale or exchange.

For disproportionate distributions of partnership property under Code Sec. 751(b), the substantial appreciation requirement remains intact. A disproportionate distribution to a partner will be treated as a sale or exchange of property other than a capital asset only if the inventory deemed to be exchanged is substantially appreciated in value.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Chuck Levun of Levun, Goodman & Cohen, Northbrook, Illinois, observes that, under prior law, Code Sec. 751(a)(2) required that, upon the sale of a partnership interest, gain generated by the portion of the selling partner's partnership interest that was attributed to the partner's share of unrealized receivables or substantially appreciated inventory items (often referred to as "hot assets") would be treated as ordinary income, rather than capital gain.

Prior Code Sec. 751(d)(1)(A) required that, before inventory items, as broadly defined in Code Sec. 751(d)(2), would be treated as being substantially appreciated, the aggregate fair market value of all inventory items must exceed the partnership's aggregate tax basis in all such items by more than 20 percent. Amended Code Sec. 751(a)(2) removes the substantial appreciation requirement for treating inventory items as hot assets upon the sale of a partnership interest.

The effect of this provision is obviously to increase the probability that the sale of a partnership interest will produce some amount of ordinary income. It also produces a calculation preciseness that was not required before, due to the leeway that the 20-percent substantially appreciated requirement produced. One should also note that Reg. § 1.751-1(d)(2)(ii) treats accrual basis accounts receivable as inventory items. This had the effect of substantially reducing the aggregate percentage of appreciation in the partnership's inventory items (because the basis of the accounts receivable was almost always either equal to or greater than their fair market value). Although this regulation provision has not been changed, under the new "zero appreciation" rule of amended Code Sec. 751(d)(2), accrual basis accounts receivable will not eliminate the appreciated status of the other investment items.

Note that the prior law requirement that aggregate inventory items exceed their aggregate tax basis by more than 20 percent in order for inventory items to be considered hot assets has been retained with respect to gain or loss generated by a partnership distribution or deemed distribution of inventory items.

Effective date. These provisions are generally effective for sales, exchanges and distributions after August 5, 1997. However, these amendments do not apply to any sale or exchange pursuant to a written binding contract in effect on June 8, 1997, and at all times thereafter before such sale or exchange.

SIMPLIFIED FLOW-THROUGH: ELECTING LARGE PARTNERSHIPS

Simplified Reporting for Electing Large Partnerships

Background

A partnership is treated as a conduit for federal tax purposes. Before enactment of the Taxpayer Simplification Act of 1997 (Act), and its addition of Code Secs. 771 through 777, every partnership, large or small, was required to separately report to each partner the partner's distributive share of every item of income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit. This regime resulted in the reporting of numerous items to each partner. Schedule K-1, on which separate partnership items are listed, contains space for more than 40 separate items. The reporting of such numerous separately stated items proved especially burdensome to individual investors who owned relatively small, passive interests in large partnerships. The great number of reportable items also made it difficult for the IRS to match those items reported on Schedule K-1 against the partner's income tax return, especially where the Schedule K-1 items were modified or limited at the partner level before appearing on the partner's return. Treatment of partnership items for partnerships other than those electing to apply the new simplified large partnership reporting provisions is described below.

Capital gains and losses. A partner's share of every partnership's net short-term capital gain or loss and net long-term capital gain or loss from portfolio investments is separately reported to the partner. Each partner's share of net gain or loss from the sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion of certain trade or business assets (see Code Sec. 1231) is usually separately reported as well. In general, the net gains from such assets are treated as long-term capital gains, but any net losses are treated as ordinary losses.

Deductions. A partner's share of miscellaneous itemized deductions and charitable contributions are separately reported to the partner. Miscellaneous itemized deductions are deductible by an individual partner only to the extent that, in the aggregate, they exceed two percent of the individual's adjusted gross income (AGI). Limitations on charitable contributions are applied at the partner level (under Code Sec. 170(b)(2)). Any excess contributions can be carried forward for five years.

Passive loss provisions. A partnership's operations may be treated as multiple activities for purposes of the passive loss rules. A partnership is required to separately report the items of income and deduction from each of its activities. Passive loss deductions and credits are generally disallowed to the extent that these exceed income from passive loss activities. Any losses that are not allowed in a tax year are suspended and treated as current deductions from passive activities in the next tax year. Losses are allowed in full when a taxpayer disposes of the taxpayer's entire interest in the passive activity to an unrelated person in a taxable transaction.

Portfolio income, such as interest and dividends, and expenses allocable to such income, is not treated as income or loss from a passive activity. Rental real estate activities in which the taxpayer materially participates are not subject to the passive loss limitations if the taxpayer meets certain eligibility requirements relating to real property trades or businesses in which the partner performs services (Code Sec. 469(c)(7)). A credit applicable to low-income housing and rehabilitation activities is available regardless of whether the taxpayer claiming the credit actively participates in the rental real estate activity generating the credit.

REMIC provisions. A tax is imposed on a partnership holding a residual interest in a real estate mortgage investment conduit (REMIC). The amount of the tax is the amount of excess inclusions allocable to partnership interests owned by certain tax-exempt organizations (disqualified organizations) multiplied by the highest corporate tax rate.

Optional basis adjustment election. In general, the transfer of a partnership interest or the distribution of partnership property does not affect the basis of partnership assets (the "inside" basis). A partnership may elect to make certain adjustments in the basis of partnership property (Code Sec. 754). Under a Code Sec. 754 election, the transfer of a partnership interest generally results in an adjustment in the partnership's basis in its property for the benefit of the transferee partner, to reflect the difference between that partner's basis for his interest and his proportionate share of the adjusted basis of partnership property (see Code Sec. 743(b)). Also, under this optional basis adjustment election, a distribution of property to a partner in certain cases results in an adjustment in the basis of other partnership property (see Code Sec. 734(b)).

Constructive termination of partnership. A partnership will technically terminate for tax purposes if, within a 12-month period, 50 percent or more of the total partnership interests are sold or exchanged (Code Sec. 708(b)(1)(B)).

Oil and gas activities. Partnerships engaged in the search for, and extraction of, crude oil and natural gas are subject to special tax rules, necessitating the separate reporting to partners of certain specific information. A taxpayer who owns an economic interest in a producing deposit of natural resources (including crude oil and natural gas) is permitted to claim a deduction for the depletion of the deposit as the minerals are extracted.

Cost or percentage depletion. For oil and gas produced in the United States, a taxpayer is generally permitted to claim the greater of a deduction for cost depletion or percentage depletion. Cost depletion is computed by multiplying a taxpayer's adjusted basis in the depletable property by a fraction, the numerator of which is the amount of current year production from the property and the denominator of which is the property's estimated reserves as of the beginning of that year. Percentage depletion is equal to a specified percentage of gross income from production. While cost depletion is limited to the taxpayer's basis in the depletable property, percentage depletion is not so limited. Once a taxpayer has exhausted its basis in the depletable property, it may continue to claim excess percentage depletion deductions.

Limitations on depletion deductions. The following limitations apply to the deduction for oil and gas percentage depletion:

(1) Percentage depletion is not available to oil and gas producers who also engage, directly or indirectly, in significant levels of oil and gas retailing or refining activities (so-called "integrated producers" of oil and gas).

(2) The deduction for percentage depletion may be claimed by a taxpayer only with respect to up to 1,000 barrels-per-day of production.

(3) The percentage depletion deduction may not exceed 100 percent of the taxpayer's net income for the tax year from the depletable oil and gas property.

(4) A percentage depletion deduction may not be claimed to the extent that it exceeds 65 percent of the taxpayer's pre-percentage depletion taxable income.

Depletion computed separately by partners. The depletion allowance is computed separately by the partners and not by the partnership. In computing a partner's basis in the partner's partnership interest, basis is increased by the partner's share of any partnership-related excess percentage depletion deductions and is decreased (but not below zero) by the partner's total amount of depletion deductions attributable to partnership property.

Intangible drilling and development costs. Intangible drilling and development costs (IDCs) incurred with respect to domestic oil and gas wells generally may be deducted at the election of the taxpayer. In the case of integrated producers, no more than 70 percent of IDCs incurred during a tax year may be deducted. IDCs not deducted are capitalized and generally are either added to the property's basis and recovered through depletion deductions or amortized on a straight-line basis over a 60-month period.

Qualifying large partnerships may elect simplified reporting system.— Large partnerships with 100 or more members may be eligible to significantly reduce the number of items that must be separately reported to their numerous partners. Simplification of reporting requirements for large partnerships is designed to ease the reporting burden faced by affected partners as well as to facilitate IRS computer-matching efforts. A qualified partnership must make an election in order for the large partnership reporting rules to apply. Service partnerships and commodity pools are generally ineligible to elect large partnership status. An electing large partnership has greater longevity than other partnerships and will not terminate for tax purposes solely because 50 percent or more of its interests are sold or exchanged within a 12-month period (under Code Sec. 708(b)(1)(B)).

An electing large partnership combines most items of partnership income, deduction, credit and loss at the partnership level and passes through net amounts to the partners. Special rules apply to partnerships engaging in oil and gas activities.

Electing large partnership. An "electing large partnership" is any nonservice partnership that elects to apply the simplified reporting provisions under Code Sec. 771 through Code Sec. 777, provided that the number of partners in the partnership equaled or exceeded 100 during the preceding tax year (Code Sec. 775(a)). A partnership may cease to be treated as an electing large partnership if the number of partners falls below 100 during any partnership tax year. Rules for determining the treatment of a partnership whose membership falls below 100 will be provided by regulations.

Caution. An election of large partnership status, once made, applies to the tax year for which it has been made and for all subsequent tax years, and is irrevocable without the consent of the IRS (Code Sec. 775(a)(2)). Careful consideration of the laws governing electing large partnerships should precede this permanent election.

Partnerships eligible to elect large partnership treatment. A partnership is generally eligible to elect large partnership status if it had 100 or more partners during the preceding tax year. However, certain service partnerships and commodity-trading partnerships are not eligible (see below).

Service partners not counted. Any individual partner who holds an interest in the partnership and who is presently performing substantial services in connection with the partnership's business activities, or who has performed such services in the past while a partner, is not counted toward achieving the 100-partner threshold (Code Sec. 775(b)(1)).

Indirect holders of partnership interests. The Conference Committee Report states that only those persons directly holding partnership interests in the applicable tax year, including persons holding through nominees, will be counted in determining the number of partners in the partnership. Persons holding their interests indirectly, such as through another partnership, will not be counted in this numerical determination, according to the Conference Committee Report. Indirect interests are not specifically addressed in the Code Sec. 775 definition of electing large partnerships.

Service partnerships not eligible for election. Certain service partnerships are not eligible to elect large partnership status. A partnership is an ineligible service partnership if substantially all of the partners fall within one of the following categories (Code Sec. 775(b)(2)):

(1) individuals performing substantial services in connection with the partnership's activities or who are personal service corporations (under Code Sec. 269A(b)), the owner-employees of which perform substantial services in connection with the partnership's activities;

(2) retired partners who had performed substantial services in connection with the partnership's activities; or

(3) spouses of partners who are performing or had previously performed such substantial services.

The partnership's activities include not only its own activities, but also the activities of any other partnership in which the partnership directly owns at least an 80-percent interest in the capital and profits (Code Sec. 775(b)(3)).

Commodity pools not eligible for election. An election to be treated as a large partnership will not be effective for any partnership whose principal activity is the buying and selling of commodities. Commodities that qualify as inventory, stock in trade or other property held for sale to customers in the ordinary course of business under Code Sec. 1221(1) are not counted for purposes of this exclusion. Options, futures or forwards relating to commodities count as sales of commodities (Code Sec. 775(c)).

Treatment on return binds partnership. If a partnership files a return for any year on which the partnership is treated as an electing large partnership, this treatment on the return will bind the partnership and all of its partners (Code Sec. 775(d)). The partnership will be bound whether or not it has affirmatively made an election to apply the large partnership reporting rules. The IRS, however, is not bound by the treatment on the return.

Change in interests will not terminate electing large partnership. Recognizing that large partnerships need to have readily transferable interests, an electing large partnership will not terminate for tax purposes solely because 50 percent or more of its interests are sold or exchanged within a 12-month period. Accordingly, the constructive termination rules of Code Sec. 708(b)(1)(B) do not apply to an electing large partnership (Code Sec. 774(c)).

Optional basis adjustments continue to apply. No changes to the optional basis adjustment provisions have been initiated as a result of the large partnership simplification rules. Accordingly, an electing large partnership may still elect to adjust the basis of partnership assets with respect to transferee partners. The computation of an electing large partnership's taxable income (under Code Sec. 773) is made without considering the Code Sec. 743(b) basis adjustment. As is the case for other, nonelecting partnerships, the Code Sec. 743(b) basis adjustment is made only with respect to the transferee partner. Additionally, an electing large partnership can continue to adjust the basis of partnership property under Code Sec. 734(b) if property is distributed to a partner (Code Sec. 774(a)).

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Partnership Computations and Pass-Throughs for Electing Large Partnerships

Partnership computations and separately stated large partnership items.—The taxable income of an electing large partnership is generally computed in the same manner as that of an individual, with certain modifications. The deduction for personal exemptions under Code Sec. 151 and the net operating loss deduction under Code Sec. 172 are disallowed. Many additional itemized deductions are also disallowed, e.g., medical, alimony, and moving expenses. Miscellaneous itemized deductions are generally combined; instead of applying the two-percent floor to these items, 70 percent of these deductions are disallowed at the partnership level (Code Sec. 773(b)(3)). Limitations generally apply at the partnership level. Most elections affecting partnership income and credits are made by the partnership. Elections relating to foreign tax credits (Code Sec. 901) and elections relating to discharge of indebtedness income (Code Sec. 108) are made by the individual partners.

Items separately stated to each partner. In determining the taxable income of a partner of an electing large partnership, each partner in the large partnership takes into account separately the partner's distributive share of the following items, as determined at the partnership level (Code Sec. 772(a)):

(1) taxable income or loss from passive loss limitation activities;

(2) taxable income or loss from other activities (e.g., portfolio income or loss);

(3) net capital gain or loss allocable to passive loss limitation activities;

(4) net capital gain or loss allocable to other partnership activities;

(5) tax-exempt interest;

(6) applicable net alternative minimum tax adjustment separately computed for the passive loss limitation activities and the other activities;

(7) general credits;

(8) Code Sec. 42 low-income housing credit;

(9) Code Sec. 47 rehabilitation credit;

(10) foreign income taxes;

(11) Code Sec. 29 credit for producing fuel from a nonconventional source; and

(12) any other items to the extent that the IRS determines that separate treatment is appropriate.

Items that must be separately stated by most partnerships, but that escape separate reporting by an electing large partnership, include short-term capital gains and losses; gains from sales of Code Sec. 1231 property used in a trade or business; charitable contributions; miscellaneous itemized nonbusiness deductions (most of which are not deductible by an electing large partnership); and separately enumerated alternative minimum tax preference items.

Character determined at partnership level. The character of any item separately stated to the partners is based on its character to the partnership. The items are treated as incurred by the partnership, similar to the character rule for other partnerships under Code Sec. 702(b) (Code Sec. 772(c)(1)). Net capital gain or loss is treated as long-term capital gain or loss (Code Sec. 772(c)(4)).

Passive loss limitation activities. A limited partner's distributive share of income or loss from passive loss limitation activities engaged in by the partnership will be treated as a single item from a single passive activity within the meaning of Code Sec. 469 (Code Sec. 772(c)(2)). Capital gain or loss from a passive activity (separately stated under Code Sec. 772(a)(3)(A)) is treated as derived from the conduct of a trade or business that is a single passive activity. Alternative minimum tax adjustments for passive loss limitation activities (separately stated under Code Sec. 772(a)(5)(A)) passed through to partners will also be treated as derived from a single passive activity. These rules apply only to limited partners. For general partners, items allocable to passive loss limitation activities must be separately stated as necessary to comply with Code Sec. 469 (Code Sec. 772(f)).

Income from discharge of indebtedness. Income from discharge of indebtedness is excluded from the partnership's portfolio income (reported under Code Sec. 772(a)) and must be taken into account separately by each partner (Code Sec. 773(c)). Rules governing discharge of indebtedness income (under Code Sec. 108) apply separately to each partner, as is the case for partners in other partnerships (under Code Sec. 108(d)(6)). The large partnership rules do not affect the treatment of the item at the partner level.

Unrelated business taxable income for tax exempts. A tax-exempt partner is subject to tax on its distributive share of partnership income to the extent that the partnership activity is an unrelated business with respect to the partner (Code Sec. 512). To accommodate this requirement, a tax-exempt partner's distributive share of partnership items must be taken into account separately under current law to the extent necessary for computing income from unrelated businesses (UBTI). This requirement is unchanged under the electing large partnership provisions (Code Sec. 772(e)).

Tax-exempt interest. Tax-exempt interest must be separately stated to each partner. Tax-exempt interest is interest on a state or local bond that is excludable from income under Code Sec. 103 (Code Sec. 772(d)(2)). Treatment of tax-exempt interest for the large partnership is the same as for other partnerships.

Limitations generally applied at the partnership level. Most limitations and other provisions affecting the computation of the taxable income or any credit of the electing large partnership are applied at the partnership level. For example, the limitation on miscellaneous itemized deductions applies at the partnership level; however, instead of the two-percent floor, 70 percent of the partnership's total miscellaneous itemized deductions are disallowed (Code Sec. 773(b)(3)). The deduction for charitable contributions is limited at the partnership level according to the percentage-of-income limitation usually applicable to corporations under Code Sec. 170(b)(2) (Code Sec. 773(b)(2)). The limitation is generally 10 percent of taxable income.

The following provisions will be applied at the partner level: Code Sec. 68 overall limitation on itemized deductions; Code Sec. 49 and Code Sec. 465 at-risk limitations; Code Sec. 469 limitation on passive activity losses and credits; and any other provision specified in regulations (Code Sec. 773(a)(3)). The deduction for expenses for the production of income under Code Sec. 212, which might apply if the partner has a loss instead of "other" partnership income, is not treated as a miscellaneous itemized deduction at the partner level (Code Sec. 773(b)(2)). The deduction for Code Sec. 212 expenses is not subject to the two-percent floor under Code Sec. 67.

Elections affecting income and credits made at partnership level. Most elections affecting the computation of the taxable income of an electing large partnership, or affecting the computation of any credit claimed by a large partnership, must be made by the partnership. However, the Code Sec. 901 foreign tax credit election and any election relating to discharge of indebtedness under Code Sec. 108 must be made by each partner separately (Code Sec. 773(a)(2)). For example, the large partnership provisions do not affect Code Sec. 108(b)(5), providing for elections to reduce the basis of depreciable property, or the Code Sec. 108(c) election to exclude discharge of indebtedness income with respect to qualified real property business indebtedness (Code Sec. 773(c)).

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Deductions and Credits for Electing Large Partnerships

Deductions and credits generally combined at partnership level.—An electing large partnership generally does not separately report deductions to partners. Expenses from passive activities are combined with income from passive activities in determining net income or loss. Miscellaneous itemized deductions are combined and reduced at the partnership level. The deduction for charitable contributions is determined at the partnership level and deducted in determining partnership income. Most credits are also combined into a single separately stated "general credit."

Miscellaneous itemized deductions disallowed at partnership level. Miscellaneous itemized deductions of an electing large partnership are not separately reported to the partners. In lieu of applying the two-percent floor for itemized deductions (under Code Sec. 67), 70-percent of the itemized deductions are disallowed at the partnership level (Code Sec. 773(b)(3)). The 70-percent cut is designed to approximate the amount of the deduction that would be lost to the individual partners under the two-percent floor. The remaining 30 percent is allowed at the partnership level in determining the large partnership's taxable income and is not subject to the two-percent floor at the partner level.

Charitable contributions not separately stated. An electing large partnership does not separately report its charitable contributions to the partners. Instead, the Code Sec. 170 charitable contribution deduction is allowed at the partnership level in determining the partnership's taxable income, subject to the 10-percent-of-taxable-income limitation applicable to corporate donors (Code Sec. 773(b)(2)).

General credits reported as single item. For the partners of electing large partnerships, all "general credits" are separately reported to the partners as a single item. A partner's distributive share of general credits is taken into account as a current year general business credit (Code Sec. 772(c)(6)).

Credits included in general credit category. A "general credit" is defined as any credit other than the low-income housing credit, the rehabilitation credit, and the credit for producing fuel from a nonconventional source (Code Sec. 772(d)(5)). In recognition of their special treatment under the passive loss rules, the low-income housing and rehabilitation credits are separately reported, as is the credit for producing fuel from a nonconventional source.

The refundable credit for gasoline used for exempt purposes (under Code Sec. 34) and the refund or credit for undistributed capital gains of a regulated investment company (under Code Sec. 852(b)(3)(D)) are allowed to the electing large partnership, and thus are not separately taken into account by the partners of such partnership (Code Sec. 774(d)(1) and (2)).

Credit recapture applies at partnership level. Credit recapture is imposed at the partnership level for an electing large partnership (Code Sec. 774(b)(1)(A)). The amount of the recapture is determined by assuming that the credit that is subject to recapture had been fully utilized to reduce taxes (Code Sec. 774(b)(1)(B)). Credit recapture is first applied toward reducing the electing large partnership's current year credit, if any. If the recapture amount exceeds the amount of the current year's credit, the partnership is liable for the excess over that amount (Code Sec. 774(b)(2)). No credit recapture will be required as a result of any transfer of an interest in an electing large partnership (Code Sec. 774(b)(3)).

Foreign tax credit. The current foreign tax credit generally allows U.S. taxpayers to reduce U.S. income tax on foreign income by the amount of any foreign income taxes paid or accrued to foreign countries and to possessions of the United States with respect to that income (Code Sec. 901). Instead of claiming this foreign tax credit, a taxpayer may instead choose to deduct the foreign taxes. The total amount of the credit may not exceed the same proportion of the taxpayer's U.S. tax which the taxpayer's foreign source taxable income bears to the taxpayer's worldwide taxable income for the tax year.

Partners in an electing large partnership, like other taxpayers, may choose between the foreign tax credit and the foreign tax deduction (Code Sec. 772(d)(6)). Thus, the electing large partnership must continue to separately report to its partners creditable foreign taxes and the source of any income, gain, loss, or deduction taken into account by the partnership. All elections, computations, and limitations relating to foreign tax credits continue to be made by the partner as well.

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Gains and Losses of Electing Large Partnerships

Netting of capital gains and losses occurs at partnership level.—For electing large partnerships, netting of capital gains and losses occurs at the partnership level. Passive activity items are separated from capital gains stemming from partnership portfolio income. Each partner separately takes into account the partner's distributive shares of net capital gain or net capital loss for passive activity and portfolio items. Net capital gain or loss taken into account by a partner is treated as long-term capital gain or long-term capital loss (Code Sec. 772(c)(4)). Any excess net short-term capital gain over net long-term capital loss will be consolidated with the partnership's other taxable income and will not be separately reported.

Passive activity items are separately stated. A partner's distributive share of the partnership's net capital gain or loss is divided between passive loss limitation activities and other activities (Code Sec. 772(a)(3)). Capital gain is allocated to passive loss limitation activities to the extent that it derives from sales and exchanges of property used in connection with a passive activity. Any excess is allocated to "other" partnership activities (i.e., portfolio income) (Code Sec. 772(d)(4)(B)). A similar rule applies for purposes of allocating any net capital loss.

An activity is a passive loss limitation activity if it involves the conduct of a trade or business in which the taxpayer does not materially participate, or if it is a rental activity (Code Sec. 772(d)(1)). Generally, limited partners will not materially participate in any business conducted by the partnership. A trade or business is passive if it meets the definition in Code Sec. 469(c)(5) or (6).

Section 1231 gain. Any partnership gains and losses under Code Sec. 1231 will be netted at the partnership level. Net gain will be treated as long-term capital gain and is subject to the rules described above, and any net loss will be treated as ordinary loss and consolidated with the partnership's other taxable income.

Installment sale rules. Dispositions of residential time-shares and residential lots, generally treated as nondealer dispositions under the installment sale rules, are handled at the partnership level. If the electing large partnership wishes to report dispositions of these types of property under the installment method, the special interest charge imposed under Code Sec. 453(l)(2)(B) is calculated at the partnership level. The tax imposed, calculated under Code Sec. 453(l)(3), is computed using the highest individual or corporate tax rate in effect (Code Sec. 774(f)). Currently, the highest rate in effect is 39.6 percent. Interest on nondealer dispositions under Code Sec. 453A is also calculated at the partnership level, using the highest tax rate in effect under Code Sec. 1 or Code Sec. 11.

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1221(a), adding Code Sec. 772 and Code Sec. 774; Act Sec. 1221(c). Law at ¶ 5235 and 5239. Committee Report at ¶ 12,215.

Passive loss limitation activities separately reported.—An electing large partnership must separately account for items attributable to passive loss limitation activities and "other" items (Code Sec. 772(a)). Since limited partners generally do not materially participate in the partnership's activities, most electing large partnership activities are passive loss limitation activities with respect to the limited partners. Portfolio income, such as interest or dividends, is categorized as income from "other" activities. Within these categories, income and loss from all sources is netted to arrive at a single item of net income or net loss.

Passive loss limitation activity. An activity is generally characterized as a passive loss limitation activity if it involves the conduct of a trade or business in which the taxpayer does not materially participate, or if it is a rental activity (Code Sec. 772(d)(1)). Generally, limited partners will not materially participate in any business conducted by the partnership. A trade or business is passive if its meets the definition set forth in Code Sec. 469(c)(5) or (6).

Items treated as derived from a single trade or business. Each partner must separately account for the partner's distributive share of income or loss from passive loss limitation activities. The partner's share of passive income or loss is generally treated as deriving from a single trade or business which is a passive activity under the Code Sec. 469 passive loss rules (Code Sec. 772(c)(2)). Limited partners are not required to separately report items from multiple passive activities.

Rules for general partners. A general partner in an electing large partnership must separately account for any items attributable to passive loss limitation activities to the extent necessary to comply with the Code Sec. 469 passive loss rules (Code Sec. 772(f)). Activities that are passive with respect to limited partners will not necessarily be passive with respect to a general partner who participates in the business. Thus, any income derived from an electing large partnership trade or business is not treated as passive income with respect to a general partner who materially participates in that activity.

Other activities. A partner's distributive share of income or loss from activities other than passive loss limitation activities is treated as income or expense attributable to property held for investment. Portfolio income (e.g., interest and dividends) is reduced by any portfolio deductions and allocable investment interest expenses at the partnership level and is separately reported to the partners as a single item. If the item is reported as a net expense relating to property held for investment, it is deductible by the partner under Code Sec. 212. However, the item will not be subject to the two-percent floor under Code Sec. 67 as is the case for most miscellaneous itemized deductions (Code Sec. 772(c)(3)).

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Alternative Minimum Tax Preferences for Electing Large Partnerships

Alternative minimum tax preferences determined at partnership level.—Alternative minimum tax (AMT) adjustments and preferences are combined at the partnership level. An electing large partnership reports to its partners a net AMT adjustment separately computed for passive loss limitation activities and other activities. In determining a partner's alternative minimum taxable income, the partner's distributive share of any applicable net AMT adjustment is taken into account instead of making separate AMT adjustments for different partnership items (as provided in Code Secs. 56, 57, and 58).

Net AMT adjustment. The net AMT adjustment is determined by using the adjustments applicable to individuals (in the case of partners other than corporations) and the adjustments applicable to corporations (in the case of corporate partners) (Code Sec. 772(d)(3)). Except as may be provided in regulations, the applicable net AMT adjustment is treated as a deferral tax preference for purposes of the Code Sec. 53 minimum tax credit (Code Sec. 772(c)(5)).

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Electing Large Partnership with Residual Interests in REMIC

All partners treated as disqualified holders under REMIC rules.—All interests in an electing large partnership will be treated as held by disqualified organizations for purposes of the tax on partnerships holding residual interests in a real estate mortgage investment conduit (REMIC) (Code Sec. 774(e)(1)). An electing large partnership is thus discouraged from holding residual interests in a REMIC. An electing large partnership holding a residual interest in a REMIC is subject to an excise tax under Code Sec. 860E(e)(6). The amount of the tax is equal to the excess inclusions of the partnership (defined in Code Sec. 860E(c)) multiplied by the highest corporate tax rate (Code Sec. 860E(e)(6)(A)). The amount subject to tax is excluded from gross partnership income (Code Sec. 774(e)(2)).

No exception for entities furnishing affidavit. An electing large partnership may not avoid the tax imposed on transfers to a disqualified holder by furnishing an affidavit, as otherwise allowed under Code Sec. 860E(e)(6)(D) (Code Sec. 774(e)).

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Electing Large Partnership with Oil and Gas Activities

Reporting rules reflect limits on percentage depletion deductions.—Electing large partnerships with oil and gas activities ("oil and gas large partnerships") generally follow the same simplified reporting regime as other electing large partnerships. Depletion is generally computed at the partnership level. However, to prevent the extension of percentage depletion deductions to persons otherwise excluded, certain partners are treated as "disqualified persons," and special reporting rules apply.

Depletion generally computed at partnership level. The allowance for depletion claimed for any partnership oil or gas property under Code Sec. 611 must be computed at the partnership level. The provision under Code Sec. 613A(c)(7)(D), requiring depletion allowances to be computed separately by each partner, is disregarded for electing large partnerships. The limitation on depletion based on the amount of production, under Code Sec. 613A(c), is not used; depletion is also computed without regard to Code Sec. 613A(d)(1) (taxable income limitation) and Code Sec. 705(a)(3) (depletion basis adjustment) (Code Sec. 776(a)).

Computing the depletion deduction. An oil and gas large partnership computes its deduction for oil and gas depletion under the general statutory rules (subject to certain exceptions) with the assumptions that (1) the partnership is the taxpayer and (2) it qualifies for the percentage depletion deduction. The amount of the depletion deduction, as well as other oil- and gas-related items, are generally reported to each partner (other than to partners who are disqualified persons) as components of that partner's distributive share of taxable income or loss from passive loss limitation activities. Neither the 1,000-barrel-per-day limitation on depletion deductions nor the 65-percent-of-taxable-income limitation on depletion deductions under Code Sec. 613A(d)(1) applies (Code Sec. 776(a)(2)).

Disqualified person's share of oil and gas items. A disqualified person's share of any item of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit attributable to partnership oil or gas property is determined apart from the partnership's combined income under Code Sec. 773 and is not included in the items separately reported to the partner under Code Sec. 772 (Code Sec. 776(b)(1)). For example, in computing the partnership's net income from oil and gas for purposes of determining the intangible drilling costs (IDC) preference (if any) to be reported to partners who are not disqualified persons as part of the AMT adjustment, the disqualified persons' distributive shares of the partnership's net income from oil and gas are not taken into account.

An oil and gas large partnership reports information related to oil and gas activities to a disqualified partner in the same manner that the items were reported prior to the election, under the general rules of Subchapter K. The simplified reporting rules, however, do apply to the disqualified partner's share of items not related to oil and gas activities.

Disqualified persons. Two categories of taxpayers are defined as "disqualified persons." The first category includes certain retailers (Code Sec. 613A(d)(2)) and refiners (Code Sec. 613A(d)(4)), i.e., taxpayers who do not qualify for the Code Sec. 613A percentage depletion deduction. The second category includes any other person whose average daily production of oil and gas (for purposes of determining the depletable oil and natural gas quantity under Code Sec. 613A(c)(2)) exceeds 500 barrels for its tax year in which (or with which) the partnership's tax year ends (Code Sec. 776(b)(2)). In computing average daily production, all production of domestic crude oil and natural gas attributable to the partner is taken into account, including such partner's proportionate share of any production of the large partnership. Six thousand cubic feet of natural gas is treated as a "barrel" of crude oil (Code Sec. 776(b)(3)).

Disqualified person must notify partnership of its status. A taxpayer that falls within either disqualified person category, as described above, must notify any large partnership in which it holds a direct or indirect interest that it is a disqualified person. Thus, for example, if an integrated producer owns an interest in a partnership which, in turn, owns an interest in an oil and gas large partnership, the integrated producer must provide the management of the electing large partnership with information regarding its status as a disqualified person and the details regarding its indirect interest in the electing large partnership.

Intangible drilling and development costs (IDC). As under current law, the election to deduct IDCs under Code Sec. 263(c) is made at the partnership level. Since the new provisions treat those taxpayers required by Code Sec. 291 to capitalize 30 percent of IDCs as disqualified persons, an oil and gas large partnership may pass through a full deduction of IDCs to its partners who are not disqualified persons. In contrast to other partnerships, an oil and gas large partnership also has the responsibility with respect to its partners who are not disqualified persons for making a Code Sec. 59(e) election to capitalize and amortize certain specified IDCs. Partners who are disqualified persons are permitted to make their own separate Code Sec. 59(e) elections.

Alternative minimum tax adjustment. Consistent with the general reporting regime for electing large partnerships, a single AMT adjustment is made and reported as a separate item to the partners (other than disqualified persons) of an oil and gas large partnership. This separately-reported item is affected by the limitation on the repeal of the tax preference for excess IDCs. The limitation on repeal of the IDC preference is applied at the partnership level and is based on the cumulative reduction in the partnership's alternative minimum taxable income resulting from repeal of that preference.

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

SIMPLIFIED AUDIT PROCEDURES: ELECTING LARGE PARTNERSHIPS

New Audit Provisions

¶ 421

Background

All partnerships are generally subject to the unified audit rules under Code Sec. 6221 through Code Sec. 6233. These audit rules were established by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA). The rules apply to all partnerships except for certain small partnerships with 10 or fewer partners.

Under TEFRA, the tax treatment of all partnership items is determined at the partnership, rather than at the partner, level. Prior to TEFRA, any adjustments to a partnership's items of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit were made in separate proceedings with respect to each partner individually. Where a large partnership had partners located in different audit districts, such adjustments were made in numerous actions in multiple jurisdictions, occasionally with conflicting results.

Although TEFRA resolved many administrative and jurisdictional issues, unfortunately the audit procedures applicable to very large partnerships remained cumbersome, inefficient, and complex. The IRS often found itself assessing deficiencies arising from the audit of a large partnership against numerous partners, many of whom were difficult to locate and were no longer partners. This scenario was further complicated by the intervention of partners who had the right to act individually.

Treatment on partner's return. Every partner of every partnership is required to report all partnership items consistently with the partnership's return. In the alternative, a TEFRA partner can notify the IRS of any applicable inconsistency. Upon a partner's failure to report a partnership item consistently with that of the partnership, the IRS can make a computational adjustment and immediately assess any additional tax that results.

Separate assessments for partners. Although the IRS can challenge the reporting position of a partnership by conducting a single administrative proceeding to resolve an issue with respect to all of the partners, the IRS is still required, for a

Background

TEFRA partnership, to assess any resulting deficiency against each taxpayer who was a partner in the year in which the understatement of tax liability arose.

Separate refunds. Any TEFRA partner can request an administrative adjustment or a refund for the partner's own separate tax liability. Every partner also has the right to participate in partnership-level administrative proceedings and any settlement agreements with respect to partnership items that might arise.

Tax Matters Partner. The TEFRA rules establish the "Tax Matters Partner" as the primary representative of every partnership in dealings with the IRS. The Tax Matters Partner (TMP) is a general partner designated by the partnership or, in the absence of such a specific designation, the general partner with the largest profits interest at the close of the tax year. If no TMP is designated, and it is impractical to apply the largest profits interest rule, the IRS may then select any partner as the TMP.

Notice requirements. The IRS generally is required to give notice of the beginning of partnership-level administrative proceedings and any resulting administrative adjustment to all partners of every partnership whose names and addresses are furnished to the IRS. For partnerships with more than 100 partners, however, the IRS generally is not required to give notice to any partner whose profits interest was less than one percent.

Appeals of adjustments. After the IRS makes an administrative adjustment, the Tax Matters Partner and, in limited circumstances, certain other partners, can file a petition for readjustment of the partnership items in the Tax Court, the district court in which the partnership's principal place of business is located, or the Claims Court.

Electing large partnerships not subject to TEFRA audit procedures.— The Act creates a special audit system for qualifying large partnerships that have elected to apply the simplified flow-through reporting system under new Code Sec. 771 through Code Sec. 777 (Code Sec. 6240(a)). A partnership that elects the simplified pass-through system is an "electing large partnership." A partnership is generally eligible to elect to apply the new reporting rules if it had 100 or more partners during the preceding tax year, not counting service partners. A partnership is not eligible to elect simplified reporting if the principal business of the partnership is the buying and selling of commodities (including options, futures, and forwards), or if substantially all of the partners perform substantial services for the partnership (see the discussion of new Code Sec. 775, as added by Act Sec. 1221, at ¶ 412).

The partnership audit rules created by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA), contained in Code Sec. 6221 through Code Sec. 6234, generally do not apply to an electing large partnership (Code Sec. 6240(a)).

Proceedings at partnership level. An electing large partnership, like other partnerships, appoints a representative to handle matters with the IRS. Unlike the TEFRA rules, the representative does not need to be a partner (Code Sec. 6255(b)). Only the partnership, and not the individual partners, will receive notice of partnership adjustments (Code Sec. 6245(b)). Only the partnership has the right to appeal the adjustment (Code Sec. 6247(a)).

Adjustments accounted for in year they take effect. The tax consequences of an adjustment to an electing large partnership item generally depend on the year in which the adjustment "takes effect." For an adjustment resulting from an administrative request filed by the partnership (comparable to a refund claim), the adjustment takes effect when it is allowed by the IRS. An adjustment proposed by the IRS takes effect when it is made, unless the adjustment is appealed in court. An appealed adjustment takes effect when the decision of the court becomes final (Code Sec. 6242(d)(2)).

Adjustments passed through to current partners or treated as imputed underpayment. Once a partnership adjustment takes effect, an electing large partnership generally has two choices for handling the adjustment. The adjustment may be combined with similar partnership items for the current tax year and passed through to the current partners, who will treat the adjustment no differently from items arising in the current year. Alternatively, the partnership can elect not to pass the adjustment through to current partners, in which case the partnership will pay tax on any net adjustment at the highest individual or corporate rate, plus interest and penalties. The net adjustment paid for at the partnership level is an "imputed underpayment."

Prior-year partners and prior tax years not generally affected. Most adjustments to partnership items of an electing large partnership will not affect prior tax years of the partners, or tax years of former partners who left the partnership before the adjustment took effect. This simplification eliminates the need for the IRS to locate and assess taxes against large numbers of former partners. However, an adjustment that results in a change to a partner's distributive share (under Code Sec. 704) will require a change to the partner's tax year in which the item should have been reported (Code Sec. 6241(c)(2)(A)). Also, for a partnership that ceases to exist before an adjustment takes effect, the former partners will be required to take the adjustment into account in a manner to be prescribed by future regulations (Code Sec. 6255(d)).

Application of TEFRA audit rules. The usual TEFRA partnership-level audit rules (Code Sec. 6221 through Code Sec. 6234) will not apply to any electing large partnership, other than in its capacity as a partner in another partnership that is not also an electing large partnership (Code Sec. 6240(b)(1)). To the extent that an electing large partnership is a partner in another partnership that is not an electing large partnership, the usual TEFRA audit rules will apply to those items of the electing large partnership that are "partnership items" with respect to the nonelecting partnership. However, any adjustment made to the partnership items of the electing large partnership as a result of its interest in the nonelecting partnership will be taken into account in the same manner as other electing large partnership adjustments (Code Sec. 6240(b)). The term "partnership item" retains its existing Code Sec. 6231(a)(3) meaning (Code Sec. 6255(a)(2)).

Anticipated regulations. The IRS is specifically authorized to issue regulations as may be necessary to carry out the simplified audit procedures for electing large partnerships under Subchapter D. Among its directives, the IRS is empowered to prevent abuse of the new provisions through manipulation and to enforce the audit rules in circumstances that present special enforcement considerations (as defined in Code Sec. 6231(c)(1)) (Code Sec. 6255(g)). Circumstances that might present special enforcement considerations include termination or jeopardy assessments, cases involving indirect methods of proving income, and foreign partnerships.

Regulations are also specifically authorized for prescribing appropriate adjustments for purposes of taking into account partnership adjustments that involve a change in the character of any item of income, gain, loss, or deduction (Code Sec. 6242(d)(5)); and for taking into account partnership adjustments in cases where the partnership has ceased to exist before the adjustment takes effect (Code Sec. 6255(d)).

The Conference Committee Report for the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 anticipates that future regulations may include rules addressing transfers of interests in electing large partnerships that are made in anticipation of partnership adjustments. Transfers to tax-favored persons are mentioned as a concern. Tax-favored persons include:

(1) corporations with net operating losses;

(2) tax-exempt organizations;

(3) foreign partners; or

(4) persons who are expected to be unable to pay the tax, such as shell corporations.

As an example, a transfer from a taxable partner to a nonresident alien to avoid tax on a subsequent adjustment might be addressed by regulations in one of the following ways:

(1) by providing that the income related to the partnership adjustment is effectively connected taxable income;

(2) by providing that the partnership adjustment is treated as taking effect before the partnership interest was transferred; or

(3) by treating the former partner as a current partner to whom the partnership adjustment is allocated.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Andrew N. Berg of Debevoise & Plimpton, New York, N.Y., observes that the large partnership simplification provisions enacted in the 1997 Legislation represent a final success after several prior legislative attempts at large partnership simplification. Since the new legislation provides an elective regime, large partnerships will need to take a close look at the anticipated benefits and burdens in order to decide whether to elect in. A partnership considering the election should be certain it can comply with the requirement that it furnish return information to its partners by March 15.

As to simplification, tax reporting under the new regime will still be more complicated for individual partners when compared to investments that produce Form 1099-type reports. Ten enumerated types of income need to be separately stated plus an eleventh catch-all category is to be provided for in regulations.

The treatment of miscellaneous itemized deductions normally subject to Code Sec. 67 should be carefully considered by any partnership prior to making the election. New Code Sec. 773(b)(3) disallows 70 percent of those deductions at the partnership level, but permits 30 percent to be passed through to the partners. This is an economic benefit for partners who are individuals since it effectively allows them to deduct 30 percent of their itemized deductions. In the case of corporate partners, the provision is a detriment, disallowing 70 percent of certain deductions that otherwise would have been available.

> Careful consideration will also need to be given to the provisions of the legislation dealing with partnership audit adjustments. Normally, a partnership audit adjustment requires a corresponding adjustment on the returns of the partners for the tax year which is subject to the adjustment. New Code Sec. 6242 provides that partnership adjustments will be taken into account in the year in which the adjustments take effect. For example, an item misreported in 1995, which is adjusted on audit in 1997, will affect 1997 tax liability. While this eliminates the horrific prospect of numerous partners having to amend prior-year returns, it will cause a shifting of the economic burden of the audit adjustment among partners in situations where there has been a change in partnership-sharing percentages over the years. A similar observation can be made with respect to Code Sec. 6242(a)(2), which permits partnerships to elect to pay any tax associated with an audit adjustment.

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years ending on or after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1222(a), adding Code Secs. 6240, 6241, 6242, 6245, 6246, 6247, 6248, 6251, 6252 and 6255; Act Sec. 1222(b)(1), amending Code Sec. 7421(a); Act Sec. 1222(b)(2), amending Code Sec. 7459(c); Act Sec. 1222(b)(3), amending Code Sec. 7482(b)(1)(E); Act Sec. 1222(b)(4), amending Code Sec. 7485(b); Act Sec. 1226. Law at ¶ 5641, 5643, 5645, 5647, 5649, 5651, 5653, 5655, 5657 and 5659. Committee Report at ¶ 12,245.

Electing large partnership adjustments generally pass through to current partners.—Adjustments to partnership items of an electing large partnership are generally passed through to current partners and treated as though they were items arising in the current tax year. Former partners and prior tax years of current partners are not generally affected by the adjustments. A change to a partner's distributive share, however, must be reflected in the partner's prior year return. An electing large partnership may elect not to pass through any or all partnership adjustments. A net adjustment that is not allowed to flow through to the partners will be treated as an "imputed underpayment." The partnership will owe tax on the imputed underpayment at the highest tax rate then in effect, in addition to interest and penalties.

Electing large partnership. The revised flow-through treatment for partnership adjustments applies only to qualified large partnerships that have elected to apply the simplified reporting rules under new Code Secs. 771 through 777. The term "electing large partnership" is defined under Code Sec. 775, as added by Act Sec. 1221 of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 (P.L. 105-34).

Year in which partnership adjustment takes effect. The tax consequences of an adjustment to a partnership item of an electing large partnership depend on the year in which the adjustment "takes effect." For example, a partnership adjustment resulting in an increase in partnership income will be passed through as income to the partners for the year in which the adjustment takes effect.

For a partnership adjustment that has been appealed and is determined by a court decision, the adjustment takes effect when the court decision becomes final (Code Sec. 6242(d)(2)(A)). If the partnership adjustment arose due to an administrative adjustment request filed by the partnership (under Code Sec. 6251), the adjustment takes effect when it is allowed by the IRS (Code Sec. 6242(d)(2)(B)). In any other case, such as in cases where no appeal is filed following the notice of adjustment, the adjustment takes effect when it is made (Code Sec. 6242(d)(2)).

Caution. Foreknowledge of an impending large partnership adjustment might create a temptation to dispose of the partnership interest prior to the date that the partnership adjustment takes effect. The Conference Committee Report suggests that certain such pre-adjustment transfers to tax-favored persons who would be less susceptible to the tax effects of the adjustment might be viewed as abusive.

Adjustments flow through for year in which adjustment takes effect. Unlike the partnership-level audit rules under TEFRA (Subchapter C), an adjustment to any partnership item of an electing large partnership will generally flow through to the partners and be taken into account in determining the amount of the same item for the partnership tax year in which the adjustment takes effect (Code Sec. 6242(a)). If the partnership does not pass along the adjustment to the partners, or if the partnership specifically elects not to take the adjustment into account in determining partnership items for the year in which the adjustment takes effect, the partnership itself will owe tax on the adjustment.

The term "partnership adjustment" means any adjustment in the amount of any partnership item of an electing large partnership (Code Sec. 6242(d)(1)). The "adjusted year" is the partnership tax year to which the item being adjusted relates (Code Sec. 6242(d)(3)).

Adjusted items treated as arising in current year. An adjustment passed through to a partner in an electing large partnership is treated as an item actually arising during that tax year (Code Sec. 6242(a)(1)). Thus, the current-year partners' shares of current-year partnership items of income, losses, deductions, or credits will be adjusted to reflect those partnership adjustments from a prior year that take effect in the current year. Flow-through of electing large partnership items is determined under Code Sec. 772. Under the simplified reporting rules, not all adjusted items will be separately stated to each partner.

> Example. In 2002, Joe invests in an electing large partnership in the restaurant business, Dineco. For tax year 2002, Joe's one-percent distributive share of the partnership's taxable income from restaurant activities is $5,000. In addition, in 2002, the IRS disallows $5,000 of Dineco business expenses attributable to 1999 and makes a partnership adjustment in this amount. The adjustment will be applied in calculating the partnership's taxable income for 2002 and will result in an increase in Joe's distributive share of taxable income for 2002 (due to a reduction in business expenses treated as arising in 2002). Joe's share of the increase is $50 (one percent of the disallowed business expenses). Joe's total distributive share of partnership taxable income from restaurant activities is $5,050 for 2002.

Readjustment of adjustments. An electing large partnership adjustment is not treated as arising in the current year for purposes of determining partnership-level adjustments under Code Sec. 6245 through Code Sec. 6248. Also, under Code Sec. 6247(c), all items for the adjusted year may be readjusted by judicial review. An adjustment passed through to the partners (or taxed at the partnership level) will not be subject to readjustment along with other items arising in the year that the adjustment takes effect (Code Sec. 6242(a)(4)).

Adjustment involving change in distributive shares. Electing large partnership adjustments generally do not affect the prior-year returns of any of the partners. However, an adjustment that involves a change to the partners' distributive shares under Code Sec. 704 is an exception to this rule and will not be treated as though the change arose in the year the adjustment takes effect. To the extent that any adjustment involves a change under Code Sec. 704 in a partner's distributive share of the amount of any partnership item, the adjustment must be taken into account by the affected partner for the partner's tax year in which the item was originally required to be taken into account (i.e., the prior tax year in which the faulty distributive share was applied) (Code Sec. 6241(c)(2)(A)).

The statute of limitations for assessing an underpayment attributable to a change in a partner's distributive share (or for filing a refund claim for an overpayment caused by a change in a partner's distributive share) is three years from the date the underlying partnership return was filed (or its due date not counting extensions, whichever was later) (Code Sec. 6241(c)(2)(C)). This is the same as the limitation period for making adjustments to the partnership return under Code Sec. 6248. However, the limitation period may be extended by agreement, or if their is fraud, etc.

The deficiency procedures provided for individuals (Subchapter B, Code Sec. 6211 through Code Sec. 6216), which require the IRS to issue a notice of deficiency and allow an individual to petition the Tax Court for redetermination of a deficiency, do not apply to an underpayment caused by a change in a partner's distributive share (Code Sec. 6241(c)(2)(B)(i)). These Subchapter B deficiency procedures also will not preclude the assessment or collection of an underpayment attributable to a change in distributive share. Conversely, the assessment or collection of this type of underpayment will not preclude any notice, proceeding, or other determination under the Subchapter B deficiency procedures (Code Sec. 6241(c)(2)(B)(ii)).

Change in distributive share for tiered structure. For a tiered-structure partnership, an adjustment attributable to a change in a partner's distributive share may pass through an additional level to the persons holding the interests in the middle tier, depending on whether the middle tier is also an electing large partnership. If the partner is an S corporation or a partnership other than an electing large partnership, the adjustment passes through to the shareholders and is taken into account for the tax year for which the partnership item was required to be taken into account (i.e., the adjusted tax year) (Code Sec. 6241(c)(2)(D)). If the partner is an electing large partnership, however, the adjustment will be treated in the same manner as other electing large partnership adjustments (under Code Sec. 6242). The adjustment will generally pass through to the partners in the middle-level electing large partnership for the year in which the adjustment takes effect, rather than the earlier tax year in which the item was required to be reported.

Electing large partnership that ceases to exist. If an electing large partnership ceases to exist before a partnership adjustment can take effect, the former partners of the partnership must take the adjustment into account in a manner to be provided by regulations (Code Sec. 6255(d)). Since electing large partnerships do not terminate under Code Sec. 708(b)(1)(B) as a result of a change in ownership (Code Sec. 774(c)), this provision will apply only to partnerships that have ceased business operations or that are no longer doing business in the form of an electing large partnership.

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years ending on or after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1222(a), adding Code Secs. 6240, 6241, 6242 and 6255; Act Sec. 1226. Law at ¶ 5641, 5643, 5645 and 5659. Committee Report at ¶ 12,245.

Failure to pass along adjustments to partners will result in imputed underpayment for current partnership year.—Instead of passing an adjustment of any partnership item through to its partners, an electing large partnership may elect not to take an adjustment into account in determining the amount of any partnership item to be passed through. In such a case, or if (1) in filing its return for any partnership tax year, the partnership fails to fully take into account any partnership adjustment as required, or (2) any partnership adjustment involves a reduction in a credit that exceeds the amount of the credit as determined for the partnership tax year in which the adjustment takes effect, the partnership must pay an "imputed underpayment" (Code Sec. 6242(a)(2)).

The Conference Committee Report anticipates that an electing large partnership will be eligible to make an election to pay an imputed underpayment only if it meets requirements designed to ensure payment. The requirements will be outlined in future regulations. The Committee Report mentions foreign partnerships as a potential problem area.

Calculating imputed underpayment. An imputed underpayment resulting from an electing large partnership's failure to combine a partnership adjustment with similar partnership items arising in the year the adjustment takes effect is a liability of the partnership, and is not passed through to the partners. The imputed underpayment is calculated by netting all of the adjustments to the income and loss items of the large partnership. Any net increase in income is multiplied by the highest individual or corporate tax rate in effect for the adjusted year (currently 39.6 percent). A net decrease in a loss is treated as an increase in income, while an increase in a loss is treated as a decrease in income. Adjustments to credits are taken into account as increases (or decreases) in the amount of the tax (Code Sec. 6242(b)(4)).

Planning Note. An electing large partnership with many partners who are in lower tax brackets or are tax-exempt may lower the overall tax effect of adjustments by passing them through to partners rather than paying at the partnership level based on the highest available rate.

Offsetting adjustments. Whether or not a partnership adjustment actually flows through to the partners, an adjustment will be offset if it requires another adjustment in a tax year subsequent to the adjusted year but before the year that the original adjustment takes effect (Code Sec. 6242(a)(3)). For example, recharacterization of a deduction as a capital expense item requires adjustments to the depreciation claimed by the partnership in years following the adjusted year.

> Example. The SSB Partnership expensed a $1,000 item in year 1. In year 4, SSB determined that the item should have been capitalized and amortized ratably over a 10-year period. In this case, the adjustment in year 4 would be $700, apart from any interest or penalty, calculated as follows: the $900 adjustment for the improper deduction in year 1 would need to be offset by the $200 total of amortization deduction adjustments for years 2 and 3.

Thus, the year 4 partners would be required to include an additional $700 in income in year 4. SSB could then ratably amortize the remaining $700 of expenses in years 4-10.

Interest on imputed underpayments. The partnership, and not the partners individually, is liable for any interest and penalties that are imposed on an imputed underpayment (Code Sec. 6242(b)(1)). Interest on the imputed underpayment is determined under chapter 67—Code Sec. 6601 for the addition to tax and Code Sec. 6621 for the rate of interest (Code Sec. 6242(b)(2)).

The period for computing interest on an imputed underpayment begins on the return due date for the adjusted year and ends on the earlier of the return due date for the partnership tax year in which the adjustment takes effect or the date that the partnership pays the imputed underpayment (Code Sec. 6242(b)(2)(B)). Adjustments to the amount of interest determined under these rules will be made to account for any offsetting adjustments required for partnership tax years after the adjusted year and before the year in which the partnership adjustment takes effect (Code Sec. 6242(b)(2)). Thus, in the example above, SSB would be liable for four years' worth of interest on a declining principal amount.

For purposes of determining interest, both the imputed underpayment and the interest due on the underpayment are treated as an underpayment of tax (Code Sec. 6242(c)(2)).

Penalties on imputed underpayment. Any penalties that would apply to an individual will also apply to an electing large partnership owing an imputed underpayment. The imputed amount is treated as an actual underpayment (or understatement) for the adjusted year (Code Sec. 6242(b)(3)). Penalties, including accuracy-related penalties and fraud penalties, are determined on a year-by-year basis (without offsets) based on the imputed underpayment. The criteria for applying the penalties, including reasonable cause, substantial authority, etc., are the same criteria that would apply to an individual.

Special 10-percent penalty for late payments. In addition to paying the same penalties that are applicable to individuals, a special 10-percent penalty applies to an electing large partnership that fails to timely pay any imputed underpayment. The penalty is 10 percent of any remaining underpayment still owed by the tardy partnership as of the due date (Code Sec. 6242(c)(3)(A)).

Collection of imputed underpayment and interest. Required payments for imputed underpayments and interest must be paid on or before the due date for the partnership return for the year the adjustment takes effect. Any imputed underpayment or interest due on an underpayment will be assessed and collected in the same manner as an employment tax imposed under subtitle C (Code Sec. 6242(c)(1)).

Interest and penalties are nondeductible. No deduction is allowed for any payments made by an electing large partnership for an imputed underpayment or for interest and penalties on an imputed underpayment (Code Sec. 6242(e)).

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years ending on or after December 31, 1997.

Partnership Adjustment Proceedings

Partners not involved in electing large partnership adjustment proceedings.—Similar to the audit proceedings for other partnerships under the TEFRA rules, the IRS may challenge a reporting position taken by an electing large partnership by conducting a single administrative proceeding, the outcome of which will bind all of the partners. Unlike partners in a TEFRA partnership, partners in an electing large partnership have no individual right to notice of the adjustment proceedings and no individual right to participate in the proceedings. The partnership can appoint any person to represent its interests for tax purposes, whether or not the person is a partner. After notice is sent to the partnership, the IRS must wait 90 days before making the adjustment, or until the outcome of any court proceeding brought as a result of the notice.

Partners are firmly bound by partnership treatment. A partner in an electing large partnership must report all partnership items consistently with their treatment on the partnership return. Unlike the comparable TEFRA audit rule under Code Sec. 6222, an inconsistency cannot be excused by notifying the IRS of the differing treatment (Code Sec. 6241(a)). Any underpayment of tax attributable to the partner's failure to comply with the consistency requirement is assessed and collected as if the underpayment were due to a mathematical or clerical error appearing on the partner's return (Code Sec. 6241(b)). The IRS can immediately assess any additional tax against the partner without issuing a notice of deficiency (see Code Sec. 6213(b)). The taxpayer has no right to petition the Tax Court for a redetermination of the deficiency. Also, no petition for abatement may be filed for any assessment of an underpayment caused by a partner's failure to consistently report an electing large partnership item (Code Sec. 6241(b)).

Partners who fail to report partnership items consistently with their treatment on the partnership return are subject to the accuracy-related and fraud penalties under Code Sec. 6662 and Code Sec. 6663 (Code Sec. 6241(d)).

Partnership representative not limited to general partner. Each electing large partnership is required to designate a partner or other person who will possess the sole authority to act on behalf of the partnership (similar to the tax matters partner under Code Sec. 6231(a)(7)). If the partnership does not designate a representative, the IRS may select any partner to act on the partnership's behalf (Code Sec. 6255(b)(1)). The range of eligible partnership representatives is significantly broadened from the TEFRA rules, which require a partnership to choose its representative from among the general partners.

IRS-appointed representatives. The IRS's ability to determine who properly represents an electing large partnership in cases where the electing large partnership fails to designate a representative is also significantly eased. For electing large partnerships, the IRS is empowered to designate any one of the partners as the person authorized to act on the partnership's behalf. The IRS need no longer bother with "largest profits interests" determinations, which can become a cumbersome task when the IRS is faced with a large partnership with numerous partners. For partnerships subject to the TEFRA rules, Code Sec. 6231(a)(7) requires the IRS to determine and appoint as tax matters partner the general partner with the largest profits interest in the partnership. After an IRS designation of a partnership representative, an electing large partnership can still designate another partner of its own choice to replace the IRS's appointee (Code Sec. 6255(b)).

Notice of proceedings to partners not required. The IRS is required to notify the electing large partnership of any partnership adjustment by sending certified or registered mail to the partnership's last known address (Code Sec. 6245(b)(2)). The IRS is not required to notify individual partners of the adjustment or the commencement of any administrative proceeding relating to the adjustment. Even if the partnership has terminated its existence, notice is proper if mailed to the last known address of the partnership.

Notice of adjustment may be rescinded. The IRS may rescind a notice of adjustment at any time without the consent of the partnership (Code Sec. 6245(b)(3)). A rescinded notice is not treated as a notice of partnership adjustment and may not be appealed. However, the statute of limitations on adjustments is still suspended during the time that the rescinded notice was outstanding.

Earliest date partnership adjustment may be made. The IRS must generally wait until the close of the 90th day after a notice of a partnership adjustment is mailed before making a partnership adjustment. This is also the earliest date that a levy or proceeding in any court may be made for the collection of an amount due as a result of an adjustment. If the partnership appeals the notice of adjustment by filing a petition with the Tax Court or other federal court, the earliest date that the adjustment may be made is the date that the decision of the court becomes final (Code Sec. 6246(a)). The principles for determining when a court decision becomes final are determined under Code Sec. 7481 (Code Sec. 6255(e)).

Premature action may be enjoined. An IRS action which is premature according to these rules may be enjoined in the proper court, including the Tax Court (notwithstanding the Code Sec. 7421 prohibition on suits to enjoin collection). To enjoin a premature action in the Tax Court, the electing large partnership must have filed a timely petition in the Tax Court requesting readjustment of the items listed in the notice. The Tax Court's jurisdiction is limited to the items that are the subject of the readjustment petition (Code Sec. 6246(b)).

Adjustment due to math or clerical error. An adjustment to an electing large partnership return made on account of a math or clerical error may be assessed and collected immediately, and the 90-day waiting period does not apply. Math error adjustments for electing large partnerships are governed by the same rules that apply to other taxpayers under Code Sec. 6213(b)(1) and Code Sec. 6213(b)(2). The IRS may summarily assess and collect the tax, and the taxpayer has no right to petition the Tax Court for a redetermination. However, the partnership representative may request an abatement of the tax within 60 days of receiving notification of the adjustment. Note that if the partnership is a partner in another electing large partnership, and its adjustment results from a failure to report an item consistently with its treatment on the source partnership's return, then the Code Sec. 6213(b)(2) abatement remedy is not available (see Code Sec. 6241(b)).

Waiver of restrictions on partnership adjustments. The partnership may waive any IRS restrictions on making large partnership adjustments by filing a signed written notice with the IRS. As with waivers for individuals, the partnership waiver will permit the IRS to immediately make its adjustment and will generally accelerate the adjustment proceedings.

Amount of final adjustment. If the partnership does not file a court petition for readjustment of the partnership items mentioned in the notice, then the partnership adjustment made by the IRS is limited to the amounts determined in the notice.

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years ending on or after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1222(a), adding Code Secs. 6245 and 6246; Act Sec. 1226. Law at ¶ 5647 and 5649. Committee Report at ¶ 12,245.

Partnership, but not partners, may petition for readjustment of partnership items.—An electing large partnership, like other partnerships subject to the TEFRA procedures, may request judicial review of a partnership adjustment (Code Sec. 6247(a)). Unlike TEFRA partners, the individual partners in an electing large partnership have no right to file petitions for readjustment of the partnership items.

Requirements for filing petition, in general. A readjustment petition may be filed by the partnership within 90 days of the date on which the notice of partnership adjustment is mailed to the partnership (Code Sec. 6247(a)). The petition may be filed with the Tax Court, the U.S. District Court for the district in which the partnership's principal place of business is located, or the Claims Court. The principal place of business for a partnership located outside the United States is the District of Columbia (Code Sec. 6255(c)).

Deposit required. An electing large partnership wishing to file a readjustment petition with a U.S. District Court or the Claims Court must make a payment deposit with the IRS on or before the date the petition is filed. The amount of the required deposit is the amount the partnership would owe as an imputed underpayment (under Code Sec. 6242(b)) assuming that the partnership items were adjusted as proposed in the IRS notice (Code Sec. 6247(b)(1)). The court may, by order, provide that the jurisdictional requirements are satisfied where there has been a good faith attempt to satisfy the deposit requirement, and any shortfall of the amount required to be deposited is timely corrected. A deposit made under this provision is not treated as a tax payment subject to interest requirements (Code Sec. 6247(b)).

Partnership items subject to review. A court with which a readjustment petition is filed has jurisdiction to determine the tax treatment of all partnership items for the tax year to which the notice of adjustment relates, and the proper allocation of adjusted items among the partners (Code Sec. 6247(c)). The court may also determine the applicability of any penalty, addition to tax, or additional amount for which the partnership may be liable under Code Sec. 6242(b). Thus, the court's jurisdiction is not limited to the items adjusted in the notice.

Dismissal of action treated as acceptance of partnership adjustment. If an action is dismissed other than by reason of an IRS decision to rescind the notice of adjustment, the court decision dismissing the action will be treated as a decision by the court that the notice of partnership adjustment is correct, and an appropriate order will be entered in the records of the court (Code Sec. 6247(e)).

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years ending on or after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1222(a), adding Code Sec. 6247; Act Sec. 1226. Law at ¶ 5651. Committee Report at ¶ 12,245.

Three years from date of partnership return is general time limit on adjustments.—Absent an agreement to extend the statute of limitations, the IRS must generally adjust a partnership item of an electing large partnership within three years from the date that the partnership return was filed, or three years from the return's due date (not counting extensions), whichever is later (Code Sec. 6248(a)).

Extension by agreement. The limitation period for making a partnership adjustment may be extended by an agreement between the IRS and the partnership, entered into before the usual statute of limitations expires (Code Sec. 6248(b)).

Extension for fraud. As with returns filed by other taxpayers, there is no time limit on making adjustments to a false or fraudulent partnership return filed with intent to evade tax (Code Sec. 6248(c)(1)).

Extension for substantial omission of income. The three-year statute of limitations is extended to six years for adjustments made to any return on which the partnership fails to report as income an amount which is more than 25 percent of the gross income stated on the return (Code Sec. 6248(c)(2)).

Extension where partnership fails to file return. No time limit applies to adjustments made for any tax year in which the partnership fails to file a return (Code Sec. 6248(c)(3)). A return prepared by the IRS on behalf of the partnership is not treated as a return filed by the partnership (Code Sec. 6248(c)(4)).

Extension when notice of adjustment is mailed. The statute of limitations on making adjustments is suspended for the 90 days during which the partnership is allowed to file a court petition for readjustment of the partnership items listed in the IRS notice of adjustment (as provided under Code Sec. 6247). If the partnership does file a petition, the statute of limitations is also suspended for the period during which the court proceeding is pending. The limitations period will not end until one year after the date that the court decision becomes final (Code Sec. 6248(d)).

Extension during bankruptcy cases. In a Title 11 bankruptcy case, the statute of limitations on adjustments is suspended for the period during which the IRS is prohibited by reason of the bankruptcy case from making the adjustment and for 60 days thereafter. For a collection action suspended because of a bankruptcy stay, the period is suspended until six months after the stay is lifted (Code Sec. 6255(f)).

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years ending on or after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1222(a), adding Code Sec. 6248; Act Sec. 1226. Law at ¶ 5653. Committee Report at ¶ 12,245.

Electing large partnership, but not partners, may request adjustment.—An electing large partnership may file a request for an administrative adjustment (RAA) of any partnership item (comparable to a refund claim filed by an individual). The request must generally be filed within three years of the date that the partnership return was filed, or three years from the return's due date, whichever is later. Individual partners do not have a right to file RAAs. A disallowed request may be appealed in the Tax Court, U.S. District Court, or Claims Court by filing a petition within two years of the date of the request.

Time limit for requesting administrative adjustment. An electing large partnership may file an RAA for any partnership tax year no later than (1) three years after the date on which the partnership return for the year was filed, or (2) three years after the due date for filing the partnership return (determined without regard to extensions), whichever is later (Code Sec. 6251(a)(1)). The RAA must be filed before the IRS mails a notice of adjustment with respect to that tax year (Code Sec. 6251(a)(2)).

Time limit where partnership has agreed to extend adjustment period. If the partnership has agreed to extend the allowable time for the IRS to make an adjustment under Code Sec. 6248, the time allowed for filing an RAA will be similarly extended. In this situation, the period for filing an RAA will not expire until six months after the expiration of the extended period for making adjustments (Code Sec. 6251(c)).

Appeal of disallowed adjustments. An electing large partnership may appeal any part of an RAA that is not allowed by the IRS. A petition for adjustment of the partnership item in dispute may be filed with the Tax Court, the U.S. District Court for the district in which the partnership's principal place of business is located, or the Claims Court (Code Sec. 6252(a)).

Date for filing appeal of disallowed adjustment. The earliest time that a partnership may file a court petition to obtain adjustment of partnership items is six months after the date that the RAA was filed. The latest date that the petition may be filed is two years after the date of the RAA. The two-year limit on petitions may be extended by a written agreement between the partnership and the IRS (Code Sec. 6252(b)).

Appeal disallowed if IRS mails notice of adjustment. No partnership petition relating to a disallowed adjustment can be filed after the IRS mails the partnership a notice of a partnership adjustment for the partnership tax year to which the RAA relates (Code Sec. 6252(c)(1)). If the IRS notice of adjustment is mailed after the petition is filed, but before a hearing on the petition is held, the petition will be treated as if it were a petition relating to the IRS notice, rather than a petition relating to the taxpayer's own RAA (Code Sec. 6252(c)(2)). No deposit of the estimated tax due will be required, however. An IRS notice is disregarded if mailed after the applicable period of limitations on adjustments has expired (Code Sec. 6252(c)(3)).

Scope of review limited to items in administrative request. A court in which a petition is filed will have jurisdiction to determine only those partnership items listed in the RAA and disallowed by the IRS, as well as partnership items to which the IRS asserts adjustments as offsets to the adjustments requested by the partnership (Code Sec. 6252(d)). However, if the action is transformed into a request for readjustment as a result of an intervening IRS notice of adjustment (as anticipated under Code Sec. 6252(c)(2)), then the scope of the review will not be limited by the content of the RAA. A court reviewing a petition treated as an appeal of a notice of adjustment will have jurisdiction over all partnership items for the tax year to which the notice of adjustment relates (Code Sec. 6247(c)).

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years ending on or after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1222(a), adding Code Secs. 6251 and 6252; Act Sec. 1226. Law at ¶ 5655 and 5657. Committee Report at ¶ 12,245.

Due Date for Information Reporting

¶ 430

Background

Every partnership that is required to file Form 1065, U.S. Partnership Return of Income, with the IRS is obligated to furnish an information return (Schedule K-1, Partner's Share of Income, Credits, Deductions, etc.) to each of its partners on or before the due date of the partnership's tax return (including extensions). The partnership's return is due on or before the 15th day of the fourth month following the end of the partnership's tax year. For a calendar-year partnership, the return is due on or before April 15, which is the same date by which most individual partners must file their own tax returns. Receiving their Schedules K-1 on, or only shortly before, April 15 made it difficult for individual partners to use the partnership information to prepare their tax returns and to calculate any tax payments due on that date.

Information returns for partners of electing large partnership due March 15.—An electing large partnership must deliver Schedule K-1 information returns to its partners on or before the first March 15 following the close of the partnership's tax year. The specification of the due date contrasts with the general rule that requires a partnership to supply information returns to its partners no later than the due date of the partnership return. An electing large partnership is a partnership with 100 or more partners that has elected to be subject to the new simplified reporting and audit rules (see ¶ 412).

The earlier due date for Schedule K-1 information returns may reduce the number of partners who apply for extensions of time to file returns because they have not received their Schedules K-1 in time to complete their own returns.

Magnetic media. An electing large partnership is required to file its returns on magnetic media (see ¶ 469). Each partner's Schedule K-1 is treated as a separate information return for purposes of the corrective periods and penalties generally applicable to information returns.

Effective date. The provision is effective for partnership tax years ending on or after December 31, 1997.

UNIFIED PARTNERSHIP PROCEEDINGS

Declaratory Judgment Procedure

¶ 431

Background

Under the rules enacted by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA), partnership proceedings must be kept separate from deficiency proceedings involving the partners in their individual capacities. Prior to the Tax Court's opinion in J. Munro, 92 TC 71, Dec. 45,441 (1989), the IRS computed partner deficiencies by assuming that all of the items that were subject to the TEFRA partnership procedures were correctly reported on the partner's return. Consequently, if a partner claimed a loss from a TEFRA partnership that was so large that it offset any proposed adjustment to the partner's nonpartnership items, no deficiency could arise from the partner-level proceeding. If the claimed partnership losses were subsequently disallowed in the TEFRA partnership proceeding, the non-TEFRA adjustments to the partner's return might be uncollectible due to the expiration of the statute of limitations with respect to the nonpartnership items.

Faced with this situation when it examined Mr. Munro's tax return, the IRS issued a notice of deficiency to him that presumptively disallowed his partnership losses only for computational purposes at the partner level. The Tax Court, however, disapproved of this selective IRS methodology. Specifically, the court held that all partnership items (whether income, loss, deduction, or credit) included on a partner's return must be completely ignored in determining whether a deficiency exists that is attributable to nonpartnership items.

The Munro decision created problems for both taxpaying partners and the IRS. For example, a partner who invested in a TEFRA partnership and who was subject to deficiency procedures with respect to nonpartnership items would be harmed since computing his tax liability without regard to the partnership items would have the same effect as if all of the partnership items had been disallowed. If the ignored partnership items were losses, the partner would be faced with a greatly increased deficiency for the nonpartnership items. Even if, when the TEFRA partnership proceedings were completed, the partner was ultimately allowed any part of the partnership losses and he received part of the increased deficiency back in the form of an overpayment, in the interim, he would have been subject to assessment and collection of a deficiency inflated by items still in dispute in the partnership proceeding. In essence, such a partner would have been deprived of a prepayment forum with respect to the partnership item adjustments. Likewise, the IRS would be harmed when a partner's income is primarily from a TEFRA partnership. Since this income must be ignored for computational purposes at the partner level, the IRS would be unable to adjust nonpartnership items such as medical expense deductions, home mortgage interest deductions, or charitable contribution deductions because there would be no deficiency.

Declaratory judgment procedure for adjustments to oversheltered return.—The Munro decision, 92 TC 71, Dec. 45,441 (1989), has been legislatively overruled by the Act. As a result, the IRS is allowed to compute deficiencies by assuming that all TEFRA partnership items whose treatment has not yet been finally determined have been correctly reported on the partner's return. This eliminates the need to do any special computations that involve the removal of TEFRA items from a partner's return. This has been accomplished by giving the IRS the right to use special procedures in the event of an "oversheltered return." The term "oversheltered return" means a tax return that:

(1) shows no taxable income for the tax year; and

(2) shows a net loss from TEFRA partnership items.

These special procedures come into play when a taxpayer files an oversheltered return for a particular tax year and:

(1) the IRS makes a determination with respect to the tax treatment of nonpartnership items on the return; and

(2) the adjustments that result from this determination do not give rise to a tax deficiency (as that term is defined in Code Sec. 6211), but would give rise to a deficiency if there had not been a net loss from the taxpayer's partnership items.

When these two conditions are met, the IRS is authorized to send a notice of adjustment reflecting its determination to the taxpayer by certified or registered mail. The procedures to be followed by the IRS are described in detail below.

Adjustment notice for oversheltered returns. When the taxpayer files an oversheltered return, the IRS is authorized to issue a notice of adjustment with respect to non-TEFRA items, even though no deficiency would result from the adjustment. However, the IRS can issue a notice of adjustment only if there would be a deficiency had there been no claimed net loss from partnership items. The notice of adjustment must be sent by certified or registered mail prior to the expiration of the Code Sec. 6501 limitations period for assessments.

The mailing of the notice suspends the running of the statute of limitations for assessments during the period that the IRS is barred from making an assessment plus 60 days. The IRS is barred from making an assessment during the 90-day (150-days if the notice is addressed to a person outside the U.S.) filing period and, if a Tax Court petition is filed, until the court's decision becomes final. If the IRS mails a notice of adjustment and the taxpayer files a timely Tax Court petition, the IRS cannot issue another notice to the taxpayer with respect to the same tax year absent a showing of fraud, malfeasance or misrepresentation of a material fact.

The notice of adjustment will be treated as a notice of deficiency if, after it is mailed, but before the filing period expires or a Tax Court determination is made, the TEFRA partnership items are finally determined or cease to be partnership items, thereby enabling the IRS to determine a deficiency. A Tax Court petition subsequently filed will be treated as a regular proceeding, rather than as a declaratory judgment proceeding.

The treatment of a partnership item is finally determined if:

(1) the IRS and the partner enter into a settlement agreement regarding the item;

(2) a notice of final partnership administrative adjustment (FPAA) has been issued and the time for filing a petition for judicial review has expired without a petition being filed, or a final court decision has been entered on a filed petition; or

(3) the period of tax assessment attributable to the item has expired.

If the IRS mails a notice of adjustment to a taxpayer and it is later determined that a notice of deficiency, rather than a notice of adjustment, should have been mailed, the notice of adjustment is treated as a notice of deficiency. A petition filed in response to the notice is treated as an action brought under Code Sec. 6213 (i.e., rules pertaining to deficiencies). Conversely, if the IRS mails a notice of deficiency, rather than a notice of adjustment, the notice of deficiency is treated as a notice of adjustment. A petition filed in response to the notice is treated as a petition for redetermination of adjustments.

Declaratory judgment proceeding. The taxpayer has 90 days after the day the notice is mailed to file a Tax Court petition challenging the correctness of the adjustments. The filing period is extended to 150 days after the day of mailing if the notice is addressed to a person outside of the United States. If the taxpayer files a petition, the Tax Court has jurisdiction to determine the correctness of the adjustment. The Tax Court also has authority to make a declaration with respect to all other items for the tax year at issue, except partnership items and affected items requiring a partner-level determination.

If the Tax Court subsequently determines that the IRS's adjustments are correct, the taxable income deemed to have been reported on the partner's return is increased. If the partner's TEFRA partnership items are then adjusted in a subsequent proceeding, the IRS has preserved its ability to collect tax on any increased deficiency attributable to the nonpartnership items.

Although no tax is immediately due upon the Tax Court's determination, its declaration has the same force and effect as a final Tax Court decision and is reviewable as such should either the partner or the IRS wish to appeal the court's decision.

Failure to file petition. If the taxpayer does not file a timely Tax Court petition, the IRS's determination set forth in the notice of adjustment is deemed be correct. However, the two following exceptions exist. The notice is not deemed correct if the taxpayer files a timely Tax Court petition with respect to a subsequent notice issued for the same tax year. Also, the notice is not deemed to be correct if the taxpayer files a refund claim for an overpayment of tax for the tax year involved.

Refund claim after defaulted notice. The new law provides that when the partner's TEFRA partnership items are finally determined, the partner is entitled to file a refund claim for any tax attributable to the items adjusted by an earlier notice of adjustment for the tax year, even though the taxpayer defaulted on the notice of adjustment. Although such a refund claim is not generally permitted with respect to a deficiency arising from a TEFRA proceeding, Congress believes that such a right is appropriate with respect to the defaulted notice of adjustment because the partner could not challenge the notice when issued, because it does not require the payment of an additional tax.

If a refund claim is filed, then while the claim is pending (and until the decision in any subsequent refund suit becomes final), items that are the subject of the notice of adjustment are presumed to have been correctly reported on the taxpayer's return. This presumption of correctness applies solely for purposes of determining the amount of any computational adjustment in connection with a TEFRA partnership proceeding or the amount of any deficiency attributable to affected items in a Code Sec. 6230(a)(2) proceeding.

Coordination with other proceedings. If the treatment of an item has been determined either by a declaratory judgment proceeding or by the partner's default on the notice of adjustment, that treatment is taken into account in any computational adjustment made in connection with a partnership proceeding under the TEFRA audit rules or in a nonpartnership deficiency proceeding. These adjustments are taken into account without regard to whether an assessment has been made with respect to the adjustments.

When a computational adjustment is made in a TEFRA partnership proceeding, the items determined in the proceeding are not included unless the computational adjustment is made within the limitations period for assessment under the TEFRA audit rules. Thus, the Act clarifies that deficiency procedures do not apply with respect to this increase in tax liability, and the statute of limitations applicable to TEFRA proceedings control.

Treatment as notice of deficiency. A notice of adjustment is treated as a notice of deficiency if, after the mailing of the notice but before either the filing period elapses or a Tax Court declaration is made, a deficiency can be determined regarding a partnership item either because the treatment of a partnership item is finally determined or the item ceases to be a partnership item. Any petition filed after this is treated as a petition brought on the deficiency notice.

Effective date. These provisions are effective for partnership tax years ending after August 5, 1997.

Application of TEFRA Based on Partnership Return

¶ 435

Background

Although the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 established unified audit rules applicable to most partnerships, it provided an exception for certain small partnerships with individual partners who each shared all of the partnership's items of income, loss, credit, and deduction according to a set allocation. Consequently, partners in partnerships with 10 or fewer partners, each of whom is a natural person (other than a nonresident alien) or an estate, and for which each partner's share of each partnership item is the same as that partner's share of every other partnership item, are subject to the regular deficiency procedures.

The IRS often found it difficult to readily determine whether to follow the TEFRA partnership procedures or the regular deficiency procedures in regard to the smaller partnerships. This difficulty arose primarily from the IRS's inability to discern whether all of the requirements for the special treatment had been met. For example, if the IRS determined that there were fewer than 10 partners in a partnership but was unaware that one of the partners was a nonresident alien, the IRS might inadvertently apply the wrong procedures and possibly jeopardize any assessment.

Partnership return determinative of audit procedures to be followed.— A partnership's tax return will determine whether the TEFRA audit procedures are followed. New Code Sec. 6231(g) enables the IRS to apply the TEFRA audit procedures when the IRS reasonably determines, based on the partnership's return for the year at issue, that those procedures should apply. Conversely, if the IRS reasonably determines from the return that the TEFRA rules do not apply, then those rules are not applied. The IRS's initial determination will stand, even if it subsequently proves to be erroneous.

> Example. TraPark, a 250-member partnership, consolidates items on its return and follows the simplified flow-through rules established for electing large partnerships. However, no election statement is filed with the IRS. Based upon an examination of the return, the IRS reasonably determines that the audit procedures for electing large partnerships under new subchapter D, rather than the TEFRA procedures under subchapter C, apply.

Effective date. The provision is effective for partnership tax years ending after August 5, 1997.

Statute of Limitations

¶ 437

Background

Prior to the enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the manner in which the statute of limitations could be tolled was different for regular deficiency cases and for TEFRA partnership cases.

Under the regular deficiency procedures, the filing of a Tax Court petition tolls the running of the statute of limitations for assessment, whether the petition is timely or not. The limitations period for the assessment and collection of tax is suspended until 60 days after the entry of a final Tax Court decision. However, Code Sec. 6229(d), the counterpart to Code Sec. 6503(a) in TEFRA cases, provided that the period of limitations was suspended for the time during which an action could be brought under Code Sec. 6226 and, if an action was actually brought during this period, until one year after entry of a final court decision on the matter.

Consequently, the tolling of the statute of limitations in a TEFRA case only occurred upon the filing of a timely petition. If an untimely petition was filed in a TEFRA case, the statute of limitations could actually expire while the case was still pending. To avoid such result, the IRS was often compelled to make burdensome assessments against all of the partners during the pendency of the action and subsequently to abate such assessments if the Tax Court later determined that the petition was in fact timely.

Untimely TEFRA petition suspends limitation period.—The statute of limitations in TEFRA cases is tolled by the filing of any petition under Code Sec. 6226, regardless of whether the petition is timely or valid. Accordingly, if the statute of limitations period is open when an untimely TEFRA petition is filed, the limitations period will not continue to run, and possibly expire, while the action is pending before the Tax Court. This modification conforms the rule governing the suspension of the statute of limitations for the filing of TEFRA petitions to the rule applicable to deficiency cases. As is the case under current law, the suspension continues until the decision of the court becomes final and for one year thereafter.

Effective date. The provision applies to partnership tax years with respect to which the period under Code Sec. 6229 for assessing tax has not expired on or before August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1233(a), amending Code Sec. 6229(d)(1); Act Sec. 1233(d)(1). Law at ¶ 5633. Committee Report at ¶ 12,325.

Background

The limitations period for assessing tax on partnership items generally is the longer of the Code Sec. 6229 limitations period or the Code Sec. 6501 limitations period. For partnership items converted to nonpartnership items, the limitations period cannot expire until one year after the items become nonpartnership items. The Code Sec. 6501 limitations period is expressly suspended during a bankruptcy proceeding. However, there was no statutory provision suspending the running of the Code Sec. 6229 limitations period during the taxpayer's bankruptcy proceeding. This ambiguity made it difficult for the IRS to adjust partnership items converted to nonpartnership items for a taxpayer who was a debtor in a bankruptcy proceeding. If the limitations period was not tolled, it could continue to run during the pendency of the bankruptcy proceeding even though the automatic stay provisions of the Bankruptcy Code prohibited the IRS from making an assessment.

Bankruptcy proceedings against partner toll limitations period.—The running of the one-year limitations period for partnership items converted to nonpartnership items is suspended for a partner named as a debtor in a Title 11 bankruptcy petition. This modification is designed to resolve the current uncertainty regarding whether bankruptcy tolls the limitation period for converted partnership items in the same way in which it is tolled for nonpartnership items.

Caution. However, the Conference Committee Report expressly states that the provision is not intended to create any inference regarding the interpretation of prior law.

The suspension of this one-year limitations period continues for the entire time during which the IRS is prohibited by reason of the bankruptcy proceeding from making an assessment and for 60 days thereafter.

Effective date. The provision applies to partnership tax years for which the Code Sec. 6229 limitations period has not expired on or before August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1233(b), adding new Code Sec. 6229(h); Act Sec. 1233(d)(1). Law at ¶ 5633. Committee Report at ¶ 12,330.

Background

The statute of limitations can be extended with respect to all of the partners if there is a written agreement between the partnership's tax matters partner (TMP) and the IRS. Temporary regulations provide that a TMP's status as tax matters partner terminates upon the filing of a bankruptcy petition in which the TMP is named as a debtor. Accordingly, if a person who would be a partnership's TMP but for the fact that he or she was a debtor in bankruptcy subsequently signs an agreement extending the partnership's statute of limitations period, this consent is not binding upon the other partners because the signatory was no longer the TMP when the agreement is executed.

Background

Because the IRS, for any number of administrative and jurisdictional reasons, cannot always be aware whether the TMP of an audited partnership is in bankruptcy or not, it often found itself in a position of detrimental reliance. Prior to the enactment of a new clarifying provision, if the IRS did not discover that a person signing a consent, who it believed to be the TMP, was in bankruptcy, the IRS could mistakenly rely on that consent and subsequently be precluded from assessing any tax attributable to partnership item adjustments with respect to any of the partners in the partnership.

Bankrupt TMP's limitations waiver binds other partners.—The IRS can rely on an extension of a partnership's limitations period signed by the person who would be the tax matters partner (TMP) but for the fact that that person was a debtor in a Title 11 bankruptcy proceeding when the extension was executed. However, the IRS can rely on the extension only if it has not been properly notified (as prescribed by regulations) of the bankruptcy proceedings. If the IRS was not properly notified of the bankruptcy, then any extension of the limitations period signed by the ostensible TMP is binding on all of the partners in the partnership. The provision applies notwithstanding any other rule of law.

Caution. The Conference Committee Report expressly states that the provision is not intended to create any inference regarding the proper interpretation of prior law.

Effective date. The provision applies to extension agreements entered into after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1233(c), redesignating Code Sec. 6229(b)(2) as Code Sec. 6229(b)(3) and adding new Code Sec. 6229(b)(2); Act Sec. 1233(d)(2). Law at ¶ 5633. Committee Report at ¶ 12,335.

Background

The limitations period for assessing tax on partnership items generally is the longer of the Code Sec. 6229 limitations period or the Code Sec. 6501 limitations period. For partnership items converted to nonpartnership items, the limitations period cannot expire until one year after the items become nonpartnership items. A partner's partnership items become nonpartnership items for a given tax year when the partner and the IRS enter into a settlement agreement covering those items. Thus, the one-year extension of the limitations period begins to run when the partial settlement agreement is entered into.

When a partial settlement agreement is entered into, the one-year assessment period for the items covered by the agreement will likely be different from the Code Sec. 6501 assessment period for the remaining items. Prior to the recent amendment, the differing limitations periods posed significant tracking problems for the IRS and necessitated multiple tax computations relative to each partner's investment in the partnership for the tax year.

Partial settlements excluded from limitations period.—When a partner and the IRS enter into a settlement agreement regarding only some of the partnership items in dispute for a particular partnership tax year, the limitations period for assessing tax attributable to the settled items is determined as if the agreement had not been entered into. Thus, the one-year extension of the limitations period that applies when an item is converted to a nonpartnership item does not begin to run when a partial settlement is executed. As a result, the one-year period begins to run when the last item is resolved. This period is controlling for all of the disputed partnership items for the partnership tax year.

> Example. Fred Martin entered into a settlement agreement on August 12, 1997 in which the treatment of one partnership item was settled. Three additional partnership items remained at issue. On October 24, 1997, the remaining items were resolved and a settlement agreement covering those items was executed. Because the first settlement did not cover all items, it had no effect on the limitations period. All of the items were resolved with the second agreement and, as a result, that is when the one-year period begins to run with respect to all of the items (on October 24, 1997).

Caution. The Conference Committee Report expressly states that this provision is not intended to create any inference regarding the proper interpretation of prior law.

Effective date. This provision is effective for settlements entered into after August 5, 1997.

Small Partnership Exception

Background

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA) established unified audit rules applicable to all partnerships, except for certain partnerships characterized as small partnerships. Prior to amendment by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, a small partnership was defined as a partnership with 10 or fewer partners, each of whom was a natural person (other than a nonresident alien) or an estate. In addition, each partner's share of each partnership item had to be the same as that partner's share of every other partnership item (the so-called "same share" rule).

The partners in these exempted small partnerships remained subject to the regular deficiency procedures, rather than the unified audit procedures. Before the expansion of the definition of a small partnership for purposes of the special exemption, having a C corporation as a partner or making a special allocation automatically subjected the partnership to the TEFRA audit procedures.

Small partnerships can include C corporations as partners and make special allocations.—A small partnership can now include C corporations as partners without losing its exemption from the TEFRA audit procedures. Prior to this modification, a small partnership could have only individuals (other than nonresident aliens) or deceased partner's estates as partners. As under current law, a small partnership, for purposes of the TEFRA exemption, must have 10 or fewer partners. In determining whether the requirements are met, a husband and wife (and their estates) are treated as one partner.

Planning Note. A flow-through entity, such as an S corporation or a partnership, remains ineligible as a partner for purposes of qualifying for the "small partnership" exception.

Special allocations permitted. The "same share" rule, that is, the requirement that each partner's share of a partnership item must be the same as that partner's share of every other partnership item, has been removed. Thus, a partnership may specially allocate partnership items of income, loss, deduction and credit without jeopardizing its exemption from the TEFRA partnership rules.

Effective date. The provision is effective for partnership tax years ending after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1234(a), amending Code Sec. 6231(a)(1)(B)(i); Act Sec. 1234(b). Law at ¶ 5637. Committee Report at ¶ 12,345.

Background

If the partners of a non-TEFRA partnership agree to extend the applicable statute of limitations for tax assessments, that agreement also extends the statute of limitations for filing a subsequent refund claim. However, there was no comparable provision for extending the time for filing a refund claim with respect to partnership items subject to the TEFRA partnership rules. Prior to enactment of a new statute, this absence of an extension for the filing of a refund claim in a TEFRA proceeding hindered partners that wanted to agree to extend the TEFRA statute of limitations but who also wanted to preserve their option to file a refund claim.

Extension of TEFRA limitations period extends limitations period for refund claims.—If a partnership and the IRS agree to extend the TEFRA limitations period for tax assessments, that agreement also serves to extend the limitations period for filing a refund claim attributable to the disputed partnership items or affected items. A partner in a TEFRA partnership now has six months after the expiration of the limitations period for assessments in which to file a refund claim.

Effective date. The provision applies to partnership tax years beginning after September 3, 1982, and applies to any partnership tax year ending after this date if the partnership, each partner, and each indirect partner requests such application and the IRS consents to such application.

Act Sec. 1236(a), redesignating Code Sec. 6227(b) and Code Sec. 6227(c) as Code Sec. 6227(c) and Code Sec. 6227(d), respectively, and adding new Code Sec. 6227(b); Act Sec. 1236(b). Law at ¶ 5631. Committee Report at ¶ 12,355.

Background

Generally, a partner in a non-TEFRA partnership may file a claim for a credit or refund until the later of (1) three years from the date that the return was filed or (2) two years from the date that the claimed tax was paid. However, if the overpayment results from a deduction for a worthless security or a bad debt, the partner has seven years from the due date of the return to file a refund claim.

Background

Partners in a TEFRA partnership may file a request for administrative adjustment (RAA) within three years after the later of (1) the date that the partnership return was actually filed or (2) the due date of the partnership return (determined without regard to extensions). Unlike non-TEFRA partners, they do not have the benefit of a filing extension for claiming overpayments arising from a worthless security or a bad debt.

Time for filing RAA on bad debts or worthless securities extended to seven years.—The Act extends the time by which partners in TEFRA partnerships must file a request for administrative adjustment (RAA) relating to the partnership's deduction of a bad debt or worthless security. The filing deadline is now seven years from the due date (without regard to extensions) of the partnership return with respect to which the RRA is made. Generally, this constitutes a four-year extension of the filing deadline. Despite this significant extension, the RAA must still be filed before any final partnership administrative adjustment (FPAA) is mailed for the tax year.

Planning Note. In effect, the extension gives a TEFRA partner filing an RAA a statute of limitations similar to that of a non-TEFRA partner filing a similar claim for refund.

Effective date. The provision is generally applicable to partnership tax years beginning after September 3, 1982. However, special rules apply to RAAs filed before August 5, 1997. In the case of that portion of any RAA (filed before August 5, 1997) which relates to the deductibility of a bad debt or the deductibility of a loss from a worthless security: (1) Code Sec. 6227(a)(2) does not apply; (2) the period for filing a Code Sec. 6228 petition with respect to such request will not expire before the date that is six months after August 5, 1997 (February 5, 1998); and (3) such a petition may be filed without regard to whether there was a notice of the beginning of an administrative proceeding or an FPAA.

Availability of Innocent Spouse Relief

Background

Pursuant to Code Sec. 6013(e), an innocent spouse may be relieved of any liability for tax, penalties, and interest if certain conditions are met. However, prior to the enactment of a new jurisdictional provision in the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the spouse of a partner in a TEFRA partnership did not have access to a judicial forum in which to raise the innocent spouse defense with respect to any tax or interest relating to the investment in the TEFRA partnership.

Innocent spouse rule expanded to encompass TEFRA proceedings.—The Act provides an individual taxpayer with both a prepayment and a refund forum in which to raise the innocent spouse defense under Code Sec. 6013(e) with respect to liabilities, penalties, and other additions to tax attributable to the adjustment of TEFRA partnership items. The provision thus makes innocent spouse relief more uniformly available.

Prepayment forum. If the spouse of a partner in a TEFRA partnership asserts that the innocent spouse rules apply with respect to a liability attributable to any adjustment to a partnership item, then the spouse may file a request for an abatement of the assessment with the IRS. The spouse must file the request within 60 days after the notice of a computational adjustment has been mailed by the IRS. Upon receipt of the request, the IRS must abate the assessment. If the IRS chooses to reassess the abated tax, it then has 60 days after the date of the abatement in which to make any reassessment. In such a scenario, the regular deficiency procedures apply (Code Sec. 6230(a)(3)(A)).

If the taxpayer claiming innocent spouse relief files a Tax Court petition under Code Sec. 6213 with respect to the request for abatement, the Tax Court can determine only whether the innocent spouse requirements have in fact been satisfied. For purposes of this determination, the treatment of the TEFRA partnership items under the settlement, the final partnership administrative adjustment (FPAA) or the court decision that gave rise to the liability in question is conclusive (Code Sec. 6230(a)(3)(B)).

Refund forum. The Act also provides that the spouse of a partner in a TEFRA partnership can file a claim for refund on the ground that the IRS failed to relieve the spouse under the innocent spouse rules from a liability attributable to an adjustment to a partnership item (Code Sec. 6230(c)(5)(A)). The claim must be filed within six months after the date on which the IRS mails the notice of computational adjustment to the spouse (Code Sec. 6230(c)(5)(B)). If the administrative claim is disallowed, the spouse can then file a refund suit with respect to the claim within the two-year period specified by Code Sec. 6230(c)(3) and Code Sec. 6532(a) (Code Sec. 6230(c)(5)(C)). For purposes of the claim or suit, the treatment of the TEFRA partnership items under the settlement, the FPAA or the court decision that gave rise to the liability in question is conclusive (Code Sec. 6230(c)(5)(D)).

Effective date. The provision applies to partnership tax years beginning after September 3, 1982, and applies to any partnership tax year ending after this date if the partnership, each partner, and each indirect partner requests such application and the IRS consents to such application.

Determination of Penalties at Partnership Level

¶ 453

Background

Under prior law, Code Sec. 6221 required that the tax treatment of any partnership item be determined at the partnership level. The definition of a partnership item included only those items required to be taken into account under Code Sec. 1 through Code Sec. 1563. Penalties, imposed by Code Sec. 6651 through Code Sec. 6724, could only be asserted against a partner at the partner level through the application of deficiency procedures following the completion of the unified partnership-level proceeding. This requirement of multiple, partner-level penalty assessments increased the IRS's administrative burden and significantly expanded the Tax Court's case load.

Background

Penalties determinable at partnership level.—Any penalties, additions to tax or additional amounts attributable to an adjustment to a TEFRA partnership item can now be determined in a partnership-level proceeding. The partnership-level determination regarding the applicability of the penalty or other addition to tax is conclusive. However, individual partners may timely assert any applicable partner-level defenses or challenges to the computational adjustment amount in a refund proceeding or a Tax Court proceeding.

Effective date. The provision is effective for partnership tax years ending after August 5, 1997.

Tax Court Jurisdiction

Background

Improper deficiency assessments and collection activities by the IRS that are attributable to partnership items may be enjoined during the 150-day period for filing a petition or during the pendency of the Tax Court proceeding. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, it was not clear whether such an injunction could be filed in the Tax Court. In addition, the law was unclear concerning the standing of a partner to assert, before the Tax Court, that the period of limitations for assessing any tax attributable to partnership items had expired with respect to that partner.

Tax Court may enjoin premature deficiency assessments attributable to partnership items.—If the IRS makes an assessment or tries to collect a deficiency attributable to a partnership item during the 150-day period for filing a petition or during the pendency of any Tax Court proceeding, the Tax Court has jurisdiction to enjoin the improper action. However, the Tax Court's jurisdiction can be exercised only if a timely petition for a readjustment of the partnership items for the tax year has been filed and jurisdiction exists only with respect to the adjustments that are the subject of such petition.

In addition, a partner may participate in an action or file a petition for readjustment for the sole purpose of asserting that the period of limitations for assessing any tax attributable to partnership items has expired for that partner. The court with jurisdiction over the underlying action will consider the partner's assertion (Code Sec. 6226(d)(1)). The Tax Court has jurisdiction to determine overpayments with respect to affected items.

The Act also provides rules for determining the proper venue for an appeal of a declaratory judgment by the Tax Court on the treatment of items other than partnership items with respect to an oversheltered return (see ¶ 431). In such situations, the decision is subject to review by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the circuit in which (1) the legal residence of a petitioner that is not a corporation is located or (2) the principal place of business or office of a corporate petitioner is located.

Effective date. These amendments apply to partnership tax years ending after August 5, 1997.

Treatment of Premature Petitions

Background

The Tax Matters Partner (TMP) has the exclusive right to file a petition for a readjustment of partnership items within the 90-day period following the issuance of a notice of a final partnership administrative adjustment (FPAA). If the TMP does not file a petition within this 90-day period, certain other partners (i.e., notice partners, as defined by Code Secs. 6223(a) and 6231(a)(8), and five-percent groups, as defined by Code Sec. 6231(a)(11)) are permitted to file a petition within the 60-day period following the close of the aforementioned 90-day period.

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, if a notice or five-percent partner filed a petition during the 90-day period, but no notice was filed by the tax matters partner during that period, and no notice was filed during the 60-day period, judicial review of the FPAA was foreclosed. The petition filed during the 90-day period was not considered timely filed because it was not filed during the 60-day period following the 90-day period.

Treatment of premature petitions for readjustment of final partnership administrative adjustment.—Within 90 days after notice of a final partnership administrative adjustment (FPAA), a tax matters partner (TMP) may petition for a readjustment of the FPAA. If the TMP fails to do so, any notice partner (or 5-percent group) may file a petition within 60 days after the close of the 90-day period. Under the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, a petition for readjustment filed by a notice partner or 5-percent group during the 90-day period is treated as filed on the last day of the 60-day period after the close of the 90-day period, so long as no other action is brought during the 60-day period.

> Example. An FPAA was mailed to a partnership. During the 90-day period following the mailing of the FPAA, the TMP does not file a petition for redetermination of the FPAA. However, during that 90-day period, a 5-percent group files a petition. During the 60-day period following the 90-day period, no other petition is filed. The 5-percent group's petition will be considered timely filed on the last day of the 60-day period and the action will continue in court.

Effective date. The provision is effective with respect to petitions filed after August 5, 1997.

Bonds in Case of Appeals

Background

A partnership must file a bond in order to stay the collection of any determined deficiencies pending the partnership's appeal of the Tax Court's decision in a TEFRA proceeding. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the amount of this bond had to be based on the Tax Court's estimate of the aggregate deficiencies of all of the partners in the partnership who would be affected by the court's decision, a calculation that was difficult to determine with accuracy. Deficiencies specifically included interest, additional amounts, or additions to tax. Penalties were not specifically mentioned in the Code.

Bond amount based on deficiencies of partners filing appeal.—The amount of the bond necessary to stay the collection of deficiencies pending an appeal of the Tax Court's decision in a TEFRA proceeding is modified. The amount of the bond is calculated by the Tax Court based on any deficiencies attributable to partnership items determined in the Tax Court decision. The Tax Court's estimate of the deficiencies is based on the aggregate liability of the parties to the action. Bond amounts are no longer based on an estimate of the aggregate of all partners' deficiencies. Estimates of deficiencies are to include any applicable interest, penalties, additional amounts, or additions to tax. Penalties were not specifically mentioned by the Code prior to the amendment.

The Conference Committee Report suggests that the amount of the bond can be estimated by applying the highest individual rate to the total adjustments determined by the Tax Court and doubling that amount to take into account the applicable interest and penalties.

Effective date. The provision is applicable to partnership tax years beginning after September 3, 1982, and applies to partnership tax years ending after this date if the partnership, each partner, and each indirect partner requests such application and the IRS consents to such application.

Suspension of Interest

Background

Interest on a deficiency is generally suspended when a taxpayer executes a settlement agreement with the IRS and waives the restrictions on assessments and collections, and the IRS does not issue a notice and demand for payment of such deficiency within 30 days.

Background

While processing settlement agreements and assessing the tax due takes a substantial amount of time in TEFRA cases, prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, a partner in such a partnership was not afforded any relief from interest during this period. The interest on a deficiency resulting from an adjustment of partnership items in TEFRA proceedings was not suspended.

Interest suspended during period of computational adjustments.—Interest on a deficiency that results from an adjustment of partnership items in a TEFRA settlement is suspended where the delay arises from making a computational adjustment relating to such settlement. According to the House Committee Report, processing settlements and assessing the tax due in a TEFRA case is time consuming and, prior to the Act, taxpayers were not afforded any relief from interest during this period.

Effective date. The provision is effective with respect to adjustments relating to partnership tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

OTHER PARTNERSHIP PROVISIONS

Self-Employment Tax on Limited Partners

¶ 463

Background

Under the Self-Employment Contributions Act (SECA), an individual's net earnings from self-employment is subject to taxes for old-age, survivor, and disability insurance (OASDI) and the Medicare hospital insurance (HI). A general partner is treated as self-employed (see Rev. Rul. 69-184, 1969 CB 256) and is subject to the SECA tax rate of 15.3 percent (12.4 percent for OASDI plus 2.9 percent for HI (in 1997)) on the first $65,400 of self-employment income. Amounts over this maximum threshold are subject only to the HI tax rate of 2.9 percent.

A general partner's net earnings from self-employment (NESE) generally include the partner's distributive share of income from any trade or business of the partnership, adjusted downwards for certain passive income such as rents, dividends, and interest. If a general partner's distributive share is a net loss, then such loss may be deducted from the partner's NESE.

In contrast, under Code Sec. 1402(a)(13), the distributive share of a limited partner is generally excluded from NESE, except to the extent that this share is a Code Sec. 707(c) guaranteed payment. Guaranteed payments are amounts paid to a partner for services rendered on behalf of the partnership, determined without regard to the income of the partnership. Limited partners are excepted from the self-employment tax rule under the theory that they are more like passive investors than true partners.

When Congress first enacted the Code Sec. 1402(a)(13) limited partner exclusion, many state laws did not permit a limited partner to actively participate in the partnership's trade or business. However, under the Uniform Limited Partnership Act and other state laws, a limited partner is now freer to participate in the partnership without being recharacterized as a general partner for liability purposes. Furthermore, limited liability companies (LLCs), which were unknown at the time of the enactment of Code Sec. 1402(a)(13), are now viable business entities in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. LLCs can generally elect, pursuant to the Code Sec. 7701 "check-the-box" regulations (Reg. §§301.7701-1 through 301.7701-3), to be treated as partnerships for federal income tax purposes. An LLC generally makes no distinction between general and limited members as a matter of state law. Thus, the terms "general partner" and "limited partner" no longer accurately distinguish between active and passive participants.

Background

In an effort to resolve mounting questions involving the self-employment tax status of limited partners and LLC members, on January 13, 1997, the Treasury Department made two significant decisions. First, it withdrew a previously released, but controversial, proposal concerning the applicability of the self-employment tax rules to certain members of an LLC; and, second, it proposed amendments to current Reg. § 1.1402(a)-2. According to the IRS, the new proposals were an attempt to establish a single set of "functional" rules that apply identical standards to all entities classified as partnerships for federal tax purposes. The proposed amendments would allegedly resolve the issue by classifying general and limited partners on the basis of functional tests rather than historic state law definitions.

Under the proposals, a "limited partner," for purposes of Code Sec. 1402(a)(13), would be any person classified as a partner unless the partner (1) has personal liability for the debts or obligations of the partnership by reason of being a partner, (2) has authority to enter into contracts on behalf of the partnership, or (3) participates in the partnership's trade or business more than 500 hours annually.

However, a special rule provides that service partners in professional service partnerships will never be treated as limited partners for NESE purposes. If substantially all of the activities of a partnership involve the performance of services in the fields of health, law, engineering, architecture, accounting, actuarial science or consulting, any individual who provides more than a de minimis amount of services as part of that trade or business would not be considered a limited partner.

Critics of the proposal, maintaining that the proposed Code Sec. 1402 self-employment tax regulations would impose new taxes on partners and require more recordkeeping, urged the IRS to withdraw its proposed regulation defining "limited partner" for self-employment tax purposes. Commentators and witnesses at IRS hearings noted that limited partners have always participated in partnership affairs and that Code Sec. 1402 provides no foundation for the proposal's 500-hour test, as is the case with the material participation test under Code Sec. 469. Furthermore, the legislative history of Code Sec. 1402 provides no support for the proposal's attempt to subject all of the earnings of partners working for certain service providers to the self-employment tax. These critics argued that only those limited partner earnings that constitute reasonable compensation for services actually rendered to or on behalf of the partnership should be subject to the self-employment tax.

Congressional legislators, with support from many small business groups, began characterizing the proposed regulation as an attempt by the IRS and the Treasury Department to legislate, rather than to interpret Code Sec. 1402(a)(13). The most active of these critics, citing the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 USC

Background

Chapter 6), as amended by the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-121), also addressed the failure of the IRS and the Treasury to comply with federal procedures for legislative regulations and for regulations that might cause a significant economic impact on many small businesses.

IRS requested to withdraw proposed amendments to Reg. § 1.1402(a)-2.—The IRS is prohibited from issuing temporary or final regulations relating to the definition of a limited partner for employment tax purposes that would be effective before July 1, 1998. The legislative history indicates that Congress wants the IRS to withdraw the controversial proposed regulation, Prop. Reg. § 1.1402(a)-2, which would impose a tax on limited partners. A "sense of the Senate" resolution in the Senate amendment expressed dissatisfaction with the proposed rule, noting that Congress, not the Treasury or the IRS, should determine the law governing self-employment income for limited partners (S. 949, Sec. 734, offered as Senate Floor Amendment No. 584).

The Act's resolution accommodates the Senate's expressed concern that the IRS has exceeded its regulatory and administrative authority in the area of self-employment taxes. The Code provides that a limited partner's self-employment income includes only guaranteed payments for services (Code Sec. 1402(a)(13)). In contrast, the proposed regulation would extend self-employment taxes to other limited partners with personal liabilities for partnership debts or who participate in the partnership's business (Prop. Reg. § 1.1402(a)-2(h)). In the view of the Senate, the expanded definition of a limited partner will have a substantial impact on the tax liability of affected individuals and their entitlement to social security benefits, and is thus a significant policy issue best left to Congress.

The moratorium applies to any temporary or final regulation relating to the definition of a limited partner under Code Sec. 1402(a)(13) issued or made effective before July 1, 1998.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Michael Cohen of Levun, Goodman & Cohen, Northbrook, Illinois, notes that, earlier this year, Treasury issued a second set of proposed regulations designed to determine when a partnership or a member in an LLC is to be regarded as a "limited partner" for purposes of excluding partnership or LLC income from self-employment tax under Code Sec. 1402(a)(13). These proposed regulations have been the target of complaints from members of Congress, certain sectors of the business community and certain tax professionals. The proposed regulations, for example, make it difficult for an LLC manager to avoid self-employment tax on the portion of his LLC income attributable to his capital infused into the LLC. Act Sec. 935 of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 provides Congress with an opportunity to examine this area by prohibiting Treasury from issuing temporary or final regulations under Code Sec. 1402(a)(13) before July 1, 1998.

Effective date. This provision is effective as of August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 935. Law at ¶ 7015. Committee Report at ¶ 10,675.

Closing of Partnership Tax Year; Deceased Partner

Background

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, a partnership's tax year closed with respect to a partner whose entire interest was either sold, exchanged, or liquidated. The tax year, however, generally did not close upon the death of a partner. Consequently, a decedent's entire share of items of income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit for the partnership year in which the death occurred was taxed to the decedent's estate or to his successor-in-interest rather than to the decedent on his final income tax return (S. Hesse Estate, 74 TC 1307, Dec. 37,240).

Closing of tax year with respect to deceased partner.—Under the new law, the tax year of a partnership closes with respect to a partner whose entire interest in the partnership terminates, whether by death, liquidation or otherwise (Code Sec. 706(c)(2)(A)). The Conference Committee Report clarifies that the current law with respect to the effect upon the partnership's tax year of a transfer of a partnership interest by a debtor to the debtor's estate (under Chapter 7 or 11 of Title 11, relating to bankruptcy) remains unchanged.

Planning Note. In 1998, partners may want to re-evaluate existing agreements that provide for the sale or exchange of their partnership interests upon death. If these agreements were made to close the partnership tax year with respect to a deceased partner prior to the Act, they are no longer necessary.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Michael Cohen of Levun, Goodman & Cohen, Northbrook, Illinois, observes that the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 eliminates the rule that a partnership year does not close upon the death of a partner, effective for partnership tax years beginning after December 31, 1997. Previously, a decedent partner's share of income generated by the partnership during the year in which he died would be reported by his successor in interest (such as his estate or his widow). In some situations, if the estate were in a lower income tax bracket than the decedent partner, this rule caused a reduction in income taxes. In other situations, the impact of the rule on the unwary caused a mismatching of income and deductions.

For example, assume that a partner in a professional service partnership had a $75,000 distributive share of partnership income as of the date of his death, and as of that time had incurred personal mortgage interest and taxes of $30,000. Upon his death, the partnership year did not close and the $75,000 of income would be reported by the partner's successor in interest, whereas his mortgage interest and taxes would be reported on his final individual income tax return. In circumstances where his successor in interest was his estate, this could create a situation where the estate was required to report the partnership income without any significant offsetting deductions, and the decedent's final individual income tax return reported deductions that did not offset any significant amount of income. The wary taxpayer who was married would often designate his spouse as his successor in interest for federal tax purposes (if permitted by the partnership). This would allow the decedent's partnership income, along with his mortgage interest and taxes, to be reported on the final joint return for the decedent and his spouse.

For partnership tax years beginning after December 31, 1997, the death of a partner causes a closing of the partnership's tax year with respect to the deceased partner and an inclusion of this income on the decedent's final individual income tax return. Consequently, income attributable to the decedent partner's partnership interest must be allocated between the pre- and post-death periods. Pursuant to the regulations under Code Sec. 706, this allocation is made by an interim closing of the partnership's books or, if all partner's agree, on a pro rata basis based upon the number of days in each period.

Effective date. These provisions apply to partnership tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Residence of a Partnership

Background

A "domestic" partnership is a partnership created or organized in the United States, or under the laws of the United States or of any state, and a "foreign" partnership is any partnership that is not a domestic partnership. However, for U.S. tax purposes, business activities between persons may create partnerships without formal agreements and it was often difficult to determine whether such a tax partnership was "created or organized" in the United States. Difficult issues also arose when attempting to apply the "created or organized" test to a foreign entity that domesticated under the laws of a U.S. state.

Regulations authorize the IRS to define foreign and domestic partnerships.—The IRS is authorized to issue regulations defining whether a partnership will be considered domestic or foreign. The Conference Committee Report clarifies that any regulations issued under this provision will apply only to partnerships created or organized after the date that the regulations are filed with the Federal Register (or, if earlier, the date of a public notice substantially describing the expected content of the regulations). The Conference Committee Report also indicates that the general rule for classifying partnerships as domestic or foreign will continue to be the place where the partnership is created or organized (or the law under which it is created or organized) and that the regulations are expected to provide a different classification only in unusual cases. In addition, the regulations are to avoid period-by-period reclassifications of partnerships.

Effective date. This provision is generally effective on August 5, 1997. However, any regulations issued with respect to this provision are applicable to partnerships created or organized after the date determined under Code Sec.

7805(b), Retroactivity of Regulations, without regard to the exception for promptly issued regulations under Code Sec. 7805(b)(2).

Magnetic Media Reporting

¶ 469

Background

Most entities that file a large number of documents with the IRS must do so using magnetic media. While partnerships were permitted to provide their Forms 1065 and copies of their partners' Schedules K-1 to the IRS on magnetic media, prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, no partnerships were required to do so.

Large partnership returns must be provided on magnetic media.—A partnership with more than 100 partners is required to provide the partnership's tax return (Form 1065), as well as copies of the schedule sent to each partner (Schedule K-1), to the IRS on magnetic media. Congress believes that conforming the reporting provisions for large partnerships to the generally applicable information reporting rules will facilitate the integration of partnership information into the already existing data systems. Partnerships with 100 or fewer partners have the option, but not the obligation, to utilize magnetic media.

Effective date. The provision is effective for partnership tax years ending on or after December 31, 1997.

S CORPORATIONS

Electing Small Business Trusts

¶ 473

Background

Under the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188), certain trusts, referred to as electing small business trusts, are allowed to hold stock in an S corporation. In order to qualify, all electing small business trust beneficiaries are required to be individuals or estates eligible to be S corporation shareholders. Any trust exempt from tax may not qualify as an electing small business trust. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, charitable remainder annuity trusts and charitable remainder unitrusts were not specifically prohibited from qualifying as an electing small business trust.

Qualification as electing small business trust.—Charitable remainder unitrusts (CRUTs) and charitable remainder annuity trusts (CRATs) cannot qualify as electing small business trusts. All beneficiaries of an electing small business trust must be individuals or estates eligible to be S corporation shareholders. While CRUTs and CRATs may provide income to individual beneficiaries for a term of years, they must also provide a remainder interest to a charitable organization.

Effective date. The provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Post-Termination Date Transition Period

Background

Under prior law, the effective date for the expanded post-termination period for former S corporations was tax years beginning after December 31, 1996. The expanded post-termination period includes the 120-day period beginning on the date of any determination pursuant to a taxpayer audit following the termination of the S corporation's election that adjusts a subchapter S item of income, loss, or deduction that arose while the entity was treated as an S corporation. During a former S corporation's post-termination transition period, distributions are treated as being made by an S corporation, rather than by a C corporation.

Former S corporation post-termination transition period.—The new law clarifies that the expanded post-termination transition period provided to former S corporations under the Small Business Job Protection Act (P.L. 104-188) is effective for determinations made after December 31, 1996, rather than for determinations with respect to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996. However, the 120-day period beginning on the date of any determination described under Code Sec. 1377(b)(1)(B) will not expire before the end of a period extending 120 days from August 5, 1997. Distributions made by a former S corporation during its post-termination transition period are treated in the same manner as if made by an S corporation.

Effective date. The provision applies to determinations made after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1601(c)(2); Act Sec. 1601(j). Law at ¶ 7076. Committee Report at ¶ 13,530.

Qualified Subchapter S Subsidiaries

Background

In general, a qualified subchapter S subsidiary (QSSS) is not treated as a corporation for federal tax purposes and all assets, liabilities, and items of income, deduction, and credit are treated as the assets, liabilities, and items of income, deduction, and credit of the parent S corporation. Where an election is made to treat an existing corporation as a QSSS, the subsidiary is deemed to have liquidated immediately before the election is effective. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the IRS did not have specific authority to issue regulations that would allow the separate corporate existence of a QSSS to be taken into account for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code. Additionally, there was no specific authority to issue regulations providing exceptions to the general rule that the QSSS election is treated as a deemed Code Sec. 332 liquidation of the subsidiary.

Regulations regarding qualified subchapter S subsidiaries.—The IRS is authorized to provide by regulation instances where the separate corporate existence of qualified subchapter S subsidiaries (QSSS) may be taken into account. Thus, for example, where an S corporation owns 100 percent of the stock of a bank and elects to treat the bank as a QSSS, the IRS is authorized to write regulations that treat the bank as a separate legal entity for purposes of those Internal Revenue Code provisions applicable to banks.

The IRS is also authorized to draft regulations addressing the Code Sec. 332 liquidation of the subsidiary deemed to occur upon a QSSS election and the effects that the QSSS election has on consolidated returns.

Effective date. The provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Corporations and Special Entities

ORGANIZATIONS AND REORGANIZATIONS

Extraordinary Dividends

¶ 501

Background

A corporate shareholder that receives an "extraordinary dividend" reduces the basis of the stock with respect to which the dividend was received by the nontaxed portion of the dividend (Code Sec. 1059). An extraordinary dividend is generally a dividend that equals or exceeds five percent of the taxpayer's adjusted basis in the stock for preferred stock, and 10 percent of the taxpayer's adjusted basis in the stock for all other stock. An extraordinary dividend results from, among other things, a non-pro rata redemption or a partial liquidation. Untaxed dividends arise because a corporate shareholder can generally deduct at least 70 percent of dividends received from another corporation (the deduction increases to an 80 percent deduction, if at least 20 percent of the distributing corporation is owned by the corporate shareholders, and to a 100 percent deduction, if at least 80 percent of the distributing corporation is owned by the corporate shareholders (see Code Sec. 243)). If the necessary reduction in basis of stock exceeds the basis in the stock with respect to which an extraordinary dividend is received, the excess is taxed as gain, but, under prior law, not until the sale or disposition of the stock. The reduction in basis for this purpose occurred immediately before any sale or disposition of the stock.

In general, a distribution in redemption of stock was treated as a dividend, rather than as a sale of the stock, if it was essentially equivalent to a dividend (Code Sec. 302). The determination of whether a redemption was essentially equivalent to a dividend was made by applying the constructive ownership rules, including the option attribution rules of Code Sec. 318(a)(4). The rules relating to treatment of cash or other property received in a reorganization similarly considered the constructive ownership rules, including the option attribution rules (Code Sec. 356(a)(2)).

Gain recognition required for certain extraordinary dividends.—A corporate shareholder that receives an "extraordinary dividend" must reduce the basis of the stock with respect to which the dividend was received by the nontaxed portion of the dividend unless the stock was held for more than two years before the dividend was declared (Code Sec. 1059(a)). The reduction in basis of stock is treated as occurring at the beginning of the ex-dividend date of the extraordinary dividend to which the reduction relates. In addition, if the nontaxed portion exceeds basis, gain must be recognized (see below).

Gain recognized. When making the basis reduction on account of an extraordinary dividend, the nontaxed portion of the dividend cannot reduce basis below zero. Gain must be recognized in the tax year in which the extraordinary dividend is received to the extent that the nontaxed portion exceeds basis. Thus, immediate gain recognition is required in such case, as opposed to the former rule which allowed such gain to be deferred until the tax year in which the stock was sold or otherwise disposed of by the corporate shareholder. The gain recognized is treated as gain from the sale or exchange of the stock.

> Example. Alpha Corp. owns 81% of Beta Corp stock and Alpha has basis of $50,000 in that stock. In 1997, Alpha receives a $70,000 distribution from Beta in a non-pro rata distribution considered to be an extraordinary dividend. Since Alpha owns more than 80% of Beta, the entire $70,000 is untaxed and Alpha must reduce its basis in Beta stock by the amount of the untaxed extraordinary dividend. In 1997, Alpha must recognize gain of $20,000, the amount by which the untaxed distribution exceeds basis ($70,000, untaxed amount, less $50,000, basis).

Redemptions and reorganizations. A corporate shareholder must reduce the basis of stock by the nontaxed portion of any amount treated as a dividend received and recognize gain immediately when the nontaxed portion exceeds the basis of the shares surrendered with respect to certain redemptions of stock. In addition to any redemption which is part of a partial liquidation as described in Code Sec. 302(e) or which is not pro rata with respect to all the shareholders, the basis reduction and gain recognition rules now apply to any redemption that was treated as a dividend because the holding of options was treated as stock ownership under the constructive stock ownership rules of Code Sec. 318(a)(4). Basis is reduced and gain is recognized in such cases whether or not the stock was held for more than two years. Further, in making the basis reduction for a redemption for which options were considered, only the basis in the redeemed stock is taken into account.

According to the House Committee Report, these provisions are at least in part a response to certain transactions (such as the well-publicized attempts of Seagram Corporation) in which taxpayers apparently have taken the position that option rights may have sufficient economic reality that they should be recognized as stock ownership for purposes of finding that a taxpayer has not meaningfully reduced its ownership despite a stock redemption. The redemption distributions would otherwise be treated as dividends, and the corporate dividends received deduction would eliminate tax on distributions received in a stock redemption. However, under the new provisions, gain would be required to be recognized as soon as the amounts received exceed basis.

Reorganizations or other exchanges involving amounts that are treated as dividends under Code Sec. 356 are treated as redemptions for purposes of applying the rules on redemptions described above. For example, if a recapitalization or other transaction that involves a dividend under Code Sec. 356 has the effect of a non-pro rata redemption or is treated as a dividend because the options are counted as stock, the basis reduction and gain recognition rules of Code Sec. 1059 apply.

Effective date. This provision is generally effective for distributions after May 3, 1995. However, under a transition rule, the provision does not apply to a distribution made pursuant to the terms of a written binding contract in effect on May 3, 1995, and at all times thereafter before such distribution, or pursuant to a tender offer outstanding on May 3, 1995. Further, in applying the new gain recognition rules to any distribution that is not a partial liquidation, a non-pro rata redemption, or a redemption that is treated as a dividend by reason of the holding of options, the date of September 13, 1995, is substituted for May 3, 1995, as the effective date for the provision and in applying the transition rule.

Gain Recognition on Distributions of Controlled Corporation Stock

Background

Although a corporation is generally required to recognize gain on the distribution of property, and the shareholders who receive a distribution generally treat the receipt of property as a taxable event, certain exceptions exist. Nonrecognition of gain applies to certain spin-off type distributions of controlled corporation stock. If certain requirements are met, including restrictions relating to acquisitions and dispositions of stock of the distributing corporation ("distributing") or the controlled corporation prior and subsequent to a distribution, stock can be distributed without the recognition of gain by the corporate or the receiving shareholder (Code Sec. 355). However, under prior law nonrecognition was not affected by "distributing" dropping one of its businesses into a new corporation, spinning-off the new corporation and then the "distributing" shareholders transferring stock in "distributing" in exchange for stock in an unrelated corporation. This is the so-called Morris Trust (66-2 USTC ¶ 9718) structure.

Background

Gain recognition required on certain distributions of controlled corporation stock.—New requirements must be satisfied in order for a corporate "spin-off" to qualify for nonrecognition of gain.

A corporation that distributes its property to shareholders is generally required to recognize gain on the distribution as if the property had been sold for its fair market value (Code Sec. 311(b)). The shareholders who receive a distribution generally treat the receipt of property as a taxable event. For example, assume a corporation distributes property with an adjusted basis of $2 and a fair market value of $10. The corporation would recognize a gain of $8 as if it had sold the property, and the shareholders would have dividend income of $8, assuming the corporation had only $8 of earnings and profits. This general rule applies to the distribution of the stock of a subsidiary corporation, so that the distribution by a corporation of the stock of a subsidiary would cause the recognition of gain.

There are certain nonrecognition provisions which permit property to be distributed without incurring gain at the corporate level or by the shareholders receiving the property. One of these exceptions involves certain spin-off type distributions of stock of a controlled corporation. Provided that various requirements are met, including certain restrictions relating to acquisitions and dispositions of stock of the distributing corporation (distributing) or the controlled corporation (controlled) prior and subsequent to a distribution, stock can be distributed without the recognition of gain by the corporation or the shareholder under Code Sec. 355.

New restrictions have been adopted on the acquisition and disposition of the stock of the distributing or controlled corporation. If either the controlled or distributing corporation is acquired pursuant to a plan or arrangement in existence on the date of distribution, gain is generally recognized by the distributing corporation as of the date of the distribution.

One of the purposes of these restrictions is to limit the ability of taxpayers to follow the structure of Morris Trust (CA-4, 66-2 USTC ¶ 9718, 367 F2d 794) and, in effect, dispose of a portion of its business to new shareholders without the recognition of gain. Under the new rules the recognition of income can be avoided if the historical shareholders retain more than a 50 percent ownership interest in the distributing and acquiring corporations. In Morris Trust, after a Code Sec. 355 distribution, the distributing corporation merged with an unrelated corporation; however, the shareholders of the distributing corporation controlled greater than 50 percent of the shares of the merged corporation. Therefore, the result in Morris Trust would not have been changed if the new rules had applied.

Recognition of gain. In the case of an acquisition of a controlled or a distributing corporation, the amount of gain recognized by the distributing corporation is the amount of gain that the distributing corporation would have recognized had stock of the controlled corporation been sold for fair market value on the date of distribution. This gain is treated as long-term capital gain (House Committee Report). No adjustment to the basis of the stock or assets of either corporation is allowed by reason of the recognition of the gain.

Acquisition of a controlled corporation. Whether a corporation is acquired is determined under rules similar to those of Code Sec. 355(d), except that acquisitions are not restricted to so-called "purchase" transactions. Thus, an acquisition occurs if one or more persons acquire directly or indirectly 50 percent or more of the vote or value of the stock of the controlled or distributing corporation pursuant to a plan or arrangement (Code Sec. 355(e)(2)(A)).

Acquisitions occurring within the four year period beginning two years before the date of distribution are presumed to have occurred pursuant to a plan or arrangement. Taxpayers can avoid gain recognition by showing that an acquisition occurring during this four year period was unrelated to the distribution (Code Sec. 355(e)(2)(B)).

If the assets of the distributing or controlled corporation are acquired by a successor in an "A", "C" or "D" reorganization (or any transaction described in Code Sec. 368(a)(1)(A), (C) or (D)) or any other transaction specified in regulations, the shareholders (immediately before the acquisition) of the corporation acquiring such assets are treated as acquiring stock in the corporation from which the assets were acquired (Code Sec. 355(e)(3)(B)). Regulations, according to the Conference Committee Report, may subject other asset transfers to this rule. However, if the former shareholders of distributing or controlled receive (directly or indirectly) stock in a successor or in a new controlling corporation, then the stock is not treated as acquired stock if it is attributable to the shareholders' stock in distributing or controlled and was not acquired as part of a plan or arrangement to acquire 50 percent or more of the successor or other corporation (Code Sec. 355(e)(3)(A)).

> Example (1). Parent Corporation distributes the stock of its wholly owned subsidiary, SubCo, to its shareholders. Parent has a $75,000 basis in SubCo, and SubCo's value is $25,000. One year later an unrelated corporation purchases 51 percent of SubCo stock. Since a 50 percent or greater interest in the controlled corporation is acquired in the four-year period beginning two years before the distribution date, it is presumed, unless established otherwise, that the acquisition and distribution are pursuant to a plan or arrangement. Parent must therefore recognize gain of $50,000, the amount of net gain which would have been recognized if all the assets of SubCo were sold for fair market value.

A plan or series of related transactions does not cause the recognition of gain if, immediately after the completion of the plan or transactions, the distributing corporation and all the controlled corporations are members of a single affiliated group, as defined by Code Sec. 1504. For this purpose the definition of an affiliated group does not include the exceptions in Code Sec. 1504(b) (Code Sec. 355(e)(2)(C)). Thus, for example, a tax-exempt organization, life insurance company, foreign corporation, Real Estate Investment Trust (REIT), or Regulated Investment Company (RIC) could be considered a member of an affiliated group in determining whether the distributing and controlled corporations are in the same affiliated group.

> Example (2). Parent Corporation owns all the stock of Subco, and Subco owns all the stock of Subco1, a foreign corporation. Parent is merged into an unrelated corporation, AcqCorp, and as part of a plan, all the Subco1 stock is distributed by Subco to AcqCorp in a transaction that otherwise qualifies under Code Sec. 355. The former shareholders of Parent will own less than 50 percent of AcqCorp. Although the distribution of the Subco1 stock is part of a plan in which the ownership of the affiliated group has changed, it is not considered a plan requiring the recognition of gain for the distribution. This is because the distributing corporation, Subco, and the controlled corporation, Subco1, remain part of a single affiliated group after the distribution. The fact that Subco1 is a foreign corporation is disregarded in determining affiliated group status.

These provisions do not apply to a distribution that would otherwise be subject to Code Sec. 355(d), which imposes corporate level tax on certain disqualified distributions (Code Sec. 355(e)(2)(D)). Nor do these provisions apply to a distribution pursuant to a title 11 bankruptcy or similar case (as defined in Code Sec. 368(a)(3), Code Sec. 355(e)(4)).

Unless the stock held before an acquisition was acquired pursuant to a plan to transfer 50 percent control of either the controlled or distributing corporation, the following acquisitions are not considered acquisitions of a controlled corporation for purposes of these rules (Code Sec. 355(e)(3)):

(1) the acquisition of stock in any controlled corporation by the distributing corporation (e.g., the drop down of property by the distributing corporation to the controlled corporation in exchange for its stock);

(2) the acquisition by a person of stock in any controlled corporation by reason of holding stock or securities in the distributing corporation;

(3) the acquisition by a person of stock in any successor corporation of the distributing corporation or any controlled corporation by reason of holding stock or securities in the distributing or controlled corporation (e.g., the receipt by a distributing corporation shareholder of controlled corporation stock in a split-off distribution in which the shareholder did not own 50 percent of distributing but owns 50 percent of controlled); and

(4) the acquisition of stock in a corporation if shareholders, who own directly or indirectly stock possessing more than 50 percent of the total combined voting power and total value of all classes of stock in either the distributing corporation or any controlled corporation before the acquisition, own directly or indirectly stock possessing such vote and value in that distributing or controlled corporation after the acquisition (e.g., the receipt by the former shareholders of distributing or controlled corporation of 50 percent or more of a successor corporation in a merger of distributing or controlled corporations).

For purposes of these provisions:

(1) any reference to a controlled corporation or a distributing corporation also refers to any predecessor or successor of the corporation (Code Sec. 355(e)(4)(D));

(2) the attribution rules of Code Sec. 318(a)(2) apply in determining whether a person holds stock or securities in a corporation, except Code Sec. 318(a)(2)(C) is applied without regard to the phrase 50 percent or more in value, so that attribution from corporations is applied regardless of the amount of stock ownership (Code Sec. 355(e)(4)(C)(ii), see Example (5), below); and

(3) the aggregation rules of Code Sec. 355(d)(7)(A) apply so that all related persons, within the meaning of Code Sec. 267(b) or Code Sec. 707(b)(1), are treated as one person (Code Sec. 355(e)(4)(C)(i)).

Example (3). Kathy Kreer owns all the stock of ABC Corporation and also owns all the stock of MEG Corporation. ABC has a wholly-owned subsidiary, Subco1. As part of a plan, ABC distributes the stock of Subco1 to Kreer in a transaction that otherwise qualifies under Code Sec. 355, and ABC then merges into MEG. Since Kreer now owns directly or indirectly all the stock of Subco1 and MEG, the successor to ABC, the distributing corporation, this is not considered an acquisition requiring gain recognition.

Example (4). The same facts as Example (3), above, except that as part of the plan Kreer had obtained all the stock in ABC one day before the distribution of Subco1. Since direct ownership of 50 percent or more of the distributing corporation was acquired as part of a plan, the recognition of gain would be required for the transaction.

Example (5). The same facts as Example (3), above, except that instead of one individual owning all the stock in ABC and MEG, ten individuals own 10 percent of the stock in both ABC and MEG at all times during the transactions. The Subco1 stock would be spun-off to the ten individuals, who would own directly or indirectly 50 percent or more of the stock of the distributing and the controlled corporations before and after the transaction. This is not considered an acquisition requiring gain recognition.

Regulations. The IRS is specifically authorized to prescribe regulations as necessary to carry out the purposes of these provisions, including regulations to provide for the application of the provisions in the case of multiple transactions and more than one controlled corporation. In determining whether a 50 percent interest has been acquired, regulations may also be provided applying rules similar to Code Sec. 355(d)(6), that is suspending the holding period for any stock or security for which a taxpayer's risk of loss is substantially diminished through devices such as options and short sales (Code Sec. 355(e)(5)).

Intragroup distributions. Except as provided in regulations, in the case of distributions of stock within an affiliated group of corporations (as defined in Code Sec. 1504(a)), the nonrecognition rules of Code Sec. 355 do not apply to any distribution of the stock of one member of the group to another member if one or more persons acquire directly or indirectly 50 percent or more of the vote or value of the stock of the controlled or distributing corporation pursuant to a plan or arrangement (Code Sec. 355(f)).

Example (6). MooreCo, the parent corporation in an affiliated group, owns all the stock of ABC Corporation. ABC has a wholly-owned subsidiary Subco. As part of a plan, ABC distributes the stock of SubCo to MooreCo, MooreCo distributes the stock of SubCo to its shareholders. MooreCo is then merged into NewCo with the shareholders of MooreCo owning only 40 percent of NewCo stock. The spin-off of SubCo to MooreCo is part of a plan by which SubCo is distributed outside of the affiliated group, and more than 50 percent of MooreCo, the parent of the distributing corporation, is acquired outside of the affiliated group. Therefore, the intragroup spin-off of the SubCo stock from ABC to MooreCo is not subject to the nonrecognition rules of Code Sec. 355. The subsequent distribution of the SubCo stock to MooreCo shareholders is subject to the general recognition of gain rules discussed above.

The Conference Committee Report suggests that the IRS may consider issuing regulations under which gain would not have to be recognized when an intragroup distribution fails to qualify under Code Sec. 355. For example, in the above example instead of the recognition of gain, adjustments could be made to the basis in the stock of ABC and SubCo.

In determining whether the distribution of stock between members of an affiliated group is part of a transaction that results in a taxable acquisition, the rules discussed above under "acquisition of a controlled corporation" are applicable. Therefore an intragroup spin-off will not be disqualified from the nonrecognition rules of Code Sec. 355 if gain recognition would not be required under the general rule of new Code Sec. 355(e). For example, if after an intragroup spin-off the distributing corporation and the controlled corporations are members of a single affiliated group, then the nonrecognition rules of Code Sec. 355 would apply to the transaction.

Additionally, in the case of any distribution of stock of one member of an affiliated group of corporations to another member, the IRS is authorized under Code Sec. 358(c) to provide adjustments to the basis of any group member's stock to appropriately reflect the proper treatment of the distribution (Code Sec. 355(g)).

The Conference Committee Report notes its concerns with the current consolidated return regulations regarding basis adjustments resulting from a distribution. One concern is that excess loss accounts may not be recaptured when there is an internal spin-off followed by the subsidiary leaving the group. The Conference Committee Report states that the IRS may consider providing rules that require a carryover basis within the group for the stock of the distributed corporation, including a carryover of an excess loss account. Also suggested is that the change in the value and basis of the distributing corporation's assets should be reflected in basis reduction to the stock of the distributing corporation.

Another concern noted in the Conference Committee Report is that under current rules a shareholder's basis after a distribution is allocated between the stock of distributing and controlled corporations in proportion to fair market value. Thus, in certain cases, an affiliated group can benefit from a high inside basis in one corporation, increasing depreciation deductions, and a high outside basis in the other corporation that would reduce gain if that corporation was sold. Therefore, the Conference Committee Report suggests, the IRS may determine that the aggregate stock basis of distributing and controlled after the distribution should be adjusted to an amount that is less than the aggregate basis of the stock of the distributing corporation before the distribution. This would prevent the inappropriate potential for artificial losses or diminishment of gain on disposition of any of the corporations involved in a spin-off.

Also suggested in the Conference Committee Report is providing separate rules for affiliated groups filing consolidated returns and affiliated groups that do not file consolidated returns.

Control. Rules for determining control immediately after a distribution are modified for Code Sec. 351 transactions. The fact that a corporate transferor distributes part or all of the stock it receives in the exchange to its shareholders is disregarded. In a transaction that otherwise meets the requirements of Code Sec. 355, shareholders receiving stock in a distributed corporation are treated as in control of the distributed corporation immediately after the distribution if they hold stock representing greater than 50 percent of the total combined voting power and 50 percent of the value of all classes of stock of the distributed corporation (Code Sec. 351(c)).

In the case of certain divisive transactions, for purposes of determining whether it qualifies as a "D" reorganization, if the transaction otherwise qualifies under Code Sec. 354(b)(1)(A) and (B) (nonrecognition of gain or loss if substantially all the assets are transferred and the stock, securities and properties received by the transferor are distributed under a plan of reorganization), then the control test of Code Sec. 304(c) is applicable. The control test of Code Sec. 304(c) is generally satisfied if at least 50 percent of the total combined voting power and 50 percent of the value of all classes of stock are owned, applying the attribution rules of Code Sec. 318(a) (see Code Sec. 304(c) for details). However, in a transaction that otherwise meets the requirements of Code Sec. 355, shareholders receiving stock in a distributed corporation are treated as in control of the distributed corporation immediately after the distribution if they hold stock representing greater than 50 percent of the total combined voting power and 50 percent of the value of all classes of stock of the distributed corporation with no stock attribution (Code Sec. 368(a)(2)(H)).

Extended statute of limitations. The statutory period for the assessment of any deficiency attributable to gain recognized because of the application of Code Sec. 355(e)(1) does not expire before the expiration of three years from the date the taxpayer notifies the IRS that the distribution occurred. The manner of notification may be prescribed by regulations. Such a deficiency may be assessed before the expiration of the three year period even though other provisions would otherwise prevent the assessment (Code Sec. 355(e)(4)(E)).

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Dan Rahill, tax partner at the Chicago office of KPMG Peat Marwick LLP, observes that this provision's enactment would affect many companies across all industries, but particularly those operating in technology-driven, rapidly changing environments. The ability to reorganize is highly desirable and necessary in today's extremely competitive global marketplace. Without this flexibility American companies will be at a disadvantage with foreign competitors not faced with the same reorganizational costs. Spin-offs are a very common part of corporate tax planning and very few Morris Trust transactions are abusive. Regrettably, this legislation is not tailored to reach only those abusive transactions.

Effective date. These provisions are generally effective for distributions after April 16, 1997, pursuant to a plan (or a series of related transactions) that involves an acquisition described in Code Sec. 355(e)(2)(A)(ii) occurring after that date. However, the greater than 50 percent control requirement immediately after certain Code Sec. 351 and Code Sec. 368(a)(1)(D) distributions will be effective for transfers after August 5, 1997.

Under transitional rules, these provisions that would otherwise require gain to be recognized to the distributing or controlled corporation do not apply to any distribution pursuant to a plan (or a series of related transactions) occurring after April 16, 1997, if such acquisition (or transfer the subject of Act Sec. 1012(c)) is:

(1) made pursuant to an agreement which was binding on April 16, 1997 and at all times thereafter;

(2) described in a ruling request submitted to the IRS on or before that date; or

(3) described on or before that date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) required solely by reason of the acquisition or transfer.

The transition rules do not apply to any agreement, ruling request, or public announcement or SEC filing unless it identifies the acquirer of the distributing corporation or any controlled corporation, or the transferee, whichever is applicable. The Conference Committee Report points out that the transition rules apply to any contract, even if not written, that is binding under State law as of April 16, 1997. It is expected that some form of contemporaneous written evidence of the contract would exist.

Redemptions Involving Related Corporations

Background

If one corporation purchases stock of a related corporation, the transaction generally is recharacterized as a redemption under Code Sec. 304. Sales proceeds received by a corporate transferor that are characterized as a dividend may qualify for the dividends received deduction under Code Sec. 243. Code Sec. 1059 applies to "extraordinary dividends," including certain redemption transactions treated as dividends qualifying for the dividends received deduction. Under prior law, if a redemption resulted in an extraordinary dividend, Code Sec. 1059 generally required the shareholder to reduce its basis in the stock of the redeeming corporation by the nontaxed portion of the dividend.

Tax treatment of certain corporate stock transfers treated as redemptions reformed.—When a corporation purchases stock of a related corporation, the transaction generally is treated as a redemption under Code Sec. 304. Under the redemption rules, sales proceeds received by a corporate transferor may be treated as a dividend under Code Sec. 301 to the extent of earnings and profits (E&P) of the acquiring corporation and then to the extent of E&P of the issuing corporation. However, a corporation receiving dividends is generally entitled to a dividends received deduction under Code Sec. 243. Thus, a significant portion of the proceeds received by the related corporation may be untaxed.

Generally, 50 percent ownership is sufficient control for purposes of qualification as a related corporation under Code Sec. 304(c)(1). Further, when applying the constructive ownership rules of Code Sec. 318, five percent is substituted for 50 percent. The result of the constructive ownership rules is that a corporation need not directly own any stock of another corporation to be related for these purposes.

Under the amended rules, to the extent that a Code Sec. 304 transaction is treated as a distribution under Code Sec. 301, the transferor and the acquiring corporation are treated as if:

(1) the transferor had transferred the stock involved in the transaction to the acquiring corporation in exchange for stock of the acquiring corporation in a transaction to which Code Sec. 351(a) applies (a nontaxable contribution to capital); and

(2) the acquiring corporation had then redeemed the stock it is treated as having issued.

The purpose of this two-step rule is to treat the acquiring corporation as having redeemed the stock, and the stock is treated as having been issued to the transferor.

Extraordinary dividend. A dividend is considered extraordinary when it exceeds, generally, 10 percent of a corporation's basis in a share of stock (five percent for preferred dividends) (see Code Sec. 1059). A redemption considered an extraordinary dividend that qualifies for the dividends received deduction requires the shareholder to reduce its basis in the stock of the redeeming corporation by the nontaxed portion of the dividend (e.g., the portion of the dividend to which the dividends received deduction applies). Under the new provisions, if a Code Sec. 304 transaction is treated as a dividend to which the dividends received deduction applies, the dividend is treated as an extraordinary dividend in which only the basis of the transferred shares is taken into account.

Example. Holding Corporation owns 75% of the shares of SubCo1 and all the shares of Beta. SubCo1 owns all 10 of the issued shares of SubCo2 with a basis of $75. Beta has sufficient earnings and profits so that any distribution of property would be treated as a dividend. SubCo1 sells all but one of its shares in SubCo2 to Beta for $90, the fair market value. SubCo1, the transferor, is treated as having transferred the SubCo2 stock to Beta, the acquiring corporation, in exchange for the stock of Beta in a deemed Code Sec. 351(a) transaction. Beta is then treated as having redeemed the stock it was deemed as having issued to SubCo1. Assume $63 of the dividend (70% of the $90 distribution) is untaxed because of the dividends received deduction under Code Sec. 243. Because basis in the transferred shares must be reduced under Code Sec. 1059 for the non-taxed portion of the deemed dividend payment, there is a reduction in SubCo1's $75 basis in the remaining share it holds in SubCo2 to $12 ($75 − $63).

Foreign corporations. The E&P of an acquiring foreign corporation that are taken into account for purposes of applying Code Sec. 304 can not exceed the portion of the E&P that:

(1) is attributable to stock of the acquiring corporation held by a corporation or individual who is the transferor (or a related person) and who is a U.S. shareholder (within the meaning of Code Sec. 951(b)), and

(2) was accumulated during periods in which the stock was owned by that person while the acquiring corporation was a controlled foreign corporation.

For purposes of this rule (except as otherwise provided by regulations), the rules of Code Sec. 1248(d), relating to certain exclusions from E&P, apply. The IRS is to prescribe regulations as appropriate, including, according to the Conference Committee Report, regulations to determine the earnings allocable to particular stock of the acquiring corporation.

Effective date. These provisions are effective for distributions or acquisitions after June 8, 1997. However, the provisions will not apply to any distribution or acquisition (1) made pursuant to a written agreement which was binding on June 8, 1997, and at all times thereafter, (2) described in a ruling request submitted to the IRS on or before date, or (3) described in a public announcement or filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission on or before that date.

Preferred Stock Treated as Boot

Background

Gain or loss is generally not recognized in Code Sec. 368 reorganization transactions except to the extent that other property ("boot") is received in the transaction. Since boot is property other than certain stock, under prior law preferred stock could be received tax-free in a reorganization. Debt securities can be received tax-free in such a transaction but only to the extent that debt securities of an equal amount are surrendered in the exchange. Thus, although many preferred stocks are functionally equivalent to debt securities, the distribution of preferred stock presented tax advantages. Other than this debt-for-debt rule, similar rules generally applied to Code Sec. 351— nontaxable property contributions to a corporation by members of a group controlling 80 percent of the corporation. Further, under Code Sec. 1036 no gain or loss was recognized when common stock of a corporation was exchanged solely for preferred stock in the same corporation.

Certain preferred stock treated as boot.—In a Code Sec. 368 reorganization transaction, a Code Sec. 351 transfer to a controlled corporation, or a Code Sec. 355 distribution from a controlled corporation, gain or loss is generally recognized only if "other property," property other than stock, is received. Subject to certain exceptions, the new amendments treat "nonqualified preferred stock" as boot for purposes of Code Secs. 351, 354, 355, 356, and 368. Similarly, when nonqualified preferred stock is received in exchange for common stock of the same corporation, the nonrecognition rules of Code Sec. 1036 do not apply to the extent of the nonqualified preferred stock received.

Thus, when a taxpayer exchanges property for nonqualified preferred stock in a transaction that qualifies under Code Sec. 351, 355, or 368, gain, but not loss, would be recognized.

> Example. Allan Founder contributes property to a controlled corporation in a transaction described in Code Sec. 351. The property has a basis of $30,000 and a fair market value of $100,000. In exchange, Founder receives nonqualified preferred stock valued at $50,000, common stock worth $45,000, and $5,000 cash. Founder has a realized gain of $70,000 ($100,000 of total consideration received ($50,000 + $45,000 + $5,000) less $30,000 basis). However, under Code Sec. 351(b), this gain is only recognized to the extent of $55,000 (the total of the cash, $5,000, and other property, $50,000 of nonqualified preferred stock, received in the transfer).

An exchange of nonqualified preferred stock for nonqualified preferred stock in an acquiring corporation may qualify for tax-free treatment under Code Sec. 354, but not Code Sec. 351. According to the House Committee Report, in cases in which both Code Secs. 354 and 351 may apply to a transaction, Code Sec. 354 is generally applicable. Thus, in that situation, the exchange of nonqualified preferred stock for other nonqualified preferred stock is tax-free.

Definition of stock in a Code Sec. 351 transfer. To qualify for nonrecognition under Code Sec. 351, property must be transferred to a corporation solely in exchange for stock by one or more persons who are in control of the corporation (control is defined in Code Sec. 368(c)). The Conference Committee Report clarifies that, although nonqualified preferred stock may be treated as boot, nonqualified preferred stock is considered stock for purposes of qualifying for nonrecognition under Code Sec. 351(a), unless and until regulations provide otherwise. Thus, if an individual transfers appreciated property to a corporation in exchange for both common stock and nonqualified preferred stock, he will only recognize gain to the extent of the fair market value of the nonqualified preferred stock received in the transaction. The Code Sec. 351 nonrecognition rules are applicable to the property transferred to the corporation for stock other than nonqualified preferred stock.

Similarly, for purposes of determining whether the transferors in an otherwise qualifying Code Sec. 351 transfer are in control of the corporation, the stock ownership of an individual who transfers property and only receives nonqualified preferred stock would, presumably, be considered in determining whether the persons making the transfer are in control. The Conference Committee Report notes that future regulations may change this result.

Preferred stock is defined as stock that is limited and preferred as to dividends and does not participate in corporate growth to any significant extent. These amendments, which treat preferred stock as boot, only apply to nonqualified preferred stock which is defined as preferred stock for which:

(1) the holder has the right to require the issuer or a related person (within the meaning of Code Sec. 267(b) or 707(b)) to redeem or purchase the stock;

(2) the issuer or a related person is required to redeem or purchase the stock;

(3) the issuer or a related person has the right to redeem or purchase the stock and, as of the issue date, it is more likely than not that such right will be exercised; or

(4) the dividend rate on the stock varies in whole or in part (directly or indirectly) with reference to interest rates, commodity prices, or other similar indices. According to the House Committee Report, such stock with a varying dividend rate is treated as nonqualified preferred stock regardless of whether such varying rate is provided as an express term of the stock (for example, an adjustable rate stock) or as a practical result of other aspects of the stock (for example, auction rate stock).

The rules of (1), (2), and (3), above, for nonqualified preferred stock, do not apply if the right or obligation referred to:

(1) cannot be exercised within 20 years of the date the right or obligation is issued and is subject to a contingency which, as of the issue date, makes the likelihood of the redemption or purchase remote;

(2) may be exercised only upon the death, disability, or mental incompetency of the holder (however this exception is not applicable if any class of the stock surrendered or the stock received in the exchange is publicly traded, or of a related corporation, or if the exchange is part of a transaction or series of transactions by which a corporation is to become publicly traded); or

(3) in the case of a right or obligation to redeem or purchase stock transferred in connection with the performance of services for the issuer or a related person, it may be exercised only upon the holder's separation from service.

The Conference Committee Report clarifies that a conversion privilege into the stock of the issuer does not automatically constitute a right to participate in corporate growth to a significant extent. Thus, the inclusion of a conversion privilege to stock which would otherwise be treated as nonqualified preferred stock does not automatically avoid that characterization. Further, the Conference Committee Report clarifies that stock convertible or exchangeable into stock of a corporation other than the issuer, such as the issuer's parent or other related corporation, is not considered participation in corporate growth to a significant extent.

Recapitalizations of family-owned corporations. Excluded from gain recognition under the rules which treat preferred stock as boot are exchanges of stock in certain recapitalizations of family-owned corporations. For this purpose, a family-owned corporation is defined in Code Sec. 447(d)(2)(C)(i) as any corporation if at least 50 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote and at least 50 percent of all other classes of stock of the corporations are owned by members of the same family for five years preceding the recapitalization and for three years following the recapitalization. Members of the same family are defined by reference to Code Sec. 447(e) and include an individual, the individual's siblings (by the whole and half-blood and by legal adoption), aunts and uncles, great-aunts and great-uncles, and the ancestors, lineal descendants, spouse, and estate of any of the preceding individuals. Special stock attribution rules are applied. However, stock is not treated as owned by a family member during any period in which the holder of the stock has substantially diminished his risk of loss with respect to the stock through an option, short sale, any special class of stock, or any other device or transaction.

Regulations. The IRS is authorized to issue regulations to carry out the purposes of these rules. According to the House Committee Report, the IRS may apply installment sale-type rules to preferred stock that is subject to these amendments and also to prescribe treatment of preferred stock subject to these provisions under other sections of the Code (e.g., Code Secs. 304, 306, 318, and 368(c)). However, until regulations are issued, preferred stock which is subject to these amendments will continue to be treated as stock under other Code provisions.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Mark Luscombe, Principal Analyst for the Federal and State Tax Group at CCH INCORPORATED, notes that this provision originally arose as one of the Administration's provisions to close what were perceived to be corporate tax loopholes. This provision tends to reclassify preferred stock as boot in acquisition and reorganization contexts in a manner similar to the treatment of preferred stock in distributions under Code Sec. 305. Such disqualified preferred stock generally has characteristics that make it appear the stock was not designed to participate in corporate growth to any significant extent. The 20-year safe harbor may be of more value than at first appears since often in an acquisition or reorganization the preferred stockholder has the intent to hold the stock until death in order to qualify for basis step up.

Effective date. The amendments are generally effective for transactions after June 8, 1997. However, they do not apply to transactions after that date that are (1) subject to a written agreement binding on June 8, 1997, and at all times thereafter, (2) described in a ruling request submitted to the IRS on or before that date, or (3) described in a public announcement or a Securities and Exchange Commission filing on or before that date.

Investment Company Definition Under Code Sec. 351

Background

Gain or loss is generally not recognized by a contribution of property by members of a group controlling 80 percent of a corporation or by a partner to a partnership. However, gain or loss is recognized upon a contribution by a shareholder to a corporation that is an investment company (Code Sec. 351(e)(1)), and gain, but not loss, is recognized upon a contribution by a partner to a partnership that would be treated as an investment company if the partnership were a corporation (Code Sec. 721(b)). Regulations provided that a contribution of property by a shareholder to a corporation, or by a partner to a partnership, was treated as a transfer to an investment company only if the contribution resulted, directly or indirectly, in a diversification of the transferor's interests; and the transferee was either a regulated investment company (RIC), a real estate investment trust (REIT), or a corporation more than 80 percent of the assets of which by value (excluding cash and non-convertible debt instruments) were readily marketable stocks or securities or interests in RICs or REITs that were held for investment (Reg. § 1.351-1(c)(1)). Under prior law, a partnership or a corporation might not have been treated as an investment company even though more than 80 percent of its assets were a combination of readily marketable stock and securities and other high-quality investment assets of determinable values. The Act's provisions are particularly aimed at so-called swap funds—partnerships or RICs structured to allow tax-free contributions of stock and securities in exchange for an interest in the fund holding similar interests.

Scope of investment company assets increased for purposes of Code Sec. 351.—The definition of an investment company is modified for purposes of determining whether a transfer of property to a partnership or corporation results in gain recognition (under Code Sec. 351(e) and Code Sec. 721(b)) by expanding the types of assets that are taken into account for purposes of the definition. Generally, a contribution of property to a corporation does not result in gain or loss to the contributing shareholder provided that the contributor is part of a group of contributors who own 80 percent of the voting stock of each class of stock entitled to vote. Similarly, a contribution of property to a partnership generally does not result in recognition of gain or loss to the contributing partner. However, gain or loss is recognized upon a contribution by a shareholder to a corporation that is considered an investment company (Code Sec. 351(e)(1)). Gain, but not loss, is recognized upon a contribution by a partner to a partnership that would be treated as an investment company if the partnership were a corporation (Code Sec. 721(b)).

The Act provides an expanded definition of what constitutes "property" transferred to an investment company. Reading the existing regulations together with the new provisions, the definition of an investment company includes any corporation or partnership if more than 80 percent of the value of its assets consists of: money; stocks and other equity interests in a corporation; evidences of indebtedness, options, forward or futures contracts, notional principal contracts and derivatives; foreign currency; interests in precious metals (unless used in an active trade or business after the contribution); interests in a regulated investment company (RIC) or a real estate investment trust (REIT), common trust funds, and publicly-traded partnerships (as defined in Code Sec. 7704(b)); or other interests in noncorporate entities that are convertible into or exchangeable for any of the listed assets. Other assets that count toward the 80-percent test are interests in an entity if substantially all of the assets of the entity are listed assets, and to the extent provided in regulations, interests in other entities, but only to the extent of the value of the interest that is attributable to listed assets.

The IRS is granted regulatory authority to add other assets to the list in the provision, or, under certain circumstances, to remove items from the list.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Chuck Levun of Levun, Goodman & Cohen, Northbrook, Illinois, points out that, pursuant to Code Secs. 351(e) and 721(b) and the regulations thereunder, a contribution of appreciated property to a corporation or partnership that is considered to be an investment company is a taxable transaction. Under prior law, a corporation or partnership was an investment company if more than 80 percent of its assets consisted of marketable stock or securities. The Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 amends Code Sec. 351(e) (and, by reference, Code Sec. 721(b)) to include, among other assets, stock and securities (whether or not marketable) and cash, as tainted assets.

Whereas, it appears that it was Congress's intention to preclude the tax-free contribution of marketable securities into a corporation or partnership (subject to certain exceptions contained in the regulations), where non-marketable securities were added to the asset mix to bring the marketable portion below the 80-percent threshold, the breadth of this legislative change could be more sweeping than one might suspect. For instance, it appears that a contribution of real estate (a non-tainted asset) to a partnership, along with a major infusion of cash (i.e., over 80 percent of the partnership's total value) could constitute the creation of an investment company, because cash is now a tainted asset. One should note, however, that there is a legislative history that might suggest that if it can be shown that the cash is to be used to enhance the non-tainted real estate, the partnership will not be treated as an investment company.

The Senate Committee Report states that the new provision is intended to change only the types of assets considered in the definition of an investment company in Reg. § 1.351-1(c)(1)(ii), and not to override other provisions of those regulations. For example, the Report states that the new provision does not override:

(1) the requirement that only assets held for investment are considered for purposes of the definition (Reg. § 1.351-1(c)(3));

(2) the rule treating the assets of a subsidiary as owned proportionally by a parent owning 50 percent or more of its stock (Reg. § 1.351-1(c)(4));

(3) the requirement that the investment company determination consider any plan with regard to an entity's assets in existence immediately after the transfer (Reg. § 1.351-1(c)(2)); and

(4) the requirement that a contribution of property to an investment company result directly or indirectly in diversification in order for gain to be recognized (Reg. § 1.351-1(c)(1)(i)).

The Senate Committee Report states that although cash is counted in the 80-percent test in the new provision, Reg. § 1.351-1(c)(2) (discussed in (3), above) should be applied so that if, as part of a plan, cash is used to purchase assets that are not treated as stock or securities, then the investment company determination is made after the asset purchase.

Example (1). Joe Tinker and John Evers each own 50% of Chance Corporation and are in control for purposes of Code Sec. 351. On December 1, 1997, Chance has $10,000 of total assets consisting of $2,500 of operating assets, $4,000 of stock options, and $3,500 of precious metal futures contracts. On that date, solely in exchange for Chance stock, Tinker contributes $5,000 cash and Evers contributes an interest in the TEC partnership valued at $5,000. TEC's assets consist entirely of marketable securities. In determining whether Chance is an investment company, the $4,000 of stock options, $3,500 of precious metal futures contracts, $5,000 cash, and the $5,000 partnership interest are all considered listed assets. Thus, 87.5% ($17,500 ÷ $20,000) of Chance's assets are listed assets, and Chance is an investment company. Evers must recognize gain, if any, on the exchange of the partnership interest for Chance stock.

Example (2). The same facts as in Example (1), above, except that Chance Corporation has a plan in effect on December 1, 1997, to purchase $5,000 of operating assets, and the cash contributed by Tinker is in fact used to purchase operating assets. The plan to purchase nonlisted assets is taken into account in making the investment company determination (under Reg. § 1.351-1(c)(2)). Therefore the cash will not be treated as a listed asset and 62.5% ($12,500 ÷ $20,000) of Chance's assets are listed assets. Since this is less than 80%, Chance is not considered an investment company, and Evers will not recognize any gain on the exchange of the partnership interest under the general rule of Code Sec. 351.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Steven Surdell of Jenner & Block, Chicago, Ill., points out that the principal impact of modified Code Sec. 351(e) appears to be on so-called exchange or swap funds. These funds, which are generally partnerships for tax purposes, are designed to provide holders of appreciated financial assets with tax-free risk diversification. Essentially, the fund identifies taxpayers holding appreciated financial assets (such as stock) and then allows the holders to contribute qualifying stock to the partnership. Because numerous taxpayers holding different appreciated stocks will contribute to the partnership, contributors will achieve diversification by converting a single appreciated stock position into a partnership interest in a partnership holding a diversified portfolio.

Under the general nonrecognition rules of Code Sec. 721, the contribution of appreciated property to a partnership is tax free. Code Sec. 721(b) provides an exception to this nonrecognition rule, however, if the partnership is an investment company as defined under Code Sec. 351(e). As previously drafted, Code Sec. 351(e) itself provided little guidance on what constituted an investment company, but the Treasury regulations generally provided that a corporation was an investment company if more than 80 percent of its assets were invested in marketable securities. In order to obviate this problem, exchange funds typically borrowed 20 percent of their value and invested in nonpublicly traded fixed-income assets. By amending Code Sec. 351(e) to include debt in the definition of securities, the Act seems to limit the ability to circumvent Code Sec. 351(e) by investing in nonpublicly traded debt.

Effective date. The provision applies to all transfers after June 8, 1997, in tax years ending after that date. An exception is provided for transfers of a fixed amount of property made pursuant to a binding written contract in effect on June 8, 1997, and at all times thereafter before the transfer.

INTEREST DEDUCTIONS

Interest Paid on Disqualified Debt Instruments

Background

The determination of whether an instrument is debt or equity is made under all facts and circumstances based on principles of developed case law. The issuer receives a deduction for interest when the instrument is debt, but does not receive a deduction when the instrument is equity. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, corporations have attempted to claim interest deductions with respect to issuances of debt that are payable with the issuer's stock or convertible to the issuer's stock.

No interest deduction for "payable in equity" debt.—No deduction is allowed for any interest paid or accrued on a "disqualified debt instrument." The term "disqualified debt instrument" means any indebtedness of a corporation that is payable in equity of the issuer or a related party within the meaning of Code Sec. 267(b) or Code Sec. 707(b).

"Payable in equity." Debt is treated as payable in equity of the issuer or a related party if (1) a substantial portion of the principal or interest is required to be paid or converted, or at the issuer's or related party's option is payable in, or converted into, equity of the issuer or a related party; (2) a substantial portion of the principal or interest is required to be determined, or may be determined at the option of the issuer or related party, by reference to the value of equity of the issuer or related party; or (3) the debt is part of an arrangement designed to result in payment of the instrument with or by reference to the equity. This type of arrangement could include the issuance of a forward contract in connection with the issuance of debt, nonrecourse debt that is secured principally by the stock, or debt instruments that are convertible at the holder's option when it is substantially certain that the right will be exercised. Under the Conference Committee Report, it is not expected that this provision will affect debt with a conversion feature where the conversion price is significantly higher than the market price of the stock on the date of the debt issuance.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Steven Surdell of Jenner & Block, Chicago, Ill., notes that, like new Code Sec. 1259, the modification of Code Sec. 163 descends directly from the various so-called Pearl Harbor Day proposals first advanced by the Clinton Administration on December 7, 1995. The modification reflects Congress' concern with certain hybrid debt instruments which combine aspects of both stock and debt and appears to be aimed at certain PRIDES®-type transactions in which the issuer's debt is repaid in the stock of the issuer (or a 50% affiliate) or is cash settled by reference to the value of such stock—but only if it is substantially certain that the debt will be repaid in (or cash settled by reference to) such stock. Because the "tainted" stock must be that of a 50% affiliate, the provision would generally not apply to DECS®-type transactions because those transactions generally do not involve 50% or greater affiliates. In these latter transactions, a corporation which owns appreciated portfolio stock in a second corporation issues debt which is payable by reference to the value of the portfolio stock. For example, if the portfolio stock is worth $100 per share on the date of the debt issuance, each DECS® will be issued for a face amount of $100. On the DECS® maturity date (typically three years after issuance) if the shares are worth less than $100, the issuer may settle its debt obligation by delivering one share of the stock (typically the issuer is also allowed to cash settle rather than settling by physical delivery of the shares) so that the DECS® holder has downside risk on the portfolio stock. If the stock appreciates by up to 20 percent, the issuer typically retains all of the appreciation, and if the appreciation exceeds 20 percent, the issuer and the holders share the appreciation pursuant to a predetermined formula.

New Code Sec. 163(l) would deny an interest deduction to a "disqualified debt instrument," which is essentially defined, as described above, as debt repayable in the stock of the issuer (or a 50% affiliate) or cash settled by reference to the value of such stock. Thus the provision may have applicability to certain debt issuances which couple debt with a forward on the issuer's stock, but only if the transaction is substantially certain to result in the repayment of the debt with the issuer's stock (or be cash settled by reference to such stock). In those circumstances in which the provisions do apply, they are fairly draconian, since the issuer is denied an interest deduction but a corporate holder is denied a dividends-received deduction. The provision thus has the effect of treating the parties asymmetrically, since the issuer is essentially treated as if it issued equity and the holder is essentially treated as if it held debt.

Significantly, the Clinton Administration proposals would have included certain long-term debt in the definition of "disqualified debt instruments." For these purposes, the long-term debt was generally defined as debt with a weighted average maturity of more than 40 years. This long-term debt proposal is not included in the Act.

Effective date. The provision applies to disqualified debt instruments issued after June 8, 1997, unless the instrument is (1) issued pursuant to a written agreement that was binding on June 8, 1997, and at all times thereafter, (2) described in a ruling request submitted to the IRS on or before June 8, 1997, or (3) described on or before June 8, 1997, in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the issuance.

Act Sec. 1005(a), amending Code Sec. 163 by redesignating subsection (l) as subsection (m) and adding new subsection (l); Act Sec. 1005(b). Law at ¶ 5069. Committee Report at ¶ 11,140.

OTHER DEDUCTIONS AND LOSSES

Dividends Received Deduction

¶ 517

Background

Under prior law, the dividends received deduction was allowed to a corporate shareholder if the corporation satisfied a 46-day holding period for the dividend-paying stock. A 91-day holding period was required for dividends on preferred stock if the dividend was attributable to a period or periods aggregating in excess of 366 days. However, also under prior law, there was no requirement that the dividend-paying stock be held for the period immediately before or immediately after the time that the taxpayer became entitled to the dividend.

Holding period for dividends received deduction modified.—A corporation is not entitled to a dividends received deduction if the dividend paying stock is held less than 46 days during the 90-day period that begins 45 days before the stock becomes ex-dividend with respect to the dividend. The holding period for dividends on preferred stock attributable to a period or periods in excess of 366 days is increased to 91 days during the 180-day period that begins 90 days before the stock becomes ex-dividend with respect to the dividend.

Example. XYZ Corporation purchases ABC Corporation stock on September 30, 1997, and receives a dividend from ABC on November 1, 1997. The ex-dividend date for the dividend is October 1, 1997. XYZ sells the ABC stock on December 20, 1997. In order to satisfy the holding period for receiving a dividends received deduction, XYZ must have held the stock for at least 46 days during the 90-day period beginning on August 17 (which is 45 days prior to the October 1 ex-dividend date) and ending on November 14 (which is the 90th day of the period). In this case, the date of acquisition is disregarded, but the date of disposition is taken into account (under Code Sec. 246(c)(3)(A)). XYZ held the stock during the period from October 1 (the day after the purchase of ABC stock) through November 14. This period equals 45 days and fails to satisfy the 46-day holding period requirement.

Effective date. The provision is effective for dividends paid or accrued after the 30th day after August 5, 1997 (September 5, 1997).

Under transitional relief, these provisions do not apply to dividends received or accrued during the two-year period beginning on August 5, 1997 provided that:

(1) the dividend is paid with respect to stock held by the taxpayer on June 8, 1997, and at all times until the dividend is received;

(2) the stock is continuously subject to a position (e.g., option) that reduces the risk of loss (under Code Sec. 246(c)(4)) until the dividend is received; and

(3) the stock and position are clearly identified in the taxpayer's records within 30 days after August 5, 1997 (September 5, 1997).

Transitional relief is not available if the position is sold, closed, or otherwise terminated and reestablished.

Charitable Contributions of Computers

Background

Although an itemized deduction is generally allowed for the fair market value of property contributed to a charitable organization, the deduction for a contribution of inventory or other ordinary-income property, short-term capital gain property, or certain gifts to private foundations has been limited to the taxpayer's basis in the property. Similarly, if tangible personal property was given to a charitable organization and the use by the recipient charitable organization was unrelated to the organization's tax-exempt purpose, the charitable deduction has been limited to the adjusted basis in the property. Augmented deductions have been available for certain contributions by C corporations, but under prior law, these augmented deductions were limited to contributions of inventory property for the care of the ill, the needy, infants, and for certain contributions of scientific equipment constructed by the taxpayer, provided the original use of such donated equipment was by the recipient and used for research or research training in the U.S. in physical or biological sciences.

Increased charitable contribution deduction for gifts of computers by C corporations.—The list of contributions that qualify for the "augmented charitable deduction" has been expanded to include certain gifts to schools of computer technology and equipment. Qualification for the augmented charitable deduction permits the grantor a greater deduction when contributing inventory or other ordinary income property. The deduction previously was limited to the basis of the donated property for such gifts. These new rules are only applicable to gifts by C corporations.

The amount of the augmented deduction is equal to the donor's or the taxpayer's basis in the donated property plus one-half of the amount of ordinary income that would have been realized if the property had been sold. However, the augmented deduction can not exceed twice the basis of the donated property.

Qualified gifts of computer technology and equipment include contributions of computer software, computer or peripheral equipment, and fiber optic cable related to computer use that are to be used within the U.S. for educational purposes in any grade K through 12. The donated property must fit productively into the educational plans of the school.

An eligible donee for these purposes is:

(1) an educational organization that normally maintains a regular faculty and curriculum and has a regularly enrolled body of pupils in attendance at the place where its educational activities are regularly conducted;

(2) A Code Sec. 501(c)(3) entity that is organized primarily for purposes of supporting elementary and secondary education; and

(3) a private foundation that within 30 days after receipt of the contribution contributes the property to an eligible donee described in (1) and (2) above and notifies the donor of the contribution.

Qualified contributions are limited to gifts made no later than two years after the date the taxpayer acquired or substantially completed the construction of the donated property. The original use of the property must be by the donor or the donee. The donee may not transfer the donated property for money, services, or other property, except for shipping, transfer, and installation costs. Only donations made by C corporations can qualify for the enhanced credit; S corporations, personal holding companies, and service organizations cannot be eligible donors.

Example. On January 2, 1998, a C corporation, Flotsam Inc., donates computer equipment, which it purchased new on or after February 1, 1996, to a public high school in the United States. At the time of the contribution, the equipment has a fair market value of $100,000 and an adjusted basis of $30,000. The contribution of eligible property that is less than two years old to a qualified donee qualifies for an enhanced charitable deduction, which is calculated under Code Sec. 170(e)(3) as follows. To the donor's basis, $30,000, is added one-half of the gain that would have been realized if the property had been sold at its fair market value, $35,000 ($100,000 − $30,000 ÷ 2), for a total of $65,000 ($30,000 + $35,000). However, since this amount exceeds twice the donor's basis in the contributed property, $60,000 ($30,000 × 2), the enhanced charitable deduction is limited to $60,000.

Sunset of provision. These augmented charitable deduction rules terminate for contributions made during any tax year beginning after December 31, 1999.

Effective date. These provisions are effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 224, adding Code Sec. 170(e)(6). Law at ¶ 5077. Committee Report at ¶ 10,230.

Background

Code Sec. 267 disallows tax losses when a sale or exchange of property takes place between certain related parties. Losses on sales or exchanges between members of the same corporate group may be deferred, rather than denied (Code Sec. 267(f)). This deferral continues until the property is transferred outside the controlled group. Many Internal Revenue Code provisions incorporate the relationships described in Code Sec. 267, where a loss is disallowed, to define "related parties."

Related parties determined by reference to Code Sec. 267(f).—Any Internal Revenue Code of 1986 provision that refers to a relationship that would result in a Code Sec. 267 loss disallowance also refers to relationships where loss is deferred under Code Sec. 267(f) (relating to losses between members of the same corporate group).

Effective date. The provision generally applies to transactions for tax years beginning after December 31, 1983.

ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX

Exemption for Small Corporations

¶ 525

Background

Under prior law, a corporation could be subject to the alternative minimum tax (AMT) no matter the amount of its gross receipts.

AMT repealed for small corporations.—A corporation that meets certain gross receipts tests is considered to be a "small corporation" and, as a result, will not be liable for the alternative minimum tax (AMT) for so long as it remains a small corporation. In addition, the allowable AMT credit has been modified for these small corporations.

Small corporation defined. For these purposes, a corporation initially qualifies as a "small corporation" if it had average gross receipts of $5,000,000 or less for the three tax years that ended with its first tax year beginning after December 31, 1996.

> Example (1). Binnacle Inc. had average gross receipts of $4,750,000 for the three-year period that includes its 1995, 1996 and 1997 tax years. For AMT purposes, Binnacle is considered to be a small corporation for its 1998 tax year.

Once a corporation is recognized as a small corporation, it will continue to be exempt from the AMT for so long as its average gross receipts for the prior three-year period does not exceed $7,500,000. In determining if a corporation meets this requirement, the first year that it achieved small corporation status is not taken into consideration.

Example (2). In 2002, Binnacle, which was classified as a small corporation for its 1998 tax year, determines that its average gross receipts were $7,000,000 for the three-year period that includes its 1999, 2000, and 2001 tax years. Based upon these facts, Binnacle would still be classified as a small corporation and exempt from AMT for 2002.

Planning Note. If the corporation was not in existence for the entire three-year period, Code Sec. 448(c)(3) provides that the $5,000,000 test will be applied on the basis of the period during which the corporation was in existence.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Joel Miller, Esq., Flushing, N.Y., observes that, for a corporation that wishes to qualify for AMT exemption, there is one tax year that is of overwhelming importance. That is the corporation's first tax year beginning after 1996 (which would be the first tax year of a new corporation and the first tax year beginning in 1997 for an existing corporation). If a corporation cannot pass the $5 million average gross receipts test for that tax year (the basic "qualification year") it will never qualify for the exemption. On the other hand, if a corporation passed the $5 million gross receipts test for the basic qualification year, the $7.5 million rule will allow it to have considerable growth without losing qualification. For example, a new corporation with gross receipts of $5 million in 1998, $10 million in 1999, and $7.5 million in 2000 would qualify (even though a corporation with $5,000,001, $4 million, and $3 million would not because its first tax year beginning after 1996 would fail the $5 million test).

Clearly, thought should be given to deferring receipts until after the basic qualification year if that would enable a corporation to pass the $5 million gross receipts test for that year. Consider, for example, a calendar-year corporation formed in January 1999 that expects $6 million of gross receipts every year. If the corporation can defer $1 million from the end of 1999 to the beginning of 2000, it will qualify in every year that its receipts remain at the $6 million level or lower. If the corporation's business is seasonal and $2 million will be received in November and December, an alternative would be for the corporation to adopt an October 31 tax year. Code Sec. 448(c)(3)(B) would require annualization (so that the gross receipts would be deemed to be $4.8 million for the basic qualification year), but that would be good enough. The same techniques might also be used by an existing corporation, perhaps utilizing Reg. § 1.442-1(c) to create a short tax year as to which the corporation would pass the test. Also, looking further down the road, a corporation that has passed the test for the basic qualification year might similarly wish to defer receipts or have a short year in order to avoid the permanent disqualification that would result from exceeding the average-of-$7.5-million limit.

Loss of "small corporation" status. When a corporation loses its small corporation status because its average gross receipts for the prior three tax years exceed $7,500,000, it will then become liable for the AMT. However, its AMT liability will only be based upon certain preferences and adjustments that pertain to transactions and investments that were entered into after the corporation lost its status as a small corporation.

> Example (3). In 2004, Binnacle Inc. determines that its average gross receipts for the three-year period that includes its 2001, 2002, and 2003 tax years, was $8,000,000. As a result, Binnacle must determine if it has an AMT liability for its 2004 tax year. However, it will base its AMT liability only on those transactions and investments that were entered into after the start of its 2004 tax year. It does not have to compute its AMT liability on preferences or adjustments that pertain to transactions and investments that were entered into in prior tax years.

Modifications in AMT determination. A corporation that no longer has the status of a small corporation must determine its AMT liability by making certain modifications for transaction and investments that arose "on or after the change date." The term "change date" is defined as the first day of the first tax year for which the corporation ceased to be a small corporation.The formerly small corporation is subject to the following modifications to the generally applicable AMT rules:

(1) the depreciation and pollution control preferences apply only to property placed in service on or after the change date;

(2) the mining exploration and development cost preference applies only to costs paid or incurred on or after the change date;

(3) the long-term contract preference applies only to contracts entered into on or after the change date;

(4) the AMT net operating loss deduction applies as if, in Code Sec. 56(d)(2), the change date were substituted for "January 1, 1987" each place it appears and the day before the change date were substituted for "December 31, 1986" each place it appears;

(5) the limitation on the allowance of negative adjustments based on prior adjusted current earnings (ACE) when determining the corporate ACE adjustment applies only to prior tax years beginning on or after the change date;

(6) there is no depreciation ACE adjustment; and

(7) the ACE earnings and profits (ACE E&P) adjustment and ACE depletion adjustment of Code Sec. 56(g)(4)(D) and (F) apply as if the day before the change date were substituted for "December 1, 1989".

Planning Note. These modifications to the computation of AMT do not apply to any item acquired in certain corporate acquisitions (e.g., a Code Sec. 381 transaction), or to any "substituted basis property" (the basis of which in the hands of the corporation is determined by reference to the basis of the property in the hands of the transferor) if such item or property was subject to any of the seven AMT adjustment modifications listed above while held by the transferor.

AMT credit for small corporations. As a general rule, taxpayers may be eligible to claim a tax credit based upon their AMT liability for the prior tax year. The computation of the allowable AMT credit is modified for a "small corporation." The small corporation's allowable AMT credit, as computed under Code Sec. 53(c)(1), is limited to the amount by which the corporation's regular tax liability (reduced by other credits) exceeds 25 percent of the excess (if any) of the corporation's regular tax (reduced by other credits) over $25,000.

Example (4). Spinnaker Inc. is a small business corporation for its 1998 tax year, and thus does not have an AMT liability. The corporation's regular tax liability less credits for 1998 was $65,000. Thus, the corporation's allowable AMT credit for 1998 is limited to $55,000.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

AMT Depreciation Adjustment

Background

Taxpayers who compute MACRS depreciation may be required to compute the depreciation a second time when determining if they are liable for the alternative minimum tax (AMT). For AMT purposes, the alternative depreciation system (ADS) of Code Sec. 168(g) is used for Sec. 1250 property and any other property depreciated using the straight-line method. Other property is depreciated using the 150 percent declining balance method and the applicable ADS depreciation period. The difference between the depreciation deduction computed for the regular income tax and the depreciation allowed for AMT purposes is an AMT tax adjustment. Similarly, taxpayers who elect to amortize certified pollution control facilities over 60 months for regular tax purposes are required to recompute their allowable deduction for AMT purposes.

AMT adjustment eliminated for property depreciated under straight-line method and recovery periods conformed for other property.—The AMT adjustment for the MACRS depreciation allowance claimed on Sec. 1250 property and any other property depreciated under MACRS using the straight-line method is eliminated, effective for property placed in service after December 31, 1998. Previously, the AMT adjustment for such property was equal to the difference between the depreciation claimed for regular tax purposes and the depreciation that would have been claimed using the MACRS alternative depreciation system (ADS) of Code Sec. 168(g). Under ADS, the straight-line method is used over recovery periods that are generally longer than the recovery period that would otherwise apply.

The 150-percent declining balance method, switching to the straight-line method for the first year it produces a larger deduction, must still be used to compute allowable AMT depreciation on MACRS property that is not Sec. 1250 property or is not depreciated using the straight-line method for regular tax purposes. However, effective for property placed in service after December 31, 1998, the MACRS recovery period that applies for regular tax purposes also applies for AMT purposes. The new law eliminates the requirement that the 150-percent declining balance method is used over the applicable ADS recovery period for AMT purposes.

Planning Note. The practical effect of the provision is that taxpayers will no longer be required to compute a separate AMT adjustment for MACRS residential rental and nonresidential real property (this property must be depreciated using the straight-line method for regular tax purposes) and any other MACRS property depreciated using the straight-line or 150-percent declining balance method for regular tax purposes. An AMT depreciation adjustment will continue to be computed on MACRS 3-, 5-, 7-, and 10-year property which is depreciated using the 200-percent declining balance method for regular tax purposes. However, the adjustment will equal the difference between the depreciation claimed for regular tax purposes and the depreciation that would have been claimed using the 150-percent declining balance method over the same recovery period that is used for regular tax purposes.

Pollution control facilities. The Act also provides that the AMT depreciation adjustment for pollution control facilities amortized under Code Sec. 269 is computed under MACRS using the straight-line method, effective for property placed in service after December 31, 1998. Previously, the AMT adjustment for this property was computed using the MACRS ADS method.

Effective date. This provision applies to property placed in service after December 31, 1998. The former AMT adjustment rules continue to apply to property placed in service before 1999.

Property and Casualty Insurance Companies

Background

Corporate taxpayers are subject to an alternative minimum tax preference that is based on the amount of their adjusted current earnings (ACE) for purposes of computing an alternative minimum tax liability. Under prior law, the ACE preference was not computed in different manner for property and casualty insurance companies that elected to be taxed only on taxable investment income for regular tax purposes.

ACE modified for certain insurance companies.—The new law provides that a property and casualty insurance company that elects to be taxed only on taxable investment income for regular tax purposes determines its adjusted current earnings (ACE) under the alternative minimum tax without regard to any amount not taken into account in computing its gross investment income. Thus, the ACE of such an electing company would be determined without regard to underwriting income or underwriting expense.

Effective date. The ACE modification applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

year if 30 percent or more of its gross income was derived from the sale or disposition of stock, securities, foreign currencies, or options, futures, and similar positions thereon that were held for less than three months.

Thirty-percent gross income test repealed.—The 30-percent gross income test or "short-short" rule, under which a regulated investment company (RIC) had to derive less than 30 percent of its gross income from the sale or disposition of certain short-term assets held for less than three months has been repealed. These assets included (1) stock or securities; (2) options, futures, or forward contracts (other than on foreign currencies); and (3) foreign currencies or options, futures, or forward contracts on foreign currencies if such items are not directly related to the company's principal business of investing in stock, securities or options or futures on stock or securities. The repeal of the short-short rule should provide RICs with greater ability to hedge their investments and free them from significant record-keeping, compliance, and administrative costs.

REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUSTS

Determination of Ownership of Shares or Interests

¶ 539

Background

Under the organizational requirements for qualification as a real estate investment trust (REIT), the beneficial ownership of a REIT must be held by at least 100 persons and the REIT may not be closely held, as evaluated under the personal holding company rules. These requirements must be satisfied for each tax year except the first tax year for which the entity elects to be treated as a REIT. Under prior law, if a REIT failed to ascertain the actual ownership of its outstanding shares or certificates of beneficial interest by requesting information from shareholders and to maintain the necessary records of ownership, as required under Reg. § 1.857-8, it was disqualified as a REIT.

Penalties for failure to determine ownership.—A real estate investment trust (REIT) that fails to ascertain the actual ownership of its outstanding shares or certificates of beneficial interest and to maintain the necessary records of ownership, as required under Reg. § 1.857-8, is subject only to monetary penalties, not disqualification as a REIT. Determining the REIT's ownership is necessary to establish that the beneficial ownership of the REIT is held by at least 100 persons and that it is not closely held, as evaluated under the personal holding company rules, for each year except the first tax year for which a REIT election is made.

If a REIT fails to comply with the regulatory rules on determining its ownership for a tax year, it must pay a $25,000 penalty upon receiving notice and demand from the IRS. If the REIT's failure to comply was due to intentional disregard of the requirements, the penalty is increased to $50,000. However, if the REIT's failure to comply was due to reasonable cause and not willful neglect, no penalty will be imposed.

The IRS may require a REIT that fails to comply with the regulatory rules to take curative actions to ascertain the actual ownership of its outstanding shares or certificates of beneficial interest. Such actions may take the form of curative demand letters to shareholders for information. A REIT that fails to take such requested actions must pay an additional penalty upon receiving notice and demand from the IRS. The additional penalty is equal to $25,000 or $50,000, depending on the amount of the initial penalty.

Closely held requirement. If a REIT complies with the regulatory rules on ascertaining its actual owners but does not know, or would not have known by exercising reasonable diligence, whether it failed to meet the requirement that it not be closely held, the REIT will be treated as having met the requirement.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Keith Nakamoto, tax partner at the Chicago office of Coopers & Lybrand, L.L.P., notes that the new real estate investment trust (REIT) provisions recognize the unduly harsh penalties for failure to meet the REIT qualification rules—generally, loss of REIT status. In prior years, the failure to send demand letters to the shareholders (or to send demand letters that did not strictly comply with all of the provisions of the regulations) would disqualify the REIT. The new provisions recognize that the demand letters are an administrative requirement which is intended to determine if the REIT meets the minimum shareholder and closely-held ownership tests. If the REIT meets these tests but fails to send demand letters in accordance with the regulations, it now faces a penalty as opposed to disqualification. Similarly, the closely-held test is now based upon a reasonable effort to comply and a reasonable basis to know. Therefore, a shareholder can no longer create a disqualification event, if the REIT had no reasonable basis to know of the violation.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Tenant Services Income

¶ 541

Background

Under the income tests that an entity must satisfy on an annual basis to qualify as a real estate investment trust (REIT), at least 95 percent of the entity's gross income, other than gross income from prohibited transactions, must be derived from passive sources and at least 75 percent derived from real estate sources. For both tests, a permissible source of income is rent from real property.

Under prior law, rent did not include any amounts received with respect to real or personal property if the REIT furnished or rendered services to tenants or managed or operated property unless it did so through an independent contractor. Charges for services customarily furnished or rendered in connection with the rental of real property are treated as rent from real property.

De minimis* rule for tenant services income.—For purposes of the 95- and 75-percent gross income tests for qualification as a real estate investment trust (REIT), impermissible tenant services income is not treated as allowable rent from real property. Impermissible tenant services income with respect to real or personal property is any amount that the REIT directly or indirectly receives or accrues for (1) services that it provides to the property's tenants or (2) managing or operating the property. Charges for services customarily furnished or rendered in connection with the rental of real property, such as water, heat, light, general maintenance, trash collection, etc., still qualify as rent from real property.

In contrast to prior law, the Act now allows a REIT to receive a small amount of income from furnishing impermissible tenant services without causing all of the amounts received with respect to a property to fail to qualify as rent. The new de minimis rule establishes a one-percent threshold for impermissible tenant services income. Only if the REIT's impermissible tenant services income from a property exceeds one percent of all amounts received or accrued with respect to the property will all of the amounts fail to qualify as rent.

Amount of impermissible tenant services income. In establishing the amount of impermissible tenant services income, such amount must be at least 150 percent of the direct cost of providing the tenant services or managing or operating the property.

Exceptions to impermissible tenant services income. A REIT is not treated as providing services to tenants or as managing or operating the property, and has not generated impermissible tenant services income, if an independent contractor conducts the activities and the REIT does not derive any income from the independent contractor. The REIT could provide the services itself if the income generated would not constitute unrelated business taxable income under Code Sec. 512(b)(3) to a charitable organization, qualified retirement plan trust, or other organization described in Code Sec. 511(a)(2).

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Keith Nakamoto, tax partner at the Chicago office of Coopers & Lybrand, L.L.P., notes that many of the new provisions related to real estate investment trusts (REITs) recognize the unduly restrictive nature of the prior law on their ability to conduct business. In the past, REITs were required to retain independent contractors to perform certain nominal services for tenants, because any impermissible service tainted the entire revenue stream from that tenant. This taint disqualified the revenue as rents from real estate, which in turn jeopardized its ability to meet the various income tests.

For example, a REIT could employ maintenance personnel to clean common areas of an office building, but could not respond to a tenant's special request to clean up emergency spills on the tenant's leased space. Although this request is a normal customer need, the response to this need was potentially an impermissible service. In this situation, the REIT was forced to incur the cost of retaining an independent contractor on a permanent basis to perform such services, to lose customer goodwill by not responding to such requests, or to jeopardize its REIT status. The ability for REITs to provide these impermissible services on a limited basis removes a serious competitive disadvantage as compared to taxpayers who operate real estate in a non-REIT format. The provisions which relate to the retention of capital gains, the relaxation of the attribution rules for related tenant purposes, the expansion of the qualified hedging exception and the elimination of the 30% income test are other recognitions of the unduly restrictive nature of the prior law.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Van Davis, of Dechert Price & Rhoads, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, observes that the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 makes a number of small but significant changes to the rules governing real estate investment trusts (REITs). These changes relax some of the draconian sanctions for minor violations of the REIT rules and, more importantly, give REIT managers greater flexibility to manage a REIT's portfolio of properties or mortgages more actively and therefore to make REITs a more widely attractive investment vehicle.

As the mutual fund equivalent for real estate ownership, REITs are generally tax-exempt, and their income taxable directly to their shareholders. The price of this treatment has been that REITs must not engage in certain active management activities and must distribute virtually all of their income annually to shareholders.

REITs will have increased management flexibility because they will now be permitted to retain capital gain profits and pay tax on them, instead of distributing the profits to shareholders. As in the case of mutual funds, shareholders will be taxed on undistributed capital gains, but will get a credit for tax paid by the REIT (see ¶ 545).

REITs will no longer be limited in the amount of income derived from sales of property held less than four years or securities held less than one year. Such income was formerly limited to 30 percent of the REIT's total income, and the change here makes active portfolio management easier (see ¶ 547). REITs are allowed to provide de minimis amounts of special services to tenants without disqualifying the related rental income. All forms of interest rate hedging will be permitted (see ¶ 553). The classes of noncash income which are not required to be distributed are expanded (see ¶ 555). The period during which a REIT may hold property following a foreclosure has been extended to at least three years (see ¶ 551). Additional technical changes make it easier for REITs to acquire subsidiaries (see ¶ 561) and to receive qualified rents from tenants who are also partners of the REIT (see ¶ 543).

These changes will spur the growth of aggressively self-managed REITs, which have already multiplied severalfold since 1992. REITs may well become the dominant equity vehicle for real estate ownership in the coming years. The modest revival of the mortgage REIT which has occurred in recent months may be spurred by the increased opportunity to manage and hedge a loan portfolio.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Attribution Rule for Purposes of Defining Rent

Background

Under the income tests that an entity must satisfy on an annual basis to qualify as a real estate investment trust (REIT), at least 95 percent of the entity's gross income, other than gross income from prohibited transactions, must be derived from passive sources and at least 75 percent derived from real estate sources. For both tests, a permissible source of income is rent from real property.

Rent from real property does not include amounts received from entities in which the REIT owns a 10-percent or greater interest. Rent from real property also does not include amounts received with respect to real or personal property if the REIT provides services to the property's tenants or manages or operates the property. An exception to this rule is made for services provided through an independent contractor if the REIT does not receive any income from the independent contractor.

An independent contractor is any person who does not own more than 35 percent of the shares or certificates of beneficial interest in the REIT, either directly or indirectly. As a further limitation, a corporation cannot qualify as an independent contractor if more than 35 percent of the total combined voting power of its stock is owned directly or indirectly by one or more persons who own 35 percent or more of the REIT. A noncorporate person cannot qualify as an independent contractor if more than 35 percent of the interests in its assets or net profits is owned directly or indirectly by one or more persons who own 35 percent or more of the REIT.

For purposes of determining the REIT's percentage ownership of a corporation's stock or a noncorporate entity's assets and net profits, the Code Sec. 318 constructive ownership rules apply. In the case of attribution between shareholders and corporations, a 10-percent threshold is substituted for the 50-percent threshold in Code Sec. 318(a)(2)(C) and (3)(C). A minimum threshold for attribution did not apply to partnerships under prior law, so that any stock owned by a partnership was treated as owned by the partners and any stock owned by a partner was treated as owned by the partnership.

Twenty-five percent attribution rule for partners.—When computing a real estate investment trust's (REIT's) percentage ownership of a tenant or an independent contractor for purposes of determining whether certain payments qualify as rent, a special 25-percent attribution rule will apply to partners owning stock. The current 10-percent threshold for attribution between shareholders and corporations in this situation, which is substituted for the 50-percent threshold in Code Sec. 318(a)(2)(C) and (3)(C), continues to apply.

Amounts received from entities in which a REIT owns a 10-percent or greater interest are not treated as permissible rent from real property for purposes of the 95- and 75-percent gross income tests for qualification as a REIT. Further, rent does not include amounts received with respect to real or personal property if the REIT provides services to the property's tenants or manages or operates the property, unless the services are provided through an independent contractor. An independent contractor is generally any person (1) who does not own more than a 35-percent interest in the REIT, either directly or indirectly, and (2) in the case of noncorporate persons, not more than 35 percent of the interests in the assets or net profits of which is owned, directly or indirectly, by one or more persons who own 35 percent or more of the REIT.

In determining whether a REIT owns a 10-percent or greater interest in a tenant that could disqualify amounts received as rent, the Code Sec. 318 constructive ownership rules apply. However, under the new rule, in the case of attribution to a partnership under Code Sec. 318(a)(3)(A), only stock owned by partners who, directly or indirectly, own 25 percent or more of the capital or profits interest in the partnership is treated as owned by the partnership. Under prior law, even partners with minute interests in the partnership had all of the stock they owned attributed to the partnership.

> Example (1). A partnership owns 12% of the shares of a REIT. A 30% interest in the partnership is owned by a partner who also owns a 15% interest in the REIT's corporate tenant. The partner's 15% ownership interest in the tenant is attributed to the partnership. Since the partnership owns 10% or more of the REIT, the partner's 15% interest in the tenant that is attributed to the partnership is attributed to the REIT. Thus, the REIT has a disqualifying interest in the tenant and amounts paid by the tenant to the REIT cannot be treated as rent.

This 25-percent rule for attribution to partnerships is also extended to the definition of an independent contractor. Thus, under the attribution rule, a contractor providing tenant services will not be denied independent contractor status if REIT shares are owned by a partnership and a partner owns a 35-percent or greater interest in the contractor but less than a 25-percent interest in the partnership.

> Example (2). A partnership owns 50% of a REIT's shares. A 30% interest in the partnership is owned by a partner who also owns a 45% interest in a contractor who performs services for the REIT's tenant. The partner's 45% interest in the contractor is attributed to the partnership. Thus, since more than 35% of the contractor is owned indirectly by the partnership which owns more than 35% of the REIT, the contractor is not independent and amounts paid by the tenant to the REIT cannot be treated as rent.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1253, amending Code Sec. 856(d)(5); Act Sec. 1263. Law at ¶ 5267. Committee Report at ¶ 12,445.

Retained Capital Gains

Background

Although real estate investment trusts (REITs) are subject to a tax on net capital gain, a REIT can pay capital gain dividends to its shareholders in order to reduce its capital gains tax liability. Shareholders or holders of beneficial interests in the REIT treat capital gain dividends as long-term capital gains and are taxed accordingly. Under prior law, if a REIT retained its capital gains for the year instead of paying capital gain dividends, the retained capital gains were taxed twice: first, at the REIT level, and second, at the shareholder level when later distributed.

In contrast, regulated investment companies (RICs) can retain and pay tax on their long-term capital gains while their shareholders include their share of the retained capital gain in income and are deemed to have paid an appropriate share of the tax. There was no corresponding rule for REITs under prior law.

Credit for tax paid on retained capital gains.—The rules for taxing a real estate investment trust's (REIT's) retained capital gains are modified to correspond to the rules for regulated investment companies (RICs). Thus, a REIT may elect to retain, rather than distribute, its net long-term capital gains and pay the tax on such gains, while its shareholders include their proportionate share of the undistributed long-term capital gains in income and receive a credit for their share of the tax paid by the REIT.

Planning Note. Even though a REIT is taxed on retained capital gains, it may wish to retain them, rather than distribute them to shareholders, in order to preserve a source of funds for working capital.

Specifically, the REIT may designate amounts as undistributed capital gains in respect of its shareholders' shares or its holders' beneficial interests. The designation must be made in a written notice to shareholders or holders of beneficial interests and mailed at any time prior to the expiration of 60 days after the close of the REIT's tax year or mailed with its annual report for the tax year. The REIT must then pay tax on the net capital gain under Code Sec. 857(b)(3)(A)(ii) within 30 days after the close of its tax year.

At the end of the REIT's tax year, the amount designated by the REIT must be treated by the shareholders or holders of beneficial interests as long-term capital gains for their tax year in which the last day of the REIT's tax year falls. However, the includible amount cannot exceed the portion of the amount on which the REIT was required to pay capital gains tax under Code Sec. 857(b)(3)(A)(ii) and that the shareholders or holders would have received if the amount had been distributed as capital gain dividends. The shareholders or holders of beneficial interests are treated as having paid the capital gains tax imposed on the REIT on the designated amounts included in their long-term capital gains and are allowed a credit or refund for the tax deemed paid.

Basis adjustment. The shareholders or holders of beneficial interests can increase the adjusted basis of their shares or beneficial interests by the difference between the designated amounts included in their long-term capital gains and the tax deemed paid with respect to their shares or beneficial interests.

Earnings and profits adjustment. The REIT's earnings and profits and the earnings and profits of a REIT shareholder that is a corporation should be adjusted for the undistributed capital gains according to regulations to be prescribed by the IRS.

Conforming basis adjustment rule for RIC shareholders. The rules on undistributed capital gains of regulated investment companies (RICs) have been amended to provide a basis adjustment rule that conforms to the rule for REITs. Thus, RIC shareholders who have been designated an amount as capital gains with respect to their shares and are deemed to have paid the capital gains tax imposed on the RIC can increase the adjusted basis of their shares by the difference between the amount of the includible gains and the tax deemed paid.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Thirty-Percent Gross Income Test

Background

An entity cannot qualify as a real estate investment trust (REIT) unless its income is derived primarily from passive sources and real estate sources. In addition, under prior law, a REIT had to derive less than 30 percent of its gross income from the sale or disposition of (1) stock or securities held for less than one year, (2) certain real property held for less than four years, and (3) property in a prohibited transaction. Any gains from the sale, exchange, or distribution of any property after the adoption of a complete plan of liquidation of the REIT were not taken into account for the 30-percent gross income test.

Thirty-percent gross income test repealed.—The 30-percent gross income test for qualification as a real estate investment trust (REIT) has been repealed. Thus, a REIT no longer has to meet the requirement that it derive less than 30 percent of its gross income from the sale or disposition of (1) stock or securities held for less than one year, (2) real property held for less than four years, including real property interests and interests in mortgages on real property but not foreclosure property, and (3) property in a prohibited transaction.

According to the House Committee Report, the 30-percent gross income test is unnecessary because the 75-percent asset test provides sufficient safeguards to ensure that the REIT acts as a pass-through entity for real estate investors. The 75-percent asset test generally requires that at least 75 percent of the value of the REIT's total assets be comprised of real estate assets, cash and cash items, and government securities and that no more than 25 percent of the value of the REIT's total assets be comprised of securities of any other single issuer.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Law at ¶ 5267 and 5269. Committee Report at ¶ 12,455.

Earnings and Profits Rules

¶ 549

Background

The rules for taxing real estate investment trusts (REITs) and their beneficiaries do not apply for a particular tax year unless the entity qualified as a REIT for all tax years beginning after February 28, 1986, or, as of the close of the tax year, the REIT had no earnings and profits accumulated in any year in which it was not treated as a REIT (i.e., a non-REIT year). Thus, during its first REIT year, an entity must distribute any earnings and profits that were accumulated in non-REIT years and, under prior law, such distributions were treated as made from the most recently accumulated earnings and profits.

Ordering rule for earnings and profits distributions.—If a real estate investment trust (REIT) must make a distribution to comply with the requirement that, at the close of the tax year, it have no earnings and profits that were accumulated in any year in which it was not treated as a REIT (i.e., a non-REIT year), the distribution is treated as made from its earliest accumulated earnings and profits. This replaces the prior ordering rule which treated such a distribution as made from the most recently accumulated earnings and profits.

Caution. A distribution of earnings and profits that is necessary to purge the REIT of earnings and profits from a non-REIT year is not treated as a deductible dividends distribution.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Foreclosure Property

Background

Income from foreclosure property receives special treatment under the rules for real estate investment trusts (REITs). A REIT's net income from foreclosure property is taxed at the highest corporate tax rate set forth in Code Sec. 11(b). In addition, under the income tests that an entity must satisfy on an annual basis to qualify as a REIT, at least 95 percent of the entity's gross income, other than gross income from prohibited transactions, must be derived from passive sources and at least 75 percent derived from real estate sources. For both tests, a permissible source of income is income and gain derived from foreclosure property.

Background

Foreclosure property is defined as real property and any personal property incident to such real property that is acquired by the REIT as a result of any of the following: (1) a bid at foreclosure, or (2) an agreement or process of law upon a default or imminent default on a lease of the property or a debt that the property secured. Under prior law, such property ceased to be foreclosure property on the date that was two years after the date that the REIT acquired the property. If the REIT needed more time to liquidate its interests in the foreclosure property, it was able to request extensions of the two-year grace period up to the date that was six years after the date that the REIT acquired the property.

The grace period terminates and property ceases to be foreclosure property if it is used for certain active purposes, such as where the REIT uses the property in a trade or business, other than through an independent contractor, more than 90 days after the property was acquired. A REIT has to elect to treat property as foreclosure property and, under prior law, such an election was irrevocable.

Grace period for foreclosure property treatment extended.—The grace period has been extended for treating real property and any personal property incident to such real property as foreclosure property where it was acquired by a real estate investment trust (REIT) as a result of a bid at foreclosure or upon a default or imminent default on a lease of the property or a debt that the property secured.

Thus, when determining the tax on a REIT's net income from foreclosure property and the amount of income and gain derived from foreclosure property for purposes of the 95- and 75-percent gross income tests for qualification as a REIT, property will not cease to be foreclosure property until the close of the third tax year following the tax year in which the REIT acquired the property. A REIT is limited to one extension of the grace period, which cannot extend the period beyond the close of the third tax year following the last tax year of the initial grace period.

Revocation of election. Although a REIT must make an election to treat property as foreclosure property, this election is now revocable. To revoke an election for a tax year, the REIT must file a revocation on or before the due date, including extensions, for filing its tax return for the tax year.

Caution. Once an election to treat property as foreclosure property has been revoked, it may not be made again for that property.

Disqualifying activities. In general, the grace period for treating property as foreclosure property terminates if the REIT uses the property in a trade or business, other than through an independent contractor, more than 90 days after the property was acquired. Under the Act, property is not used in a trade or business by a REIT to the extent that the REIT's activities would not cause amounts directly or indirectly received or accrued with respect to the property to be treated as anything other than rents from real property.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Payments Under Hedging Agreements

Background

Under the income tests that must be satisfied by an entity on an annual basis to qualify as a real estate investment trust (REIT), at least 95 percent of the entity's gross income, other than gross income from prohibited transactions, must be derived from passive sources and at least 75 percent derived from real estate sources. Further, under prior law, a REIT had to derive less than 30 percent of its gross income from the sale or disposition of (1) stock or securities held for less than one year, (2) certain real property held for less than four years, and (3) property in a prohibited transaction.

Under prior law, qualifying income for the 95-percent gross income test and a security for the former 30-percent gross income test included a payment to a REIT under a bona fide interest rate swap or cap agreement entered into by the REIT to hedge any variable rate debt that was incurred to acquire or carry real estate assets. Also, any gain from the sale or disposition of such an agreement was treated as qualifying income and as a security for the two tests.

Payments from hedging treated as qualifying income.—In order to provide real estate investment trusts (REITs) with flexibility in managing risk for their shareholders, the types of payments under interest rate and hedging agreements that will be treated as permissible income for purposes of the 95-percent gross income test for qualification as a REIT have been expanded. Now, except as otherwise provided by regulations, qualifying income for purposes of the 95-percent test includes any payment to a REIT under an interest rate swap or cap agreement, option, futures contract, forward rate agreement, or any similar financial instrument, entered into by the REIT to reduce its interest rate risk with respect to debt that was or will be incurred to acquire or carry real estate assets. Gain from the sale or other disposition of such hedges is also treated as qualifying passive income.

Planning Note. A REIT can take advantage of any type of hedge that reduces the risk associated with fluctuating interest rates and be assured that payments under the hedging agreement will be treated as qualifying passive income.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Excess Noncash Income

Background

The rules for taxing real estate investment trusts (REITs) and their beneficiaries do not apply to a REIT for a tax year unless it satisfies certain distribution requirements by paying out nearly all of its taxable income in the form of dividends to its shareholders. The distributed amount must equal or exceed (1) the sum of 95 percent of the REIT's taxable income for the year (determined without regard to the dividends paid deduction and excluding any net capital gain) and 95 percent of the excess of the net income from foreclosure property over the tax imposed on such income, less (2) any excess noncash income.

Under prior law, excess noncash income of cash-basis REITs included the excess of the amount includible in gross income from debt instruments issued for property under Code Sec. 1274 over the amount of money and the fair market value of property received under such instruments.

Definition of excess noncash income expanded.—The types of items treated as excess noncash income that are not subject to the distribution requirements for real estate investment trusts (REITs) have been expanded. Accrual-basis REITs, as well as cash-basis REITs, can treat as excess noncash income the difference between the amounts includible in gross income from instruments to which Code Sec. 860E(a) or 1272 applies, and the amount of money and the fair market value of other property received during the tax year under such instruments. In general, Code Sec. 860E(a) covers excess inclusions attributable to residual interests in a real estate mortgage investment conduit (REMIC), and Code Sec. 1272 covers debt instruments with original issue discount (OID). Furthermore, excess noncash income now includes cancellation of debt income.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Prohibited Transaction Safe Harbor

Background

A real estate investment trust (REIT) is subject to a tax equal to 100 percent of the net income derived from prohibited transactions. A prohibited transaction is a sale or disposition of property held for sale in the ordinary course of a trade or business other than foreclosure property.

Under a safe harbor rule, certain sales of real estate assets held by a REIT for at least four years are not treated as prohibited transactions, subject to a number of limitations. During the tax year, a REIT cannot make more than seven sales of such property or the aggregate adjusted bases of property sold cannot exceed 10 percent of the aggregate bases of all of the REIT's assets at the beginning of the tax year. Under prior law, only foreclosure property was ignored for purposes of the seven sales or the 10-percent aggregate bases limitation.

Involuntary conversions ignored for prohibited sales rules.—In addition to foreclosure property, involuntarily converted property is ignored for purposes of the prohibited transactions rules that subject a real estate investment trust's (REIT's) net income from prohibited transactions to a 100-percent tax. A safe harbor rule excludes certain sales of real estate assets held by a REIT for at least four years from the prohibited transactions rules. However, a REIT generally cannot, during the tax year, make more than seven sales of property or the aggregate adjusted bases of property sold cannot exceed 10 percent of the aggregate bases of all of the REIT's assets at the beginning of the tax year. Under the Act, sales of property covered by the Code Sec. 1033 involuntary conversion rules, as well as sales of foreclosure property, do not count against the seven sales or the 10-percent aggregate bases limits.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Shared Appreciation Mortgages

Background

Under prior law, a shared appreciation provision was defined as a provision connected with an obligation secured by real property that entitled a real estate investment trust (REIT) to a portion of any gain realized on the sale or exchange of the property or any gain that would be realized if the property were sold on a specified date. For purposes of the 95- and 75-percent gross income tests that an entity must satisfy to qualify as a REIT and for purposes of determining a REIT's income from prohibited transactions, any income derived from a shared appreciation provision is treated as gain recognized on the sale of the secured property.

Under a safe harbor rule, certain sales of real estate assets held by a REIT for at least four years are not treated as prohibited transactions, subject to a number of limitations. In applying the safe harbor, a REIT is treated as having sold a secured property when it recognizes any income from a shared appreciation provision. Under prior law, dispositions in bankruptcy proceedings did not receive special treatment for purposes of the safe harbor.

Shared appreciation clarified, bankruptcy safe harbor added.—The definition of a shared appreciation provision has been clarified for purposes of the 95- and 75-percent gross income tests for qualification as a real estate investment trust (REIT) and for purposes of determining a REIT's income from prohibited transactions. A shared appreciation provision is a provision connected with an obligation secured by real property that entitles a REIT to (1) a portion of any gain realized on the sale or exchange of the property, (2) any gain that would be realized if the property were sold on a specified date, or (3) under the Act, appreciation in value as of a specified date. Any income derived from a shared appreciation provision is treated as gain recognized on the sale of the secured property.

Bankruptcy safe harbor rule. Under one of the conditions for excluding certain sales of real estate assets from tax under the prohibited transactions rules, the property must be held for at least four years. If a REIT is treated as having sold secured property because it recognized income from a shared appreciation provision, the property is treated as held for at least four years in certain bankruptcy situations. That is, the four-year holding period requirement will be satisfied if (1) the secured property is sold or disposed of in a bankruptcy case under title 11 of the U.S. Code, (2) the seller is under the court's jurisdiction in the case, and (3) the disposition is required by the court or is pursuant to a plan approved by the court.

Caution. This safe harbor rule for bankruptcy situations will not apply if the REIT acquired the secured property with the intent to evict or foreclose or if the REIT knew or had reason to know that a default on the obligation secured by the property would occur.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Wholly Owned Subsidiaries

Background

Under prior law, a qualified real estate investment trust (REIT) subsidiary was defined as a corporation if all of its stock was held by the REIT at all times during the period such corporation was in existence.

Definition of qualified REIT subsidiary modified.—A qualified real estate investment trust (REIT) subsidiary is not treated as a separate corporation from the REIT. Thus, all of its assets, liabilities, and income, deduction, and credit items are treated as the REITs. The definition of a qualified REIT subsidiary has been modified to include a corporation if all of its stock is held by the REIT. The stock no longer has to be held at all times during the period such corporation was in existence.

Caution. If an existing corporation is acquired by a REIT and is a qualified REIT subsidiary, all of its pre-REIT earnings and profits (E&P) must be distributed before the end of the REIT's tax year under the E&P distribution rules.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

OTHER

Tax Benefits for Amtrak

¶ 565

Background

A corporation can generally carry back a net operating loss (NOL) to the three years immediately preceding a loss year. Limitations apply to carryforwards of NOLs of predecessors. No special provision existed under prior law concerning the carryback of NOLs by Amtrak.

Election to carry back existing Amtrak NOL carryovers.—In an measure designed to fund a portion of the operating expenses of the National Railroad Passenger Corporation (Amtrak), the Act allows Amtrak to elect to treat up to $2.323 billion as a payment of tax split evenly between its first tax year ending after September 30, 1997, and its following tax year. Specifically, the amount treated as tax paid for each of these tax years is 50 percent of the lesser of:

(1) 35 percent of Amtrak's aggregate net operating loss carryforwards to its first tax year ending after September 30, 1997;

(2) the aggregate net tax liability (i.e., tax imposed less credits) for pre-1971 tax years of Amtrak's predecessor railroads, which were relieved of their responsibility to provide intercity passenger rail service by the Rail Passenger Service Act of 1970; or

(3) $2.323 billion.

If Amtrak elects application of the Act's provision, it must use the refund of any amounts that are considered as tax paid (plus interest) to finance the acquisition or maintenance of its equipment or operating facilities or to make payments to States that are not serviced by Amtrak, which are in turn required to use the payments for similar purposes or to purchase intercity passenger service from Amtrak.

Tax consequences of Amtrak's election. The effect of the provision is to allow Amtrak to use its current NOL carryovers against pre-1971 tax imposed against its predecessor companies and to permit Amtrak to file for a refund of its tax deemed paid in its current and next following tax years. The election will result in a reduction in Amtrak's NOL carryovers in an amount equal to the deemed tax paid, divided by 0.35. Also, appropriate adjustments will be made by the Treasury to the tax accounts of the predecessor railroads in order to reduce their net tax liabilities which are offset by the carryback of Amtrak's NOLs. Only Amtrak is permitted to a refund or credit by reason of this provision.

Also, Amtrak expenditures of refunded amounts are not deductible and are not taken into account in determining the tax basis of any Amtrak properties. Payments to non-Amtrak States are likewise nondeductible.

Tax benefits contingent on Amtrak reform legislation. No refund of the deemed tax payments is permitted unless federal legislation is enacted after July 29, 1997, which authorizes Amtrak reforms. No interest will accrue on such refunds before the 45th day following the date Amtrak reform legislation is enacted.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Reserves of Thrift Institutions

Background

The Small Business Job Protection Act (Act) (P.L. 104-188) repealed the reserve method of accounting for bad debts of thrift institutions under Code Sec. 593 (percentage-of-taxable income method). Pre-1988 reserves are subject to the provisions of Code Sec. 593(e), which require recapture in the case of certain excess distributions to, and redemptions of, shareholders. The Act also provided that a financial institution described in Code Sec. 581 can elect to be treated as an S corporation, as long as it does not use the reserve method of accounting for bad debts. Under Code Sec. 1374, a corporate-level tax is imposed on the net unrealized built-in gains of a C corporation that converts to an S corporation during the 10-year period beginning on the date of conversion. Before the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the rules under Code Sec. 593(e) did not provide for distributions to shareholders by financial institutions that elect S corporation status.

Pre-1988 reserve rules for S corporations clarified.—The Code Sec. 593(e) rules for the treatment of pre-1988 bad debt reserves as applied to Code Sec. 581 thrift and former thrift financial institutions that elect S corporation status are clarified. The accumulated adjustment account defined under Code Sec. 1368 of the S corporation is treated in the same manner as the post-1951 earnings and profits of other financial institutions when determining whether the pre-1988 reserve is restored to income. Further, the rules of Code Sec. 1374 will apply to distributions that trigger Code Sec. 593(e), even if the distribution occurs after the Code Sec. 1374 10-year period.

Effective date. The amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Background

A financial asset securitization investment trust (FASIT) is a statutory entity designed to securitize debt obligations such as credit card receivables, home equity loans and auto loans. A FASIT is a pass-through entity that holds specified securities and issues interests in asset-backed securities to investors. The regular interest in a FASIT issued to investors is treated as debt for federal income tax purposes. Special rules are provided under Code Sec. 860L, including rules for the qualification of a FASIT, interests in a FASIT and prohibited transactions. A 100-percent excise tax applies to net income derived from prohibited transactions.

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, to qualify as a regular interest in a FASIT, the instrument had to meet certain requirements after the startup date of the FASIT (the first tax year of the FASIT). Also, exceptions to the prohibited transaction rules applied to income from seven types of permitted dispositions.

FASIT corrections.—To qualify as a regular interest in a financial asset securitization investment trust (FASIT), which is treated as debt for federal income tax purposes, the instrument must meet certain requirements under Code Sec. 860L on or after the startup date of the FASIT (the first tax year of the FASIT). The Act corrects a cross-reference to Code Sec. 860I contained in the rule for the treatment of property held on the startup date. As corrected, property held, or treated as held under the deferral of gain recognition rule in Code Sec. 860I(b)(2), by the entity as of the startup date is considered contributed on that day by the holder of the ownership interest.

Exceptions from the tax on prohibited transactions. The 100-percent excise tax on net income from prohibited transactions does not apply to the net income from the disposition of a permitted asset that is foreclosure property. The exception from the excise tax for net income from a permitted disposition is clarified with respect to the similar exceptions that apply to a real estate mortgage investment conduit (REMIC) under Code Sec. 860F(a)(2)(A) and Code Sec. 860F(a)(5). The exceptions apply as if the FASIT was treated as a REMIC and permitted assets (other than cash and cash equivalents) were treated as qualified mortgages.

The exception from the excise tax for net income from a permitted disposition is expanded to include income from the disposition of former hedge assets. The exception applies to income derived from the disposition of property that is no longer hedge property under Code Sec. 860L(c)(1)(D) on the date of disposition. The exception also applies to income derived from the disposition of a contract right to acquire a former hedge asset.

Effective date. The provision generally is effective on September 1, 1997.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield Organizations

Background

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 provided special rules (Code Sec. 833) to compute the taxable income of Blue Cross and Blue Shield Organizations. One benefit allows these companies a deduction (not to exceed taxable income) equal to one quarter of the year's annual claims and administrative expenses incurred less the prior year's surplus for regular tax. Until the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the treatment of expenses incurred under cost-plus contracts was not clarified.

Treatment of cost-plus contracts.—The Act clarifies that, for purposes of the Code Sec. 833 deduction, liabilities incurred during the tax year under cost-plus contracts are added to claims incurred. Similarly, for purposes of the Code Sec. 833 deduction, expenses incurred in connection with cost-plus contracts are added to expenses incurred.

Effective date. The provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1986.

Chapter 6

Tax-Exempt Organizations

TAX-EXEMPT STATUS

State Worker's Compensation Act Companies

¶ 601

Background

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the IRS took the position that organizations were not engaged in a tax-exempt activity if they provided insurance to their members or other individuals. Such activity was considered by the IRS as either a for-profit business, or an economy or convenience for the business of a member who did not have to then individually obtain insurance. Tax exemption under Code Sec. 501(c)(6) was available to insurance risk pools that assigned any insurance policies and administrative functions to their members, served an important common interest of their members, and were membership organizations financed in part by membership dues. State insurance risk pools could also qualify for tax-exempt status under Code Sec. 501(c)(4) as social welfare organizations, but they were constrained by the restrictions on the provision of "commercial-type insurance" contained in Code Sec. 501(m). State insurance risk pools also qualified for tax-exempt status under Code Sec. 115 as serving an essential governmental function of State.

Tax-exempt status of state worker's compensation act companies.—Code Sec. 501(c)(27) has been clarified with respect to the tax-exempt status of certain state worker's compensation act companies. An organization is exempt from taxation if it is created by state law and is organized and operated to exclusively provide worker's compensation insurance and related coverage incidental to the insurance. According to the House Committee Report, related coverage includes liability under federal worker's compensation laws. The worker's compensation insurance must be required by state law or state law must provide significant disincentives if an employer does not purchase the insurance. Significant disincentives according to the House Committee Report include loss of exclusive remedy or forfeiture of affirmative defenses. Also, the organization must provide the insurance to any employer in the state that is seeking such insurance and meets other reasonable requirements.

Further, a financial commitment must be made by the state through the extension of its full faith and credit to the organization's initial debt or the provision of initial operating capital to the organization. For periods following enactment, the organization's assets must revert to the state upon dissolution or state law will not permit the dissolution of the organization. Finally, the majority of the organization's board of directors or oversight body must be appointed by the state's chief executive officer (or other executive branch official), by the state legislature, or by both.

Effective date. These provisions apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

State-Sponsored Organizations Providing Health Care Coverage

¶ 603

Background

Under current law, a state may establish organizations whose purpose is to provide medical insurance coverage for care to those residents of the state who would otherwise be uninsurable, or who would be forced, due to their particular condition, to pay unreasonably high rates. These "high risk" individuals must still pay for their coverage, but they often pay premiums at a rate considerably less than they would otherwise be required to pay, if they could acquire insurance at all. The state will also subsidize any premiums that the high-risk individuals are unable to pay on their own.

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the children of these high-risk individuals did not qualify for the subsidized insurance benefits that their parents received.

Definition of "high-risk" individuals expanded.—The definition of "high-risk" individuals eligible to receive care from nonprofit, state-sponsored medical care providers has been expanded to include the spouse and the children of a current high-risk individual if certain requirements are met. This was done in order to help provide medical coverage to otherwise uninsured spouses and children. For a child of a high-risk individual to qualify for coverage, the following requirements must be satisfied: (1) the taxpayer is allowed an exemption for the child in the tax year; (2) the child has not reached 17 years of age by the end of the tax year; and (3) the child is a son or daughter, stepson or stepdaughter, foster child, or dependent of a son or daughter of the taxpayer.

Effective date. This provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Cooperative Hospital Service Organizations

¶ 605

Background

An entity does not qualify as a tax-exempt cooperative hospital service organization unless it is operated solely to perform one or more of the enumerated services listed in Code Sec. 501(e)(1)(A) for its member hospitals. Although these services include billing and collection services, it was unclear prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 whether the purchase of patron accounts receivable on a recourse basis was considered a permissible billing and collection service.

Treatment of receivables purchased by cooperative hospital service organizations.—The list of enumerated services that can be performed by a tax-exempt cooperative hospital service organization for its members has been clarified with respect to permissible billing and collection services. Billing and collection services provided by such an organization include the purchase of patron accounts receivable on a recourse basis. Accordingly, if member hospitals retain the risk of nonpayment of their accounts receivables, the cooperative hospital service organization may advance cash on the basis of such receivables.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 974, amending Code Sec. 501(e)(1)(A). Law at ¶ 5171. Committee Report at ¶ 10,915.

Hospitals Participating in Provider-Sponsored Organizations

¶ 606

Background

An organization must meet the following tests in order to qualify for tax-exempt status under Code Sec. 501(c)(3):

(1) it must be organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational purposes, for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, for the purpose of testing consumer products for public safety, or to foster national or international amateur sports competition (but only if no part of its activities involves provision of athletic facilities or equipment); and

(2) no portion of its net income can inure to the benefit of private shareholders or individuals.

Nonprofit hospitals are generally considered to be operated for charitable purposes if their services benefit the community as a whole.

In addition, a Code Sec. 501(c)(3) organization cannot attempt to influence legislation as any substantial part of its activities. Such organizations are also prohibited from providing commercial-type insurance as a substantial portion of its activities.

A nonprofit organization can enter into a joint venture with a for-profit organization without jeopardizing its tax-exempt status provided that the venture itself, and the tax-exempt's participation in the venture, furthers a charitable purpose. It must also be established that the arrangement does not create improper private inurement or confer more than an incidental benefit on any private individual. The IRS examines the facts and circumstances of each venture to determine whether these requirements are met.

Hospital's participation in provider-sponsored organizations expressly permitted.—A tax-exempt organization may participate in a joint venture with a for-profit organization if a two-prong test is satisfied: (1) the venture itself furthers a charitable purpose and (2) the sharing of profits and losses does not result in impermissible private inurement or a more than incidental benefit to any individual. The new law provides that a hospital, or other 501(c)(3) organization, will not fail to be treated as organized and operated solely for a charitable purpose based solely on its participation in a provider-sponsored organization (PSO), as defined in section 1845(a)(1) of the Social Security Act. Thus, the first prong of the two-part test is deemed satisfied. This provision applies regardless of whether the PSO is itself a tax-exempt organization.

The requirement that there be no private inurement or benefit to any individual has not been changed. For purposes of this test, any person who has a material financial interest in the PSO is treated as a private shareholder or individual with respect to the hospital itself. Each PSO arrangement will be evaluated based upon the individual facts and circumstances to determine whether there has been private inurement or more than an incidental private benefit.

There has been no change to the present prohibitions on lobbying and political activities by charitable organizations. Also, the prohibition against providing commercial-type insurance continues to apply.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 4041 of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, redesignating Code Sec. 501(o) as Code Sec. 501(p), and adding new Code Sec. 501(o). Law at ¶ 5171. Committee Report at ¶ 20,035.

Pension Business of Certain Insurers

Background

Under current law, a charitable Code Sec. 501(c)(3) organization or a Code Sec. 501(c)(4) civic league or other social welfare organization providing commercial-type insurance is granted tax-exempt status only if no substantial portion of its activities consists of providing commercial-type insurance. This provision was enacted by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-514) which also provided special rules for Mutual of America and for Teachers Insurance Annuity Association—College Retirement Fund so that the portion of the business of these two organizations attributable to pension business was not subject to this rule. This exemption had been effective since the enactment of the provision in 1986.

Repeal of exemption from tax with respect to pension business of certain insurers.—The Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 repeals the special rules applicable to Mutual of America and the Teachers Insurance Annuity Association and treats them for tax purposes as life insurance companies. However, the companies are granted a fresh start with respect to accounting method changes caused by the 1997 repeal. Thus, no adjustment under Code Sec. 481 will be required for the change in its method of accounting for the first tax year beginning after December 31, 1997. For purposes of determining gain or loss, the adjusted basis of any asset held by the affected company on the first day of the tax year is treated as equal to the fair market value of the asset as of such date. Moreover, any reserve weakening after June 8, 1997, by one of the affected companies is to be treated as occurring in the organization's first tax year beginning after December 31, 1997.

Regulations for short tax year issues. The IRS may prescribe rules for determining proper adjustments for the affected companies with respect to short tax years which begin under Code Sec. 843 as a result of the change made by this provision.

Effective date. The provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

UNRELATED BUSINESS INCOME TAX

Sponsorship Payments

¶ 611

Background

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the IRS had taken the position that, under certain circumstances, sponsorship payments received by a tax-exempt organization could be subject to the unrelated business income tax (UBIT). Basically, the IRS position was that funds received by the tax-exempt organization for institutional or goodwill advertising was not subject to the UBIT. However, funds received for specific product advertising was subject to the UBIT (Prop. Reg. § 1.513-4 and IRS Announcement 92-15, I.R.B. 1992-5, 51).

Qualified sponsorship payments are exempt from UBIT.—Certain qualified sponsorship payments solicited and received by a tax-exempt organization are not subject to the UBIT. This new provision reduces some of the uncertainty that existed under the facts and circumstances test that had been used by the IRS (e.g., IRS Announcement 92-15) when it determined how such payments should be classified.

"Qualified sponsorship payment" defined. The term "qualified sponsorship payment" is any payment to a tax-exempt organization by a payor engaged in a trade or business that does not expect any substantial return benefit—other than the use or acknowledgment of the payor's name, logo, or product lines in connection with the activities of the tax-exempt organization. In addition, there must not be any arrangement between the payor and the tax-exempt organization under which the payor will receive any substantial return benefit.

> Example (1). Advet Inc., a manufacturer of pet food, contributes $10,000 to a tax-exempt organization that cares for abandoned cats and dogs. In return for the contribution, the tax-exempt organization agrees to carry Advet's corporate logo on its monthly newsletter that it mails to contributors.

Based upon these facts, the $10,000 would not be subject to the UBIT because Advet will not obtain any substantial return benefit for its contribution.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Bruce Hopkins, of counsel to Polsinelli, White, Vardeman & Shalton, Kansas City, Missouri, comments that there is a lot of history behind this. Years ago, the IRS tried to tax a payment from Mobil Oil to the Cotton Bowl Association. The Cotton Bowl wanted to treat it as a contribution, while the IRS said it was unrelated business taxable income (UBTI) paid for advertising services. This generated a tremendous amount of controversy over how far a charity can go in recognizing and thanking a donor, and still have a payment classified as a gift.

The new law creates a "qualified sponsorship payment." If qualified, then it is not UBTI. What they have done is to draw a line regarding how much a charity can say about a donor without converting a payment into UBTI. This is the single most important provision in the new law for nonprofits that do any kind of fundraising.

Advertising may be subject to UBIT. A "qualified sponsorship payment" does not include advertising of the payor's products or services. In this context, "advertising" includes messages that contain qualitative or comparative language, price information, an endorsement, or an inducement to purchase, sell, or use the payor's products and services.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in Example (1), above, except that the tax-exempt organization also agrees to place its endorsement of Advet's pet food in its monthly newsletter. The endorsement will state that the tax-exempt organization only feeds Advet's pet foods to the animals in its charge because of the superior quality of the products. Based upon these facts, the $10,000 payment made by Advet would not qualify as a sponsorship payment. However, it is possible that a portion of the payment might qualify (see, "Allocation of payments," below).

Allocation of payments. When a payor makes a single payment to a tax-exempt organization and a portion of the payment would have qualified as a qualified sponsorship payment if it had been made separately, the payment must be allocated between the nonqualified amount and the qualified amount.

Planning Note. According to the House Committee Report, the portion of the payment that is equal to the fair market value of the benefit (e.g., advertising) provided by the tax-exempt organization is subject to the UBIT.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in Example (2), above. In addition, assume that it is determined that Advet received the benefit of $1,000 in advertising because of the endorsement of its products by the tax-exempt organization. Based on these facts, $1,000 would be subject to the UBIT and $9,000 would be classified as a qualified sponsorship payment.

Contingent payments. A "qualified sponsorship payment" does not include any payment if the amount of the payment is contingent upon:

(1) the level of attendance at one or more events;

(2) broadcast ratings; or

(3) other factors indicating the degree of public exposure to one or more events.

Planning Note. The House Committee Report sets forth the rule that the mere fact that the payment is based upon the event actually taking place or being broadcast, does not necessarily cause the payment to be subject to the UBIT. In addition, the mere distribution or display of the payor's products to the general public at a sponsored event will not necessarily make the payment subject to the UBIT. Generally, the display or distribution of the products will not be considered advertising. It does not matter whether the products are given away free or sold at the event.

Acknowledgments or advertising in periodicals. A "qualified sponsorship payment" does not include any payment that entitles the payor to an acknowledgment or advertising in regularly scheduled and printed material published by or on behalf of the tax-exempt organization. However, if the publication is related to, and primarily distributed in connection with, a specific event conducted by the tax-exempt organization, the payment may be a qualified sponsorship payment.

Example (4). Parka Inc., a manufacturer of outdoor clothing, contributes $5,000 to Save the Wolves Foundation, a tax-exempt organization. In return for the $5,000, an ad for Parka's products will run in the foundation's monthly magazine. Under these facts, no portion of the $5,000 payment could be excluded from the foundation's income subject to UBIT.

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in Example (4), above, except that the $5,000 payment will entitle Parka Inc. to be acknowledged in a publication distributed by the foundation at its annual Wolf Day celebration at Yellowstone National Park. Based on these facts, the $5,000 payment would be considered a qualified sponsorship payment and not subject to UBIT.

Qualified trade show activities. A "qualified sponsorship payment" does not include any payment made in connection with a "qualified convention or trade show activity." The term "qualified convention or trade show activity" is defined by Code Sec. 513(d)(3)(B) and generally refers to conventions or trade shows conducted by certain tax-exempt organizations that have as one of their purposes the promotion of interest in the products and services of the industry in general or the purpose to educate the attendees regarding new developments or products and services related to the exempt activities of the organization.

Providing services or other privileges to the sponsor. If, in connection with a sponsorship payment, the tax-exempt organization provides services, facilities, or other privileges to a sponsor or the sponsor's designee, the furnishing of these privileges, according to the House Committee Report, will not have any bearing on the determination of whether the payment is a qualified sponsorship payment. Examples of privileges that the tax-exempt organization might provide include complimentary tickets, or receptions for major donors.

However, the providing of privileges to the sponsor will be evaluated as a separate transaction in determining whether the tax-exempt organization hasunrelated business taxable income from the event. Generally, if the privileges do not provide substantial return benefits or if the providing of such privileges is a related business activity, then the payments related to such privileges will not be subject to UBIT.

Sponsor's receipt of a license. Also, according to the House Committee Report, when a sponsor receives a license to use an intangible asset of the tax-exempt organization (e.g., logo, trademark, or designation), the receipt of the license will be treated as separate from the qualified sponsorship transaction in determining if the tax-exempt organization is subject to UBIT.

Caution. The rules concerning the providing of privileges to the sponsor and the sponsor's receipt of a license are not contained in the Code. Instead, they are contained in the legislative history of this provision. However, it is likely that the same rules will be set forth in future IRS regulations.

Planning Note. This new provision concerning qualified sponsorship payments is in addition to the other exceptions that already exist regarding UBIT (e.g., the exceptions for activities for which substantially all the work is performed by volunteers and for activities that are not regularly carried on). In addition, the House Committee Report states that by enacting this new provision, no inference is made concerning the tax treatment of sponsorship payments made prior to 1998.

Effective date. The provision applies to payments solicited or received after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 965(a), adding new Code Sec. 513(i); Act Sec. 965(b). Law at ¶ 5175. Committee Report at ¶ 10,855.

Income from Subsidiaries

Background

Rent, royalty, annuity and interest payments received by a tax-exempt organization may be subject to the unrelated business income tax (UBIT) under Code Sec. 512(b)(13). Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, these payments were subject to the UBIT if they were received from a taxable or tax-exempt subsidiary that was 80 percent controlled, as defined under Code Sec. 368(c), by the parent. The Code Sec. 512(b)(13) control test also did not include any indirect ownership rules. Thus, rent, royalty, annuity and interest payments received by tax-exempt parent organizations from second-tier subsidiaries were generally not subject to the UBIT.

Unrelated business income look-through rules expanded.—In order to make it more difficult for tax-exempt organizations to avoid unrelated business taxable income (UBTI) treatment of amounts received from their subsidiaries, the definition of "control" under Code Sec. 512(b)(13) has been modified. The threshold for control of a subsidiary, which triggers UBTI, is lowered from 80 percent to more than 50 percent.

Control of a stock subsidiary means ownership by vote or value of more than 50 percent of the stock. For a partnership or other entity, control means ownership of more than 50 percent of the profits, capital or beneficial interests. Prior to the Act, control of a stock subsidiary required the parent organization to own 80 percent or more of the voting stock and all other classes of stock of the subsidiary. Thus, prior to the Act, tax-exempt organizations could issue 21 percent of nonvoting stock with nominal value and not be deemed "controlled."

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Bruce Hopkins, of counsel to Polsinelli, White, Vardeman & Shalton, Kansas City, Missouri, warns that the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 redefines what it takes to have a subsidiary for UBTI purposes. Before, 80 percent or more of the subsidiary had to be owned by the exempt organization for the subsidiary to be deemed controlled. Now, more than 50 percent will satisfy the control test. This will make it much easier for the government to make a case of parent-subsidiary relationship. It will have a big impact on many organizations, particularly in the health care field. The only way to avoid the impact of this provision is to have a minority position. You cannot have it both ways—you cannot control the subsidiary and still avoid tax.

Constructive ownership. The constructive ownership rules of Code Sec. 318 are extended to apply to Code Sec. 512(b)(13). Therefore, a parent tax-exempt organization is deemed to control any subsidiary in which it holds more than 50 percent, directly or indirectly, of the voting power or value.

Receipt by a controlled entity. The amount of an annuity, interest, rent, or royalty payment made by a controlled entity to a tax-exempt organization is UBTI to the extent the payment reduces the net unrelated income, or increases the net loss, of the controlled entity.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Bruce Hopkins, of counsel to Polsinelli, White, Vardeman & Shalton, Kansas City, Missouri, notes that rents, royalties, etc., from second-tier subsidiaries in the past did not constitute unrelated business income to the parent. Under the new law, this is changed. It makes certain constructive ownership rules apply, so that the second-tier subsidiary is now deemed indirectly controlled by the parent, and the revenue will be taxed.

Planning Note. Code Sec. 512(b)(13) does not tax interest, rent, or royalty payments from unrelated entities. Therefore, it may be advantageous to structure a transaction so that these same payments are received from an unrelated entity instead of a subsidiary.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Robert A. Boisture, of Caplin & Drysdale, Washington, D.C., notes that the Act contains a number of provisions affecting exempt organizations and their donors, including several of broad significance. Among these, the Act significantly tightens the definition of a controlled subsidiary for purposes of the unrelated business income tax that taxes an exempt organization on interest, rents, and royalties from such subsidiaries engaged in unrelated business activities. Various structures, including the use of second-tier subsidiaries, that effectively avoided tax under prior law, will no longer achieve this result and will need to be reviewed.

The Act also establishes detailed rules for the UBIT treatment of corporate sponsorship payments received by exempt organizations (see ¶ 611). These rules clarify the extent to which an exempt organization can acknowledge payments by corporate sponsors without being deemed to have made a taxable sale of advertising. The generally favorable rules largely track the proposed regulations issued by the IRS in 1993, but, quite significantly, delete the regulation's "tainting rule" under which otherwise nontaxable sponsorship payments would have been fully taxable if the exempt organization provided even relatively minor advertising services. Organizations should note that the new rules do not protect corporate sponsorship payments received in return for acknowledgements in regularly published periodicals or in connection with conventions and trade shows.

For donors, the Act extends through June 30, 1998, the tax law provision that allows persons contributing appreciated publicly traded stock to private foundations to deduct the stock's full fair market value rather than their basis (see ¶ 105). On the other hand, the new law also includes new restrictions on charitable remainder trusts designed to ensure that the present value of the charitable remainder equals no less than 10 percent of the value of the contribution to the trust (see ¶ 281).

Effective date. The modification of the control test to one based on vote or value, the application of the constructive ownership rules under Code Sec. 318, the reduction in ownership threshold, and the modifications to the flow-through method apply to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997. However, the above changes do not apply to any payment made during the first two tax years beginning on or after August 5, 1997, if the payment is made pursuant to a written binding contract in effect on June 8, 1997, and at all times thereafter before the payment.

HOMEOWNERS ASSOCIATIONS

Holders of Timeshare Interests

¶ 616

Background

Under prior law, timeshare associations could not elect to be taxed as homeowners associations because they could not meet the Code Sec. 528 requirement, under the regulations, that the units be used for residential purposes. In addition, timeshare associations could not qualify for the election because they perform a relatively large amount of services for their owners.

The IRS, in Letter Ruling 9539001, has ruled that refunds of excess assessments, special assessments held in a segregated account, and capital assessments held as contributions to capital are taxable as income to timeshare associations.

Homeowner association rules extended to timeshare associations.—Qualifying timeshare associations may elect to be taxed under Code Sec. 528 at a rate of 32 percent on their "timeshare association income." Electing associations would be treated similarly to homeowners associations, except at a higher tax rate (homeowners associations are taxed at a 30-percent rate).

Code Sec. 528 qualifications. To qualify under Code Sec. 528, the timeshare association must meet all of the following conditions:

(1) It must receive at least 60 percent of its gross income from membership dues, fees, or assessments from owners of either (a) timeshare rights to use or (b) timeshare ownership in timeshare association property.

(2) At least 90 percent of its expenditures for the tax year must be for the acquisition, management, maintenance, or care of association property and activities provided by the association to, or on behalf of, members of the timeshare association. The House Committee Report explains that "activities provided to, or on behalf of, members of the [timeshare] association" include events located on association property, such as golf lessons on the association's golf range and parties at the association's swimming pool.

(3) No part of the net earnings of the association may inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

Example. Brittany Place, a timeshare association, holds member meetings in a meeting room on the association's property. This would be considered an activity provided to, or on behalf of, members of the association.

A member of a qualified timeshare association must hold a timeshare right to use, or timeshare ownership in, real property of the association. Property of a timeshare association includes rights arising out of easements and covenants related to the timeshare project.

Planning Note. If the election is made, tax will not be imposed on the timeshare association's capital reserves, refunds of excess assessments, and prepaid assessments.

Effective date. The provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

INTERMEDIATE SANCTIONS

Reasonable Cause Abatement

¶ 619

Background

The Taxpayer Bill of Rights 2 of 1996 (TBOR2) (P.L. 104-168) added Code Sec. 4958, which provides for the imposition of penalty excise taxes as an intermediate sanction when a Code Sec. 501(c)(3) or Code Sec. 501(c)(4) organization engages in an "excess benefit transaction." These excise taxes are imposed on "disqualified persons" who improperly benefit from the transactions and on organization managers who knowingly participate in the transactions. Private foundations are not subject to these sanctions, but are subject to another penalty regime.

Background

A disqualified person who benefits from an excess benefit transaction is subject to a first-tier penalty equal to 25 percent of the excess benefit. Organization managers who participate in an excess benefit transaction, knowing that it is improper, are subject to a first-tier penalty tax of 10 percent of the amount of the excess benefit (to a maximum of $10,000).

When the provision was added, failure to cross-reference subchapter D in Code Sec. 4962 left the IRS without the authority to abate Code Sec. 4958 excise taxes, despite Congress's stated intent to give the IRS such authority.

Prior to enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the first-tier taxes that could be abated included some related to private foundations, such as those provided for in Code Sec. 4941 (taxes on self-dealing), Code Sec. 4942 (taxes on failure to distribute income), and Code Sec. 4943 (taxes on excess business holdings). Additionally, the IRS could abate taxes on political expenditures of Code Sec. 501(c)(3) organizations.

Reasonable cause abatement for first-tier intermediate sanctions excise tax.—A technical correction is made to provide the IRS with the authority to abate first-tier taxes on excess benefit transactions (Code Sec. 4958) if the taxable event was due to reasonable cause, and not to willful neglect, and if the event was corrected within the applicable correction period. Exempt organizations listed under Code Sec. 501(c)(3) or Code Sec. 501(c)(4) are subject to the taxes on excess benefit transactions.

Organizations subject to penalty on excess benefit transactions. Code Sec. 501(c)(3) lists nonprofit, nonpolitical organizations operated exclusively (1) for religious, charitable, scientific, public safety, literary or educational purposes; (2) to foster national or international amateur sports competition, but only if no part of its activities involve the provision of athletic facilities or equipment; or (3) for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals.

Organizations included under Code Sec. 501(c)(4) are (1) not-for-profit civic leagues or organizations operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare and (2) local associations of employees, the membership of which is limited to the employees of a designated person or persons in a particular municipality, and the net earnings of which are devoted exclusively to charitable, educational or recreational purposes.

Effective date. The IRS abatement authority for the excise tax applies to excess benefit transactions that occur on or after September 14, 1995. However, the provision does not apply to any benefits arising out of a transaction pursuant to any written contract that was binding on September 13, 1995, and at all times thereafter before the transaction occurred.

Act Sec. 1603(a), amending Code Sec. 4962(b). Law at ¶ 5523. Committee Report at ¶ 13,915.

Reporting of Penalties

¶ 621

Background

A Code Sec. 501(c)(3) organization is required to report annually on Form 990 the amounts of certain excise tax penalties paid by the organization. Penalties are imposed as intermediate sanctions in cases where certain tax-exempt organizations engage in prohibited transactions. For example, a penalty is imposed on a public charity for making excess lobbying expenditures (Code Sec. 4911). Other penalty taxes, such as the following, are imposed not only on the affected organization, but also on organization managers who agree to an expenditure knowing that it is improper: (1) a tax on certain public charities that make disqualifying lobbying expenditures (Code Sec. 4912) and (2) a tax on political expenditures of Code Sec. 501(c)(3) organizations (Code Sec. 4955). Although Code Sec. 4912 and Code Sec. 4955 impose excise taxes on organization managers, an organization was not required under prior law to report any of these penalties paid by organization managers.

In addition, a Code Sec. 501(c)(3) organization must report on Form 990 any amount of excise tax on excess benefit transactions paid by the organization, or any disqualified person with respect to such organization (Code Sec. 4958). However, under prior law, there was no explicit reporting requirement for taxes paid by an organization manager solely in that capacity, although an organization manager might also be considered a disqualified person with respect to an excess benefit transaction, in which case the penalty was required to be reported. Further, there was no requirement that reimbursements of the above taxes paid by the organization to its manager had to be reported.

In the event that a first-tier penalty excise tax imposed under Code Sec. 4955 or Code Sec. 4958 was abated by the IRS, it was not clear under prior law whether the organization was required to report the abated penalty.

New reporting requirements for tax-exempt organizations.—Tax-exempt organizations' reporting requirements have been made consistent with the excise tax penalty provisions to which they relate.

Now, Code Sec. 501(c)(3) organizations are required to report annually on Form 990 any amounts paid under Code Sec. 4911, Code Sec. 4912 and Code Sec. 4955 by the organization or by organization managers. A Code Sec. 501(c)(3) organization must also report on Form 990 any amount of excise tax on excess benefit transactions paid by the organization, organization manager or any disqualified person with respect to such organization, during the tax year.

Any reimbursements paid by an organization to the organization manager with respect to any of the above penalty taxes must also be reported.

Further, the IRS has the authority to abate certain first-tier taxes under Code Sec. 4962 if the taxable event was due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, and the event was corrected within the applicable correction period. No reporting is required, under Code Sec. 6033(b), in the event a first-tier penalty excise tax imposed under Code Sec. 4955 or Code Sec. 4958 is abated by the IRS.

Effective date. These amendments apply to returns for tax years beginning after July 30, 1996.

ESTIMATED TAX

Estimated Tax Payments by Private Foundations

¶ 623

Background

Tax-exempt private foundations are required to pay an excise tax of two percent of their net investment income for the tax year. Under prior law, the due date for a calender-year private foundation's first-quarter estimated tax payment for this excise tax liability or unrelated business income tax liability was April 15. Similarly, fiscal-year foundations were required to make their first-quarter estimated tax payments no later than the 15th day of the fourth month of their tax year.

Extension of the due date for first-quarter estimated tax payments by private foundations.—The due date for a calender-year private foundation's first-quarter estimated tax payment for excise tax liability on net investment income or unrelated business income tax liability has been extended from April 15 to May 15. Similarly, fiscal-year foundations are now required to make their first-quarter estimated tax payments no later than the 15th day of the fifth month of their tax year.

Planning Note. The new due date coincides with the due date for Form 990-PF, Return of Private Foundation or Section 4947(a)(1) Nonexempt Charitable Trust Treated as a Private Foundation. This should enable a private foundation to more accurately calculate estimated tax payments because such payments are determined partially by reference to its tax liability for the preceding year.

Effective date. The provision applies for purposes of determining underpayments of estimated tax for tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Chapter 7

Pensions and Qualified Plans

QUALIFIED PLANS GENERALLY

Rollovers from Qualified Plans

¶ 701

Background

IRS regulations (§ 1.401(a)(31)-1, Q&A-13(b)) provide that a qualified retirement plan that accepts rollover contributions from another retirement plan will not be disqualified in the event that the plan making the distribution is not qualified at the time of the distribution so long as the recipient plan "reasonably conclude[s]," prior to accepting the distribution, that the distributing plan is qualified. The regulations specify that a recipient plan can reasonably conclude that a distributing plan is qualified if, for example, the distributing plan provides a statement that it has received a favorable determination letter from the IRS.

The Senate Finance Committee report indicated that despite this regulatory guidance, there was a need for further guidance on the issue of when a recipient plan can reasonably conclude that the distributing plan is qualified.

Clarification of disqualification rules relating to acceptance of rollover contributions.—The Act directs the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate to clarify that, in the case of a rollover contribution to a pension plan, it is not necessary for the distributing plan to have a determination letter from the IRS.

Under prior law, there was some ambiguity as to when recipient plans were protected from the possibility of losing their qualified status when accepting rollover contributions from other plans. IRS regulations (§ 1.401(a)(31)-1, Q&A-13(b)) provide that the recipient plan is protected from loss of qualified status so long as it can "reasonably conclude" that the plan making the distribution is qualified. The regulations specify that a recipient plan can reasonably conclude that a distributing plan is qualified if, for example, the distributing plan provides a statement that it has received a favorable determination letter from the IRS.

Under the Act, the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate must issue guidance with respect to the IRS regulations that will clarify that it is not necessary for the distributing plan to have a determination letter with respect to its qualified status in order for the recipient plan to reasonably conclude that the contribution is a valid rollover contribution.

Effective date. The provision is effective on August 5, 1997. However, according to the Conference Committee Report, the provision is effective for rollover contributions made after 1997.

Act Sec. 1509. Law at ¶ 7058. Committee Report at ¶ 13,295.

Assignment or Alienation

¶ 703

Background

Neither ERISA nor the Code specifically permitted the assignment or alienation of retirement plan benefits in the case of participants who breached their fiduciary duty to the plans or who committed criminal acts with respect to the plans. In the absence of statutory guidance, courts were split on the issue of whether the benefits of such a participant could be offset against the amount owed by him or her to the plan as a result of the fiduciary breach or criminal act.

Modification of prohibition of assignment or alienation of plan benefits for participants committing fiduciary breach.—Under a limited exception to the anti-alienation rules governing retirement plans, a participant's benefits under an employee pension plan may be reduced where the participant has committed a breach of fiduciary duty to the plan or committed a criminal act against the plan.

The Act provides that a participant's benefits may be reduced if a court order or requirement to pay arises from: (1) a judgment of conviction for a crime involving the plan; (2) a civil judgment (or consent order or decree) that is entered by a court in an action brought in connection with a breach (or alleged breach) of fiduciary duty under ERISA; or (3) a settlement agreement entered into by the participant and either the Secretary of Labor or the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation in connection with a breach of fiduciary duty under ERISA by a fiduciary or any other person.

The court order, judgment, decree, or settlement agreement must specifically require that all or part of the amount to be paid to the plan be offset against the participant's plan benefits.

Spousal consent. If the survivor annuity requirements of ERISA Sec. 205 (or Code Sec. 401(a)(11)) apply to distributions under the plan to the participant and if the participant is married at the time his or her benefits under the plan are offset, one of the following three conditions must be satisfied:

> (1) Spousal consent must be obtained (or an alternative described below must be satisfied) or the spouse must have waived his or her rights to a qualified joint and survivor annuity or a qualified preretirement survivor annuity. The spousal consent requirement is satisfied if the consent is in writing and is witnessed by a notary public or plan representative.
> If spousal consent cannot be obtained, an alternative requirement may be satisfied. Under this alternative, it must be established to the satisfaction of a plan representative that spousal consent cannot be obtained because there is no spouse, because the spouse cannot be located, or because of other circumstances that may be prescribed in Treasury regulations.
> (2) The spouse is also required to pay an amount to the plan in the judgment, order, decree or settlement in connection with a breach of fiduciary duty.
> (3) In the judgment, order, decree or settlement, the spouse is provided with a survivor annuity under a qualified joint and survivor annuity and under a qualified preretirement survivor annuity. The survivor annuity must be determined as if: (a) the participant terminated employment on the offset date, (b) there was no offset, (c) the plan allowed benefits to begin only on or after normal retirement age, (d) the plan provided only the minimum required qualified joint and survivor annuity, and (e) the amount of the qualified preretirement survivor annuity is equal to the amount of the survivor annuity payable under the minimum-required qualified joint and survivor annuity.
> The minimum-required qualified joint and survivor annuity is a qualified joint and survivor annuity that is the actuarial equivalent of the participant's accrued benefit and under which the survivor annuity is 50 percent of the amount of the annuity that is payable during the joint lives of the participant and the spouse.

Inclusion in income. According to the Conference Committee Report, the offset is includible in income on the date of the offset.

Effective date. The provision applies to judgments, orders, and decrees issued, and settlement agreements entered into, on, or after August 5, 1997.

Involuntary Cash-Outs

¶ 706

Background

Prior to the Act, a qualified plan could involuntarily pay out the balance of a participant's account without the participant's (or the participant's spouse's) consent if the present value of the benefit did not exceed $3,500.

Cash-out of $5,000 benefit.—A qualified plan can pay the balance of a participant's account without the participant's (or the participant's spouse's) consent if the present value of the benefit does not exceed $5,000. Previously, the limit was set at $3,500.

If a benefit is cashed out and the participant subsequently returns to work for the employer, the plan is not required to restore the participant's previous service unless the participant reimburses the plan for the cashed out amount.

> Example (1). Joe has worked for Acme Corp. for four years and participated in Acme's defined benefit plan during the second year, when he became eligible to participate. Acme decides to let Joe go. The present value of Joe's benefit is $4,000. The plan pays Joe the $4,000 without consulting him about whether he wanted to leave the amount in the plan.

> Example (2). Assume the same facts as above except that two years later Acme asks Joe to return to work. Acme would not need to restore the prior four years of service to Joe unless Joe repaid $4,000 to the plan.

Effective date. The $5,000 cash-out limit applies to plan years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Summary Plan Descriptions

¶ 708

Background

Under prior law, administrators of employee benefit plans subject to the reporting and disclosure requirements of ERISA were required to provide to the Secretary of Labor summary plan descriptions within 120 days after becoming subject to those requirements. They were also required to provide updated plan descriptions no more frequently than once every five years, and summaries of material modifications (or revised summary plan descriptions) to such plans within 210 days after the plan year in which the changes were adopted. The Act eliminates these requirements and instead requires plan administrators to provide these and related documents to the Secretary only upon request.

Background

Elimination of paperwork burdens on plans.—The Act eliminates the requirement that administrators of employee benefit plans subject to the reporting and disclosure requirements of ERISA must file summary plan descriptions (SPDs), separate plan descriptions with certain prescribed information, and summaries of material modifications (SMMs) to the plans with the Secretary of Labor. However, SPDs and SMMs (as well as any other documents relating to the plans) must be provided to the Secretary of Labor upon request. If these documents are not provided within 30 days of the request, the Secretary may assess a civil penalty of up to $100 per day (up to $1,000 per request). No penalty is imposed for any failure to provide the requested material if the failure results from matters reasonably beyond the plan administrator's control.

Effective date. These provisions are effective on August 5, 1997.

Paperless Compliance Guidelines

¶ 710

Background

The extent to which new technologies can be used to satisfy the various notice, consent, election, disclosure and record-keeping requirements under the Code and ERISA is unclear.

New technologies in retirement plans.—The Act provides that the Secretary of Treasury and Secretary of Labor will each issue guidance that is designed to interpret the notice, election, consent, disclosure and time requirements (and related record-keeping requirements) under the Code and ERISA relating to retirement plans as applied to the use of new technologies (e.g., e-mail, voice response systems, computers) by plan sponsors and administrators while maintaining the protection of the rights of participants and beneficiaries. Guidance will also be issued to clarify the extent to which writing requirements under the Code relating to retirement plans will be interpreted to permit paperless transactions.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Fred Reish of Reish & Luftman, Los Angeles, points out that the legislative call in Act Sec. 1510 for regulations on paperless plan administration makes no specific change to Title I or Title II of ERISA. However, it is an acknowledgement by Congress and the Administration that the law needs to evolve to take into account a shift from a paper-based society to a largely paperless environment. Presumably, the immediate beneficiaries of this evolution will be financial institutions involved in providing investment products and services to plans and large employers with the hardware and software capacity to support paperless administration.

Effective date. The provision is effective on August 5, 1997 and requires that the guidance be issued not later than December 31, 1998. The Act further provides that final regulations applicable to such guidance will not be effective until the first plan year beginning at least six months after the issuance of final regulations.

Act Sec. 1510. Law at ¶ 7061. Committee Report at ¶ 13,315.

Prohibited Transactions Tax

Background

A two-tier tax is imposed on transactions between a qualified plan and persons with a close relationship to that plan to prevent them from using that relationship to the detriment of plan participants and beneficiaries. Under prior law, the first-tier tax was a 10-percent penalty tax on the amount involved in a prohibited transaction. If not corrected within a specified period, the tax increases to 100 percent of the amount involved.

Prohibited transaction excise taxes.—The Act increases the initial level excise tax on prohibited transactions from 10 percent to 15 percent. No other changes are made to prohibited transaction rules so the 100-percent excise tax continues to apply if the prohibited transaction is not corrected within the specified time limit.

Effective date. Effective with respect to prohibited transactions occurring after August 5, 1997.

Excess Distribution Tax

Background

Under prior law, a 15 percent excise tax was imposed on excess distributions from qualified retirement plans, tax-sheltered annuities, and IRAs. Excess distributions were generally the aggregate amount of retirement distributions from the three types of plans during any calendar year in excess of $160,000 (as adjusted for inflation in 1997) or five times that amount in the case of a lump-sum distribution. This tax did not apply for the years 1997-1999.

An additional 15 percent estate tax was imposed on an individual's excess retirement accumulations. These accumulations were composed of the balance in retirement plans in excess of the present value of a benefit that would not have been subject to the 15 percent tax on distributions.

Repeal of excess distribution tax.—The law repeals both the 15-percent excise tax on excess distributions from qualified retirement plans, tax-sheltered annuities, and IRAs and the 15-percent excise tax on excess retirement accumulations. An excess distribution would be one that exceeded $160,000 or five times that amount in the case of a lump-sum distribution.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Bruce Ashton of Reish & Luftman, Los Angeles, notes that the Code Sec. 4980A taxes on excess lifetime distributions and excess accumulations at death (the so-called "success tax") penalized not only large benefit accruals but also the successful investment of plan assets in defined contribution plans and IRAs. The repeal of these 15 percent add-on taxes should encourage larger benefit accumulations for participants in all types of qualified plans, 403(a) and 403(b) annuity plans, and individual retirement accounts and annuities.

In addition, for large benefit accumulations the emphasis will shift from distribution planning to minimize the impact of the Code Sec. 4980A taxes to planning for maximizing the time period over which benefits are distributed (and thus the tax-deferred compounding). Finally, the elimination of Code Sec. 4980A, coupled with the repeal last year of Code Sec. 415(e) (effective for limitation years beginning after December 31, 2000), will stimulate the adoption of defined benefit plans by small employers. For larger employers, the change may result in improved benefits for rank-and-file employees, since larger benefits can be provided by "richer" qualified plans and, therefore, there will be less incentive to provide benefits in nonqualified plans for company executives.

Effective dates. Repeal of the excess distribution tax applies to excess distributions received after December 31, 1996. The repeal of the excess accumulation tax applies to estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1996.

DEFINED BENEFIT PLANS

Full Funding Limitation

¶ 717

Background

The full funding limit for defined benefit pension plans is calculated in part by determining the lesser of a plan's accrued liability and a percentage limit of current liability. Under prior law, this percentage limit was 150 percent.

Increase in current liability funding limit.—The Act increases the full funding percentage limit for defined benefit pension plans from 150 percent to the following:

155% for plan years beginning in 1999 or 2000;

160% for plan years beginning in 2001 or 2002;

165% for plan years beginning in 2003 and 2004; and 170% for plan years beginning in 2005 and later.

According to the Senate Finance Committee Report, the percentage limit was increased because the Committee believed the percentage limit of 150 percent "unduly restrict[ed] funding."

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Bruce Ashton of Reish & Luftman, Los Angeles, notes that the change in the 1987 Revenue Act full funding limit (in Act Sec. 1521) will have little impact on the vast majority of defined benefit pension plans, since most were not limited under the existing 150 percent limitation. The primary effects of the 150 percent of current liability limitation have been to (1) cause wide swings in funding from year to year and (2) prevent some plans, which were underfunded for projected liabilities, from making a deductible contribution. The amendment to Code Sec. 412(c)(7), which gradually increases the percentage limitation, will not eliminate the peaks and valleys in funding, but it will help in levelling out the funding, resulting in greater predictability and better benefit management.

Effective date. The provision applies to plan years beginning after 1998.

Background

Under prior law, amounts that could not be contributed to a defined benefit pension plan due to the current liability full funding limit were amortized over 10 years.

Amortization rule for amounts that cannot be contributed.—Under the Act, amounts that cannot be contributed to a defined benefit pension plan due to the current liability full funding limit are amortized over 20 years. Specifically, contributions that would be required to be made to a defined benefit plan but that cannot be made due to the percentage limit for current liability under Code Sec. 412(c)(7)(A)(i)(I) are amortized in equal annual installments over a 20-year period. Previously, such amounts were amortized over 10, rather than 20, years.

Effective date. A special provision applies to unamortized balances that exist as of the close of the plan year before the plan's first year beginning in 1999: amounts that could not be contributed due to the current liability full funding limit and that have not been amortized as of the last day of the plan year beginning in 1998 are amortized in equal annual installments over the period of years that equal the excess of 20 years over the number of years since the amortization base was established. The changes made by this provision are otherwise generally effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1998.

Law at ¶ 5149 and 7064. Committee Report at ¶ 13,340.

Minimum Funding Requirements

¶ 721

Background

The Code requires defined benefit plans to satisfy certain minimum funding requirements. Under prior law, there were no special minimum funding rules for plans sponsored by companies engaged primarily in the interurban or interstate passenger bus service. However, the Senate Finance Committee determined that it was appropriate to modify the minimum funding rules for such plans because, according to the Committee, the contributions required to be made to the plans under prior law caused them to be overfunded.

Modified funding requirements for bus company plans.—The Act modifies the minimum funding requirements of the Retirement Protection Act of 1994 for certain plans that are sponsored by a company that is engaged primarily in the interurban or interstate passenger bus service. Specifically, if the plan was not required to pay a variable rate PBGC premium for the plan year beginning in 1996 and has not, in any plan year beginning after 1995 and before 2009, merged with another plan (other than a plan sponsored by an employer that was a member of the controlled group of the employer in 1996), the modified minimum funding rules apply for any plan year beginning after 1996 and before 2010.

A plan to which the modified funding rules (transition rules) apply will be treated as having a funded current liability percentage of at least 90 percent for any plan year beginning after 1996 and before 2005 if for that year the plan's actual funded current liability percentage is at least 85 percent. Also, for any plan year beginning after 2004 and before 2010, the plan will be treated as having a funded current liability percentage of at least 90 percent if for that year the plan's actual funded current liability percentage is at least the minimum percentage determined under the following table:

2005	86
2006	87
2007	88
2009 and thereafter	90

The Act also changes the Retirement Protection Act of 1994 so that it now amends the Code provisions describing the minimum amount of the full funding limit by replacing "90 percent" in those provisions with "85 percent" for plan years beginning after 1996 and before 2005 and with the applicable percentage set forth in the above table for plan years beginning after 2004 and before 2010.

If a plan's funded current liability percentage is less than 85 percent for any plan year beginning after 1996 and before 2005, the transition rules (described above) will continue to apply if contributions for that year are equal to the lesser of (1) the amount necessary to result in a funded current liability percentage of 85 percent or (2) the greater of (a) two percent of the plan's current liability as of the beginning of the plan year or (b) the amount necessary to result in a funded current liability percentage of 80 percent as of the end of the plan year. The transition rules described above will continue to apply for the plan year beginning in 2005 and the three succeeding plan years only if contributions to the plan for the year equal at least the expected increase in current liability due to benefits accruing during the plan year.

Effective date. This provision applies to plan years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1508(a) adding Sec. 769(c) of the Retirement Protection Act of 1994; Act Sec. 1508(b). Law at ¶ 7055. Committee Report at ¶ 13,285.

DEFINED CONTRIBUTION PLANS

Tax on Nondeductible Contributions

¶ 725

Background

The Code imposes a 10-percent excise tax on nondeductible contributions to a qualified plan. However, this tax does not apply to contributions to one or more defined contribution plans that are not deductible solely because they exceed the combined plan deduction limit to the extent such contributions do not exceed six percent of compensation paid or accrued during the taxable year for which they were made.

Modification of 10-percent tax on nondeductible contributions.—The Act adds another exception to the 10-percent tax on nondeductible contributions. This exception provides that the 10-percent tax does not apply to contributions to one or more defined contribution plans which are not deductible solely because they exceed the combined plan deduction limit to the extent they do not exceed the sum of employer matching contributions and 401(k) elective deferrals made to the plan or plans.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1507(a), amending Code Sec. 4972(c)(6)(B); Act Sec. 1507(b). Law at ¶ 5525. Committee Report at ¶ 13,275.

401(k) PLANS

Diversification of Plan Assets

¶ 727

Background

Prior to the Act, employers were able to invest contribution amounts made to 401(k) plans on behalf of employees in corporate stock or other property. When two major corporations recently went bankrupt, the retirement plans of many of their employees who were 100 percent invested in company stock or other assets were wiped out.

Diversification of investments.—The Act amends ERISA to mandate diversification in Code Sec. 401(k) plan investments. The law now forbids companies from forcing employees to put more than 10 percent of their Code Sec. 401(k) plan funds in company stock or assets. The employees can maintain more than 10 percent if they do so voluntarily.

This provision of law does not apply to ESOPs or to individual account plans that only require 1 percent or less of an individual account's assets to be invested in employer securities.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Bruce Ashton of Reish & Luftman, Los Angeles, points out that Act Sec. 1524, the so-called Boxer provision, amending § 407(b) of Title I of ERISA, will largely affect defined contribution plans of publicly-traded companies. Even then, the impact will be limited, since the provision only restricts the employer-directed investment of elective deferrals (and earnings thereon) in employer securities and employer real property to the extent they exceed one percent of the participant's compensation. The provision does nothing to restrict employee-directed investment in such assets. The effective date provision appears to grandfather investments made before December 31, 1998, by imposing the new statutory limitation only on elective deferrals for plan years beginning in 1999. This will require plans to maintain two separate accounts for participant deferrals, one for deferrals invested before December 31, 1998, and one for the investment of deferrals after that date.

Effective date. These changes apply to elective deferrals for plan years beginning after December 31, 1998. Although not included in the law, the Conference Committee Report also provided that these changes did not apply with respect to earnings on elective deferrals for years beginning before January 1, 1999.

Act Sec. 1524(a), amending ERISA Sec. 407(b) by redesignating paragraph (2) as (3) and adding new paragraph (2); Act Sec. 1524(b). Law at ¶ 7067. Committee Report at ¶ 13,365.

Self-Employed Matching Contributions

¶ 729

Background

Under prior law, matching contributions made for a self-employed individual to a 401(k) plan were treated as additional elective contributions by the self-employed individual who received the matching contributions. Therefore, the matching contributions were subject to the $9,500 limit on elective contributions.

In addition, it was not clear whether matching contributions to SIMPLE IRAs that were made on behalf of self-employed persons were treated as elective employer contributions and thus subject to the $6,000 limit on elective deferrals for SIMPLE IRAs.

Background

Matching contributions of self-employed individuals not treated as elective employer contributions.—Under the Act, matching contributions made to 401(k) plans for self-employed persons are not treated as elective contributions and are, therefore, not subject to the limit ($9,500 for 1997) on elective contributions. This treatment of matching contributions does not apply to those qualified matching contributions that are treated as elective contributions for purposes of the actual deferral percentage (ADP) test under Code Sec. 401(k)(3)(D)(ii).

Previously, matching contributions for self-employed persons were treated as additional elective contributions. This differed from the treatment of matching contributions made by employers to 401(k) plans. Such contributions are not treated as elective contributions and thus are not subject to the $9,500 limit on elective contributions. In the Senate Finance Committee's view, it was inappropriate to treat self-employed persons differently from other employees with respect to the limit on elective contributions.

Planning Note. This provision should provide relief to sole proprietors with 401(k) plans that were violating the elective deferral limit (that is, the total of their deferrals and corresponding matches exceeded the limit). There is anecdotal evidence that quite a few sole proprietors were in breach of the limit and, therefore, many 401(k)s had this type of disqualifying defect.

SIMPLE IRAs. The Act also provides that matching contributions to SIMPLE IRAs that are made on behalf of self-employed persons are not treated as elective employer contributions and are not, therefore, subject to the $6,000 limit on elective deferrals for SIMPLE IRAs. Previously, such matching contributions were presumably treated as elective employer contributions and thus subject to the $6,000 limit.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Fred Reish of Reish & Luftman, Los Angeles, notes that, in Treas. Reg. § 1.401(k)-1(a)(6)(iii), the IRS and Treasury Department interpreted Code Sec. 401(k) and the partnership tax rules as requiring that matching contributions for partners be treated as additional deferrals, subject to the Code Sec. 402(g) limit. As a practical matter, this interpretation eliminated matching contributions for partners in most 401(k) plans. While the IRS never formally extended this interpretation to sole proprietors, informally it has taken that position. Also, both IRS and Treasury officials have expressed their concerns that those Regulations required a similar conclusion for SIMPLE IRAs.

This statutory reversal of the Regulation eliminates one of the few remaining distinctions for qualified plans based on the form of the entity which sponsors a plan. This provision will primarily benefit small businesses, which are often organized as sole proprietorships, partnerships and limited liability companies (LLCs), and organizations which have historically been organized as partnerships and limited liability partnerships (LLPs), such as law firms and accounting firms. Perhaps the biggest beneficiaries, however, will be small businesses that have adopted SIMPLE

IRAs in 1997. Unlike 401(k) plans, there was no guidance for SIMPLE IRAs on whether matching contributions for the business owner were treated as deferrals. The new provision protects against the possibility of an inadvertent violation of the potential regulatory interpretation that self-employed SIMPLE sponsors were subject to the 401(k) restrictions. This accounts for the retroactive effective date of January 1, 1997, for SIMPLE IRAs under Code Sec. 408(p) (while the change for 401(k) plans is deferred until years beginning after December 31, 1997).

Effective date. The provision is generally effective for years beginning after December 31, 1997. In the case of SIMPLE IRAs, however, the provision is effective for years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Irrigation and Drainage Entities

¶ 731

Background

Under current law, taxable and tax-exempt employers may maintain qualified cash or deferred arrangements (401(k) plans), but state and local government organizations are generally barred from establishing 401(k) plans. This prohibition affected mutual irrigation and ditch companies and water districts because at least some of them are organized under state laws as municipal corporations.

Certain mutual irrigation and ditch companies could, apparently, sponsor 401(k)s as tax-exempt employers, but in order to be treated as tax-exempt employers, they were subject to the requirement that 85 percent or more of their income must consist of amounts collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting losses and expenses.

The effect of the above rules regarding governmental plans and tax-exempt status was to prevent some mutual irrigation and ditch companies and water districts from sponsoring 401(k) plans.

401(k) plans for irrigation and drainage entities.—Under the Act, mutual irrigation or ditch companies and districts organized under the laws of a state as municipal corporations for the purpose of irrigation, water conservation or drainage (or national associations of such organizations, according to the Conference Committee Report) may maintain qualified cash or deferred arrangements (401(k) plans).

Under prior law, state and local government organizations were generally barred from establishing 401(k) plans (after May 6, 1986). The Act lifts this prohibition for irrigation and drainage entities and permits such organizations to have 401(k) plans, even if the company or district is a state or local government organization.

The Act also opens the door for irrigation, ditch, and conservation entities to sponsor 401(k)s by permitting mutual irrigation or ditch companies described in Code Sec. 501(c)(12) to sponsor such plans without regard to the 85 percent requirement under Code Sec. 501(c)(12). Without this change in the law, certain irrigation and ditch companies were apparently unable to sponsor 401(k) plans as tax-exempt organizations. Under current law, effective for plan years beginning in 1997, tax-exempt organizations may establish 401(k) plans for their employees. However, mutual irrigation or ditch companies have tax-exempt status under Code Sec. 501(c)(12)(A) only if 85 percent or more of their income consists of amounts collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting losses and expenses. This provision limited the number of irrigation and ditch companies that could sponsor 401(k)s.

In addition, the Act permits districts that are organized under state laws as municipal corporations, for the purpose of irrigation, water conservation, or drainage, to maintain 401(k) plans.

Effective date. The provision is effective with respect to years beginning after December 31, 1997.

SIMPLE IRA PLANS

Maximum Dollar Limitation

¶ 735

Background

Participants in a SIMPLE IRA may make elective contributions of up to $6,000 to their IRA. Employers may match the contributions or make a nonelective contribution equal to two percent of compensation for each eligible employee. However, confusion arose because the maximum amount that an individual may contribute to a traditional IRA is $2,000.

Maximum dollar limitation for SIMPLE IRAs.—Employees participating in a SIMPLE IRA may make elective contributions of up to $6,000 per year to their IRA, even though the maximum amount that may be contributed to a traditional IRA is $2,000. The $6,000 employee deferral may also be matched by the employer, resulting in a maximum deferral to the SIMPLE IRA of $12,000.

See, also, ¶ 729 for rules regarding matching contributions made on behalf of self-employed persons.

Planning Note. The $6,000 maximum annual salary reduction contribution also will be adjusted by the IRS to reflect changes in the cost of living. By contrast, the $2,000 maximum limit applicable to traditional IRAs is not adjusted for changes in the cost of living.

Nonelective contribution. The $2,000 maximum contribution limitation that governs traditional IRAs also does not apply to the alternative nonelective contribution an employer may make that is equal to two percent of each eligible employee's compensation for the entire calendar year.

> Example. ABC Company elects to make a nonelective contribution to its SIMPLE IRA for all of its employees. The maximum amount that may be added to each participant's SIMPLE IRA is $9,200 ($6,000 employee deferral plus an employer match of $3,200 [$160,000 (Code Sec. 401(a)(17) compensation limit) × 2 percent].

Effective date. The provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Exclusive Plan Requirements

¶ 737

Background

A SIMPLE plan may not be established if the employer (or predecessor employer) maintains another qualified plan with respect to which contributions were made or benefits were accrued, for service in the period beginning with the year the SIMPLE plan became effective and ending with the year for which the determination was made. Prior law did not authorize an employer that maintained a qualified plan only for its collectively bargained employees to also maintain a SIMPLE IRA that was restricted to noncollectively bargained employees without violating the exclusivity requirement.

Application of exclusive plan requirements for SIMPLE IRAs to noncollectively bargained employees.—Employers may adopt a SIMPLE IRA for noncollectively bargained employees, even if the employer also maintains a qualified plan for collectively bargained employees.

A SIMPLE IRA will not be treated as a qualified salary reduction arrangement if the employer maintains a qualified plan (i.e., qualified retirement plan, governmental plan, tax-sheltered annuity, or simplified employee pension (SEP)) with respect to which contributions were made or benefits accrued during the same period that the SIMPLE IRA is maintained. Collectively bargained employees may be excluded from participation in a SIMPLE IRA, but may be covered under another qualified plan of the employer. Under the Act, the fact that an employer provides a qualified plan in which only collectively bargained employees may participate will not prevent it from establishing a SIMPLE IRA in which only noncollectively bargained employees may participate.

Caution. Employers may, at their option, elect to allow collectively bargained employees to participate in a SIMPLE plan. However, an employer that maintains a qualified plan for collectively bargained employees presumably could not allow those employees to also participate in the SIMPLE plan without violating the exclusivity rule, even if the plan is limited to collectively bargained employees.

Planning Note. Remember that all employees, whether or not members of a collective bargaining unit, are counted for purposes of determining whether the employer employed no more than 100 employees who received at least $5,000 in compensation from the employer in the preceding year.

Effective date. The provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(1)(E), amending Code Sec. 408(p)(2)(D)(i); Act Sec. 1601(j). Law at ¶ 5139. Committee Report at ¶ 13,580.

¶ 739

Background

An employer who had maintained a SIMPLE IRA for at least one year, but who, because of an acquisition, disposition, or similar transaction, also maintained a qualified plan, was not allowed, under prior law, a grace period during which the SIMPLE IRA would remain a qualified salary reduction arrangement.

Application of exclusive plan requirement in case of mergers and acquisitions.—A SIMPLE IRA that is maintained by an employer for one or more years will not immediately cease to be a qualified salary reduction arrangement if the employer, because of an acquisition, disposition, or similar transaction with another employer, maintains a qualified plan in the same year that the SIMPLE plan is maintained. A grace period will allow the SIMPLE IRA to be treated as a qualified salary reduction arrangement for the year of the transaction and the following calendar year. Specifically, the Act, by adopting the transition period described in Code Sec. 410(b)(6)(C), effectively defines the grace period as beginning on the date of the transaction and ending on the last day of the first plan year beginning after the date of the transaction.

> Example. Company A operates a SIMPLE IRA plan for its employees. Company B maintains a defined benefit pension plan for its employees. Following A's purchase of B in August 1997, A may continue to operate the SIMPLE IRA as a qualified salary reduction arrangement for 1997 and 1998. However, during this time, B's employees may not participate in the SIMPLE IRA and participants in A's SIMPLE plan may not participate in the pension plan.

Caution. Employers also need to be aware that they may fail to be eligible to maintain or establish a SIMPLE plan if, following the merger or acquisition, they employ over 100 employees who received compensation for the preceding year of at least $5,000. Employers who have maintained a SIMPLE IRA for at least one year, however, may continue to maintain the plan for the two years following the last year the employer was eligible.

Effective date. The provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Reporting Requirements

¶ 740

Background

Trustees of a SIMPLE IRA were required under prior law to provide an account statement, reflecting the account balance as of the close of the calendar year and the account activity during the year, to each individual for whom a SIMPLE account was maintained within 30 days after each calendar year.

Reporting requirements for SIMPLE IRAs.—Trustees of a SIMPLE IRA and the issuer of an annuity for a SIMPLE IRA must furnish an account statement, reflecting the account balance as of the close of the calendar year and the account activity during the year, to each individual for whom a SIMPLE account is maintained within 31 days after each calendar year. The Act conforms the time by which the required account statement for SIMPLE IRAs must be provided to the schedule generally applicable to conventional IRA reports.

Effective date. The provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Notification Requirements

¶ 741

Background

Trustees of a SIMPLE IRA are required, on an annual basis, to provide employers maintaining the arrangement with a summary description disclosing: the name and address of the employer and the trustee; the eligibility requirements for participation; the benefits provided under the plan; the time and method for making salary reduction elections; and the procedures for, and effect of, withdrawals (including rollover distributions) from the plan account. Under prior law, the requirement to provide the summary description did not apply to issuers of annuities for SIMPLE IRAs.

Notification requirements for SIMPLE IRAs.—Issuers of annuities for SIMPLE IRAs must meet reporting requirements that were previously applicable only to trustees of SIMPLE IRAs. Thus, issuers of annuities for SIMPLE IRAs must, on an annual basis, provide the employer maintaining the arrangement with a summary description disclosing: the name and address of the employer and the trustee or issuer; the eligibility requirements for participation; the benefits provided under the plan; the time and method for making salary reduction elections; and the procedures for, and effect of, withdrawals (including rollover distributions) from the plan account.

Planning Note. The IRS, in Notice 97-6 (I.R.B. 1997-2, Q&A H-1), authorized trustees of SIMPLE plans established through the use of Form 5305-SIMPLE to satisfy their reporting obligations by providing the employer with: a current copy of the Form 5305-SIMPLE; instructions and information required for completing Article VI of the form regarding the withdrawal of contributions by employees; and the name and address of the financial institution holding the SIMPLE plan contributions. Presumably, issuers of annuities for SIMPLE IRAs may follow the same procedure.

$50-per-day penalty. An issuer that fails to provide the required summary description, the account statement, or the annual reports is subject to a penalty of $50 per day until the failure is corrected. The penalty may be waived if the reporting failure was due to reasonable cause.

Planning Note. The IRS, in Notice 97-6 (I.R.B. 1997-2, Q&A H-1 and H-2), indicated that a trustee of a SIMPLE IRA will not be assessed a penalty for failing to provide the summary description to the employer, if the employer or trustee has provided the required information to eligible employees within the required time period. In addition, the penalty for failure to provide participants with an account statement will not be imposed if the statement is provided by January 31 following the calendar year to which the statement relates. Again, this guidance should also apply to issuers of annuities for SIMPLE IRAs, as well as to trustees.

Caution. Issuers of an individual retirement annuity are already required to furnish an account statement to each individual maintaining a SIMPLE account and to file an annual report regarding the SIMPLE account with the Treasury Secretary.

Effective date. The provision is applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

SIMPLE 401(k) PLANS

Employer Deduction Amount

¶ 743

Background

An employer's deduction for contributions to a SIMPLE 401(k) plan, unlike contributions to a SIMPLE IRA, under prior law, was limited to 15 percent of the total compensation of plan participants for the year.

Employer deduction for contributions to SIMPLE 401(k) arrangement.—An employer may deduct contributions to a SIMPLE 401(k) plan that are required to be made under Code Sec. 401(k)(11)(B). Under prior law, an employer's deduction for contributions to a SIMPLE 401(k) plan was limited to 15 percent of the total compensation of plan participants for the year. Under the Act, an employer's deduction is limited to the greater of 15 percent of the compensation paid or accrued during the tax year to beneficiaries under a stock bonus or profit-sharing plan, or the amount that the employer is required to contribute to the SIMPLE 401(k) plan for the year. Thus, an employer may deduct contributions to a SIMPLE 401(k) plan that are in excess of 15 percent of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the year.

Caution. In weighing the comparative advantages of a traditional 401(k) plan with a SIMPLE 401(k) plan, it should be noted that an employer's deduction for contributions to a traditional 401(k) plan is limited to 15 percent of the total compensation of plan participants for the year. Of course, an employer's contributions to a traditional 401(k) plan are optional, while an employer must make contributions to a SIMPLE 401(k) plan once it is established.

Planning Note. Employers with a SIMPLE 401(k) plan may maintain other plans as long as employees covered by the SIMPLE 401(k) arrangement are not covered by the other plans. Under Code Sec. 404(a)(3), as amended, an employer that maintains a profit-sharing or stock bonus plan and a SIMPLE 401(k) arrangement may apparently, however, not deduct contributions to both arrangements, but is limited to the greater of the contribution deductions. Thus, if an employer's SIMPLE 401(k) contributions exceed the 15 percent of compensation contributed to the profit-sharing plan, the total amount of the SIMPLE 401(k) contributions may be deducted, but the contribution to the profit-sharing plan could not be deducted. However, the amendment does not allow an employer to deduct contributions to the profit-sharing plan that exceed the 15 percent limit.

Carrying over deduction. In addition, contributions that exceed the applicable deduction limit may be carried over and deducted in succeeding years. The deduction may not exceed the greater of 15 percent of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the tax year to beneficiaries under the stock or bonus plan or the amount the employer is required to contribute to the SIMPLE 401(k) plan.

Planning Note. The deduction limits do not apply to a SIMPLE IRA. Accordingly, an employer may deduct all of the elective deferrals, matching and nonelective contributions to a SIMPLE IRA.

Effective date. The provisions are effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(2)(C), amending Code Sec. 404(a)(3)(A)(i) and (ii); Act Sec. 1601(j)(1). Law at ¶ 5137. Committee Report at ¶ 13,620.

Cost-of-Living Adjustments

¶ 745

Background

The maximum salary reduction contribution that may be made on behalf of any employee under a SIMPLE 401(k) plan is $6,000 per year. Prior law clearly authorized a cost-of-living adjustment to the $6,000 maximum elective deferral that may be made to a SIMPLE IRA. However, the law did not specifically provide for an adjustment to the maximum deferral allowed under a 401(k) SIMPLE plan.

Cost-of-living adjustments (COLAs) for SIMPLE 401(k) arrangements.—The $6,000 annual limit on elective deferrals under a SIMPLE 401(k) plan will be adjusted to reflect changes in the cost of living. The Small Business Job Protection Act (P.L. 104-188), while clearly authorizing an inflation adjustment for the maximum elective deferral to a SIMPLE IRA, did not specifically provide for an adjustment to the maximum deferral allowed under a SIMPLE 401(k) plan.

Planning Note. The adjustment to elective deferrals under a SIMPLE 401(k) plan will be made at the same time and in the same manner as the adjustment for deferrals to a SIMPLE IRA. Cost-of-living adjustments are made in increments of $500. The base period is the calendar quarter ending September 30, 1996. Any increase that is not a multiple of $500 is rounded to the next lowest $500.

Caution. Despite the provision for cost-of-living adjustments, employers willing to bear the additional administrative burdens may allow employees to shelter more money in a traditional 401(k) plan or SEP. Employees may defer up to $9,500 in 1997 under a traditional 401(k) or SEP, compared with $6,000 for a SIMPLE plan. In addition, a traditional 401(k) plan allows an employer to make additional contributions on behalf of an employee up to a limit that, when combined with the employee's elective deferrals, does not exceed $30,000 or 25 percent of the employee's compensation.

Effective date. The provision applies to plan years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Top-Heavy Exemption

Background

A plan that satisfied the SIMPLE 401(k) requirements for a year is exempt from the rules applicable to top-heavy plans under Code Sec. 416. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, confusion had arisen as to whether this top-heavy exemption was limited to plans that allowed only contributions necessary to satisfy the SIMPLE 401(k) rules or also covered other plans of the employer.

Top-heavy exemption for SIMPLE 401(k) arrangements.—A SIMPLE 401(k) plan that authorizes only contributions required to satisfy the SIMPLE 401(k) requirements of Code Sec. 401(k)(11) is exempt from treatment as a "top-heavy" plan under Code Sec. 416. The amendment clarifies the Congressional intent to apply the top-heavy exemption to SIMPLE 401(k) plans only, and not to other 401(k) arrangements maintained by the employer.

Caution. The top-heavy exemption is one of the primary attractions of a SIMPLE 401(k) plan. Plans are considered top-heavy if the sum of the account balances of key employees exceeds 60 percent of the sum of the account balances of all employees under the plan. If a plan is top-heavy, the employer must make a minimum contribution of three percent of compensation for each participant who is not a key employee. Elective deferrals may not be used to satisfy the minimum contribution that must be made for non-key employees in a top-heavy 401(k) plan, nor may matching contributions be directed towards the top-heavy minimum contribution requirements.

Effective date. The amendment applies to plan years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Notification and Election Periods

¶ 749

Background

The Small Business Job Protection Act (SBJPA) (P.L. 104-188) imposed specific obligations on employers maintaining SIMPLE IRAs to notify eligible employees of their right to make or modify salary reduction contributions under the plan. The SBJPA did not expressly address the notification requirements or election periods applicable to SIMPLE 401(k) arrangements. However, the IRS, in Rev. Proc. 97-9 (I.R.B. 1997-2), clarified that requirements could also be applied to SIMPLE 401(k) plans.

Notification and election requirements for SIMPLE 401(k) plans.—An employer maintaining a SIMPLE 401(k) plan must allow employees to make elections to participate in the arrangement and must notify eligible employees, within a stipulated period of time, of their right to participate in the arrangement and to make or modify salary reduction contributions. The Act effectively extends the notice and election requirements applicable to SIMPLE IRAs to SIMPLE 401(k) plans.

Election requirements. In Rev. Proc. 97-9 (I.R.B. 1997-2), the IRS explained that each eligible employee may make or modify a salary reduction (elective deferral) during the 60-day period immediately preceding each January 1. For the year an employee becomes eligible to make elective deferrals, the 60-day election period requirement is deemed to be satisfied if the employee may make or modify a salary reduction election during a 60-day period that includes either the date the employee becomes eligible or the day before. The Act codifies these rules and applies the election requirements governing SIMPLE IRAs under Code Sec. 408(p)(5) to SIMPLE 401(k) arrangements.

Example (1). ABC Company maintains a SIMPLE 401(k) plan. For the 1998 calendar year, employees of ABC must be allowed to make a salary reduction election during the period between November 2 to December 31, 1997.

Example (2). XYZ Company establishes a SIMPLE 401(k) plan, effective as of July 1, 1997. Employees become eligible to make elective deferrals on that date. The 60-day period must begin no later than July 1 and may not end before June 30, 1997.

Planning Note. In Notice 97-6 (I.R.B. 1997-2), the IRS explained that for the year in which an employee becomes eligible to make elective deferrals to a SIMPLE IRA, these contributions must be allowed to begin as soon as the employee becomes eligible, regardless of whether the 60-day period has ended. Presumably, this rule will now also apply to employees participating in SIMPLE 401(k) plans. Similarly, as a SIMPLE IRA is not precluded from adopting additional or longer election periods, such as 90 days, a SIMPLE 401(k) plan should also not be prohibited from instituting a longer election period.

Termination of participation. An employee participating in a SIMPLE 401(k) plan may terminate a salary reduction election at any time during the year. The Act, by applying the rules governing SIMPLE IRAs under Code Sec. 408(p)(5)(B) to SIMPLE 401(k) plans, provides that if an employee terminates a salary reduction election, the plan may refuse to allow the employee to resume participation until the beginning of the next calendar year.

Notification of election period. An employer maintaining a SIMPLE 401(k) plan must notify each employee eligible to participate in the arrangement of the employee's right during the governing 60-day period discussed above to make or modify a salary reduction contribution to the plan. The notice must be provided within a reasonable period of time before the 60th day before the beginning of the year, or for the first year of the employee's eligibility, the 60th day before the first day the employee is eligible.

Caution. It is the responsibility of the employer and not the trustee to inform employees of their rights under the SIMPLE 401(k) plan.

Planning Note. The requirement that an employer maintaining a SIMPLE IRA include a copy of the summary description prepared by the trustee for the employer in the notice presumably now also applies to employers establishing SIMPLE 401(k) arrangements. In addition, according to IRS Notice 97-9, the notice must also indicate whether the employer will provide a three-percent matching contribution or a two-percent nonelective contribution.

Caution. Employers maintaining SIMPLE IRAs who fail to satisfy the notice requirement are subject to a penalty of $50 per day until the notice is provided.

Presumably, employers who fail to provide the required notice to employees participating in SIMPLE 401(k) arrangements would incur the same penalty.

Effective date. The provisions apply to calendar years beginning after August 5, 1997.

ESOPs

S Corporations—Cash Distributions and Prohibited Transactions

¶ 752

Background

ESOP participants generally have the right to demand that their ESOP distributions be made in employer securities, unless the employer's charter or bylaws restrict ownership of substantially all outstanding employer securities to employees or a trust (i.e., the ESOP). Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, this rule also applied to an ESOP maintained or established by an S corporation even though the ESOP provided that the participants had the right to receive distributions in cash.

Additionally, under prior law, the statutory exemptions to the prohibited transaction rules for ESOPs in general did not apply to certain transactions involving shareholder employees of S corporations that maintain ESOPs.

Cash distribution option and prohibited transaction exemption for ESOPs of S corporations.—The Act provides that ESOPs established or maintained by S corporations need not give participants the right to demand their distributions in the form of employer securities, if they have the right to receive such distributions in cash. This was added as an exception to the prior law requirement that ESOP participants have the right to demand stock distributions. The Act also creates a statutory exemption from the prohibited transaction rules for ESOPs established or maintained by S corporations by exempting the sale of employer securities to the ESOP by a shareholder employee, family member of the shareholder employee, or corporation in which the shareholder employee owns at least 50 percent of the stock.

Caution. The Conference Committee Report, which states that the House bill provides that ESOPs of S corporations may distribute cash to plan participants as long as the employee has a right to require the employer to purchase employer securities, conflicts with the House bill.

Effective date. These provisions apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

S Corporations and Unrelated Business Income Tax

Background

Under prior law, in the case of an ESOP that was a shareholder in an S corporation, items of income or loss of the S corporation were treated as unrelated business taxable income for the ESOP. The items of income or loss of the S corporation "flowed through" to such ESOPs, resulting in taxation of the UBTI amounts both at the ESOP level and again when benefits were distributed to ESOP participants.

Repeal of application of UBIT to ESOPs of S corporations.—Employee stock ownership plans (ESOPs) may be shareholders of S corporations in post-1997 tax years. Under the Act, in the case of an ESOP that is an S corporation shareholder, items of income or loss of the S corporation will not be treated as unrelated business taxable income (UBTI). Previously, such items were treated as UBTI.

According to the Senate Finance Committee Report, it is believed that the prior law inappropriately resulted in taxation of these amounts both at the ESOP level and then again when benefits were distributed to ESOP participants.

Effective date. This provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

GOVERNMENT PLANS

Nondiscrimination Rules

¶ 758

Background

Under prior law, governmental plans were not required to comply with certain nondiscrimination rules until plan years beginning on or after the later of (1) January 1, 1999 or (2) 90 days after the opening of the first legislative session beginning on or after January 1, 1999. This deadline was the result of an extension provided by the IRS in Announcement 95-48, I.R.B. 1995-23, 13, and other IRS releases. Government plans were "deemed" to satisfy the nondiscrimination requirements for those plan years that began before the extended effective date.

The nondiscrimination rules include those that prohibited discrimination in favor of highly compensated employees with regard to contributions and benefits, participation, coverage, and the compensation taken into account under the plan.

Extension of moratorium on application of certain nondiscrimination rules to employee retirement plans sponsored by state and local governments.—Under the Act, governmental retirement plans are exempt from minimum coverage requirements and nondiscrimination rules that include the minimum participation standards, the 50-40 minimum number of participants rule, the rule barring discrimination in contributions and benefits in favor of highly compensated employees, the participation and actual deferral percentage nondiscrimination rules applicable to 401(k) plans, and nondiscrimination requirements applicable to contributions made to 403(b) annuities. In addition, the Committee Report states that governmental plans are also exempted from the nondiscrimination rules involving the actual contribution percentage test.

With respect to the participation and nondiscrimination standards applicable to 401(k) plans, the Act provides that a cash or deferred arrangement under a governmental plan will be treated as a qualified cash or deferred arrangement, even if the actual deferral percentage test is not satisfied.

Previous extension of deadline for compliance. The IRS had previously granted governmental plans an extension for complying with certain nondiscrimination rules. The extended deadline for compliance was the later of (1) January 1, 1999 or (2) 90 days after the opening of the first legislative session beginning on or after January 1, 1999. The Act permanently exempts governmental plans from having to comply with the rules.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Fred Reish of Reish & Luftman, Los Angeles, notes that the Tax Reform Act of 1986 extended a number of the private-sector qualification rules to governmental plans. State and local governments lobbied for repeal of many of these provisions on the basis that they were not appropriate for governmental plans. The effective date of the coverage and nondiscrimination rules were, as a consequence, repeatedly extended. The effect of Act Sec. 1505 is to eliminate the application of the coverage rules of Code Secs. 410 and 401(a)(26) and the nondiscrimination rules of Code Sec. 401(a)(4) for government plans, thus dramatically reducing the burden of compliance for these plans. State and local governments view this as welcome and deserved recognition of the difficulty in applying complex rules to their retirement plans.

Effective date. The amendments made by this provision are effective with respect to tax years beginning on or after August 5, 1997. In addition, governmental plans will be retroactively treated as satisfying the coverage and nondiscrimination tests for all tax years beginning before August 5, 1997.

Permissive Service Credit

¶ 760

Background

Under prior law, retirement plans sponsored by state or local governments were subject to special contribution and benefit limits. Employee contributions to a governmental plan were treated as made by the employer if the employer "picked up" the contribution.

Portability of permissive service credits under governmental pension plans.—Many state or local governmental plans ease portability of pension benefits by permitting employees to purchase credit for service with another governmental employer and for certain other service, as provided in the plan. In an effort to encourage portability of benefits between governmental plans, the Act provides that, when applying the defined benefit plan limits, the annual benefit under a state or local governmental plan includes accrued benefits derived from contributions to purchase permissive service credits. These contributions are also taken into account in determining annual additions to defined contribution plans.

Permissive service credits defined. Permissive service credits are defined as credits for a period of service recognized by the governmental plan (and which the employee has not received under the plan) only if the employee voluntarily contributes an amount (as actuarially determined by the plan) which does not exceed the amount necessary to fund the benefit attributable to the period of service. This contribution must be in addition to regular contributions, if any, to the plan.

A special rule applies for the repayment of cashouts under governmental plans. Under this rule, if any repayment of contributions and earnings is made to a governmental plan regarding an amount that was previously refunded due to a forfeiture of service credit under the plan (or under another plan maintained by a state or local government employer within the same state), any such repayment is not taken into account for purposes of Code Sec. 415. In addition, service credit obtained as a result of the repayment is not considered permissive service credit, according to the Conference Committee Report.

Limits on contributions to purchase permissive service credits. A participant's contributions in a state or local governmental plan to purchase permissive service credits are subject to one of two limits.

Under the first alternative, the accrued benefit derived from all contributions to purchase permissive service credit must be taken into account in determining whether the Code Sec. 415(b) defined benefit plan limit is satisfied. Under this alternative, a plan does not fail to satisfy the reduced defined benefit plan limit that applies in cases of early retirement due to the accrued benefit (under Code Sec. 415(b)(2)(C)) derived from the purchase of permissive service credits. These limits may be applied on a participant-by-participant basis (i.e., contributions used to purchase permissive service credits by all participants in the same plan do not have to satisfy the same limit).

Under the second alternative, all such contributions must be taken into account in determining whether the Code Sec. 415(c) limit on annual additions to a defined contribution plan is met (taking into account any of the participant's other annual additions). Under this alternative, a plan will not fail to satisfy the 25 percent of compensation prong of the Code Sec. 415(c) defined contribution plan limit solely by reason of the permissive service credit rules.

Caution. According to the Conference Committee Report, this provision is not intended to affect the application of "pick-up" contributions to purchase permissive service credit or the treatment of "pick up" contributions under the Code Sec. 415 limits. However, language specifically expressing this intent was dropped from the final version of the Act.

Nonqualified service. Code Sec. 415 is violated if more than five years of permissive service credit is purchased for "nonqualified service." There is also a violation of Code Sec. 415 if nonqualified service is taken into account for an employee who has less than five years of participation under the plan.

"Nonqualified service" is defined as service other than (1) service as a federal, state, or local government employee; (2) service as an employee of an association representing federal, state, or local government employees; (3) service as an employee of an elementary or secondary school; or (4) military service. However, service as a government employee, an employee of an association representing government employees, or as a school employee under definitions (1), (2), and (3), above, is not qualified if it enables a participant to receive a retirement benefit for the same service under more than one plan.

Planning Note. For this purpose, "service" as a government employee or as a school employee specifically includes parental, medical, sabbatical, and similar leave.

Effective date. In general, this provision is effective for contributions to purchase permissive service credits made in years beginning after December 31, 1997.

However, a transition rule applies for plans that provided for the purchase of permissive service credit on August 5, 1997. Under the transition rule, the defined contribution plan limits on contributions and additions do not reduce the amount of permissive service credits an eligible participant is allowed to purchase under the plan's terms as in effect on August 5, 1997. An "eligible participant," for purposes of the transition rule, is a person who first became a plan participant before the first plan year beginning after the last day of the calendar year in which the next regular session (after August 5, 1997) of the government body with authority to amend the plan ends.

Act Sec. 1526, adding Code Sec. 415(k)(3) and (n). Law at ¶ 5153. Committee Report at ¶ 13,385.

Police and Fire Employee Plans

¶ 764

Background

The limit on annual benefits under a defined benefit plan is the lesser of 100 percent of compensation or $90,000 ($125,000 after adjustment for inflation in 1997). If retirement benefits under a defined benefit plan begin before the social security retirement age, the adjusted dollar limit must be reduced actuarially so that it is the actuarial equivalent of an annual benefit equal to the adjusted dollar limitation, beginning at the social security retirement age.

Prior law provided special rules for police officers and firemen. The reduction in the adjusted dollar limit would not go below $50,000 ($70,000 after adjustment for inflation in 1997) and if retirement benefits began before age 62, the adjusted dollar limit would have to be reduced actuarially so that it was the actuarial equivalent of an annual benefit equal to the adjusted dollar limitation, beginning at age 62.

Defined benefit limits for police and firemen.—The reduction in the annual dollar limitation on retirement benefits for police officers and firemen who retire at age 62 has been removed by the Act. The $125,000 defined benefit plan dollar limit continues to apply to these individuals. Thus, police officers or firemen who retire at age 62 in 1997 or later will be entitled to a benefit of up to $125,000 (as adjusted for inflation in 1997) without exceeding the limitations under Code Sec. 415 each year. According to the Conference Committee Report, the annual dollar limit is increased for such employees if benefits begin after age 65, as under present law.

Effective date. Effective for years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1527(a), amending Code Sec. 415(b)(2)(G); Act Sec. 1527(b). Law at ¶ 5153. Committee Report at ¶ 13,395.

CHURCH PLANS AND MINISTERS

Contributions for Self-Employed Ministers

¶ 766

Background

Contributions made to retirement plans by ministers who were self-employed were deductible to the extent such contributions did not exceed certain limitations applicable to retirement plans. These limitations included the limit on elective deferrals, the exclusion allowance, and the limit on annual additions to a retirement plan.

Treatment of ministers as church employees.—Contributions to a church plan made on behalf of a minister who is self-employed are excludable from the minister's income to the extent that the contribution would be excludable if the minister was an employee of the church and the contribution was made to the plan.

According to the Conference Committee Report, this change does not alter the existing requirements under which amounts contributed on behalf of a minister under Code Sec. 403(b) by the minister's actual employer or by any church or convention or association of churches that is treated as the minister's employer under Code Sec. 414(e) are excluded from the minister's income. Further, a minister's contributions (made under Code Sec. 403(b)) as an employee or self-employed person are deductible, as provided by Code Sec. 404 and other rules under Code Sec. 414(e).

Effective date. This special rule applies to years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Discrimination Testing

¶ 768

Background

Ministers who are employed by an organization other than a church are treated as if employed by the church and can participate in the retirement plan sponsored by the church. If the organization also sponsored a retirement plan, that plan did not have to include the ministers as employees for purposes of satisfying the nondiscrimination rules applicable to qualified plans so long as the organization was not eligible to participate in the church plan.

Organization not participating in church plan.—If a minister is employed by an organization other than a church and the organization is not otherwise participating in a church plan, then the minister does not have to be included as an employee under the retirement plan of the organization for purposes of the nondiscrimination rule.

Formerly, the minister would have been counted for nondiscrimination purposes if the organization was eligible to participate in the church plan.

Effective date. This new rule applies to years beginning after December 31, 1997.

EMPLOYEE ANNUITIES

Code Sec. 403(b) Exclusion Allowance

¶ 776

Background

In general, the exclusion allowance under Code Sec. 403(b) limits the annual contributions that can be made on behalf of an employee to a Code Sec. 403(b) plan. Such limit may be determined under Code Sec. 415 rather than Code Sec. 403(b), at the election of the employee.

Under prior law, the definition of includible compensation for purposes of the exclusion allowance excluded elective deferrals and contributions made on behalf of an employee to a cafeteria plan or Code Sec. 457 plan which were not includible in the employee's gross income.

Also, the regulations under Code Sec. 403(b) that relate to the exclusion allowance refer to the combined plan benefit limit under Code Sec. 415 which was repealed by the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188).

Modification of Section 403(b) exclusion allowance to conform to Section 415 modifications.—The Act amends the definition of includible compensation for purposes of the exclusion allowance under Code Sec. 403(b) to include elective deferrals and any amounts contributed or deferred by the employer at the election of the employee under a cafeteria plan (Code Sec. 125 plan) or a plan maintained by a tax-exempt organization or State or local government (Code Sec. 457 plan) which are not includible in the employee's gross income. The Act thus conforms the definition of includible compensation to the definition of compensation in Code Sec. 415(c).

Additionally, the Act directs the Secretary of the Treasury to modify the regulations regarding the exclusion allowance under Code Sec. 403(b)(2) to reflect the repeal of the combined plan benefit limitation under Code Sec. 415(e) by the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188).

Effective date. The amendment of the definition of includible compensation is effective for years beginning after December 31, 1997. The modification to the regulations regarding the exclusion allowance will take effect for years beginning after December 31, 1999.

Indian Tribal Government Plans

¶ 779

Background

Under prior law, it was unclear whether 403(b) annuity contracts purchased by Indian tribal governments had to be terminated in order for rollovers to 401(k) plans to be allowed.

Rollover from 403(b) plan to 401(k) plan.—Employees participating in 403(b) annuities offered by Indian tribal governments may roll over amounts received from the 403(b) plan to a 401(k) plan sponsored by the Indian tribal government. This rollover is permitted whether or not the annuity contract is terminated.

Effective date. This provision is effective as if included in the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996. As a result, it it effective August 20, 1996.

Basis Recovery Rules

¶ 781

Background

A simplified method is provided for determining the portion of an annuity distribution from a qualified retirement plan, qualified annuity, or tax-sheltered annuity that represents the nontaxable return of basis.

Under the simplified method, the portion of each annuity payment that represents nontaxable return of basis is generally equal to the employee's total investment in the contract as of the annuity starting date, divided by the number of anticipated payments, which are determined by reference to the age of the participant as listed in the table below:

Age of Distributee	Number of Payments
55 and under	360
56-60	310
61-65	260
66-70	210
71 and over	160

This table for determining anticipated payments did not differ depending on whether the annuity was payable in the form of a single life annuity or a joint and survivor annuity. Applying the table for single life annuities to joint and survivor annuities understated the expected payments under a joint and survivor annuity.

Basis recovery rules for annuities.—The Act requires one table to be applied to benefits based on the life of one annuitant for amounts received as an annuity under a tax-qualified pension plan and a separate table to be applied to benefits based on the life of more than one annuitant for amounts received as an annuity.

The table for one annuitant (same as under current law) is:

Age of Annuitant	Number of Payments
not more than 55	360
more than 55 but not more than 60	310
more than 60 but not more than 65	260
more than 65 but not more than 70	210
more than 70	160

The new table based on the lives of more than one annuitant:

Combined Age of Annuitants	Number of Payments
not more than 110	410
more than 110 but not more than 120	360
more than 120 but not more than 130	310
more than 130 but not more than 140	260
more than 140	210

According to the Conference Committee Report, the new table applies to benefits based on the life of multiple annuitants even if the amount of the annuity varies by annuitant. Thus, it applies to a 50-percent joint and survivor annuity.

Effective date. Effective for annuity starting dates beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1075(a), adding Code Sec. 72(d)(1)(B)(iv); Act Sec. 1075(b), amending Code Sec. 72(d)(1)(B)(iii); Act Sec. 1075(c). Law at ¶ 5041. Committee Report at ¶ 11,485.

SARSEPs

New Employees

¶ 785

Background

Salary reduction SEPs (SARSEPs) were repealed for years beginning after December 31, 1996. Thus, an employer could not establish a SARSEP after 1996. However, SARSEPs established before 1997 could continue to receive contributions under the pre-1997 rules.

Under pre-1997 rules, the election to have amounts contributed to a SARSEP was available only if:

1. at least 50% of employees who were eligible to participate elected to have amounts contributed to the plan, and

2. the employer did not have more than 25 eligible employees at any time during the preceding tax year.

Prior to the 1997 Act, it was not certain whether employees hired after 1996 could participate in an existing SARSEP.

New employees may participate in SARSEPs.—The Act clarifies that new employees hired after December 31, 1996, may participate in the salary reduction SEP (SARSEP) of their employer established prior to January 1, 1997.

Effective date.—This clarification is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

GATT

Interest and Mortality Rate Provisions

¶ 788

Background

The Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) amended the Uruguay Round Agreements Act (implementing legislation for the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade ("GATT")) to permit plans to apply pre-GATT law under Code Sec. 415(b)(2)(E) for a transition period. However, the Small Business Act provision included a parenthetical phrase that thwarted such intent.

Correction of GATT interest and mortality rate provisions.—Plans may apply, for a transition period, the interest and mortality rate assumptions that existed under Code Sec. 415 prior to the modification of such assumptions by the Uruguay Round Agreements Act (implementing legislation for the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade ("GATT")). In the case of a plan that was adopted and in effect before December 8, 1994, such GATT changes are not effective with respect to benefits accrued before the earlier of (1) the later of the date a plan amendment applying the amendments is adopted or made effective or (2) the first day of the first limitation year beginning after December 31, 1999. The actuarial assumptions for such benefits are to be determined on the basis of Code Sec. 415(b)(2)(E) as in effect on December 7, 1994 and the provisions of the plan as in effect on December 7, 1994, but only if the provisions of the plan satisfy the requirements of Code Sec. 415(b)(2)(E) then in effect.

A provision in the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 was enacted to permit the application of pre-GATT law. However, since that intent was not effectively carried out by that provision, the Act conforms the Uruguay Round Agreements Act to such intent by amending its statutory (the GATT's) language.

Effective date. These provisions are effective for plan years and limitation years beginning after December 31, 1994, except that an employer may elect to treat them as being effective on or after December 8, 1994.

PLAN AMENDMENTS UNDER ACT

Date for Adoption

¶ 790

Background

Employers have generally been required to amend their plans to reflect changes implemented by prior legislation by the deadline prescribed for filing their income tax returns for the tax year in which the change occurred.

Date for adoption of plan amendments.—Employers are not required to amend a plan or annuity contract to reflect changes implemented by the Act before the first day of the first plan year beginning on or after January 1, 1999. Governmental plans need not be amended to reflect the provisions of the Act until the first day of the first plan year beginning on or after January 1, 2001.

According to the Conference Committee Report, employers may adopt an amendment before the time period prescribed by the Act. However, in order to avoid losing its qualified status for failing to be operated in accordance with its terms or violating the anti-cutback rules applicable to qualified plans, the plan or annuity contract must be operated as if the amendment were in effect during the period between the effective date of the legislative change (or the effective date specified by the plan for amendments not required by the Act) and the amendment period prescribed by the Act (see above), or the date the amendment is adopted. Additionally, the amendment must apply retroactively to such period.

Chapter 8

Health and Life Insurance

MEDICAL SAVINGS ACCOUNTS

Alternative Minimum Tax

¶ 801

Background ___

Under prior law, unlike the additional tax imposed on early withdrawals from IRAs or from qualified retirement plans, the 15 percent additional tax on MSA distributions was treated as a tax liability for purposes of the alternative minimum tax rules under Code Sec. 26. MSA distributions that are not made for medical purposes are subject to an additional tax of 15 percent unless the distribution is made after age 65 or on account of death or disability.

Additional tax on MSA distributions that are not used for medical purposes.—The 15-percent additional tax on medical savings account distributions that are used for nonmedical purposes (i.e., not qualified medical expenses within the meaning of Code Sec. 220(d)) is not treated as a tax liability for purposes of the alternative minimum tax.

Effective date. This provision is effective as if included in the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996. As a result, it is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1602(a)(1), adding Code Sec. 26(b)(2)(P) and amending Code Sec. 26(b)(2)(N) and (O); Act Sec. 1602(i). Law at ¶ 5011. Committee Report at ¶ 13,755.

Permitted Coverage

¶ 804

Background

A person is ineligible for a medical savings account if he or she is covered by another plan that is not a high deductible health plan, except for plans that provide certain kinds of permitted coverage. Under prior law, participation in a Medicare supplemental plan was disregarded for purposes of the MSA eligibility rules even though a person covered by Medicare was not eligible for an MSA before passage of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997.

Coverage under Medicare supplemental policies.—An individual with Medicare supplemental insurance is ineligible to have a medical savings account. Medicare supplement policies are deleted from the list of "permitted insurance" for purposes of the MSA eligibility rules.

Planning Note. Under the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, eligible seniors are entitled to establish Medicare medical savings accounts called "MedicarePlus Choice MSAs." See ¶ 817. This pilot program will go into effect for tax years beginning after 1998. Under prior law, people covered by Medicare were ineligible for MSA participation.

Effective date. This provision is effective as if included in the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996. As a result, it applies for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1602(a)(2), amending Code Sec. 220(c)(3)(A); Act Sec. 1602(i). Law at ¶ 5087. Committee Report at ¶ 13,760.

Taxation of Distributions

¶ 807

Background

In addition to coverage only under a high deductible health plan and under no other health plan (except for certain types of permitted coverage), prior law also required that, during years in which medical savings account contributions are made, the person who incurred the medical expenses had to be either self-employed or employed by a small business in order for distributions from the MSA to be excludable from income.

Taxation of MSA distributions.—For any year in which a medical savings account contribution is made, MSA withdrawals are excludable from income only if the person for whom the MSA-related expenses were incurred is covered under a high deductible health plan and under no other health plan (except for certain types of permitted coverage, such as for disease-specific insurance) during the month in which the expenses were incurred. This provision clarifies that the person who incurs a medical expense does not have to be self-employed or employed by a small business in order to exclude an MSA withdrawal for medical expenses.

Effective date. This provision is effective as if included in the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996. As a result, it applies for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1602(a)(3), amending Code Sec. 220(d)(2)(C); Act Sec. 1602(i). Law at ¶ 5087. Committee Report at ¶ 13,765.

Required Reports

¶ 811

Background

Medical savings account trustees who fail to provide required reports to the Secretary of the Treasury or to MSA account holders face a $50 penalty for each failure to provide a required report. Under prior law, a separate penalty applied for failure to provide information returns.

Failure to provide required reports for MSAs.—The $50 penalty that applies for each failure to provide required medical savings account reports does not apply to information returns described in Code Sec. 6724(d)(1)(C)(i) or to payee statements described in Code Sec. 6724(d)(2)(X).

Effective date. This provision is effective as though included in the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996. As a result, it is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1602(a)(4), amending Code Sec. 6693(a); Act Sec. 1602(i). Law at ¶ 5703. Committee Report at ¶ 13,770.

Prohibited Transactions

¶ 814

Background

Under prior law, the prohibited transaction penalty exemption applied to persons for whom medical savings accounts were established only if the account ceased to be an MSA because of the Code Sec. 220(e)(2) rules.

Special exemption for MSAs.—Individuals for whom medical savings accounts are established are exempt from the 10 percent penalty (15 percent for transactions after August 5, 1997) imposed under Code Sec. 4975 on prohibited transactions if Code Sec. 220(e)(2) applies to the transaction. A requirement that the transaction is exempt from the prohibited transactions penalty only if the account ceases to be an MSA because of the Code Sec. 220(e)(2) rules has been eliminated.

Under Code Sec. 220(e)(2), an MSA loses its exempt status if the person for whom the MSA is created engages in a prohibited transaction. It also requires that, if the person for whom the MSA is created pledges all or part of the account as security for a loan, the portion so used is treated as distributed to the person. The effect of a Code Sec. 220(e)(2) violation is that any amount treated as distributed under the rules is treated as not used to pay medical expenses under the MSA.

Caution: In addition to inclusion in gross income, MSA distributions that are not used for medical purposes are still subject to a 15 percent penalty under Code Sec. 220(e)(4). Exceptions apply where distributions are made on account of death or disability. Distributions from an MSA occurring after the date the person reaches the age of Medicare eligibility are also exempt from the penalty.

Effective date. This provision is effective as if included in the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996. As a result, it is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1602(a)(5), amending Code Sec. 4975(c)(4); Act Sec. 1602(i). Law at ¶ 5529.

MEDICAREPLUS CHOICE MEDICAL SAVINGS ACCOUNTS

Pilot Program

¶ 817

Background

Under prior law, individuals on Medicare were not entitled to establish a medical savings account. As a result, seniors were unable to defray unreimbursed health care expenses on a tax-favored basis through an MSA.

MedicarePlus Choice medical savings accounts (MSAs) available in pilot program.—Under prior law, individuals on Medicare were not entitled to establish a medical savings account. However, for tax years beginning after December 31, 1998, Congress has authorized a four-year pilot program that permits eligible seniors to establish MSAs called "MedicarePlus Choice MSAs." These MSAs are, in many ways, similar to the MSAs instituted by the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-191) in that eligible individuals, or account holders, will be able to use MSA contributions to pay health care expenses. However, MedicarePlus Choice MSAs must be used in conjunction with a high deductible MedicarePlus Choice MSA health plan ("MSA plan"). The program is a test and will be available on a first-come, first-serve basis to the first 390,000 eligible seniors. The pilot program ends December 31, 2002.

MedicarePlus Choice MSAs must meet certain legal requirements in addition to those set forth in Code Sec. 220(d), which governs non-Medicare medical savings accounts. These requirements are:

(1) The MSA must be designated as a MedicarePlus Choice MSA.

(2) Contributions must be made by the Secretary of Health and Human Services or by the trustee of another MedicarePlus Choice MSA through a trustee-to-trustee transfer (see ¶ 819).

(3) The trust document must authorize trustee-to-trustee transfers.

(4) The MSA must be established in conjunction with an MSA plan.

The trustee of the MedicarePlus Choice MSA must be either a bank, insurance company, or other person approved by the Secretary of the Treasury.

MSA plan. As noted above, a MedicarePlus Choice MSA must be established in conjunction with an MSA plan. An MSA plan is a new type of health plan that requires a certain deductible to be satisfied before a senior citizen's medical expenses are reimbursed. The amount of the annual deductible under an MSA plan may not exceed $6,000 in 1999. This amount will be indexed for inflation thereafter.

Effective date. Provisions amending the Social Security Act are effective August 5, 1997 and apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998. Provisions amending the Code are effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

Tax Advantages

¶ 819

Tax advantages of MedicarePlus Choice MSAs.—Under the law, the Secretary of Health and Human Services will make contributions to the MedicarePlus Choice MSAs. According to the Committee Report, these contributions are excluded from the individual's annual gross income. Further, any earnings on amounts held in an MSA are not included in taxable income for the current year.

Taxation of distributions. According to the Committee Report, distributions for qualified medical expenses incurred for the benefit of the account holder are excluded from income. Distributions are deductible regardless of whether the account holder is enrolled in an MSA plan at the time of the distribution.

However, distributions for other purposes are includible in taxable income and may even be subject to an additional penalty if they exceed a certain amount. See ¶ 825.

Certain nonmedical-related distributions do not trigger a taxable event. Under the law:

(1) a transfer of funds from one MedicarePlus Choice MSA of an account holder to another MedicarePlus Choice MSA of the same account holder (called a "trustee-to-trustee transfer") does not trigger a taxable event;

(2) contributions made in error by the Secretary and Health and Human Services may be returned to the Secretary (along with any earnings) without tax consequences to the account holder; and

(3) according to the Committee Report, after-death distributions for the qualified medical expenses of a surviving spouse or spouse's dependents are not taxable where the surviving spouse is the named beneficiary. See discussion below.

Limits on contributions. A MedicarePlus Choice MSA is an MSA as defined in Code Sec. 220(d). As such, contributions are subject to an annual limitation, which is 75 percent of the individual's deductible of the required MSA plan. As an example, the yearly contribution for an account holder that has an MSA plan with an annual deductible of $6,000 may not exceed $4,500.

Under a special formula, if the amount of the individual's MSA plan's premium is less than 1/12 of the applicable annual MedicarePlus Choice capitation rate, 100 percent of the difference will be deposited in the MSA.

Estate tax. The value of the MedicarePlus Choice MSA is included in the account holder's gross estate for estate tax purposes, according to the Committee Report.

Distributions after death. According to the Committee Report, a surviving spouse named as a beneficiary may continue the MSA for himself or herself, but no new contributions may be made. Distributions from the account for the qualified medical expenses of the surviving spouse or the spouse's dependents are not includible in income. In addition, earnings on the account balance are not includible in income. Finally, distributions that are not used for medical expenses are includible in income and are subject to an additional 15 percent tax unless made after age 65, or due to death or disability.

Caution. If the named beneficiary is not the surviving spouse, the value of the MSA as of the date of the account holder's death must be included in the taxable income of the beneficiary for the taxable year in which the death occurred. If no beneficiary is named, the value of the MSA as of the date of death must be included in the taxable income of the account holder's final income tax return.

Effective date. Provisions amending the Social Security Act are effective on August 5, 1997 and apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998. Provisions amending the Code are effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

Eligibility

¶ 821

Who is eligible for a MedicarePlus Choice MSA.—MedicarePlus Choice MSAs are available to certain Medicare-eligible individuals in MedicarePlus Choice MSA plans. For the year 1999, the maximum deductible for an MSA plan is $6,000. This amount will be indexed for inflation in subsequent years.

Individuals suffering from end-stage renal disease may not enroll in an MSA plan and, therefore, may not establish a MedicarePlus Choice MSA. However, individuals who develop end-stage renal disease while enrolled in an MSA plan may continue to participate in that plan. In addition, individuals must reside in the United States for at least 183 days during any year of enrollment in an MSA plan. Availability is limited to the first 390,000 applicants.

The account holder must establish the MSA before the beginning of the month in which the Secretary of Health and Human Services is required to make contributions. Further, if the account holder has established more than one MedicarePlus Choice MSA, one account must be designated as the account for purposes of receiving contributions. According to the law, the Secretary will make lump-sum deposits of the entire yearly contribution during the first month of the MSA.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997 and applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

Act Sec. 4001 of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, amending Title XVIII of the Social Security Act. Law at ¶ 7091. Committee Report at ¶ 20,010.

Distributions

Special rules for MSA distributions.—Monies held in MedicarePlus Choice MSAs can only be used to pay for the account holder's "qualified medical expenses," as defined in Code Sec. 213(d). Generally, amounts paid for the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of disease are considered qualified medical expenses.

Under the Conference Committee Report, distributions may not be used to pay insurance premiums, other than premiums for long-term care insurance, COBRA, or premiums for coverage while an individual is receiving unemployment compensation.

Caution. Only expenses relating to the medical care of the account holder are considered qualified medical expenses for purposes of a MedicarePlus Choice MSA. Therefore, distributions used to pay for medical expenses of the account holder's spouse, children, or other dependents will trigger a taxable event.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

Act Sec. 4006 of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, redesignating Code Sec. 138 as Code Sec. 139 and adding a new Code Sec. 138; adding Code Sec. 220(b)(7) and amending Code Sec. 4973(d). Law at ¶ 5060, 5060A, 5087, and 5527. Committee Report at ¶ 20,015.

Penalties

When penalties apply.—To the extent that distributions for purposes other than qualified medical expenses exceed the amount by which the value of the MSA plan as of December 31 of the preceding tax year exceeds 60 percent of the deductible of the MSA plan, an additional 50 percent tax applies. However, the additional tax does not apply to distributions made on account of the disability or death of the account holder.

> Example. In 1999, Lauren Dwyer enrolls in a MedicarePlus Choice MSA health plan having a $3,000 deductible. As of December 31, 2000, the value of Dwyer's MSA is $2,250. In 2001, Dwyer withdraws the full amount ($2,250) from her MedicarePlus Choice MSA to pay for insurance premiums. To calculate the penalty:
> (1) First, determine the extent to which value of the MSA as of December 31, 2000 ($2,250), exceeds 60 percent of the plan deductible ($1,800): $450.
> (2) Subtract amount in (1) ($450) from the total amount of unqualified distributions ($2,250): $1,800.

In the example above, Dwyer must pay tax on the entire distribution ($2,250) since insurance premiums are not "qualified medical expenses" and an additional 50 percent tax on $1,800.

For purposes of the penalty tax, all payments and distributions not used to pay the qualified medical expenses of the account holder during any tax year are treated as one distribution. Any distribution shall be taken into account at its fair market value on the date of the distribution.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

Act Sec. 4006 of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, redesignating Code Sec. 138 as Code Sec. 139 and adding a new Code Sec. 138; adding Code Sec. 220(b)(7) and amending Code Sec. 4973(d). Law at ¶ 5060, 5060A, 5087, and 5527. Committee Report at ¶ 20,015.

Reporting

¶ 827

What must be included in reports.—Trustees may be required to file reports with the Secretary of the Treasury regarding any account in accordance with Code Sec. 220(h). Such reports must disclose the fair market value of the assets in the MedicarePlus Choice MSA as of the close of each calendar year.

The reports must also be furnished to the account holders no later than January 31 of the calendar year following the calendar year to which such reports relate. According to the Committee Report, a trustee who fails to file a report without reasonable cause will be subject to a $50 penalty.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

Act Sec. 4006 of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, redesignating Code Sec. 138 as Code Sec. 139 and adding a new Code Sec. 138; adding Code Sec. 220(b)(7) and amending Code Sec. 4973(d). Law at ¶ 5060, 5060A, 5087, and 5527. Committee Report at ¶ 20,015.

Limit on Number of MedicarePlus Choice MSAs

¶ 829

National limit of 390,000 seniors.—MedicarePlus Choice MSAs will be available to Medicare eligible individuals on a first-come, first-serve basis until a national limit of 390,000 is reached.

Whether an individual has established a MedicarePlus Choice MSA plan will not be taken into account when determining whether the national limits for MSAs under Code Sec. 220(j) have been exceeded.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997 and applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE CONTRACTS

Definition of Chronically Ill Individual

¶ 835

Background

The Code provides three alternative definitions of a "chronically ill individual" for purposes of the rules on qualified long-term care insurance. A chronically ill individual is someone who (1) is unable to perform (without substantial assistance) at least two activities of daily living for at least 90 days; (2) meets a regulatory definition of chronically ill; or (3) requires substantial supervision to protect him or her from health and safety threats due to severe cognitive impairment. Under prior law, a contract was not treated as a qualified long-term care insurance contract unless a determination of whether an individual is chronically ill took into account at least five activities of daily living. The five-activity requirement appeared to apply to determine whether a person was a chronically-ill person under all three alternative definitions of a chronically-ill individual.

Activities of daily living requirement.—For purposes of the qualified long-term care insurance rules, the rule requiring that at least five "activities of daily living" be taken into account applies only for purposes of the first of the alternative definitions of a "chronically ill individual"—the definition characterizing as chronically ill any individual who is unable to perform at least two activities of daily living for at least 90 days due to a loss of functional capacity.

The Act clarifies that the "consideration of at least five activities of daily living" requirement does not apply for purposes of the other two alternative definitions in the chronically ill individual test (i.e., the severe cognitive impairment requirement or the regulatory alternative).

Effective date. This provision is effective as if it had been included in the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996. As a result, it is effective for contracts issued after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1602(b), amending Code Sec. 7702B(c)(2)(B). Act Sec. 1602(i). Law at ¶ 5747. Committee Report at ¶ 13,815.

Self-Employed Persons

¶ 837

Background

Under prior law, the self-employed health insurance deduction was not available for months in which a person was eligible to participate in any employer-provided health plan. For long-term care insurance, only eligible long-term care premiums could be taken into account for determining the deduction for self-employed health insurance.

Deduction of premiums.—The Act clarifies that the fact that a person is eligible for employer-provided health insurance does not affect that person's ability to deduct long-term care insurance premiums as long as he or she is not eligible for employer-provided long-term care insurance. The effect of this provision is to treat a self-employed person's health insurance deduction separately with regard to (1) plans that provide long-term care insurance and (2) plans that do not provide long-term care insurance.

Effective date. This provision is effective as if included in the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996. As a result, it is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Reporting Requirements

¶ 839

Background

A payer of long-term care benefits is required to report to the IRS the total amount of benefits paid as well as the name, address, and taxpayer identification number of the person to whom the benefits were paid as well as for the chronically ill individual for whom the benefits were paid. Under prior law, only the name of the person making the payments, rather than the name, address, and phone number of such person, was also required to be included.

Address and phone number required.—For purposes of the reporting requirements for qualified long-term care insurance, the name, address, and phone number of the information contact of the person making the long-term care payments must be included. Under prior law, only the name of the person making the payments, rather than the name, address, and phone number of such person, was required to be included.

Effective date. This provision is effective as if included in the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996. As a result, it is effective for benefits paid after December 31, 1996.

Consumer Protection Provision

¶ 841

Background

A long-term care insurance contract's nonforfeiture provision must provide for a benefit available in the event of a premium payment default. Under prior law, any subsequent benefit adjustment could be made only as necessary to reflect changes in claims, persistency, and interest as reflected in any premium rate changes approved by Secretary of the Treasury for the same form of contract.

State regulatory authority approval required.—A long-term care insurance contract's nonforfeiture provision must provide for a benefit available in the event of a premium payment default. Any subsequent benefit adjustment may be made only as necessary to reflect changes in claims, persistency, and interest as reflected in any premium rate changes approved by state regulatory authorities, rather than by the Secretary of the Treasury, for the same form of contract.

Effective date. This provision is effective as if included in the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996. As a result, it is effective for contracts issued after December 31, 1996.

COMPANY-OWNED LIFE INSURANCE

Premiums and Interest

¶ 845

Background

Under prior law, under the company-owned life insurance (COLI) rules, deductions for premiums paid on or interest paid or accrued on indebtedness with respect to life insurance were only denied when the policy covered the life of an officer, employee, or person financially interested in any trade or business carried on by the taxpayer (and the taxpayer was directly or indirectly a beneficiary of the policy). Further, prior law did not restrict the deductions for interest on debt that funded the tax-free buildup of life insurance contracts.

Premium deduction limitations.—No deduction is permitted for premiums paid on any life insurance policy, annuity or endowment contract if the taxpayer is directly or indirectly a policy beneficiary. However, this limitation on company-owned life insurance (COLI) does not apply to premiums paid on annuity contracts for certain qualified pension plans, retirement annuities, individual retirement annuities, and qualified funding assets (under Code Sec. 72(s)(5)). Also, it does not apply to annuity contracts held by a person who is not a natural person (under Code Sec. 72(u)).

Interest deduction limitation. No deduction is allowed for interest paid or accrued on indebtedness with respect to any life insurance policy or annuity contract covering the life of any individual in whom the taxpayer has an insurable interest. For example, a mortgage lender that buys a life insurance policy on the life of a borrower will no longer be able to deduct the premiums or any interest incurred in obtaining the coverage. Further, as added by the Conference Committee, in the case of a transfer for valuable consideration of a life insurance contract, the amount of a death benefit excluded from gross income may not exceed an amount equal to the sum of the actual value of the consideration, premiums, interest disallowed under this new provision, and other amounts subsequently paid by the transferee. Under this change, in the case of the transfer for value of a life insurance contract, the interest with respect to the contract that otherwise would be disallowed under new Code Sec. 264(a)(4) is capitalized, reducing the amount included in income by the transferee upon receipt by the transferee of the amounts paid by reason of the death of the insured.

Pro rata interest disallowance. In the case of a taxpayer other than a natural person, no deduction is allowed for the portion of the taxpayer's interest expense that is allocable to unborrowed policy cash surrender values. Interest expense is allocable based on the ratio of (1) the taxpayer's average unborrowed policy cash values of life insurance policies and annuity and endowment contracts, issued after June 8, 1997, to (2) the sum of (a) the average unborrowed policy cash values of life insurance policies or annuity or endowment contracts that are assets of the taxpayer, and (b) the average adjusted bases of all other assets of the taxpayer.

"Unborrowed policy cash value" means the cash surrender value of the policy or contract (determined without regard to any surrender charge), reduced by the amount of any loan with respect to the policy or contract.

Exceptions. The new law expands the interest deduction to certain COLI policies. The interest disallowance rule does not apply to any policy or contract owned by an entity engaged in a trade or business, that covers only one individual who (at the time first covered by the policy or contract) is either a 20-percent owner of the entity or an individual who is not a 20-percent owner but who is an employee, officer, or director of the trade or business. The only instance of where this exception applies to a policy with more than one insured is in the case of a joint-life policy for a 20-percent owner and his or her spouse. Any policy or contract that falls within the exception (or an annuity contract held by a person who is not a natural person) is not taken into account in determining unborrowed policy cash values, which in turn affects the allocation of deductible interest.

Further, if a trade or business (other than a sole proprietorship or a trade or business of performing services as an employee) is directly or indirectly the beneficiary under any policy or contract, then the policy or contract is treated as held by the trade or business. In order to carry out this trade or business treatment, the IRS will require information reporting from policyholders and issuers as necessary. In the case of a partnership or S corporation, the provision applies at the partnership or corporate level.

Other disallowance provisions. If interest expense is disallowed under other provisions of Code Sec. 264 (limiting interest deductions with respect to life insurance policies or endowment or annuity contracts) or under Code Sec. 265 (relating to tax-exempt interest), then it is not taken into account under this provision, and the average adjusted bases of assets is reduced by the amount of debt, the interest on which is so disallowed. The provision is applied before present law rules relating to capitalization of certain expenses where the taxpayer produces property (Code Sec. 263A).

Insurance companies. The pro rata allocation rules under Code Sec. 264(f) do not apply to any insurance company subject to tax under subchapter L of the Code. Rather, the rules reducing certain deductions for losses incurred, in the case of property and casualty companies, and reducing reserve deductions or dividends received deductions of life insurance companies, are modified to take into account the increase in cash values of life insurance policies or annuity or endowment contracts held by insurance companies. The increase in cash value is the amount of the increase in the adjusted cash value (commissions, asset management fees, surrender and mortality charges, and other fees imposed), reduced by gross premiums, and increased by distributions under the policy other than amounts includible in the policyholder's gross income.

Effective date. The provisions apply with respect to contracts issued after June 8, 1997, in tax years ending after that date. Any material increase in the death benefit or other material change in the contract causes the contract to be treated as a new contract, but the addition of covered lives is treated as a new contract only with respect to the additional covered lives. An increase in the death benefit of a policy or contract issued in connection with a lapse described in section 501(d)(2) of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 is not treated as a new contract.

Former Officers, Employees or Interests

¶ 848

Background

No deduction is allowed for interest paid or accrued on indebtedness with respect to life insurance policies, or annuity or endowment contracts purchased by businesses, on the lives of certain individuals. The rule covers an individual who (1) is an officer or employee of, or (2) is financially interested in, the business (the company-owned life insurance (COLI) rule). Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, it was unclear whether the rule covered former officers or employees, or individuals who formerly had a financial interest in the business.

Former officers, employees or interests.—No deduction is allowed for interest paid on indebtedness with respect to life insurance policies or annuity or endowment contracts purchased by businesses on the lives of officers or employees of the business, or individuals with a financial interest in the business (the company-owned life insurance (COLI) provision).

A technical correction makes it clear that the COLI rule applies not only to individuals who are currently officers or employees, or who currently have a financial interest in the business, but also to anyone who was an officer or employee or formerly had a financial interest in the business. The correction thus clarifies the treatment of interest on debt with respect to contracts covering former employees of the taxpayer and with respect to a business formerly conducted by the taxpayer and transferred to an affiliate of the taxpayer.

Effective date. Effective with respect to interest paid or accrued after October 13, 1995, generally.

Act Sec. 1602(f)(1), amending Code Sec. 264(a)(4). Law at ¶ 5097. Committee Report at ¶ 13,845.

Applicable Period Election

¶ 851

Background

The COLI provision is generally inapplicable to interest on debt with respect to contracts purchased before June 21, 1986. If a contract entered into before this date has a variable interest rate, the amount of interest that is deductible after December 31, 1995, is limited. The deduction is allowable only to the extent that the rate of interest for each fixed period does not exceed Moody's Corporate Bond Yield Average—Monthly Average Corporates, for the third month preceding the first month of the fixed period. The maximum length of the fixed period is 12 months. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, there was no rule specifying the time requirement for electing the fixed period during which the applicable interest rate limitation would apply or specifying the applicable period if no election was made.

Variable rate contracts.—The GOLI provision, denying interest deductions on company-owned life insurance, generally does not apply to interest on debt with respect to contracts purchased before June 21, 1986. If such a contract provides for a variable interest rate, the amount of interest that is deductible is limited to the extent that the rate of interest for each fixed period selected by the taxpayer does not exceed Moody's Corporate Bond Yield Average—Monthly Average Corporates, for the third month preceding the first month of the fixed period. The fixed period may not exceed 12 months.

A technical correction now requires that the election of a fixed period during which the applicable interest rate limitation will apply can be made no later than the 90th day after August 5, 1997 (November 3, 1997) and if made applies to the taxpayer's first tax year ending on or after October 13, 1995 and all subsequent tax years, unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary. If no election is made, the applicable period is the policy year. The policy year is the 12-month period beginning on the anniversary date of the policy.

Effective date. Effective with respect to interest paid or accrued after October 13, 1995, generally.

Act Sec. 1602(f)(2), amending Code Sec. 264(d)(2)(B)(ii). Law at ¶ 5097. Committee Report at ¶ 13,850.

Key Person Exception

¶ 854

Background

There is an exception in the COLI rule for interest on indebtedness with respect to life insurance policies covering up to 20 key persons. The term "key person" means an officer or 20-percent owner of a business. The number of individuals who can be treated as key persons with respect to any business may not exceed the greater of (1) five individuals or (2) the lesser of five percent of the total officers and employees of the business or 20 individuals. In the case of a corporation, a "20-percent owner" is any person who owns directly 20 percent or more of the total combined voting power of the corporation. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief

Background

Act of 1997, if the taxpayer was not a corporation, a 20-percent owner was defined as anyone who owned 20 percent or more of the capital or profits interest of the employer.

Definition of 20-percent owner.—There is an exception to the COLI rule for interest on indebtedness with respect to life insurance policies covering up to 20 key persons. A "key person" is an individual who is either an officer or a 20-percent owner of the taxpayer. Prior law provided that in the case of a taxpayer that was not a corporation, a 20-percent owner was an individual who owned 20 percent or more of the capital or profits interest of the employer. The technical correction clarifies this definition by changing the word employer to taxpayer.

Effective date. Effective with respect to interest paid or accrued after October 13, 1995, generally.

Act Sec. 1602(f)(3), amending Code Sec. 264(d)(4)(B). Law at ¶ 5097. Committee Report at ¶ 13,855.

Effective Date

¶ 857

Background

The COLI rule, denying interest deductions on company-owned life insurance (COLI), generally does not apply to interest on debt with respect to contracts purchased on or before June 20, 1986. The interest deductible on contracts purchased before this date may be limited under an interest cap provision, however. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, it was not clear whether the cap applied to interest on such a contract paid or accrued after December 31, 1995, or after October 13, 1995.

Interest rate cap.—The COLI rule generally does not apply to interest on debt with respect to contracts purchased on or before June 20, 1986. If such a contract has a variable interest rate, it is subject to an interest rate cap. Although Code Sec. 264(d)(2) provided that this cap applies to interest paid or accrued after December 31, 1995, Code Sec. 264(d)(2)(B) provided that the cap applied to interest paid or accrued after October 13, 1995. A technical correction eliminates the discrepancy and makes it clear that the applicable date is December 31, 1995.

Effective date. Effective with respect to interest paid or accrued after December 31, 1995.

Contract Lapses

Background

In addition to the general nondeductibility rule, the COLI rules impose additional limitations on the deductibility of two special kinds of interest: (1) interest on single premium contracts; and (2) interest on debt incurred to purchase or carry a life insurance, endowment, or annuity contract pursuant to a plan of purchase that contemplates the systematic direct or indirect borrowing of part or all of the increases in the cash value of the contract. However, there is an exception to the second limitation. Interest on bona fide debt that is part of such a plan may be deducted if no part of four of the annual premiums due during the first seven years is paid by means of debt (the 4-out-of-7 rule).

The lapse of a contract after October 13, 1995, due to nonpayment of premiums does not cause interest paid or accrued before January 1, 1999, to be nondeductible solely by reason of a failure to meet the 4-out-of-7 rule or cause the contract to be treated as a single premium contract. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the lapse provision incorrectly stated, however, that the relief was provided solely by reason of "no additional premiums being received because of a lapse."

Contract lapses.—Under the COLI rules, special limitations are imposed on the deductibility of interest with respect to single premium contracts and interest on debt incurred or continued to purchase or carry a life insurance, endowment, or annuity contract pursuant to a plan of purchase that contemplates the systematic direct or indirect borrowing of part or all of the increases in cash value of the contract. This borrowing rule is subject to an exception permitting deductibility of interest on bona fide debt that is part of such a plan if no part of four of the annual premiums due during the first seven years is paid by means of debt (the 4-out-of-7 rule).

A technical correction makes it clear that under the transition relief provision, the 4-out-of-7 rule and the single premium rule of present law are not to apply solely by reason of a lapse occurring after October 13, 1995, by reason of no additional premiums being received under the contract.

Effective date. Effective with respect to interest paid or accrued after October 13, 1995, generally.

SELF-EMPLOYED HEALTH INSURANCE

Deduction Increase

¶ 863

Background

The amount of the deduction for health insurance costs of self-employed individuals was scheduled to be phased in starting with tax years beginning in 1997, reaching a maximum deductible percentage of 80 percent in 2006 and later years.

Phase-in of deduction accelerated.—Self-employed individuals may deduct as a trade or business expense, a specified percentage of the health insurance costs incurred during the tax year for themselves, their spouses, and their dependents.

Prior to enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 the deductible percentage was scheduled to be phased in for tax years beginning in the listed years as follows:

1997	40%
1998 through 2002	45%
2003	50%
2004	60%
2005	70%
2006 and thereafter	80%

The phase-in schedule has been accelerated and the eventual top rate increased to 100 percent. The deductible percentage, for tax years beginning in the calendar years listed, is as follows:

1997	40%
1998 and 1999	45%
2000 and 2001	50%
2002	60%
2003 through 2005	80%
2006	90%
2007 and thereafter	100%.

Effective date. The provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

GROUP HEALTH PLANS

Penalty for Violating Maternity Stay and Mental Health Parity Rules

¶ 865

Background

The Newborns' and Mothers' Health Protection Act of 1996 imposed length-of-hospital stay mandates on group health plans with regard to coverage of newborns and mothers. The Mental Health Parity Act of 1996 imposed rules on coverage of mental health benefits by group health plans. Under prior law, these rules were included only in the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) and the Public Health Service Act. Employers whose group health plans failed to comply with the maternity length-of-stay mandates or with the mental health parity rules were not subject to the $100 per day per affected individual penalty imposed by Code Sec. 4980D for failures to comply with the group health plan rules.

Implementation of maternity stay mandates and mental health parity legislation.—The Act incorporates into the Code provisions of the Newborns' and Mothers' Health Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-204) and the Mental Health Parity Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-204) relating to group health plans. Under prior law, these provisions were included only in the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) and the Public Health Service Act.

Employers whose group health plans fail to comply with the maternity stay mandates or with the mental health parity rules are now subject to the Code Sec. 4980D penalty of $100 per day per affected individual.

Length of maternity stay mandates. Under the federal maternity stay mandate, group health plans are barred from restricting postpartum hospital stays, for a mother and her newborn baby, to less than 48 hours following a normal delivery and 96 hours following a caesarean section. An attending health care provider, in consultation with the mother, can approve an earlier discharge. However, a group health plan cannot provide monetary incentives for the mother or the health care provider to reduce the minimum stay.

The federal length-of-stay mandate applies to both insured and self-insured health plans. However, it does not apply to health plans that do not provide benefits for hospital stays in connection with childbirth for a mother and her newborn baby. In addition, the federal mandate does not preempt state laws that provide more favorable treatment with regard to length of postpartum hospital stay.

Mental health parity requirements. Group health plans that have lifetime or annual limits on what the plans will spend for medical or surgical services must either include services for mental illness in their total limit or maintain a separate limit for mental illness that is no more restrictive than the medical/surgical limit. The mental health parity provision does not require health plans to offer mental health coverage nor does it affect a health plan's flexibility to affect the terms and conditions relating to the amount, scope, or duration of mental health coverage.

Businesses with 50 or fewer employees are exempt from the mental health parity rules. An exemption also applies if the mental health parity rules would increase the health plan's costs by more than one percent.

Penalties. A $100 per day penalty is imposed, under Code Sec. 4980D, on employers whose group health plans fail to comply with the maternity length-of-stay mandates or the mental health parity provisions. The penalty is imposed for each day a failure occurs, until it is corrected, and applies separately for each individual affected by the failure to comply. However, no penalty is imposed if the failure to comply is unintentional and corrected within 30 days after it is discovered (or should have been discovered). The penalty is limited, for unintentional failures, to the lesser of (1) 10 percent of the group health plan's expenses for the prior year or (2) $500,000 per tax year.

Small employers (i.e., those that employ, on average, 50 employees or less) are exempted from the penalty for failures involving the mental health parity provision. However, these small employers remain subject to the penalty for failure to comply with the maternity length-of-stay requirement.

Effective date. The provisions are effective for group health plans for plan years beginning on or after January 1, 1998. The mental health parity provision will not apply to benefits for services furnished on or after September 30, 2001.

Church Plans

¶ 867

Background

The Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA) enacted an excise tax applicable to group health plans that failed to satisfy a nondiscrimination rule. This rule provided that group health plans may not establish rules for eligibility based on eight factors relating to an individual or dependent of the individual. These factors are: (1) health status, (2) medical condition, (3) claims experience, (4) receipt of health care, (5) medical history, (6) genetic information, (7) evidence of insurability, or (8) disability. The excise tax is imposed on the employer sponsoring the plan and is equal to $100 per day per individual as long as the plan is not in compliance.

Church plan exception to discrimination prohibition based on health. Church plans are exempted from the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 rule barring discrimination based on health status factors. Under this exemption qualified church plans do not violate the nondiscrimination requirement merely because the plan requires evidence of good health in order for an individual to enroll in the plan for: (1) individuals who are employees of employers with 10 or fewer employees and for self-employed individuals, or (2) an individual who enrolls after the first 90 days of eligibility under the plan.

In order to qualify for this exception, the church plan must have included a provision requiring evidence of good health on July 15, 1997, and at all times thereafter before the beginning of the year.

Effective date. This special rule is effective as if included in the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-191) and generally applies to plan years beginning after June 30, 1997.

Chapter 9

Foreign Taxpayers and Investments

FOREIGN TAX CREDIT

Translation of Foreign Taxes

¶ 901

Background

Foreign income taxes (including estimated tax and withholding taxes) paid in foreign currency are translated into U.S. dollars using daily exchange rates based on the date that taxes are paid. This rule applies to both foreign taxes paid directly by a U.S. taxpayer and to taxes paid by foreign corporations that are indirectly deemed paid, for U.S. tax purposes, by a U.S. shareholder.

If the U.S. taxpayer uses the accrual method of accounting for determining creditable foreign taxes, accrued but unpaid foreign income tax liabilities denominated in foreign currency may need to be taken into account in order to compute the taxpayer's foreign tax credit and determine its U.S. tax liability. In such situations, the amount of foreign tax subsequently paid could differ from the tax previously accrued, resulting in a redetermination of foreign tax. A redetermination can arise in basically three situations: (1) a refund of foreign tax or credit allowed against foreign tax; (2) the amount of tax (in foreign currency) actually paid differs from the amount of tax (in foreign currency) accrued; and (3) the U.S. dollar value of foreign tax paid differs from foreign tax accrued due to currency fluctuations.

Where circumstances require redetermination of foreign tax, the taxpayer must notify the IRS, which will then redetermine the taxpayer's U.S. tax liability. In the case of foreign taxes for which an indirect foreign tax credit is claimed, taxpayers must make appropriate adjustments to the payor foreign corporation's pools of earnings and profits and foreign taxes.

Prior to the Act, accrued but unpaid foreign taxes were translated into dollars using the exchange rate for the last day of the tax year in which such taxes were accrued. Also, under prior law, the last type of redetermination, i.e., one caused by currency fluctuation, was not required for certain de minimis changes in the amount of foreign tax, but was required for redetermined amounts above the de minimis threshold.

Average exchange rate may be used for currency translation of accrued foreign taxes.—Taxpayers that, for foreign tax credit purposes, account for foreign taxes on an accrual basis generally may translate foreign income taxes accrued into U.S. dollars at the average exchange rate for the tax year to which the taxes relate. This rule does not apply to (1) foreign taxes actually paid more than two years from the close of such tax year; (2) foreign taxes actually paid in a tax year prior to the year to which they relate; and (3) taxes paid in an inflationary currency, as defined by regulations.

All foreign taxes not eligible for translation at the yearly average exchange rate must be translated using the exchange rate for date of payment. However, the Act gives regulatory authority to the Treasury to specify periodic average exchange rates that may be used instead of actual daily exchange rates.

Congress stated that the change in the law should simplify the translation of foreign taxes by reducing the number of translation calculations required and the number of instances in which a subsequent adjustment or redetermination of accrued foreign taxes will be necessary in computing the taxpayer's foreign tax credit.

Redetermination of foreign taxes. As under prior law, where foreign tax paid differs from accrued amounts or if tax paid is refunded in whole or in part, the taxpayer is required to notify the IRS, which will redetermine the taxpayer's U.S. tax liability pursuant to Temp. Reg. § 1.905-4T. The Act provides that a redetermination will also occur anytime that accrued foreign taxes remain unpaid for more than two years after the close of the tax year to which the taxes relate. Unlike prior law, however, if the foreign tax is paid within the two-year period, no redetermination is necessary even though the actual dollar value of the foreign tax paid may differ from the accrued amount due to currency fluctuations. Also, the Act provides that, in lieu of redetermining foreign tax for purposes of an indirect credit, under regulations to be promulgated by the Treasury, adjustments may be made to the payor foreign corporation's pools of earnings and profits and foreign taxes.

Example (1). USA Co. is a domestic corporation with a branch in Canada. In Year 1, USA Co. accrues Canadian income tax of CAN$138,000 that remains unpaid at the close of Year 1. Using the average exchange rate for Year 1 of 1.38:1, USA Co. claims a U.S. foreign tax credit of US$100,000. Before the close of Year 3, USA Co. pays all but CAN$13,800 in Canadian tax. No redetermination of its foreign tax paid in Year 1 is required with respect to the amounts paid before the end of Year 3. However, the accrual of CAN$13,800 that remains unpaid at the close of Year 3 is now disallowed, and USA Co. must reduce its foreign tax credit for Year 1 by US$10,000.

Redetermined taxes paid are generally translated into U.S. dollars using the exchange rate applicable on the date the foreign taxes are paid. This rule also applies to accrued taxes paid after the two-year period. Where foreign taxes are refunded or credited by the foreign government, the redetermined amount of taxes paid is translated into dollars using the exchange rate as of the date of the original payment of such taxes.

Accrued taxes paid after two-year period. For accrued taxes paid after the two-year period, the Act provides that, if the taxpayer claimed a direct foreign tax credit, the payment is taken into account for the tax year to which the foreign tax relates. If an indirect credit was taken, foreign tax subsequently paid is taken into account in determining the taxpayer's foreign tax credit for the tax year in which the tax was paid.

Example (2). Assume the facts of Example 1, above. In Year 4, USA Co. pays its remaining Canadian tax liability of CAN$13,800 for Year 1. USA Co. again redetermines its foreign taxes (and foreign tax credit) in Year 1 using the exchange rate in effect on the date of payment. If, however, USA Co. had a Canadian subsidiary rather than a branch and had claimed an indirect foreign tax credit with respect to the subsidiary's Canadian income tax, the payment in Year 4 would be taken into account in determining USA Co.'s foreign tax credit in Year 4, and a second redetermination of Year 1 foreign taxes would not occur.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Paul Bodner, Esq., Great Neck, N.Y., observes that even in the computer age, the foreign tax credit computation is extremely burdensome for multinational corporations. Because foreign taxes are paid after year end, the requirement to translate foreign income taxes on the payment rather than the accrual date adds considerable complications. The requirement to redetermine credits in other than de minimis cases not only causes Federal complications, but because Federal taxable income is typically the starting point for State taxation, a Federal redetermination usually requires State redeterminations. For the typical large corporation, this State compliance burden is even larger than the Federal burden. Although one can quibble with the details, this simplification eases the compliance burden. The modification that indirect foreign taxes paid more than two years after the accrual year are creditable in the year the tax is paid simplifies compliance, but is likely to aggravate the foreign tax credit limitation problem.

Effective date. The provisions governing translation of foreign taxes apply to taxes paid or accrued in tax years beginning after December 31, 1997. The provision concerning redetermination of foreign taxes applies to taxes which relate to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Exemption from FTC Limitation for Certain Individuals

¶ 904

Background

Under Code Sec. 904, the tax credit of individuals and corporations for foreign taxes paid or accrued (or deemed paid or accrued) is generally limited to the precredit U.S. federal income tax that is attributable to foreign source income. This overall foreign tax credit (FTC) limitation is complicated immensely by a system of separate income categories that must be used in computing a separate FTC limitation for each category.

The separate categories are designed to prevent "cross-crediting" of active foreign business income from high-tax foreign jurisdictions against lower taxed passive income from other foreign sources. Taxpayers are required to compute foreign source .taxable income and foreign taxes paid in each of the applicable separate FTC limitation categories. Prior to the Act, individuals were required to make these calculations and reflect the results on Form 1116 in order to claim a foreign tax credit, regardless of the amount of their foreign tax credit claimed.

Exemption from FTC limitation rules for individuals with de minimis foreign tax credits.—An individual with $300 or less of creditable foreign taxes is exempt from the foreign tax credit (FTC) limitation, provided he has no foreign source income other than qualified passive income. The $300 amount is increased to $600 for joint filers.

The exemption is not automatic. To qualify, an individual must elect to take the exemption for the tax year.

Congress believed that numerous taxpayers were in a situation in which the amount of their foreign tax paid and corresponding tax credit was small but their reporting burden was substantial due to the complexities of completing Form 1116 (Foreign Tax Credit) and allocating foreign income among the separate FTC limitation categories. Accordingly, it enacted the simplification measure. The Conference Committee anticipates that individuals electing exemption from the FTC limitation will not be required to file Form 1116 in order to claim a foreign tax credit.

Passive income defined. As mentioned above, the exemption is only available to taxpayers whose foreign source income consists solely of passive income. Qualified passive income includes all types of income that is the foreign personal holding company income under the controlled foreign corporation rules of Code Sec. 954(c) plus certain income inclusions from foreign personal holding companies and passive foreign investment companies. In general, the term refers primarily to investment income, such as dividends, interest, rents, royalties, annuities and exchange gains. Qualified passive income must be shown on a payee statement furnished to the taxpayer.

Restrictions. An individual electing exemption from the FTC limitation rules may not carry over any excess foreign taxes paid or accrued to or from a tax year to which the election applies. Also, for purposes of the election, creditable foreign taxes are limited to those shown on a payee statement furnished to the taxpayer. Finally, the election is not available to estates or trusts.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1101, redesignating Code Sec. 904(j) as Code Sec. 904(k) and adding new Code Sec. 904(j). Law at ¶ 5287. Committee Report at ¶ 11,615.

Simplified AMT Limitation

¶ 907

Background

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, to calculate the foreign tax credit limitation for purposes of the alternative minimum tax (AMT), a taxpayer was required to take deductions that were allocated and apportioned for regular tax purposes and reallocate and reapportion the deductions for AMT purposes. The foreign tax credit limitation fraction used was the ratio of the foreign source alternative minimum taxable income to the entire alternative minimum taxable income.

Simplified AMT foreign tax credit limitation election.—Taxpayers may elect to use a simplified alternative minimum tax (AMT) foreign tax credit limitation when calculating their AMT foreign tax credit. The simplified limitation is the ratio of the taxpayer's foreign source regular taxable income to the entire alternative minimum taxable income (AMTI). Because the simplified limitation uses foreign source regular taxable income, rather than foreign source AMTI, the taxpayer is not required to reallocate and reapportion deductions for AMT purposes.

The AMT foreign tax credit limitation under the simplified method is computed using the following formula:

Foreign source regular taxable income ÷ Worldwide AMTI × AMT rate (Worldwide AMTI − AMT exemption)

Foreign source regular taxable income, as used in the simplified limitation, cannot exceed the taxpayer's entire AMTI. If it does exceed AMTI, it is the Conference Committee's intent that foreign source taxable income in each foreign tax credit limitation category be reduced by a pro rata portion of the excess.

The election may be made only in the taxpayer's first tax year beginning after December 31, 1997, for which the taxpayer claims an AMT foreign tax credit. The election applies to all subsequent tax years and can be revoked only with the consent of the IRS.

Example. Americo Corp. has worldwide AMTI of $95,000. Its tentative minimum tax, before subtracting an AMT foreign tax credit is equal to 20% × ($95,000 − $40,000) = $11,000. From its operations in country M, Americo had $30,000 of foreign source taxable income, and from its operations in country T, Americo had $20,000 of foreign source taxable income. Americo's taxable income from foreign sources is $50,000 ($20,000 + $30,000). Americo's foreign tax credit limitation is ($50,000 ÷ $95,000) × $11,000 = $5,789.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Paul Bodner, Esq., Great Neck, N.Y., notes that the election is available only in the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1997 for which the taxpayer claims an AMT foreign tax credit. Because this simplification provision is primarily of value to individuals, this requirement will create difficulties in later years, if taxpayers are not permitted to make this election. It creates an opportunity for professional tax preparers to be criticized for negligence if the election, or failure to make the election, proves to be costly in later years. For large corporations, because AMT foreign source income is typically larger than regular taxable income, this election will not be made.

Effective date. The provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

AMT Limitation Exception Repealed

¶ 910

Background

The alternative minimum foreign tax credit (AMT-FTC) may not offset more than 90 percent of a taxpayer's pre-credit tentative minimum tax. The pre-credit tenative minimum tax is calculated without regard to the alternative tax net operating loss deduction and the rule under Code Sec. 57(a)(2)(E) that limits benefits from the repeal of the intangible drilling cost preference. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the 90-percent limitation did not apply in the case of certain domestic corporations that met specific requirements.

Repeal of corporate exception from AMT-FTC limitation.—The rule that excepts certain domestic corporations from the limitation on the use of foreign tax credits for alternative minimum tax purposes is repealed. Accordingly, the alternative minimum foreign tax credit (AMT-FTC) may not offset more than 90 percent of an individual or corporate taxpayer's pre-credit tentative minimum tax.

The pre-credit tentative minimum tax is calculated without regard to the alternative tax net operating loss deduction and the rule under Code Sec. 57(a)(2)(E) that limits benefits from the repeal of the intangible drilling cost preference.

Effective date. The amendment applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1057(a), striking Code Sec. 59(a)(2)(C); Act Sec. 1057(b). Law at ¶ 5035. Committee Report at ¶ 11,395.

Financial Services Income Limitation

¶ 912

Background

For purposes of determining the foreign tax credit limitation, separate limits are applied to specific categories of income, including financial services income and passive income. Income falling in the financial services income category includes certain types of income received or accrued by a person predominately engaged in the active conduct of banking, insurance or a similar business, including passive income. Passive income included in the financial services income category is determined before the exception that treats passive income as subject to another separate limitation category if the passive income falls within that category. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, it was unclear whether financial services income included passive income before the high-taxed income exception was applied.

Foreign tax credit limitation for financial services income clarified.— The separate foreign tax credit limitation category for financial services income is clarified to include passive income, as determined before the high-taxed income exception for passive income is applied. High-taxed income is, therefore, not excluded from the separate foreign tax credit limitation for financial services income.

Effective date. The provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1163(b), amending Code Sec. 904(d)(2)(C)(i)(II); Act Sec. 1163(c). Law at ¶ 5287. Committee Report at ¶ 11,850.

Dividends from 10/50 Companies

¶ 915

Background

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, a separate foreign tax credit limitation applied to dividends received from each noncontrolled Code Sec. 902 corporation. A noncontrolled Code Sec. 902 corporation is a foreign corporation with respect to which a domestic corporation owns at least 10 percent of the voting stock of the corporation and the foreign corporation is between 10 and 50 percent U.S. owned (so-called "10/50 company").

Foreign tax credit limitations for dividends simplified.—The rules for applying the separate foreign tax credit limitation to dividends received from noncontrolled Code Sec. 902 corporations (so-called "10/50 companies") are simplified under the Act. Separate rules are applied, depending upon whether the dividends are paid from pre-2003 or post-2002 earnings and profits. Earnings and profits are determined under Code Sec. 316 rules.

Pre-2003 earnings. In the case of dividends from a noncontrolled Code Sec. 902 corporation that are paid from earnings and profits accumulated in tax years beginning before January 1, 2003, the dividends are treated as coming from one noncontrolled Code Sec. 902 corporation. Accordingly, the limitation is applied to all dividends paid from noncontrolled Code Sec. 902 corporations, rather than to dividends paid from each noncontrolled Code Sec. 902 corporation. However, if the corporation is also a passive foreign investment company, as defined under Code Sec. 1297, the foreign tax credit limitation is applied to dividends paid from each noncontrolled Code Sec. 902 corporation.

Post-2002 earnings. Look-through rules apply to dividends from a noncontrolled Code Sec. 902 corporation that are paid from earnings and profits accumulated in tax years beginning after December 31, 2002. Under the rules, a dividend from a noncontrolled Code Sec. 902 corporation is treated as income in a foreign tax credit limitation category in proportion to the ratio of (1) earnings and profits attributable to income in the foreign tax credit limitation category to (2) total earnings and profits.

Earnings and profits for pre-acquisition periods. The IRS is authorized to issue regulations regarding the treatment of distributions out of earnings and profits for periods before the taxpayer acquired the stock. According to the House Committee Report, if the regulations treat distributions from a foreign corporation out of earnings and profits for the pre-acquisition period as subject to the separate foreign tax credit limitation, it is expected that the regulations will allow the taxpayer to elect to apply the separate foreign tax credit limitation, rather than the limitation for dividends from each noncontrolled Code Sec. 902 corporation, to distributions out of post-acquisition earnings and profits.

Effective date. The provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 2002.

Holding Period with Respect to Dividends

¶ 917

Background

A U.S. person who receives a foreign source dividend is generally entitled to claim a foreign tax credit for the foreign taxes paid or accrued with respect to the dividend. An indirect foreign tax credit can also be claimed for taxes deemed paid by lower-tier corporations under Code Sec. 902 and Code Sec. 960. Under Code Sec. 853, the shareholders of a regulated investment company (RIC) may claim the foreign tax credit for foreign income taxes paid by the RIC if the RIC elects to treat its foreign taxes as paid by the shareholders. Before the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, there was no stock holding period requirement for claiming the foreign tax credit. Absent a holding period, it was possible for persons to engage in tax-motivated transactions designed to transfer foreign tax credits from those who could not benefit from the credit (i.e., tax-exempt organization) to those who could. These tax-motivated transactions might involve the short-term transfer of ownership of dividend-paying shares or the use of derivatives.

Holding period requirement.—A holding period requirement is imposed for purposes of crediting foreign taxes associated with foreign-source dividends. In general, a taxpayer is not entitled to a tax credit for foreign withholding taxes paid with respect to a dividend if a 16-day holding period for the dividend-paying stock (or a 46-day holding period for certain dividends on preferred stock) is not satisfied. The holding period generally does not include any period during which the taxpayer is protected from risk of loss.

Regardless of the holding period, the taxpayer is not entitled to a tax credit for foreign withholding taxes on a dividend to the extent that the dividend recipient is under an obligation (pursuant to a short sale or otherwise) to make related payments with respect to positions in substantially similar or related property.

The term "withholding tax" includes any tax determined on a gross basis and excludes taxes that are in the nature of a prepayment of tax imposed upon a net basis.

Taxes deemed paid. The holding period requirement also applies to foreign taxes treated as paid by the taxpayer indirectly under the Code Sec. 853 regulated investment company (RIC) rules or the Code Sec. 902 and Code Sec. 960 indirect tax credit rules. The foreign tax credit is disallowed if the stock in the corporation that must be owned to obtain the credit does not meet the holding period requirement or the corporation holding the stock is under an obligation (pursuant to a short sale or otherwise) to make related payments with respect to positions in substantially similar or related property.

Calculating the holding period. The 16-day holding period requirement must be met within the 30-day period beginning 15 days before the ex-dividend date. If the stock is held for 15 days or less during the 30-day period, the foreign tax credit for the withholding tax on the dividend is disallowed.

For purposes of determining the period that the taxpayer has held the stock, certain holding period rules that apply for purposes of the dividends received deduction under Code Sec. 246(c)(3) and Code Sec. 246(c)(4) apply.

Under Code Sec. 246(c)(3), the holding period is determined by (1) taking into account the day of disposition, but not the day of acquisition, (2) excluding any day that is more than 45 days (90 days in the case of preferred dividends) from the ex-dividend date, and (3) not applying Code Sec. 1223(4), which adds the holding period of securities or stock on which loss was disallowed under the wash sales provisions of Code Sec. 1091 to the holding period of the stock or securities.

Under Code Sec. 246(c)(4), the holding period is reduced for periods when the risk of loss is diminished. Under Code Sec. 246(c)(4), risk of loss is diminished if the taxpayer (1) has an option to sell, is under a contractual obligation to sell, or has made, but not closed, a short sale of substantially similar or related property; (2) is the grantor of an option to buy substantially identical stock or securities; or (3) has, under regulations, another position or positions that substantially diminish the taxpayer's risk of loss from holding the stock. For example, according to the Senate Committee Report, a taxpayer will not be considered at risk during the time he holds both foreign common stock and an equity swap that entitles him to payments equal to losses on the stock.

If the holding period is reduced under the Code Sec. 246(c)(4), there is a special rule for purposes of the indirect credit under Code Sec. 902 and Code Sec. 960. Under the rule, an exception from the risk reduction rule exists for bona fide contracts to sell stock. In such a case, the determination of whether the holding period is met is made on the date the contract for the bona fide sale of stock is entered into.

Exception for securities dealers. An exception from the holding period requirements exists for qualified taxes paid in connection with a security by securities dealers. For the exception to apply, the security must be held in the active conduct in a foreign country of a person's security business. The person must be (1) a registered securities broker or dealer under 15(a) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934; (2) registered as a Government securities broker or dealer under 15C(a) of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934; or (3) licensed or authorized to conduct securities activities in a foreign country and subject to bona fide regulations by the foreign country's securities regulating authority. "Qualified taxes" are taxes paid to a foreign country, other than the country in which the security dealer conducts business. The country where the security dealer conducts business must impose the tax on the dividend on a net basis and allow a credit against the net basis tax for the full amount of tax paid. The IRS is authorized to issue regulations that prevent the abuse of the exception or that would treat other taxes as qualified taxes not subject to the holding period.

Additional consequences of not meeting the holding period requirements. Taxpayers that fail to meet the holding period requirements are allowed a deduction equal to the foreign tax credits disallowed. Additionally, the Code Sec. 78 gross-up rules do not apply. Under Code Sec. 78, a domestic corporate shareholder is required to include foreign taxes deemed paid in gross income as a dividend.

RIC notice requirements. A regulated investment company (RIC) must notify its shareholders of the amount of foreign taxes that would be disallowed for failure to meet the holding period requirements. The notice requirement applies regardless of whether the RIC elects to have its foreign taxes treated as paid by the shareholder.

Effective date. The provision applies to dividends paid or accrued more than 30 days after August 5, 1997 (September 5, 1997).

Deemed Paid Amount

¶ 919

Background

For purposes of determining a foreign corporation's deemed paid foreign tax credit under Code Sec. 902, a foreign corporation's post-1986 foreign income taxes must be determined. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, post-1986 foreign income taxes were defined as foreign income taxes paid, accrued, or deemed paid, with respect to prior tax years beginning after 1986, to the extent that the taxes were not deemed paid with respect to dividends distributed by a foreign corporation in prior tax years.

Post-1986 foreign income taxes clarified.—For purposes of determining a foreign corporation's deemed paid foreign tax credit under Code Sec. 902, post-1986 foreign income taxes are clarified to include foreign income taxes paid, accrued, or deemed paid, with respect to prior tax years beginning after 1986, to the extent that the taxes were not attributable to dividends distributed by a foreign corporation in prior tax years.

> Example. Corporation D, a domestic shareholder, is entitled to a deemed-paid credit as a result of a dividend it receives from foreign Corporation A in 1997. In 1997, A also distributes a dividend to Jim Smith, a U.S. citizen. For 1998, the post-1986 foreign tax pool must be reduced by the total amount of taxes that are attributable to the distributions made to D and Jim Smith.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Paul Bodner, Esq., Great Neck, N.Y., notes that, although labeled a clarification, the Committee Reports indicate that no inference is intended regarding present law. Although this treatment may be fair, consistency would require the IRS to accept the Tax Court decision in Vulcan Materials Co. v. Commissioner, 96 TC 410 (1991), aff'd 959 F2d 973 (11th Cir. 1992), nonacq 1995-1 CB 1. In Vulcan, only the U.S. shareholder's portion of the income was subject to tax, the local shareholder's portion was exempt. The Commissioner mechanically contended that foreign taxes could not be traced and therefore the effective foreign tax rate was one-half the economic cost to the U.S. shareholder. This Code amendment is designed to deny the taxpayer position that the pool of foreign income taxes should not be reduced by the foreign income taxes attributable to dividends received by non-U.S. shareholders. If equity prevails, the Commissioner should win the issue affected by this clarification and lose the Vulcan issue.

Effective date. The amendment is effective on August 5, 1997.

Period of Limitations

¶ 922

Background

In the case of an overpayment attributable to foreign tax credits, the limitations period for filing a claim for refund or credit is 10 years from the filing date for the return for the tax year with respect to which the claim is made. With respect to a claim that results from a foreign tax credit carryforward, it was unclear under prior law whether the period of limitations was determined by reference to the date for filing the return for the year in which the foreign taxes were paid or accrued

Background

(Rev. Rul. 84-125, 1984-2 CB 125) or the year to which the foreign tax credits were carried (Ampex Corp., FedCl, 80-1 USTC ¶ 9358, 620 F2d 853).

Limitations period clarified.—The 10-year limitations period for filing a claim for credit or refund attributable to a foreign tax credit carryforward is clarified. The limitations period is determined by reference to the date for filing the return for the year in which the foreign taxes were paid or accrued, rather than the year to which the foreign tax credits are carried. The provision reverses the decision in Ampex Corp., FedCl, 80-1 USTC ¶ 9358, 620 F2d 853, which held that the limitations period was determined by reference to the year to which the foreign tax credits were carried.

Effective date. The provision applies to taxes paid or accrued in tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Interest on Underpayments

¶ 924

Background

Creditable foreign taxes that exceed the foreign tax credit limitation may be carried back two years and forward five years. Under the general restricted interest rule of Code Sec. 6601(d), when a deficiency is reduced by a loss or credit carryback, interest must be paid on the deficiency until the filing date of the loss- or credit-generating year. Restricted interest principles are also applied in the case of overpayments created by foreign tax credit carrybacks under Code Sec. 6611(g). Under Code Sec. 6611(g), a taxpayer is not entitled to interest on an overpayment during the restricted interest period ending with the filing date of the carryback-generating year. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, a similar statutory provision did not exist for underpayments reduced or satisfied by foreign tax credit carrybacks. Application of the restricted interest rules in the case of such an underpayment was unclear as a result of the decision in Fluor Corp., FedCl, 96-1 USTC ¶ 50,300. In Fluor, the court did not apply the restricted interest rule to an underpayment of tax satisfied by a foreign tax carryback.

Interest on underpayments not reduced by foreign tax credit carrybacks.—The restricted interest rule, which applied by statute only in the case of an overpayment of tax created by a foreign tax credit carryback, is extended to an underpayment of tax that is reduced or eliminated by a foreign tax credit carryback. A deficiency is not considered eliminated until the filing date of the tax year in which the foreign tax credit carryback arose. The application of the restricted interest rule is also clarified in the case of an underpayment that is reduced, or an overpayment that is created, by a foreign tax credit carryback, when the carryback is triggered by either a net operating or net capital loss carryback.

The provision applies the restricted interest rule consistently for both underpayments and overpayments affected by federal tax credit carrybacks. The provision reverses Fluor Corp., FedCl, 96-1 USTC ¶ 50,300, which did not apply the restricted interest rule to an underpayment of tax that was satisfied by a foreign tax credit carryback.

Underpayments. A taxpayer must pay interest on the deficiency until the filing date of the credit-generating year (i.e., tax year in which the foreign taxes were paid or accrued). When the foreign tax credit carryback is triggered by either a net operating or net capital loss carryback, the taxpayer must pay interest on the deficiency until the filing date of the loss-generating year (i.e., tax year in which the loss arose).

> Example. Joe Smith, who is a calendar-year taxpayer, has an underpayment of tax of $800 for 1996. Interest on the underpayment runs from April 15, 1997, the last day prescribed for payment of the 1996 tax. In 1998, Joe pays foreign taxes to Country X, which exceed the foreign tax credit limitation by $200. The excess credits of $200 are carried back to 1996 and reduce the $800 deficiency. Interest must be paid on the $800 deficiency from April 15, 1997 until April 15, 1998. After April 15, 1998, interest is paid on the $600 deficiency.

Overpayments. When the foreign tax credit carryback is triggered by either a net operating or net capital loss carryback, the taxpayer is not entitled to interest on the overpayment of tax that is created until the filing date of the loss-generating year (i.e., the tax year in which the loss arose).

Effective date. The provision applies to foreign tax credit carrybacks arising in tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

EXPATRIATION TAX PROVISIONS

Gain Recognition on Certain Exchanges

¶ 926

Background

Code Sec. 877 provides for an expatriation tax that applies to U.S. citizens and long-term residents who terminate U.S. citizenship or residency and expatriate in order to avoid U.S. income tax. Generally, for 10 years following the date of the loss of U.S. citizenship or residency, such former U.S. citizens and former long-term U.S. residents are taxed on their gross income under the graduated rate structure applicable to citizens and residents, except that their gross income includes only U.S.-source income and income effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business. Under the expatriation provisions, U.S.-source income includes certain additional items listed below.

Tax avoidance purpose. For the expatriation provisions to apply, the expatriate must have had tax avoidance as one of his principal purposes for relinquishing citizenship or residency status. A presumption of a tax avoidance purpose applies to high income and high net worth individuals.

Background

Source rules, etc. Under the expatriation provisions, a series of rules concerning source of income, gain recognition and other issues are applicable during the 10-year period in order to prevent tax avoidance:

First, the following items of income or gain are deemed to be U.S.-source: gains on the sale of property located in the United States, gains on sales of stock issued by domestic corporations or debt obligations of U.S. issuers, and income or gain derived from certain sales of controlled foreign corporation (CFC) stock.

Second, exchanges of property following the loss of citizenship or residency require gain recognition, unless a gain recognition agreement was entered into. Regulatory authority is given to the Treasury to extend the 10-year expatriation tax period to a total of 15 years, which includes the five-year period prior to the loss of residency or citizenship.

Third, for purposes of determining whether the expatriation tax will apply to gain on the sale or exchange of property, the running of the 10-year period is suspended for any period during which the expatriate's risk of loss with respect to the property is substantially diminished.

Fourth, income or gain received or accrued by a CFC on property that had been contributed to the CFC by the former citizen or resident generally is treated as received or accrued directly by the expatriate and not by the CFC.

After amendment by the Act, these rules remain generally the same, but are subject to certain technical corrections, which are outlined below and in ¶ 928 and 929.

Gain recognition period clarified.—Under the expatriation provisions, the expatriate must recognize gain on property transactions that would otherwise receive nonrecognition treatment if the property is transferred during the 10-year period following the loss of U.S. citizenship or residency.and income from either the property transferred or the property received in the exchange is U.S. source. Also, Treasury is given regulatory authority to apply this rule during the five-year period prior to the loss of residency or citizenship.

In a technical correction, the Act clarifies that, for purposes of the gain recognition rule,.the 10-year period begins on the date of the loss of U.S. citizenship or residency status. Also, for exchanges occurring during the five-year period before the loss of U.S. citizenship or residency status, any gain required to be recognized under regulations must be recognized immediately after the date of the loss of citizenship or residency.

Effective date. These amendments apply to individuals who lose U.S. citizenship and to long-term residents who terminate U.S. residency on or after February 6, 1995. The amendments also apply to individuals who performed an act of expatriation prior to February 6, 1995, but after February 5, 1994, and who failed to furnish the State Department with a signed statement relinquishing citizenship by February 6, 1995.

Suspension of 10-Year Period

Suspension of 10-year period for diminution of risk of loss clarified.—Under the expatriation provisions described more fully at ¶ 926, above, gains recognized within the 10-year period following loss of citizenship or residency are taken into account for expatriation tax purposes if the gains are U.S.-source or effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business. Gains on the sale of property located in the United States, gains on the sale of stock issued by domestic corporations or debt obligations of U.S. issuers, and income or gain derived from certain sales of controlled foreign corporation (CFC) stock are deemed to be U.S.-source.

With respect to gains on the sale or exchange of property, the 10-year period is suspended for any period during which the expatriate's risk of loss with respect to the property is substantially diminished through options or similar risk-shifting transactions. The Act clarifies that the 10-year period begins on the date that the expatriate loses citizenship or long-term resident status.

Effective date. These amendments apply to individuals who lose U.S. citizenship and to long-term residents who terminate U.S. residency on or after February 6, 1995. The amendments also apply to individuals who performed an act of expatriation prior to February 6, 1995, but after February 5, 1994, and who failed to furnish the State Department with a signed statement relinquishing citizenship by February 6, 1995.

Contributions to Controlled Foreign Corporations

Treatment of property contributed to certain foreign corporations (CFCs) clarified.—Under the expatriation provisions described more fully at ¶ 926, above, income or gain received or accrued by a CFC on property contributed to the CFC by an expatriate is treated as received or accrued directly by the expatriate and not by the CFC, provided that income derived from the property, if any, was U.S.-source.

The Act clarifies that the rule concerning contributions to a CFC applies to contributions made during the 10-year period that begins on the date that the expatriate loses citizenship or long-term resident status. It is also clarified that, in applying the rule, the determination of whether the property generated U.S.-source income is made by looking at the source of income immediately before the contribution.

Effective date. These amendments apply to individuals who lose U.S. citizenship and to long-term residents who terminate U.S. residency on or after February 6, 1995. The amendments also apply to individuals who performed an act of expatriation prior to February 6, 1995, but after February 5, 1994, and who failed to furnish the State Department with a signed statement relinquishing citizenship by February 6, 1995.

Foreign Estate Tax Credit

¶ 930

Background

Where a U.S. citizen or long-term resident relinquishes citizenship or residency with a principal purpose of tax avoidance, the expatriation provisions of Code Sec. 2107 apply if the individual dies within the 10-year period following loss of citizenship or residency. Under Code Sec. 2107, the expatriate's gross estate includes his pro rata share of any U.S.-situs property held through a controlled foreign corporation (CFC), provided that the expatriate's stock ownership in the CFC meets certain thresholds. A limited credit for foreign death taxes is available to offset the foreign tax paid, if any, on amounts included in the expatriate's U.S. gross estate as a result of his ownership of CFC stock.

After amendment by the Act, these rules remain generally the same, but the credit for foreign death taxes is clarified.

Foreign estate tax credit formula clarified.—The estate of a U.S. citizen or long-term resident who relinquishes citizenship or residency status with a tax avoidance purpose is subject to the expatriation provisions of Code Sec. 2107 if he or she dies during the 10-year period following loss of citizenship or residency status.

In general, such former U.S. citizens or residents are taxed in the same manner as other nonresident aliens. Accordingly, the gross estate is limited to U.S.-situs property. However, the expatriate's gross estate also includes his pro rata share of any U.S.-situs property held through a controlled foreign corporation (CFC) in which he or she owned at least 10 percent of the total voting shares and, together with related persons, owned at least 50 percent of the total CFC stock by vote or value.

The amount included in the expatriate's gross estate by reason of his ownership interest in a CFC may also be subject to foreign estate tax. For that reason, the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-191) added a credit for foreign death taxes. For the credit to apply, the foreign tax must be paid in respect of the value of CFC stock that is owned by the decedent and included in his gross estate solely as a result of the expatriation provisions. In addition, the credit for foreign death taxes is subject to certain limitations.

The Act clarifies the formula used in computing the foreign death tax credit limitation. As amended, the foreign death tax credit is limited to the lesser of:

(1) the amount of foreign taxes paid multiplied by the ratio of the value of property subjected to foreign tax and included in the decedent's U.S. gross estate by reason of his ownership of CFC stock over the total value of the decedent's gross estate that is subject to foreign death taxes; or

(2) the amount of U.S. estate tax attributable to property that is subject to payment of foreign tax and is includible in the decedent's U.S. estate solely by reason of the expatriation tax provisions.

Effective date. These amendments apply to individuals who lose U.S. citizenship and to long-term residents who terminate U.S. residency on or after February 6, 1995. The amendments also apply to individuals who performed an act of expatriation prior to February 6, 1995, but after February 5, 1994, and who failed to furnish the State Department with a signed statement relinquishing citizenship by February 6, 1995.

Act Sec. 1602(g)(6), amending Code Sec. 2107(c)(2); Act Sec. 1602(i). Law at ¶ 5443. Committee Report at ¶ 13,895.

CONTROLLED FOREIGN CORPORATIONS

Gain on Stock Sales

¶ 932

Background

If an upper-tier controlled foreign corporation (CFC) sells stock of a lower-tier CFC, the gain is included in the income of U.S. 10-percent shareholders as subpart F income. Further, the U.S. shareholder's basis in the stock of the first-tier CFC is increased to account for the inclusion. Under prior law, the inclusion was not characterized for foreign tax credit limitation purposes by reference to the nature of the income of the lower-tier CFC. Instead, it was characterized as passive income.

For purposes of the foreign tax credit limitation applicable to so-called 10/50 companies, a CFC was not treated as a 10/50 company with respect to any distribution out of its earnings and profits, for periods during which it was a CFC and, except as provided by regulations, the recipient of the distribution was a U.S. 10-percent shareholder in such corporation.

Treatment of stock sale gain.—Gain recognized on the sale or exchange of stock in a foreign corporation by a controlled foreign corporation (CFC) is included in the CFC's gross income as a dividend to the same extent that it would have been included under Code Sec. 1248(a) if the CFC were a U.S. person. This provision does not affect the determination of whether the corporation whose stock is sold or exchanged is a CFC.

> Example. Corp. A is a U.S. corporation that owns 100% of the stock of Corp. B, a foreign corporation, which in turn owns 100% of the stock of Corp. C, another foreign corporation. Any gain to Corp. B on the sale or exchange of Corp. C's stock is treated as a dividend for purposes of subpart F income inclusions to the U.S. shareholder, to the extent of Corp. C's earnings and profits attributable to periods in which Corp. B owned Corp. C's stock while Corp. C was a CFC with respect to the U.S. shareholder.

Same country exception. The same country exception, as contained in Code Sec. 954(c)(3)(A)(i), does not apply to any amount treated as a dividend under the new provision. Thus, gain on the disposition of stock in a related corporation created or organized under the laws of (and having a substantial part of its assets in a trade or business in) the same foreign country as the gain recipient (even if recharacterized as a dividend under this provision) is not excluded from personal holding company income under the same country exception that applies to actual dividends.

Deemed sales. A CFC is treated as having sold or exchanged any stock if that CFC is treated as having gain from the sale or exchange of the stock under the income tax provisions of the Code. Therefore, if a CFC distributes stock in a foreign corporation to its shareholder, and the distribution results in the CFC recognizing gain as if the stock were sold for its fair market value to the shareholder, then the CFC is treated as having sold or exchanged the stock.

FTC U.S. shareholder rule repealed. Code Sec. 904(d)(2)(E)(i) is modified to provide that for foreign tax credit limitation purposes, a CFC is no longer treated as a 10/50 company with respect to any distribution out of its earnings and profits for periods during which it was a CFC, whether or not the recipient of the distribution was a U.S. 10-percent shareholder of the corporation when the earnings and profits giving rise to the distribution were generated.

Effective date. The gain inclusion provision applies to gain recognized on transactions occurring after August 5, 1997, while the repeal of the 10-percent shareholder requirement for foreign tax credit limitation purposes is effective for distributions after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1111(a), adding Code Sec. 964(e); Act Sec. 1111(b), amending Code Sec. 904(d)(2)(E)(i); Act Sec. 1111(c). Law at ¶ 5287 and 5307. Committee Report at ¶ 11,655.

Indirect Foreign Tax Credit

¶ 934

Background

A U.S. corporation that owns at least 10 percent of the voting stock of a foreign corporation is treated as if it had paid a share of the foreign income taxes paid by the foreign corporation in the year in which the foreign corporation's earnings and profits become subject to U.S. tax as dividend income of the U.S. shareholder. Under prior law, a U.S. corporation was deemed to have paid taxes paid by a second- or third-tier foreign corporation under certain circumstances.

Extension to lower tiers.—The indirect foreign tax credit has been extended to taxes paid or accrued by fourth-, fifth- and sixth-tier corporations. To qualify, the corporation must be a controlled foreign corporation (CFC), the U.S. corporation claiming the tax credit must be a U.S. shareholder (as defined in Code Sec. 951(b)), and the product of the percentage ownership of voting stock at each level from the U.S. corporation down must equal at least five percent. The indirect foreign tax credit is extended to lower tiers only with respect to taxes paid or incurred in tax years during which the payor is a CFC.

Planning Note. The sophisticated corporate restructuring that was necessitated by the third-tier limits is no longer required. The extension of the indirect foreign tax credit down to the sixth level eliminates the burden on the parent corporation to ensure that lower-level foreign subsidiaries with large creditable tax amounts were situated at a proper higher-tier level. However, foreign taxes paid below the sixth tier of foreign corporations remain ineligible for the tax credit.

Effective date. This provision applies to taxes of foreign corporations for tax years of these corporations beginning after August 5, 1997. No liquidation, reorganization or similar transaction in a tax year beginning after August 5, 1997 will have the effect of permitting taxes to be taken into account that could not have been taken into account under Code Sec. 902 but for the transaction.

Foreign Personal Holding Company Income

¶ 936

Background

Ten-percent U.S. shareholders of controlled foreign corporations (CFCs) are subject to current U.S. tax on certain income earned by the CFCs under the subpart F rules. One category of income subject to current tax under the subpart F rules is foreign personal holding company income. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, for subpart F purposes, foreign personal holding company income generally included interest, dividends, and annuities; some rents and royalties; net commodities gains; net foreign currency gains; net gains from the sale and exchange of certain property; and income that is the equivalent of interest. Also under prior law, only gains and losses from the sale and exchange of property realized by regular dealers in property were excepted from the definition of foreign personal holding company income. The regular dealer exception also applied to gains and losses arising from bona fide hedging transactions entered into in the course of being a regular dealer in property.

Foreign personal holding company income defined.—For purposes of the subpart F rules that apply to 10-percent shareholders of controlled foreign corporations (CFCs), the definition of foreign personal holding company income has been expanded to include income from notional principal contracts and payments in lieu of dividends. The exception from foreign personal holding company income that applies to regular dealers in property is also expanded.

The House Committee Report states that the expanded rules apply for purposes of determining a foreign corporation's status as a passive foreign investment company.

Notional principal contracts. Net income from a notional principal contract is included in foreign personal holding company income. However, income, gain, deduction or loss from a notional principal contract that is entered into to hedge income in another category of foreign personal holding company income is income in that category. The Conference Committee clarifies that income from a notional principal contract entered into to hedge inventory property can be excluded from foreign personal holding company income under the exclusion that applies to gains and losses from transactions in inventory property.

Payments in lieu of dividends. Payments in lieu of dividends under an equity securities agreement, as required under Code Sec. 1058, are included in foreign personal holding company income.

Dealer exception. The exception from foreign personal holding company income that applies to gain or loss from the sale or exchange of property by regular dealers under Code Sec. 954(c)(1)(B) also applies to dealers in financial instruments. Income, gain, deduction, or loss from any transaction (including a hedging transaction) of a regular dealer in property, forward contracts, option contracts and similar financial instruments is not taken into account when computing foreign personal holding company income. A "similar financial instrument" includes a notional principal contract and all instruments referenced to commodities.

Effective date. The provisions apply to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Miscellaneous Subpart F Modifications

¶ 937

Background

Under prior law, no provision was allowed for an adjustment to the basis of an upper-tier CFC's stock in a lower-tier CFC if subpart F income of a lower-tier CFC was included in the gross income of a U.S. 10-percent shareholder. Also, although the subpart F income earned by a foreign corporation during its tax year is taxed to the U.S. 10-percent shareholders of the corporation on the last day of that year, in which the corporation is a CFC, in the case of a U.S. 10-percent shareholder who acquired stock in a CFC during the year, the inclusions were reduced by all or a portion of the amount of dividends paid in that year by the foreign corporation to any person other than the acquiror with respect to that stock. Further, even though subpart F income generally does not include income earned from sources within the United States if the income is effectively connected with the conduct of a U.S. trade or business by the CFC, this general rule did not apply if the income was exempt from, or subject to a reduced rate of, U.S. tax pursuant to a provision of a U.S. treaty.

Basis adjustment.—The subpart F income of a 10-percent U.S. shareholder from gain on the disposition of a lower-tier controlled foreign corporation (CFC) is to be reduced, under regulations to be provided by the IRS, by income inclusions of earnings that were not subsequently distributed by the lower-tier CFC. This is similar to the adjustment made to the basis of stock in a first-tier CFC for income inclusions.

> Example. Lynne Smith, a U.S. person, owns all of the stock of a first-tier CFC, which is the sole shareholder of a second-tier CFC. In 1998, the second-tier CFC earns $1,000 of subpart F income which is included in Smith's income. In the following year, the first-tier CFC disposes of the second-tier CFC's stock and recognizes a $5,000 gain. Under the basis adjustment change, the IRS is authorized to issue regulations to ensure that Smith's subpart F inclusion of this gain is reduced by the earlier $1,000 amount previously included in her income.

Inclusion in year of acquisition. If a U.S. 10-percent shareholder acquires the stock of a CFC from another U.S. 10-percent shareholder during a tax year of the CFC in which it earns subpart F income, the acquiror's subpart F income inclusion for that year is reduced by a portion of the amount of the dividend deemed to be received by the transferor under Code Sec. 1248. The portion by which the inclusion is reduced (as is the case if a dividend was paid to the previous owner of the stock) does not exceed the lesser of the amount of dividends with respect to the stock deemed received by other persons during the year or the amount determined by multiplying the subpart F income for the year by the proportion of the year during which the acquiring shareholder did not own the stock.

U.S. income earned by CFC. An exemption or reduction by treaty of the branch profits tax that would be imposed under Code Sec. 884 on a CFC does not affect the general statutory exemption from subpart F income that is granted for U.S.-source effectively connected income. Notwithstanding the treaty's effect on the branch tax, the income is not treated as subpart F income so long as it is not exempt from U.S. taxation (or subject to a reduced rate of tax) under any other treaty provision.

Effective date. The provision that provides for regulatory adjustments to U.S. shareholder inclusions (i.e., "basis adjustment", above) is effective for determining inclusions for tax years of U.S. shareholders beginning after December 31, 1997. Thus, the Act permits regulatory adjustments to an inclusion occurring after the effective date to account for income that was previously taxed under the subpart F provisions either prior to or subsequent to the effective date. The provision that permits dispositions of stock to be taken into consideration in determining a U.S. shareholder's subpart F inclusion for a tax year is effective with respect to dispositions occurring after August 5, 1997. The provision concerning the effect of treaty exemptions from, or reductions of, the branch profits tax on the determination of subpart F income is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1986.

Investment of Earnings in U.S. Property

¶ 938

Background

In general, the earnings of a controlled foreign corporation (CFC) that are invested in U.S. property are taxed on a current basis to the CFC's 10-percent U.S. shareholders. Specifically, a U.S. shareholder must include in gross income the lesser of the following:

(1) the shareholder's pro rata share of the CFC's investment in U.S. property less his share of the CFC's investment in U.S. property taxed to the shareholder in a prior tax year, or

(2) the shareholder's pro rata share of the CFC's undistributed earnings.

For purposes of the second amount, prior law defined earnings to include both current earnings and profits (not including a deficit) and accumulated earnings and profits, leaving the possible argument that current year earnings should be counted twice.

Definition of earnings invested in U.S. property clarified.—A technical correction clarifies the meaning of the term "applicable earnings," as used in measuring the income inclusion for a 10-percent U.S. shareholder in a controlled foreign corporation (CFC) resulting from his pro rata share of the CFC's investment in U.S. property. As clarified, the term refers to the sum of the CFC's current year earnings and accumulated earnings to the extent accumulated in prior tax years. Thus, the possible interpretation under prior law that current year earnings should be taken into account twice is eliminated.

Effective date. The correction applies to tax years of foreign corporations beginning after December 31, 1996, and to tax years of U.S. shareholders with or within which such tax years of foreign corporations end.

Act Sec. 1601(e), amending Code Sec. 956(b)(1)(A). Law at ¶ 5301. Committee Report at ¶ 13,645.

Securities and Commodities Dealers

¶ 940

Background

When computing a U.S. tax liability, the U.S. 10-percent shareholders of a controlled foreign corporation (CFC) are required to currently include in income certain earnings of the CFC under the rules of subpart F (Code Secs. 951-964), whether or not such earnings are distributed currently to the shareholders. The U.S. 10-percent shareholders of a CFC are subject to current U.S. tax on their shares of certain income earned by the CFC (referred to as "subpart F income"). The U.S. 10-percent shareholders also are subject to current U.S. tax on their shares of the CFC's earnings to the extent invested by the CFC in certain U.S. property.

A U.S. 10-percent shareholder's current income inclusion with respect to a CFC's investment in U.S. property for a taxable year is based on the CFC's average investment in U.S. property for such year. For this purpose, the U.S. property held by the CFC must be measured as of the close of each quarter in the taxable year. U.S. property generally is defined to include tangible property located in the United States, stock of a U.S. corporation, obligations of a U.S. person, and the right to use certain intellectual property in the United States. Exceptions are provided for, among other things, obligations of the United States, U.S. bank deposits, certain trade or business obligations, and stock or debts of certain unrelated U.S. corporations.

Under prior law, no exception to the definition of U.S. property was provided for deposits of collateral or margin made or received in the ordinary course of business of a securities or commodities dealer or for repurchase agreements entered into in the ordinary course of business of a securities or commodities dealer.

U.S. property excludes certain assets of securities and commodities dealers.—The U.S. 10-percent shareholders of a controlled foreign corporation (CFC) are subject to current U.S. tax on their shares of the CFC's earnings to the extent invested by the CFC in certain U.S. property. Two additional exceptions from the definition of U.S. property for purposes of the subpart F rules have been provided under the Act. Both exceptions relate to "ordinary-course-of-business" transactions entered into by securities or commodities dealers. The Conference Committee Report clarifies that the addition of the exceptions is not intended to create any inference regarding the treatment of an obligation of a U.S. person to return stock that is borrowed pursuant to a securities loan.

Dealer deposits and repurchase agreements. U.S. property does not include deposits of cash or securities made or received by a securities or commodities dealer on commercial terms in the ordinary course of business as a dealer in securities or in commodities. However, the deposits must be made or received as collateral or margin for certain transactions. The approved transactions include a securities loan, notional principal contract, options contract, forward contract, futures contract, or any other financial transaction in which the IRS determines that it is customary to post collateral or margin.

Also excluded from the definition of U.S. property are certain repurchase agreement transactions and reverse repurchase agreement transactions that occur in the ordinary course of a securities or commodities dealer's trade or business. The exception applies to an obligation of a U. S. person to the extent the principal amount of the obligation does not exceed the fair market value of readily marketable securities sold or purchased pursuant to a sale and repurchase agreement or otherwise posted or received as collateral for the obligation.

Dealer defined. For purposes of these rules, a dealer in securities is a taxpayer who regularly purchases securities from or sells securities to customers in the ordinary course of a trade or business or who regularly offers to enter into, assume, offset, assign, or otherwise terminate positions in securities with customers in the ordinary course of a trade or business.

Caution. There does not appear to be any exact definition of the term "dealer in commodities" for purposes of these rules. The Conference Committee Report indicated that the term means futures commission merchants and dealers in commodities within the meaning of the new definition that is added under the Act in Code Sec. 475(e). However, Code Sec. 475(e), as added by Section 1001(b) of the Act does not provide a definition of "dealer in commodities," even though it defines commodities for purposes of the mark-to-market election.

Effective date. The exclusion of certain property acquired by dealers in the ordinary course of business from the definition of U.S. property applies to tax years of foreign corporations beginning after December 31, 1997, and to tax years of U.S. shareholders with or within which such tax years of foreign corporations end.

Active Financing Income

→ Caution: Act Sec. 1175 was canceled by President Clinton on August 11, 1997, pursuant to his authority under the Line Item Veto Act (P.L. 104-130). As we go to press, this provision is deemed to be stricken from the Act. However, under the procedures set out in P.L. 104-130 (or as the result of a successful challenge of its constitutionality), this provision may be reinstated at a later date.←

Background

The subpart F rules of Code Sec. 951 through Code Sec. 964 historically have been aimed at requiring current inclusion by the U.S. shareholders of income of a controlled foreign corporation (CFC) that is either passive or easily movable. Prior to the enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-514), exceptions from foreign personal holding company income were provided for income derived in the conduct of a banking, financing, or similar business or income derived from certain investments made by an insurance company. The repeal of these exceptions under the Tax Reform Act of 1986 resulted in the inappropriate extension of the subpart F provisions to income that is neither passive nor easily moveable.

Personal holding company exemption for active financing income.—A temporary exception from the definition of foreign personal holding company income for subpart F purposes applies to certain income that is (1) derived in the active conduct of a banking, financing or similar business by a controlled foreign corporation (CFC) predominantly engaged in the active conduct of such business or (2) received from an unrelated person and derived from particular investments made by a qualifying insurance company. The exceptions are applicable only for taxable years beginning in 1998.

Planning Note. This temporary exception should benefit a U.S. 10-percent shareholder of a CFC that earns such active financing income or qualifying insurance company income during its 1998 tax year. Without the temporary exception, the U.S. shareholder would be subject to current taxation on that income, regardless of whether the income is distributed to the U.S. shareholder.

Banking, finance or similar business income. Whether income is derived in the active conduct of a banking, financing, or similar business is generally determined under the principles applicable in determining financial services income for purposes of the separate foreign tax credit limitation. However, in the case of a corporation that is engaged in the active conduct of a banking or securities business, the income eligible for this exception is generally determined using the test for whether income is nonpassive under the passive foreign investment company rules under Code Sec. 1296(b) as in effect prior to the Act. According to the Conference Committee Report, the conferees intend that the income of a corporation engaged in the active conduct of a banking or securities business that is eligible for this exception is the income that is treated as nonpassive under Prop. Reg. § 1.1296-4 through Prop. Reg. § 1.1296-6.

A corporation is predominantly engaged in the active conduct of a banking, finance or similar business only if more than 70 percent of its gross income from the business is derived from transactions with unrelated persons located within the country under the laws of which the CFC is created or organized. Alternatively, the corporation must be engaged in the active conduct (see above) of a banking or securities business or the corporation must be a qualified bank affiliate or qualified securities affiliate.

Insurance income. A temporary exception from foreign personal holding company income is provided for certain investment income of a qualifying insurance company received from an unrelated person, as defined in Code Sec. 954(d)(3), and derived from investments of the company's assets in an amount equal to (1) one-third of its premiums, as defined in Code Sec. 832(b)(4), earned during the tax year on property, casualty, or health insurance contracts or (2) 10 percent of its reserves (or $10,000,000, if greater, in the case of a start-up company) on life insurance or annuity contracts. An exception is also provided for income received from an unrelated person from investments made by a qualifying insurance company of its reserves or 80 percent of its unearned premiums. Special rules under Code Sec. 904(h)(2)(B) and (C) limit the income taken into account under this temporary active financing exemption, and require look-through treatment, respectively.

Generally, the unearned premiums and reserves of a qualifying insurance company with respect to property, casualty or health insurance contracts are determined using the same methods and interest rates used as if the company were subject to tax under the rules for insurance companies in Subchapter L of the Code. The reserves of a qualifying insurance company with respect to life insurance or annuity contracts may be determined under one of three alternative methods:

(1) a "U.S. method" based on the rules of Subchapter L of the Code;

(2) a "foreign method" that uses a preliminary term foreign reserve method; or

(3) a "cash surrender value" method that uses the net surrender value of the contract. No reserve at any time can exceed the foreign annual statement reserve for the contract, reduced by any catastrophe or deficiency reserve.

A qualifying insurance company is generally defined as an entity that:

(1) is subject to regulation as an insurance company under the laws of its country of incorporation;

(2) realizes at least 50 percent of its net written premiums from the insurance or reinsurance of risks located within the country in which the entity is created or organized; and

(3) is engaged in the active conduct of an insurance business and would be subject to tax under Subchapter L of the Code if it were a domestic corporation.

Special rules apply to allocate income to a contract under Code Sec. 954(h)(2)(B).

Anti-abuse and other definitive rules. Items with respect to a transaction or series of transactions are disregarded if one of the principal purposes of the transactions is (1) to qualify income or gain for these exceptions or (2) to accelerate or defer any item in order to claim the benefit of these exceptions. Also, this active financing exception does not apply to investment income allocated to contracts that insure related party risks or risks located in a foreign country other than the country in which the qualifying insurance company is created or organized.

An exception from the definition of foreign base company income in Code Sec. 954 is provided in case of the 1998 tax year, for income exempt from the definition of foreign personal holding company income under these rules.

Effective date. The exemption for active financing income applies to the first full tax year of a foreign corporation beginning after December 31, 1997, and before January 1, 1999, and to tax years of U.S. shareholders with or within which such tax year of such foreign corporation ends.

PASSIVE FOREIGN INVESTMENT COMPANIES

U.S. Shareholders of CFC That Is a PFIC

¶ 944

Background

Several anti-deferral regimes provide exceptions to the general rule that income of a foreign corporation is subject to U.S. income tax when paid to its U.S. shareholders.

One regime applies to controlled foreign corporations (CFCs). A foreign corporation is a CFC if more than 50 percent of the corporation's stock, measured by voting power or value, is owned by U.S. shareholders. A U.S. shareholder is U.S.

Background

person who owns, directly or indirectly, at least 10 percent of the corporation's stock, measured by voting power. U.S. shareholders are taxed currently on their pro rata shares of so-called subpart F income and their shares of CFC earnings invested in U.S. property.

Another anti-deferral regime applies to passive foreign investment companies (PFICs). A foreign corporation is a PFIC if 75 percent or more of its gross income consists of passive income or 50 percent of more of the average fair market value of its assets produce, or are held for the production of, passive income. How U.S. shareholders of PFICs are taxed depends on whether the PFIC is a "qualified electing fund." If it is, electing U.S. shareholders are taxed currently on their respective shares of the PFIC's earnings but may elect to defer payment of tax on income not currently received, subject to an interest charge. If a PFIC is nonqualified fund, U.S. shareholders are taxed on realized PFIC income and charged interest on deferred, unrealized income.

A foreign corporation can be both a CFC and a PFIC. In such a case, prior to the provision described below, the corporation's 10-percent shareholders would be subject to overlapping anti-deferral provisions.

Elimination of overlap for PFICs that are CFCs.—A corporation that otherwise would be a passive foreign investment company (PFIC) will not be treated as such with respect to certain shareholders if the corporation is also a controlled foreign corporation (CFC) under Code Sec. 957(a). This exception is available to shareholders who are 10-percent U.S. shareholders of the corporation under Code Sec. 951(b) for periods beginning after December 31, 1997. As a result, shareholders who are taxed currently on their pro rata shares of subpart F income of a CFC will not be subject to the PFIC income inclusion provisions with respect to the same stock. Conversely, the PFIC provisions will continue to apply to PFIC/CFC shareholders for any periods in which they are less than 10-percent shareholders.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. D. Kevin Dolan, of Weil, Gotshal & Manges' Washington, D.C. office (former IRS Associate Chief Counsel, Technical and International) notes that elimination of the application of PFIC rules to CFCs is a welcome simplification. U.S. shareholders of a CFC already are subject to a set of complex rules under subpart F. Application of PFIC rules to these shareholders created additional complexity which was not warranted by the anti-deferral objectives of either regime.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Paul Bodner, Esq., Great Neck, N.Y., notes that the PFIC provisions were enacted to correct the foreign investment company provision loophole, whereby an offshore mutual fund could be organized with less than 50 percent U.S. ownership. Although the anticipated revenue gain had been modest, the provisions actually gained significant revenue—much to the surprise of the tax writers—from industry that found that their Irish manufacturing companies and offshore finance subsidiaries were caught by the PFIC provisions. In some cases, i.e., the finance subsidiaries, the income was also subpart F income. Corporations had difficulties in reorganizing foreign subsidiaries that were also PFICs. The section 367 rules were well understood; however, the IRS never promulgated comparable regulations under the PFIC provisions. Meanwhile, there was a concern that transactions that were tax-free under section 367 would be taxable under the PFIC provisions, even if the PFIC taint was not removed. In addition, U.S. investors made investments in foreign public companies that may be PFICs. The published financial statements did not provide sufficient information, and the foreign company did not want to incur the administrative costs to make the determination. The elimination of overlap between subpart F and PFIC solves some of these unanticipated problems. The mark-to-market election (see ¶ 946) only solves the portfolio investor problem if the foreign corporation determines that it is a PFIC.

Nonqualified funds. In the case of PFICs that are not qualified electing funds, stock held by a 10-percent shareholder in a CFC will continue to be treated as PFIC stock unless the shareholder elects under Code Sec. 1298(b)(1) (formerly Code Sec. 1297(b)(1)) to pay tax and an interest charge with respect to the stock's unrealized appreciation or the corporation's accumulated earnings.

Shareholders who cease to be subject to subpart F. If a shareholder who was subject to current tax on his share of a CFC's subpart F income ceases to be a 10-percent U.S. shareholder, for purposes of the PFIC provisions, the shareholder immediately becomes subject to the PFIC rules and his holding period for the stock of the PFIC is treated as beginning on the first day after ceasing U.S. shareholder status. As a result, for PFICs that are not qualified electing funds, earnings are not attributed to the period during which the corporation was a CFC and the PFIC provisions did not apply.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years of U.S. persons beginning after December 31, 1997, and tax years of foreign corporations ending with or within such taxable years of U.S. persons.

Mark-to-Market Election

¶ 946

Background

There are exceptions to the general rule that income of a foreign corporation is subject to U.S. income tax when paid to its U.S. shareholders.

One exception applies to controlled foreign corporations (CFCs). A foreign corporation is a CFC if more than 50 percent of the corporation's stock, measured by voting power or value, is owned by U.S. shareholders. A U.S. shareholder is U.S. person who owns, directly or indirectly, at least 10 percent of the corporation's stock, measured by voting power. U.S. shareholders are taxed currently on their pro rata share of so-called subpart F income.

Another anti-deferral exception applies to passive foreign investment companies (PFICs). A foreign corporation is a PFIC if 75 percent or more of its gross income consists of passive income or 50 percent of more of the average fair market value of its assets produce, or are held for the production of, passive income. How

Background

U.S. shareholders of PFICs are taxed depends on whether the PFIC is a "qualified electing fund." If it is, electing U.S. shareholders are taxed currently on their respective shares of the PFIC's earnings but may elect to defer payment of tax on income not currently received, subject to an interest charge. If a PFIC is nonqualified fund, U.S. shareholders are taxed on realized PFIC income and charged interest on deferred, unrealized income.

A foreign corporation could be both a CFC and a PFIC. In such a case, the corporation's 10-percent shareholders would be subject to overlapping anti-deferral provisions.

Election allowed.—A U.S. shareholder of a PFIC may make a mark-to-market election with respect to the stock of the PFIC if such stock is marketable. Under the election, any excess of the fair market value of the PFIC stock at the close of the tax year over the shareholder's adjusted basis in the stock is included in the shareholder's income. The shareholder may deduct any excess of the adjusted basis of the PFIC stock over its fair market value at the close of the tax year. However, deductions are limited to the net mark-to-market gains on the stock that the shareholder included in income in prior tax years, or so-called "unreversed inclusions."

Marketable stock. For purposes of the election, PFIC stock is marketable if it is regularly traded on (1) a national securities exchange that is registered with the SEC, (2) the national market system established under Section 11A of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934, or (3) an exchange or market that the IRS determines has rules sufficient to ensure that the market price represents a legitimate and sound fair market value. To the extent provided in regulations, PFIC stock is also considered marketable if the PFIC offers for sale, or has outstanding, stock of which it is the issuer and which is redeemable at its net asset value in a manner comparable to a U.S. regulated investment company (RIC). To the extent provided in regulations, options on stock treated as marketable are also considered marketable.

PFIC stock owned by a RIC. PFIC stock is treated as marketable if it is owned directly or indirectly by a RIC that is offering for sale, or has outstanding, stock that it issued and that is redeemable at its net asset value. To the extent provided in regulations, PFIC stock owned by any other RIC is also treated as marketable if the RIC publishes net asset valuations at least annually. Amounts included in income under the election are treated as a dividends.

Basis adjustments. A shareholder's adjusted basis of PFIC stock is increased by the income recognized under the mark-to-market election and decreased by the deductions allowed under the election. If a U.S. shareholder owns PFIC stock indirectly through a foreign entity, the basis adjustments apply to the basis of the PFIC in the hands of the foreign entity for the purpose of applying the PFIC rules to the tax treatment of the U.S. owner. Similar basis adjustments are made to the basis of the property through which the U.S. persons hold the PFIC stock.

Source and character of income and deductions. Income recognized under the mark-to-market election and gain on the sale of PFIC stock with respect to which an election is made is treated as ordinary income. Deductions allowed under the election and loss on the sale of PFIC stock with respect to which an election is made, to the extent that the amount of loss does not exceed the net mark-to-market gains previously included, are treated as ordinary losses. The source of any income or losses is determined as if the amount were gain or loss from the sale of stock in the PFIC.

Constructive ownership of PFIC stock. PFIC stock owned directly or indirectly by or for a foreign partnership, trust or estate is treated as owned proportionately by the partners or beneficiaries. U.S. persons treated as owning PFIC stock under the constructive ownership rules may make the mark-to-market election, and any disposition of PFIC stock by an intervening owner is treated as a disposition of the stock by the U.S. person who is the ultimate owner.

PFIC stock owned by a CFC. A controlled foreign corporation (CFC) that owns stock in a PFIC is treated as a U.S. person that may make the mark-to-market election. Amounts includible in the CFC's income under the election are treated as foreign personal holding company income; deductions are allocable to foreign personal holding company income. According to the Senate Finance Committee report, the source of such income or deductions is determined by the residence of the CFC.

Basis for PFIC stock acquired from a decedent. In the case of PFIC stock with respect to which a mark-to-market election was in effect on the date of the decedent's death, the person acquiring the stock from the decedent will have a basis in the stock equal to the lesser of (1) the decedent's adjusted basis in the stock immediately before death or (2) the basis determined under Code Sec. 1014 (the date-of-death value of the stock).

Nonqualified funds. The rules of Code Sec. 1291 applicable to nonqualified funds generally do not apply to a shareholder for tax years for which a mark-to-market election is in effect. If Code Sec. 1291 is applied and a mark-to-market election was in effect for any prior tax year, the shareholder's holding period for the PFIC stock is treated as beginning immediately after the last tax year of the election. However, if a taxpayer makes a mark-to-market election for PFIC stock that is a nonqualified fund after the beginning of the taxpayer's holding period for such stock, a coordination rule applies to insure that the taxpayer does not avoid the interest charge with respect to amounts attributable to periods before the election.

Effective dates. This provision applies to tax years of U.S. persons beginning after December 31, 1997, and tax years of foreign corporations ending with or within such tax years of U.S. persons.

Valuation of Assets for PFIC Determination

¶ 948

Background

A passive foreign investment company (PFIC) is a foreign corporation that meets either passive income or passive assets thresholds. The passive income threshold is met if 75 percent or more of corporation's gross income for the tax year is passive. The assets test is met if 50 percent or more of the average fair market value of the corporation's assets consist of assets that either produce or are held for the production of passive income. Under prior law, in applying the PFIC assets test, the assets of a PFIC that is also a CFC are measured using adjusted basis instead of fair market value. Non-CFC PFICs may also make an irrevocable election to use adjusted basis.

Background

PFIC asset test for publicly traded corporations.—In connection with other simplification provisions relating to passive foreign investment companies (PFICs) (see ¶ 944 and 946, above), for purposes of applying the PFIC assets test, the assets of all PFICs that are publicly traded are measured using a fair market value computation. Thus, a publicly traded foreign corporation is a PFIC if the fair market value of its passive income-producing assets equals or exceeds 50 percent of the sum of the market value of its outstanding stock plus its liabilities.

Application of the assets test to foreign corporations that are not publicly traded is unchanged by the Act. Thus, nonpublicly traded controlled foreign corporations (CFCs) that are also PFICs continue to measure assets using adjusted basis while other nonpublicly traded foreign corporations continue to use fair market value unless they elect to use adjusted basis.

Publicly traded corporation. The stock of a foreign corporation is publicly traded if it is regularly traded on a national securities exchange that is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, the national market system established under section 11A of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934, or any other exchange or market identified by the Treasury that is sufficiently regulated to ensure a sound determination of fair market value. Also, according to the Conference Committee Report, the corporation's stock must be publicly traded on each of the quarterly measurement dates under the PFIC asset test in order for this provision to apply to the corporation.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years of U.S. persons beginning after December 31, 1997, and to tax years of foreign corporations ending with or within such tax years of U.S. persons.

FOREIGN SALES CORPORATIONS

Computer Software Qualifying as FSC Export Property

¶ 950

Background

The Internal Revenue Code provides export incentives through the use of a Foreign Sales Corporation (FSC) that is incorporated in a qualifying offshore jurisdiction. Under the FSC rules, a portion of the FSC's foreign trade income is exempt from U.S. tax. Dividends from the FSC to a domestic parent corporation are also not taxed, under a 100 percent dividends received deduction, to the extent of the exempt foreign trade income.

Background

In general, foreign trade income refers to receipts generated from the sale, exchange, or lease of export property. Export property generally excludes intangible assets, such as patents, trademarks, formulae, and goodwill. Copyrighted articles, such as a book or mass-market computer software, that are sold without the right to reproduce it for external use are not considered to be within the list of excluded intangible property and, therefore, can qualify as export property.

However, with respect to copyrights (as opposed to copyrighted articles) under prior law, copyrights to films, tapes, records, and similar reproductions could qualify as export property, but copyrights to books or computer software could not qualify as export property (Temp. Reg. § 1.927(a)-1T(f)(3)). This rule served to deny FSC export benefits on sales or licenses of software that also granted to the foreign purchaser or licensor reproduction rights.

Software licensed for reproduction abroad.—In an effort to extend the Foreign Sales Corporation (FSC) tax benefits to software companies, computer software may now be treated as export property, even if the sale or license agreement permits reproduction of the software abroad. This rule would negate the current rule of Temp. Reg. § 1.927(a)-1T(f)(3), which excludes such sales or licenses of software from the definition of export property and, therefore, denies FSC export benefits to the income derived from such transactions.

In administering the new rule, the intention of Congress expressed in the Senate Committee Report is that the term "software" be interpreted broadly in order to accommodate future technological changes and preserve the FSC benefits now extended by the Act to computer software transactions with rights to reproduce the software. The committee report specifically stated that no inference should be drawn from this provision as to whether, prior to the effective date of the Act, computer software licensed for reproduction abroad could qualify as export property.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. Paul Bodner, Esq., Great Neck, N.Y., observes that technology that was not contemplated when the tax law was drafted poses significant tax classification problems. When one goes to a store and "buys" shrink-wrapped computer software, such as word processing software, is the acquirer buying a product or licensing the right to use intangible property? Does it make a difference if the software is obtained off the Internet? For an exporter, does it make a difference if copies of the software are reproduced in the United States and then shipped or if a master is shipped overseas and used to reproduce the product in a foreign country? Proposed Treasury Regulation § 1.861-18 analyzed the characteristics of computer software and the means of transferring rights to its use in the context of source of income. For years there have been disputes between the software industry and the IRS as to its eligibility for FSC benefits. The FSC definition of export property, eligible for FSC benefits specifically exclude certain intangible property such as copyrights, other than films, tapes, records, or similar reproductions. Temporary Treasury Regulation § 1.927(a)-1T(f)(3) provides that although a license of a master recording tape for reproduction outside the United States is eligible for FSC benefits, standardized, mass marketed computer software is only eligible for FSC benefits, if such software is not accompanied by a right to reproduce for external use. In other words, the master cannot be shipped but the copies must be made in the United States. Many practitioners believed that this distinction was incorrect. Congress agreed that computer software is virtually indistinguishable from films, tapes and records, and accordingly, it should be eligible for FSC benefits. The Committee Reports specifically state that no inference is intended regarding the qualification of computer software licensed for reproduction abroad prior to the effective date of the legislation. Microsoft is litigating this issue.

Effective date. This provision applies to gross receipts attributable to periods after December 31, 1997, in tax years ending after such date. According to the committee reports, in the case of multi-year licenses, FSC benefits are available for gross receipts attributable to the period of the license after December 31, 1997.

FOREIGN CURRENCY TRANSACTIONS

Personal Transactions by Individuals

¶ 953

Background

The exchange of U.S. dollars for foreign currency is considered the purchase of a capital asset under Code Sec. 1221 and, when the foreign currency is reconverted into dollars, capital gain or loss can result due to currency fluctuations relative to the dollar during the period that the foreign currency was held (Rev. Rul. 74-7, 1974-1 CB 198). In these circumstances, under Code Sec. 165(c), a capital loss is generally nondeductible unless it is incurred in connection with a trade or business or a transaction entered into for profit (C. Quijano, CA-1, 96-2 USTC ¶ 50,441).

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 enacted Code Sec. 988 to lay out the statutory framework for the treatment of foreign currency transactions. However, for individuals, Code Sec. 988 only applies to business or investment transactions for which related expenses are deductible in a trade or business (Code Sec. 162) or other income-producing activity (Code Sec. 212). Foreign currency transactions for personal use were not addressed specifically by the Code prior to amendment by the Act. Therefore, gain or loss on personal transactions remained subject to pre-1986 law, including the analysis set forth in Rev. Rul. 74-7.

Nonrecognition of de minimis gain from foreign currency transactions for personal use.—Exchange gain of an individual from the disposition of foreign currency in a personal transaction is not taxable, provided that the gain realized does not exceed $200. This simplification measure is intended to eliminate an individual's obligation to compute and report gains arising from exchanges of currency that are small in amount and that are associated with personal and business travel, as well as other nonbusiness activities.

The term "personal transaction" refers to any transaction other than one with respect to which properly allocable expenses are deductible as trade or business expenses under Code Sec. 162 or expenses incurred in the production of income under Code Sec. 212(1) and (2). It also refers to an individual's currency exchange transactions that are entered into in connection with business travel.

Example. Jean Widget, owner of the Widget Coil and Spring Co., has a booming export business and travels overseas extensively. In June 1998, she travels to Mexico on business and charges most of her traveling expenses (i.e., hotel, meals, and incidentals) in Mexican pesos to her credit card. As a result of a falling peso between the time she incurs the expenses and the time she pays the credit card bill in dollars, she has realized exchange gain of $10. The gain is not taxable.

Gains in excess of $200 will continue to be taxed as before, meaning that such gains, even from dispositions of foreign currency in personal transactions, will generally be treated as taxable gains arising from the sale or disposition of a capital asset.

Planning Note. The law sets the nonrecognition treatment for de minimis gains at $200 per transaction. The law does not provide for a cumulative threshold of $200 for exchange gains from personal transactions realized throughout the entire taxable year. Accordingly, very few personal transactions should exceed the threshold amount, except in the situation where currency fluctuates dramatically during hyper-inflationary periods or as the result of a significant currency devaluation relative to the dollar.

The tax treatment of capital losses arising from personal transactions involving foreign currency is unaffected. The House Ways and Means Committee Report notes that, under Code Sec. 165(c), such losses typically are not deductible by individuals.

Effective date. The provision applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

SOURCE OF INCOME

Stock and Securities Trading Safe Harbor

¶ 955

Background

Foreign corporations and nonresident aliens that trade stocks or securities for their own accounts will, if certain safe harbor requirements are met, not be treated as engaged in a U.S. trade or business with respect to their trading activities. This generally means that the trading income will not be "effectively connected" income.

A foreign corporation qualifies for the safe harbor only if it is not a dealer in stock or securities. Also, prior to the Act, if the corporation's principal activity was securities trading for its own account, it must not have had its principal office in the United States. A similar rule applied to securities trading partnerships through which foreign persons invested in U.S. stock or securities. The location of a foreign entity's principal office generally was determined by the place where administrative functions were performed rather than the place where the entity's management or investment decisions were made.

Principal office requirement repealed.—The Act repeals the requirement that a foreign entity whose principal business is stock or securities trading must locate its principal office outside of the United States in order to qualify for the safe harbor rule of Code Sec. 864(b)(2)(A)(ii). That provision, and its regulatory extension to partnerships, permits the entity (or its nonresident investors in the case of a partnership) to treat income derived from stock or securities trading on its own account as not effectively connected to a U.S. trade or business.

Congress repealed the principal office requirement because it did not advance any important tax policy and was easily circumvented by having certain administrative functions performed abroad.

Effective date. The provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Foreign Vessel Crew Member

¶ 965

Background

Under prior law, a nonresident alien's presence in the United States as a regular crew member of a foreign vessel was taken into account for purposes of determining whether the individual was treated as a resident alien for U.S. tax purposes, even though such individual may not have been permitted to leave the vessel during those periods. Also, under prior law, a nonresident alien individual who earned more than $3,000 of wages while the foreign vessel was within U.S. territory was subject to income taxation by the United States. Although special rules applied to exclude gross income derived by a nonresident alien individual from the international operation of a ship if the individual's country of residence provided a reciprocal exemption for U.S. residents, this exclusion did not apply to income from personal services performed by an individual crew member on board a ship.

Foreign vessel crew member earnings treated as foreign source income.—Generally, the compensation earned by a foreign vessel crew member for services performed in the United States is treated as foreign-source income. More specifically, the compensation for labor or services performed by a nonresident alien in connection with the individual's temporary presence in the United States as a regular member of the crew of a foreign vessel engaged in transportation between the United States and a foreign country or possession of the United States is treated as foreign-source income that is exempt from U.S. income and withholding tax. However, such income is not treated as foreign-source income for purposes of applying the group-term life insurance rules of Code Sec. 79, accident and health plan rules of Code Sec. 105, and pension plan rules of subchapter D of the Code. Thus, as the Senate Committee Report provides, foreign vessel crew members are not excluded for purposes of applying the minimum participation standards of Code Sec. 410 to a plan of the employer.

The special rule of Code Sec. 863(c)(2)(B) regarding personal service income with respect to transportation that begins in the United States and ends in a U.S. possession (or vice versa) only applies to a U.S. citizen or resident.

Determining residency. For purposes of determining whether an individual is a U.S. resident under the substantial presence test of Code Sec. 7701(b)(3), special rules apply for determining "presence" with respect to foreign vessel crew members. Under the rules, the days that such individual is present as a member of the regular crew of a foreign vessel are disregarded unless the individual is otherwise engaged in any trade or business in the United States on those days.

Effective date. The provision that treats remuneration of nonresident aliens engaged in international transportation services as foreign-source income generally applies to remuneration for services performed in tax years beginning after December 31, 1997. However, the provision that disregards days that a foreign vessel crew member is temporarily present in the United States when determining residency applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

TRANSFERS TO FOREIGN ENTITIES

Repeal of Code Sec. 1491 Excise Tax

¶ 968

Background

Prior to repeal by the Act, Code Sec. 1491 imposed a 35-percent excise tax on transfers of property by a U.S. person to a foreign corporation as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital. The excise tax was also imposed on any transfer of property by a U.S. transferor to a foreign partnership, estate, or trust.

Tax-free exchanges, gifts, and sales with deferred realization of gain are examples of transactions that were within the scope of Code Sec. 1491. The excise tax was equal to 35 percent of the excess of the property's fair market value over the sum of the transferor's adjusted basis in such property plus any gain recognized at the time of the transfer.

Certain transfers were excluded from the excise tax by Code Sec. 1492, which is also repealed. The excluded transfers included:

(1) transfers to certain tax-exempt organizations;

(2) transfers to a foreign corporation that were subject to the gain recognition or otherwise covered by the rules of Code Sec. 367;

(3) transfers for which the taxpayer elected to apply the principles of Code Sec. 367; or

(4) transfers that the taxpayer elected, under Code Sec. 1057, to treat as taxable sales.

Transfers subject to Code Sec. 1491 had to be reported on Form 926 (Return by a U.S. Transferor of Property to a Foreign Corporation, Foreign Estate or Trust, or Foreign Partnership) on the day of the transfer. Any excise tax due on the transfer was computed on Form 926 and was required to be paid on the day of the transfer. The elections described above to apply the principles of Code Sec. 367 or to recognize gain under Code Sec. 1057 also had to be reported on Form 926.

Background

In addition to the excise tax, Code Sec. 1494(c) set forth a harsh penalty for failure to properly report a transfer that was within the scope of Code Sec. 1491. The penalty could equal up to 35 percent of the gross value of the property transferred, and additional penalties could accrue for continued failure to comply. The controversial penalty could apply just by virtue of the transfer being "described in Code Sec. 1491," whether or not the transfer actually was subject to the excise tax. It could apply, for instance, to transfers described in Code Sec. 1491, but excluded under Code Sec. 1492.

Recognizing the reporting burdens and potentially drastic penalties wrought by Code Sec. 1494(c), the IRS attempted to narrow the scope of reportable transfers in Notice 97-18. The Notice limited the reporting requirement by waiving reporting of transfers in which the U.S. transferor immediately recognized gain and did not have a significant interest in the transferee immediately after the transfer. It also excluded certain transfers that were already required to be reported under another Code section from the potential imposition of the Code Sec. 1494(c) penalty tax.

Excise tax on transfers to foreign entities replaced with gain recognition.—The Act repeals the 35-percent excise tax imposed by Code Sec. 1491 on transfers of property by a U.S. person to a foreign corporation as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital. The excise tax applied as well to transfers to a foreign partnership or to a foreign estate or trust. Also repealed is the controversial and draconian penalty of Code Sec. 1494(c), added by the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188), for failure to report transfers covered by Code Sec. 1491. Finally, Code Secs. 1057 and 1492, which excluded certain transfers from the excise tax or provided an election to exclude such transfers, are also repealed.

The Code Sec. 1491 excise tax was introduced into the Code in 1932 and has long served as a backstop for the income tax with respect to transfers of appreciated property to entities outside of the U.S. taxing jurisdiction in nontaxable transactions. Without the excise tax, built-in gain in the property could ultimately escape U.S. taxation.

With the repeal of Code Sec. 1491, Congress has generally adopted a policy of recognizing gain on transactions that previously qualified for nonrecognition treatment but fell subject to the 35-percent excise tax. While the excise tax applied mechanically and presented a trap for the unwary, particularly in the partnership area, Congress anticipates the development of a regulatory regime to spell out the transfers that should and should not be subject to gain recognition.

Transfers to foreign trusts and estates. Any transfer of property by a U.S. person to a foreign trust or estate is now taxable, except to the extent provided by regulation. Such a transfer is treated as a sale or exchange of the property for its fair market value (FMV). The U.S. transferor must recognize gain equal to the excess of the property's FMV over its adjusted basis in the hands of the transferor. The gain recognition rule does not apply if the U.S. transferor (or other person) is considered to be the owner of the trust under the grantor trust rules.

In addition, where a domestic trust becomes a foreign trust, all trust assets are considered to be transferred to a foreign trust. Thus, appreciated property owned by the trust will be deemed sold on the date that the trust is converted from domestic to foreign, and gain must be recognized by the trust on that date.

Transfers to foreign corporations. All capital contributions and transfers of paid-in surplus to foreign corporations are now brought with the rules of Code Sec. 367. Thus, to the extent that a contribution to the capital or paid-in surplus of a foreign corporation was previously subject to the Code Sec. 1491 excise tax but was not within the scope of Code Sec. 367, such a transfer may now be a taxable transaction under regulations to be prescribed by the Treasury.

Transfers to partnerships with foreign persons. In lieu of the Code Sec. 1491 excise tax on transfers of property to foreign partnerships, the Act empowers the Treasury Department to write regulations denying the normal nonrecognition treatment of Code Sec. 721 on partnership contributions by a U.S. partner in circumstances where gain inherent in the property contributed ultimately will be recognized by a foreign person. Thus, it appears that Congress has mandated a regulatory regime that will "look through" the partnership to determine whether the gain will be allocated to a foreign partner, presumably as the result of either a sale of the property by the partnership or a subsequent in-kind distribution of the property to a foreign partner.

Caution. This provision concerning denial of nonrecognition treatment for partnership contributions is not necessarily limited to transfers to foreign partnerships. Under the literal text of the law as amended, the measure potentially could apply to a domestic partnership with foreign partners. The situations in which gain will be recognized is to be set forth by the Treasury in regulations.

Transfers of insurance policies, etc. To the extent provided by regulations, nonrecognition treatment on exchanges of life insurance policies, endowment contracts, or annuities under Code Sec. 1035 will not apply if the exchange has the effect of transferring property to a foreign person.

PRACTICAL ANALYSIS. D. Kevin Dolan, of Weil, Gotshal & Manges' Washington, D.C. office (former IRS Associate Chief Counsel, Technical and International) notes that the repeal of the Code Sec. 1491 excise tax is long overdue. In the context of transfers to partnerships and corporations, the excise tax was not justified by policy concerns. Subchapter K adequately deals with attempts to shift built-in appreciation among partners (e.g., Code Sec. 704(c)), and Code Sec. 367 addresses tax avoidance issues in the corporate area. Code Sec. 1491 served mainly as a trap for the unwary, and its replacement with IRS regulatory authority over these areas is a welcome change.

Effective date. The repeal of Code Secs. 1491-1494 and new provisions concerning transfers to foreign entities are effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1131(a), repealing Code Secs. 1491-1494 (Chapter 5); Act Sec. 1131(b), adding Code Sec. 684; Act Sec. 1131(b)(c), redesignating Code Sec. 1035(c) as subsection (d) and adding new subsection (c); Act Sec. 1131(b)(c), adding Code Sec. 367(f); Act Sec. 1131(b)(c), adding Code Sec. 721(c); Act Sec. 1131(c)[(d)], amending Code Sec. 814(h), repealing Code Sec. 1057, and striking Code Sec. 6422(5). Law at ¶ 5127, 5211, 5221, 5253, 5325, 5335, 5409–5415, and 5671. Committee Report at ¶ 11,735.

Transfers of Intangibles

¶ 969

Background

A transfer of intangible property by a U.S. person to a foreign corporation in exchange for stock or as part of a corporate reorganization results in a deemed sale of the property for a stream of royalty payments received over the useful life of the intangible. Income inclusions under this provision are determined annually (and at the time of disposition of the property by the foreign corporation). The deemed royalty amounts must be arm's length and must be commensurate with the annual income attributable to the intangible. The deemed amounts are treated as ordinary income. These rules remain unchanged by the Act.

Under prior law, the amount included in gross income under the deemed royalty provision was U.S.-source income. Also, no specific provision existed under prior law with respect to the transfer of intangible property to a foreign partnership. The transfer was a transaction subject to the Code Sec. 1491 excise tax, however.

Treatment of deemed royalties on transfers to corporations or partnerships.—The treatment of deemed royalty income on transfers of intangibles to a foreign corporation in exchange for stock or as part of a corporate reorganization as U.S.-source income is repealed. Thus, the deemed payments are no longer subject to a special source rule. Instead, the income will be considered as foreign-source to the extent that an actual payment made by the foreign corporation under a license or sale agreement with the transferor would be treated as foreign-source income.

Planning Note. The provision eliminates one of the disadvantages of contributing intangible property to a foreign corporation, as opposed to structuring the transaction as an actual royalty agreement. Because, prior to amendment, the deemed royalties were characterized as U.S.-source income, the income could not be used to improve the taxpayer's position under the foreign tax credit limitation formula. Under the Act, deemed royalties and actual royalties should be characterized identically for source purposes in applying the foreign tax credit limitation rules. However, other considerations such as foreign withholding taxes that may be imposed on actual royalty payments and the deductibility of actual v. deemed royalties for foreign tax purposes still must be taken into account.

Partnerships. Regulatory authority is granted to apply the Code Sec. 367(d) deemed royalty treatment in the case of a transfer of intangible property to a partnership. Accordingly, to the extent provided by regulations, such a transfer will be treated as a sale that generates deemed annual payments from the partnership to the transferor. Such payments are considered to be ordinary income, not capital gain, must be established on an arm's-length basis, and must be commensurate with the annual income attributable to the intangible.

The Senate Finance Committee Report would seem to indicate that only transfers to foreign partnerships are anticipated to be within the scope of the rule, although this term is not defined in the Code. See ¶ 467 for guidance in the Act concerning the distinction between U.S. and foreign partnerships.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997. According to the Senate Finance Committee Report, this should be interpreted to mean that the provision is effective for transfers made and royalties deemed received after August 5, 1997.

Statute of Limitations

¶ 971

Background

The normal statute of limitations does not apply with respect to tax imposed on outbound property transfers under Code Sec. 367(a), (d), or (e) if the U.S. person making the transfer fails to timely report the transfer, as required by Code Sec. 6038B. Such transfers must be reported on Form 926, which must be filed by the U.S. person along with its tax return for the tax year including the date of the transfer. Where Form 926 is not timely completed and filed, the limitations period runs until three years after the date on which the Treasury is properly notified of the exchange or distribution.

Under prior law, no similar extension of the statute of limitations applied in the case of tax imposed on transfers to foreign partnerships, trusts, or estates. Nor was there an extension of the limitations period with respect to tax obligations that may be covered by other information reporting requirements concerning foreign entities, such as information on controlled foreign corporations required to be reported on Form 5471.

Extended statute of limitations where foreign information required.— The Act strengthens the information reporting requirements relating to foreign entities by suspending the running of the statute of limitations until the information is reported. Specifically, the time for assessment of tax "with respect to any event or period to which such information relates" will continue until the date that is three years after the date on which required information is furnished to the government.

This rule previously applied to the reporting of certain transfers to foreign corporations that were taxable under Code Sec. 367, but it now applies to events or periods for which reporting is required under all of the following Code sections:

Code Sec. 6038—Information Reporting with Respect to Certain Foreign Corporations and Partnerships

Code Sec. 6038A—Information with Respect to Certain Foreign-Owned Corporations

Code Sec. 6038B—Notice of Certain Transfers to Foreign Persons

Code Sec. 6046—Returns as to Organization or Reorganization of Foreign Corporations and as to Acquisitions of Their Stock

Code Sec. 6046A—Returns as to Interests in Foreign Partnerships

Code Sec. 6048—Information With Respect to Certain Foreign Trusts

Effective date. This provision is effective for information the due date for the reporting of which is after August 5, 1997.

FOREIGN TRUSTS

Residency of Trusts

¶ 973

Background

Prior to the enactment of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188), a trust was treated as foreign if it was not subject to U.S. taxation on its income from foreign sources, i.e., income other than U.S.-source income or income effectively connected to a U.S. trade or business. Thus, trusts were considered to be foreign trusts if they were taxed in the same manner as nonresident alien individuals. All other trusts were treated as domestic trusts.

With the passage of the Small Business Job Protection Act, Congress enacted new Code Sec. 7701(a)(30)(E) and Code Sec. 7701(a)(31) to provide rules for determining the residency of trusts. The statutory distinction between U.S. and foreign trusts, described below, provided objective criteria for determining trust residence. Congress viewed this as preferable to the prior law subjective treatment of trusts, which applied the distinction between resident and nonresident alien individuals by analogy to trusts.

Transitional rule for definition of trust residency.—The new law gives the Treasury the authority to prescribe rules under which nongrantor trusts can continue to be treated as U.S. trusts, even though such trusts would be considered as foreign trusts under the two-part test of Code Sec. 7701(a)(30)(E). The Code defines a trust as a U.S. person if both (1) a U.S. court can exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust and (2) one or more U.S. fiduciaries have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust. A trust that does not satisfy both criteria is a foreign trust. (See ¶ 975, below, for a technical modification to the definition of trust residency.)

The statutory definition of a U.S. resident trust was added by the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) ("Small Business Act") and is generally effective for tax years beginning after 1996. Because many trusts that were treated as U.S. trusts prior to the 1996 Small Business Act would be treated as foreign trusts under the current statutory definition, an election that allows trusts to choose continued U.S. tax treatment is provided under the Act.

The Act contains two distinct, but largely overlapping, provisions that address the issue and provide an election for continued U.S. tax treatment. Both provisions will apply only to the extent provided by Treasury regulations.

The first provision amends the 1996 Small Business Act. It authorizes the Treasury to permit the election of continued U.S. treatment by a trust that was in existence on August 20, 1996, and was considered a U.S. person on August 19, 1996.

The second provision is more restrictive in that it is expressly limits the election of continued U.S. treatment, as provided by regulations, to a "reasonable" transitional period following the August 20, 1996, enactment of the 1996 Small Business Act. Other conditions under this provision are that the trustee has not opted to treat the trust as a foreign trust under the election provided by Sec. 1907(a)(3)(B) of the 1996 Small Business Act, that the trust makes modifications necessary to be treated as a U.S. person before the expiration of the reasonable period, and that the trust complies with other regulatory requirements.

Planning Note. While the Act gives the Treasury the responsibility to define the criteria under which an election for continued treatment as a U.S. trust can be made, the second provision described above seems to mirror the conditions set forth in Notice 96-65, I.R.B. 1996-52. The Notice gives domestic trusts additional time to make adjustments in order to retain domestic trust status under the new statutory definition, provided the following conditions are met: (1) the trustee must initiate modification of the trust to conform with the domestic trust criteria by the due date (including extensions) for its 1997 tax return; (2) the trustee must complete the modification within two years of the return due date; and (3) the trustee must attach a statement to the trust's 1997 tax return entitled "Election to Rely on Notice 96-65 to File as a Domestic Trust."

Effective date. Both provisions concerning election of continued treatment as a U.S. resident trust apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996, or, at the election of the trustee, to tax years ending after August 20, 1996.

Technical corrections to residency definition.—The two-part test set forth at ¶ 973, above, for determining whether a trust is a U.S. or foreign trust is modified by substituting the term "United States persons" for "United States fiduciaries." Thus, a trust is treated as a U.S. person so long as a U.S. court is able to exercise primary supervision over administration of the trust and one or more U.S. persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trusts, regardless of whether such persons are trust fiduciaries.

In addition, the Act clarifies that, in applying the general rule that trusts or estates compute taxable income in a manner similar to individuals, foreign trusts or estates are deemed not to be present or resident in the United States at any time.

Effective date. These technical corrections apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996, or at the election of the trustee, to tax years ending after August 20, 1996.

Transfers to Foreign Grantor Trusts

¶ 977

Background

A U.S. person who transfers property to a foreign trust that has U.S. beneficiaries generally is treated as the owner of the portion of the trust attributable to such property. This rule does not apply to transfers in exchange for fair market value consideration. However, in determining whether the fair market value exception will apply, obligations of related persons are not taken into account. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, related persons, termed "persons described" in the law, included the following: the trust, any grantor or beneficiary of the trust, and certain persons related to any grantor or beneficiary.

Background

Fair market value exception to foreign grantor trust rules clarified.—For purposes of determining whether the transfer by a U.S. person to a foreign trust with U.S. beneficiaries is made in exchange for fair market value consideration, the obligations of the trust owner and certain persons related to the trust owner are not taken into account. Thus, trust owners (and related persons) join trust grantors and beneficiaries as "persons described" in Code Sec. 679(a)(3)(C). The obligations of described persons are disregarded in applying the fair market value exception to the rule that treats a U.S. transferor of property to a foreign trust with U.S. beneficiaries as the trust owner.

Effective date. This technical correction applies to transfers of property after February 6, 1995.

INFORMATION REPORTING

Foreign Partnership Return Requirement

¶ 981

Background

Pursuant to Reg. § 1.6031-1(c), any partnership engaged in a trade or business in the United States or having U.S.-source income is required to file a partnership return. The filing requirement applies regardless of the location of the partnership's principal place of business and regardless of whether all partners are nonresidents. Partnerships with no business in the United States and no U.S.-source income generally are not required to file a return.

Under Code Sec. 6231(f), failure to file a return results in the denial of losses or credits to all partners in the case of a partnership that either keeps its books or records outside of the United States or has a nonresident tax matters partner.

Return requirement for foreign partnerships codified.—The Act codifies the requirements for foreign partnerships to file a partnership return (Form 1065—U.S. Partnership Return of Income), which had not been specifically provided in the Code, but rather was contained only in Reg. § 1.6031-1(c) and (d). As amended, the Code provides that a foreign partnership must file a return if it has gross income that is either U.S.-source or effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business. Treasury is granted authority to make exceptions to the filing requirement by regulation.

If a partnership that maintains books and records outside of the United States or that has a nonresident tax matters partner fails to properly file a return, all partners will be denied their shares of partnership deductions, losses, and credits. Under prior law, the denial was limited to allocations of losses and credits.

Effective date. This provision applies to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Controlled Foreign Partnerships

¶ 983

Background

U.S. owners with a controlling interest in a foreign corporation are subject to extensive annual information reporting requirements concerning the corporation's location, assets, liabilities, business activities, related-party transactions, and ownership structure. Prior to the Act, failure to complete and file the required information return resulted in penalties of $1,000 for each tax year for which information is not reported. If such failure continued for more than 90 days after notification by the Treasury, an additional $1,000 penalty applied for each 30-day period (or portion thereof) of continued noncompliance after expiration of the 90-day period. The maximum amount of additional penalties that could be imposed was $24,000.

Prior to the Act, no similar systematic reporting requirements and penalty regime existed with respect to foreign partnerships. Such information would, under prior law, be provided to some degree by foreign partnerships required to file a partnership return where the partnership had U.S.-source income or was engaged in a U.S. trade or business.

CFC information reporting requirements applied to partnerships and penalties increased.—Detailed rules for information reporting, similar to the information reporting rules for controlled foreign corporations (CFCs), now apply to controlled foreign partnerships. Under the new provision, a U.S. partner that controls a foreign partnership is required to file an annual information return. Presumably, the return for reporting information on foreign partnerships will be similar in scope to Form 5471 (Information Return of U.S. Persons With Respect To Certain Foreign Corporations).

Information to be reported. Specifically, the Act anticipates that the IRS will require information on, but not necessarily limited to, the following:

(1) the name, the entity's principal place of business and nature of its business, and the country in which the partnership is organized;

(2) a balance sheet for the partnership listing assets, liabilities and capital;

(3) transactions engaged in by the partnership with the controlling U.S. partner, with other entities controlled by that partner, or with other partners having at least a 10-percent interest in partnership capital or profits; and

(4) the identity and address of U.S. persons holding at least a five-percent interest in the partnership, along with the nature of their partnership interest.

Control defined. A U.S. partner controls a foreign partnership if the partner holds, directly or indirectly, a greater than 50-percent interest in the capital, profits, or, to the extent provided in the regulations, deductions or losses of the partnership. In determining whether control exists by virtue of an indirect interest, the constructive stock ownership rules of Code Sec. 267(c) will be applied.

Control by 10-percent partners. Where there is no single controlling partner, but the partnership is controlled by several U.S. persons each holding at least a 10-percent interest in the partnership, then the Treasury may require information to be reported by each such U.S. partner. Information that may be required under this rule includes information concerning the partner's interest and the partner's allocation of partnership items.

Increase in penalty amounts. For both controlled foreign partnerships and CFCs, failure to comply with these reporting requirements will result in a $10,000 penalty. This penalty applies for each tax year of noncompliance. If noncompliance continues for more than 90 days after Treasury notification, additional penalties of $10,000 will apply for each 30-day period (or portion thereof) after expiration of the 90-day period during which the U.S. person does not correct its failure to file a proper return. These additional penalties are capped at $50,000.

Effective date. This provision is effective for annual accounting periods of foreign partnerships beginning after August 5, 1997.

Changes in Ownership of Foreign Partnership

¶ 985

Background

A U.S. person that acquires or disposes of an interest in a foreign partnership, or whose proportional interest in the partnership changes substantially, is required to file an information return with respect to such event. Under prior law, no minimum or threshold interest in the partnership existed. Accordingly, even U.S. persons with small or nominal interests in foreign partnerships were subject to the reporting requirement.

Return requirements for changes in ownership of interests in foreign partnerships.—The requirement that a U.S. person report the acquisition or disposition of an interest in a foreign partnership, or a change in his proportional interest in the partnership, is modified to apply only to 10-percent partners. For sales or acquisitions, the reporting requirement applies only if the U.S. partner owns at least a 10-percent interest in the partnership either immediately prior to or after the transaction. For proportional increases or decreases in the partner's interest in the partnership, the change in ownership percentage must be reported only if the change involved a 10-percent or greater interest.

The term "10-percent interest" refers to a direct or indirect ownership interest of at least 10 percent in the partnership's capital or profits (or, to the extent provided by regulations, an allocation of at least 10 percent of the partnership's deductions or losses).

Effective date. This provision applies to transfers and ownership changes occurring after August 5, 1997.

Penalty for Failure to Report Transfers to Foreign Entities

¶ 986

Background

Under prior law, a failure to file information returns relating to changes in ownership in a foreign partnership (Code Sec. 6046A) or to changes in ownership in the stock of a foreign corporation (Code Sec. 6046) was subject to a civil penalty of $1,000 for failure to file a return or to provide the required information with respect to the change in ownership.

Failure-to-file penalties increased.—Failure to file information returns relating to changes in ownership in a foreign partnership (Code Sec. 6046A) or to changes in ownership in the stock of a foreign corporation (Code Sec. 6046) is subject to increased penalties under the Act. As modified, a civil penalty of $10,000 applies for failure to file a return or to provide the required information with respect to the change in ownership.

If such failure continues for more than 90 days after notification by the Treasury, an additional $10,000 penalty applies for each 30-day period (or portion thereof) of continued noncompliance after expiration of the 90-day period. The maximum amount of additional penalties that can be imposed is $50,000.

Effective date. This provision applies to transfers and changes occurring after August 5, 1997.

Transfers of Property to Foreign Entities

¶ 988

Background

U.S. persons who transfer property to a foreign corporation are required to report the transfer on Form 926 (Return by a U.S. Transferor of Property to a Foreign Corporation, Foreign Estate or Trust, or Foreign Partnership). In general, the reporting requirement applies to transfers, such as contributions to capital in exchange for stock and transfers as part of a corporate reorganization, that are covered by the gain recognition or deemed royalty provisions of Code Sec. 367. Prior to the Act, failure to furnish the required information can result in a penalty equal to 25 percent of the gain realized on the exchange.

Under prior law, no similar requirement applied to contributions to a foreign partnership. However, with the enactment of Code Sec. 1494(c) by the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188), reporting was required for all transfers described in Code Sec. 1491, whether or not such transfers were subject to the 35-percent excise tax. Unlike the penalty provisions backing up reporting of transfers to foreign corporations, the penalty for failure to report the transfer to a foreign partnership was a draconian 35 percent of the gross value of the property transferred.

Transfers of property to foreign partnerships subject to new reporting requirements.—As part of a new set of information reporting obligations with respect to foreign partnerships, U.S. persons must report the contribution of property to a foreign partnership. The reporting requirement applies only if:

(1) the U.S. partner transferring the property holds, directly or indirectly, at least a 10-percent interest in the partnership; or

(2) the fair market value of the property contributed, when added to the fair market value of any other property transferred by such person (or a related person) to the partnership during the 12-month period ending on the date of the transfer, exceeds $100,000.

In the event of a transfer pricing adjustment that results in a deemed contribution of property to the partnership, the reporting requirement will apply, but the timing of the reporting requirement must be specified by the Treasury.

The new requirement for reporting contributions to foreign partnerships parallels the reporting of similar transfers to foreign corporations and replaces the reporting required under now-repealed Code Sec. 1494(c). See ¶ 968.

Penalty for failure to report transfers to foreign corporations and partnerships. The penalty for failure of a U.S. person to properly report a transfer to a foreign corporation or partnership is modified by the Act. As amended, the penalty is equal to 10 percent of the fair market value of the property transferred. In addition, failure to report a contribution to a foreign partnership will result in gain recognition on the transfer as if the property had been sold. The total penalty cannot exceed $100,000 unless the failure is due to intentional disregard of the reporting requirements.

Effective date. This provision applies to transfers made after August 5, 1997. In addition, taxpayers may elect to apply this provision to transfers made after August 20, 1996, in which case the reporting requirements under now-repealed Code Sec. 1494(c) will not apply.

Act Sec. 1144(a), amending Code Sec. 6038B(a)(1); Act Sec. 1144(b), redesignating Code Sec. 6038B(b) as subsection (c) and adding new Code Sec. 6038B(b); Act Sec. 1144(c), amending Code Sec. 6038B(b)(c) and adding Code Sec. 6038B(b)(c). Law at ¶ 5589. Committee Report at ¶ 11,770.

Reporting Threshold for Foreign Stock Ownership

¶ 990

Background

U.S. citizens and residents who are officers, directors, or 10-percent shareholders in a foreign personal holding company or controlled foreign corporation are required to file Form 5471 (Information Return of U.S. Persons With Respect to Certain Foreign Corporations) and designated schedules annually. These filings are required by Code Secs. 6035 and 6038.

Background

In addition, Code Sec. 6046 requires the filing of Form 5471 upon the occurrence of certain stock ownership changes in a foreign corporation. In general, under prior law, information reporting under Code Sec. 6046 would apply if the corporation had a five-percent U.S. shareholder.

Reporting threshold for stock ownership of a foreign corporation increased.—The threshold for stock ownership of a foreign corporation that triggers the information reporting requirements under Code Sec. 6046 is increased from five percent of the total value of the stock of the corporation to 10 percent of either the total value of corporate stock or the total combined voting power of all classes of stock with voting rights. Thus, as amended, Code Sec. 6046 requires information reporting on Form 5471 (Information Return of U.S. Persons With Respect To Certain Foreign Corporations) by the following persons:

(1) a U.S. citizen or resident who becomes a director or officer of a foreign corporation if a U.S. person meets the 10-percent ownership threshold;

(2) a U.S. person who, upon the acquisition of stock, meets the 10-percent ownership threshold if both the acquired stock and stock owned on the date of the acquisition are taken into account;

(3) a U.S. person who acquires stock equal to or exceeding the 10-percent ownership threshold;

(4) a person who becomes a U.S. person while meeting the 10-percent stock ownership threshold; or

(5) a person who is treated as a U.S. shareholder under Code Sec. 953(c).

Effective date. This provision is effective as of January 1, 1998. Guidance in the Senate Finance Committee Report interprets the effective date to mean that the provision is applicable to reportable transactions after December 31, 1997.

TREATIES AND INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Treaty Benefits for Income from Hybrid Entities

¶ 992

Background

With some exceptions, the United States generally imposes a 30-percent withholding tax on U.S.-source income of nonresident aliens and foreign corporations that is not effectively connected with the conduct of a U.S. trade or business. The withholding tax is imposed on a gross basis to payments of various types of income, including interest, royalties, dividends, fees, and salaries.

Most U.S. income tax treaties either eliminate or reduce the rate of the withholding tax. The benefits under income tax treaties are available to residents of the United States and its treaty partners. For purposes of determining residency and other tax treaty principles, the United States will apply U.S. tax law to determine the classification of both domestic and foreign entities as either taxable entities or fiscally transparent entities (e.g., a partnership for U.S. tax purposes). The United States and its treaty partners may classify an entity differently—i.e., it is a hybrid entity that one country views as fiscally transparent and another views as taxable.

Background

In the case of hybrid entities, the interaction of a tax treaty with the domestic laws of the United States and its treaty partners could result tax planning opportunities that the U.S. government views as objectionable. For instance, by using a hybrid entity a taxpayer can, in some circumstances, obtain an exemption from tax on payments in the country of residence that are deductible in the source country. Under prior law, such payments made to a foreign taxpayer resident in a treaty country could be eligible for treaty benefits as well and be taxed at source in the United States at the favorable treaty withholding rate rather than the 30-percent rate under Code Secs. 871 and 881.

Treaty benefits for transactions involving hybrid entities limited.— The availability of reduced U.S. withholding tax under an income tax treaty for payments to hybrid entities is limited by the Act. The treaty withholding rates are typically much lower than the 30-percent rate under Code Secs. 871 and 881 applicable to payments to foreign persons of U.S.-source income that is not effectively connected to a trade or business in the United States.

Under the Act, a foreign person is not entitled to a reduced rate of withholding tax under a tax treaty on an item of income derived through a partnership (or other fiscally transparent entity) if all of the following apply:

(1) the income item is not treated by the treaty partner as an item of income to such foreign person;

(2) the foreign country does not impose tax on a distribution of the item by the U.S. entity to the foreign person; and

(3) the treaty does not contain a provision addressing the applicability of the treaty in the case of an item of income derived through a partnership.

Use of a U.S. LLC as a Canadian financing subsidiary. One purpose of the provision is to deny favorable U.S.-Canada treaty withholding rates for certain Canadian corporations that finance activities of a U.S. subsidiary through a U.S. limited liability company in a tax-advantaged manner. The financing structure is outlined in the example below, which illustrates the denial of treaty benefits under the hybrid provision and was the subject of an article in the CCH LLC Advisor newsletter (No. 18, 2/27/97). Congress was lobbied by U.S. companies that complained that the tax benefits gave them a competitive disadvantage versus their Canadian counterparts and views this as an example of tax avoidance that required "clarification" of the treaty. The application of the treaty with respect to hybrid entities is also reportedly under discussion by U.S. and Canadian treaty negotiators.

Example. Canco, a Canadian corporation, owns two subsidiaries in the United States. One is USco, a C corporation that performs all U.S. operating functions. The other is LLC Finance, which serves as an intermediary company and loans money to USco in order to finance its operations. (Some interests in LLC Finance are held by related Canadian persons.) LLC Finance is treated as a partnership for U.S. tax purposes and as a corporation under Canadian tax law. Interest payments from USco made to LLC Finance flow through to Canco and are treated as nontaxable dividends to Canco under Canadian law. USco is able to claim a deduction for the interest payments made to LLC Finance.

Under prior law, Canco, a resident of Canada, would benefit from the 10% withholding rate on interest income under Article XI of the U.S.-Canada treaty, even though the income is not taxable in Canada and USco benefits from interest deductions in the United States. Under the Act, Congress intended that the 30% rate of Code Sec. 881(a) would apply to this situation.

Regulatory authority to combat other tax-efficient structures involving hybrid entities. In addition to the denial of treaty benefits in a situation meeting the three conditions listed above, the Act also gives the Treasury regulatory authority to deny treaty benefits in other contexts where income is received by, or attributable to, a fiscally transparent entity (e.g., a partnership) that is treated as fiscally nontransparent under the tax laws of the taxpayer's country of residence.

Caution. Readers should note that the Conference Committee Report expressly approves of recently issued Temp. Reg. § 1.894-1T, which adopts a similar approach to hybrid entities in the treaty context. The regulation applies to amounts paid after 1997. Congress believes that the regulation is consistent with the provision in the Act. Moreover, it feels that neither the Act provision nor the regulation represents an override of existing treaty obligations. Rather, according to the Conference Report, both the Act and Temp. Reg. § 1.894-1T "represent interpretations of U.S. treaties clarifying those situations involving hybrid entities in which taxpayers are entitled to treaty benefits and those situations in which they are not."

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Trade Provisions

¶ 993

Background

Title V of the Trade Act of 1974, as amended, authorizes the President to extend duty-free treatment under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) to certain designated goods imported into the United States from countries (or associations of countries such as customs unions and free trade areas) designated as beneficiary developing countries. This authorization must be renewed periodically. The current authorization expired on May 31, 1997.

Extension of duty-free treatment under the Generalized System of Preferences.—The President's authorization to extend duty-free treatment to imports of eligible articles from designated beneficiary developing countries under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) is extended through June 30, 1998. The provision amends Section 505 of the Trade Act of 1974 by striking "May 31, 1997" and inserting "June 30, 1998." The reauthorization applies retroactively to entries (or warehouse withdrawals for consumption) made after May 31, 1997 but before the date of enactment of the Act (August 5, 1997), of goods which would have received duty-free treatment under the GSP program had the entry or withdrawal occurred on May 31, 1997.

Given the retroactive application of this provision, refunds will be issued for duty charged on goods liquidated during this time frame upon the importer's request. In order to obtain a refund, an importer must file a request with the U.S. Customs Service within 180 days after August 5, 1997 (February 2, 1998). The request must provide the U.S. Customs Service with enough information to either locate the entry or reconstruct an entry that cannot be found.

Effective date. The provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Chapter 10

Compliance and Tax Administration

PENALTIES

Reasonable Cause Exception Extended

¶ 1001

Background ———

A number of civil penalties can be avoided if the taxpayer establishes reasonable cause for failing to take a required action (or for taking a prohibited action). Notably, the accuracy-related penalty, imposed for negligent or substantial tax understatements, can be waived if the taxpayer shows reasonable cause for the return position causing the understatement and also shows good faith in taking that position.

Reasonable cause exceptions extended to four penalties.—A number of the civil penalties can be avoided if reasonable cause is shown for taking (or not taking) the action or return position that the taxpayer took. Four penalties have been added to the list of penalties that can be waived if the taxpayer establishes reasonable cause and good faith:

(1) failure to file a report on deductible employee contributions made to a retirement savings plan (Code Sec. 6652(g));

(2) failure to file a report on certain small business stock (Code Sec. 6652(k));

(3) failure by a foreign corporation to file a personal holding company tax return (Code Sec. 6683); and

(4) failure to make required payments for entities that elect to use a tax year other than their required tax year (Code Sec. 7519).

Reasonable cause and good faith are determined on the basis of the facts and circumstances. The most important factor in the determination is usually the extent of the taxpayer's attempt to determine the proper amount of tax liability. Reasonable cause has been found as a result of death or illness, casualty or natural disaster, incorrect substantive advice from a tax professional, and erroneous advice from the IRS.

Effective date. The new exceptions apply to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Unauthorized Return Inspections

¶ 1004

Background

The IRS has long-standing policies against both browsing through and disclosing return information. Statutory civil and criminal penalties are imposed for unauthorized disclosure of returns and return information but, prior to the Taxpayer Browsing Protection Act of 1997, no statutory penalties were imposed for browsing through IRS records.

Criminal penalties for unauthorized inspection.—A new criminal penalty is imposed for willful unauthorized inspection of tax returns or return information. Criminal sanctions may be imposed against any federal employee or IRS contractor. The penalty also may be imposed against any state employee or other person who acquires the return or return information under Code Sec. 6103, which permits the use of federal return information for other government purposes such as state tax and child support collection, law enforcement, social welfare program administration, and statistical use.

Penalties. The maximum penalty is up to one year imprisonment, a fine of $1,000 and the prosecution's costs. Convicted federal employees will also lose their jobs.

Effective date. This provision applies to violations occurring on and after August 5, 1997.

¶ 1007

Civil damages for unauthorized inspection.—The civil penalties imposed for unauthorized disclosure of returns and return information now apply to knowing or negligent unauthorized inspection of returns and return information. Thus, a taxpayer may bring a civil action against the United States if a government employee knowingly or negligently inspects, without authorization, any return or return information pertaining to that taxpayer. The same action may also be taken against any other person who browses through returns or return information without proper authorization.

Exceptions. A taxpayer is not entitled to civil damages if the disclosure or inspection was carried out in good faith based on an erroneous interpretation of the Code's confidentiality requirements. Further, civil damages will not be awarded if the disclosure or inspection was accidental or inadvertent (as where an IRS employee erroneously enters a taxpayer identification number) or was requested by the taxpayer.

Taxpayer notification. If a person is criminally charged with unauthorized inspection or disclosure of returns or return information (see ¶ 1004), the IRS must notify the taxpayer as soon as practicable of the inspection or disclosure. Specifically, notification is required for charged violations of Code Sec. 7213(a)(1) or (2), Code Sec. 7213A(a), or 18 USC 1030(a)(2)(B).

Effective date. This provision applies to inspections and disclosures occurring on and after August 5, 1997.

Interest Abatement in Disaster Area

¶ 1009

Background

The IRS is authorized under Code Sec. 6404 to abate the unpaid portion of the assessment of any tax or any liability in respect thereof, which is excessive in amount, or is assessed after the expiration of the period of limitations, or is erroneously or illegally assessed.

Secretary's abatement of interest powers extend to Presidentially declared disaster areas.—If the Secretary of the Treasury extends the period of time for filing income tax returns, extends the period of time for paying income tax with respect to such returns, and waives any penalties relating to the failure to so file or so pay, for any individual located in a Presidentially declared disaster area, then the Secretary shall abate for such period the assessment of any interest prescribed under Code Sec. 6601. For the purposes of this section, the term "individual" does not include estates or trusts. See ¶ 1067 for the discussion of a new provision which allows the IRS to postpone tax-related deadlines for taxpayers affected by a Presidentially declared disaster.

Effective date. Applies to disasters declared after December 31, 1996.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

Refunds for Taxpayers Who Failed to File

¶ 1010

Background

Code Sec. 6511 provides that the statute of limitations on filing a refund claim is the later of three years from the date the return was filed or two years from the date the taxes were paid. If the claim for refund was filed within three years of the filing of the return, then the refund amount is limited to amounts paid within three years preceding the refund claim. If the claim was filed within two years of the time the tax was paid, then the refund is limited to the amount paid within two years preceding the claim date. These rules apply to taxpayers who challenge deficiency notices in the Tax Court and are found to be entitled to a refund.

In 1996, the U.S. Supreme Court held that the Tax Court could not refund taxes paid more than two years prior to the date on which the IRS mailed the taxpayer a notice of deficiency. The Supreme Court held that, in the Tax Court, the applicable look-back period is generally determined as though a taxpayer filed a hypothetical refund claim on the date the IRS mailed its notice of deficiency (R.F. Lundy, SCt, 96-1 USTC ¶ 50,035). Thus, if a hypothetical refund claim filed on the date of the mailing of the notice of deficiency would have been filed within three years from the time the return was filed, then a three-year look-back period applied. If the claim would not have been filed within that three-year period, then the look-back period was two years. Because the taxpayer in Lundy had not filed a return as of the date the deficiency notice was mailed, the two-year look-back period applied and the taxpayer could not recover overwithheld taxes.

Clarification of period for filing refund claims.—Taxpayers who fail to file a return as of the date the IRS mails a deficiency notice may recover in the Tax Court taxes paid during the three years preceding the IRS mailing date. In other words, a three-year look-back period has replaced the two-year look-back period established by the U.S. Supreme Court in R.F. Lundy (96-1 USTC ¶ 50,035) for taxpayers who file returns after the IRS has mailed a notice of deficiency.

The extension eliminates the disparate treatment between late filers (some of whom received the benefit of the three-year look-back) and nonfilers (who always had the two-year look-back), and between taxpayers who file in the Tax Court and those who file in the district courts.

Effective date. The three-year look-back rule applies to claims for refund or credit for tax years ending after August 5, 1997.

Items from Pass-Through Entities

¶ 1013

Background

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the Internal Revenue Code did not specifically address the issue of whether the statute of limitations on assessments ran from the time that a pass-through entity filed its information return or from the time that the entity's shareholders, partners, or beneficial owners filed their income tax returns. In 1993 the U.S. Supreme Court held in S.B. Bufferd (93-1 USTC ¶ 50,038) that the three-year limitations period for assessing the income tax liability of an S corporation shareholder ran from the date the shareholder's return was filed.

Statute of limitations for assessments.—The three-year statute of limitations on assessments begins to run at the time a pass-through entity's shareholder or other beneficial owner files an individual income tax return. The date the pass-through entity (or any other person from whom the taxpayer receives a tax attribute) files its information return has no bearing on the statue of limitations. This provision codifies the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in S.B. Bufferd (93-1 USTC ¶ 50,038).

> Example. Susan Miller owns stock in an S Corporation. The corporation timely filed its 1994 Form 1120S, U.S. Income Tax Return for an S Corporation, on March 15, 1995. On the return, the corporation reported a loss. Miller filed her 1994 individual tax return on April 15, 1995, claiming her pro rata share of the loss. On October 1, 1996, the IRS determined that the deduction was overstated and Miller agreed to extend the statute of limitations on assessments as to her Form 1040. On October 1, 1999, the IRS assesses a deficiency against Miller attributable to the 1994 pass-through loss. Despite the fact that more than three years have elapsed from the time the corporation filed its Form 1120S, the IRS is not barred from assessing a deficiency against Miller, because the limitations period is determined with reference to Miller's individual return.

Effective date. This provision is applicable to tax years beginning after August 5, 1997.

Administrative Costs and Attorney Fees

¶ 1016

Background

Taxpayers who substantially prevail in an action brought by or against the United States involving the determination, collection or refund of any tax, interest or penalty may be awarded reasonable administrative or litigation costs. Under prior law, no time limit was specified for the taxpayer to seek an award of costs. Additionally, the procedural rules for adjudicating a denial of administrative costs were unclear.

Awarding of administrative costs procedure.—A taxpayer who prevails in an IRS proceeding must apply to the IRS for administrative costs before the 91st day after the date the final IRS determination of tax, interest or penalty was mailed to the taxpayer. In order to appeal an IRS denial of a taxpayer's application for costs, the taxpayer must petition the Tax Court within 90 days of when the IRS mails the denial.

Tax Court decisions on awards of administrative costs are reviewed in the same manner as any other Tax Court decisions (but only with respect to matters regarding those costs).

Effective date. The specified procedures and time limitations apply to civil actions and proceedings commenced after August 5, 1997.

LIENS AND LEVIES

Continuous Levy

¶ 1019

Background

Persons liable for any tax who do not make payment within 10 days after notice and demand by the IRS are subject to having the IRS collect the tax by levy upon all property and rights to property belonging to the taxpayer, unless there is an explicit statutory restriction on so doing. Generally, under prior law, with the exception of a levy on salary or wages, levies did not apply to property acquired after the date of the levy, regardless of whether the property was held by the taxpayer or a third party on behalf of the taxpayer. Consequently, successive seizures may have been necessary if the initial seizure was insufficient to satisfy the tax liability.

Continuous levy expanded.—The continuous levy provision has been expanded to apply not only to salary and wages but also to specified payments. Levies of up to 15 percent on all specified payments to or received by a taxpayer are continuous from the date such levy is first made until it is released, notwithstanding Code Sec. 6334, which allows levy exemptions for certain payments.

Specified payments are (1) any federal payment other than a payment for which eligibility is based on the income or assets, or both, of a payee, (2) unemployment benefits, (3) workmer's compensation, (4) the minimum levy exemption amount for wages and like payments, (5) certain public assistance payments, and (6) certain railroad annuity, railroad pension or railroad unemployment benefits.

Effective date. The expansion of the continuous levy applies to levies issued after August 5, 1997.

Wage Replacement Payments

¶ 1022

Background

Under prior law, workers' compensation payments, annuity or pension payments under the Railroad Retirement Act, benefits under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, unemployment benefits, and means-tested public assistance were exempt from levy.

Wage replacement payments subject to levy.—Certain specified payments will no longer be exempt from levy if the Secretary of the Treasury (or his delegate) approves the levy. Generally, specified payments are (1) any federal payment other than a payment for which eligibility is based on the income or assets or both of a payee, (2) unemployment benefits, (3) workers' compensation, (4) the minimum levy exemption amount for wages and like payments, (5) certain "means-tested" public assistance payments, and (6) certain railroad annuity, railroad pension or railroad unemployment benefits. Payments in category (1), above were and continue to be subject to levy. Payments in category (2)-(6), above, may now be subject to levy. The IRS may attach up to 15 percent of such payments under a continuous levy (see ¶ 1019).

Effective date. The extension of levy authority to wage replacement payments applies to levies issued after August 5, 1997.

TAX COURT PROCEDURE

Overpayment Determinations

¶ 1025

Background

If the IRS fails to refund an overpayment and interest as determined by the Tax Court within 120 days after the court's decision becomes final, the court may order payment. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, it was unclear whether such an order was appealable or whether the Tax Court had jurisdiction over the validity or merits of certain credits or offsets made by the IRS that reduced or eliminated a taxpayer's refund.

Tax Court order to refund overpayment is appealable.—If the IRS fails to refund an overpayment within 120 days after a Tax Court decision becomes final, the order is appealable as a final decision. However, the court does not have jurisdiction over the merits or validity of credits or offsets that would reduce or eliminate the refund to which the taxpayer is otherwise entitled (e.g., IRS collection of delinquent student loans or child support).

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Redetermination of Interest

¶ 1028

Background

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, a redetermination of interest provided by certain final Tax Court decisions was sought by filing a petition with the court.

New method for seeking redetermination of Tax Court interest.—Taxpayers seeking a redetermination of interest by the Tax Court may file a motion for redetermination, rather than a petition, with the court within a year after the decision becomes final.

Effective date. The new procedure is effective on August 5, 1997.

Employment Status Jurisdiction

¶ 1031

Background

Code Sec. 7442 lists the Tax Court's primary function as reviewer of deficiencies asserted against taxpayers by the IRS for additional income, estate, gift, excise, and private foundation taxes. The court had no jurisdiction over any other taxes or over nontax matters.

Tax Court jurisdiction expanded.—Tax Court jurisdiction has been expanded to encompass employment status determinations in limited circumstances. Where an actual controversy arises in connection with the audit of any person involving a determination by the IRS that (1) one or more individuals performing services for the taxpayer are employees of that person or (2) the taxpayer is not entitled to relief under Section 530 of the Revenue Act of 1978, then the court has jurisdiction to determine whether the IRS is correct. An IRS determination that could trigger jurisdiction may be made in the course of a mechanism like the employment tax early referral procedures of Announcement 96-13 (I.R.B. 1996-12) and Announcement 97-52 (I.R.B. 97-21), or as a result of a failure to agree.

There are a number of limitations on the court's jurisdiction. A petition for a Tax Court ruling may be filed only by the person for whom services are performed ("the hirer"). The hirer must file a pleading within 90 days after the IRS sends notification, by certified or registered mail, that it has made a determination. While an action is pending, the hirer is permitted to change the employment tax treatment of any individual whose status is at issue in the proceeding (or who holds a substantially similar position) and no adverse inference may be drawn from such a change.

Assessment and collection of the taxes are suspended while the employment status matter is pending before the court.

The Tax Court will review the IRS's determination de novo, rather than review the administrative record. Determinations of the court are binding on the parties; the decisions have the full force and effect of a Court decision and are reviewable as decisions. Costs and fees are available to the prevailing party under the usual Code Sec. 7430 rules.

Small case procedures available. The Tax Court's small case procedures (under Code Sec. 7453) may be used in employment status cases provided:

(1) the amount of employment taxes in dispute is $10,000 or less for each calendar quarter involved, and

(2) the hirer and the court agree to use the procedures.

If the small case procedures are used, the decision may not be reviewed by any other court nor be used as precedent in any other case not involving the same hirer and the same determinations.

Statute of limitations on claim for refund. If the court determines that the hirer is entitled to a credit or refund of employment taxes but the credit or refund is prevented by operation of law (other than Code Sec. 7122 relating to compromises), then the hirer must file a claim for refund on or before the last day of the second calendar year after the calendar year in which the determination becomes final.

Example. A Tax Court decision for a refund of employment taxes paid by Hirer becomes final on October 1, 1998. Hirer must file a claim for refund on or before December 31, 2000.

Effective date. Jurisdiction is expanded on August 5, 1997.

LITIGATION COSTS

Joint Filers

¶ 1034

Background

Persons who substantially prevail in actions brought by or against the United States in connection with any tax (including interest or penalties) may be awarded the costs they incur in connection with any administrative proceedings or litigation, provided their net worth is below a certain amount. In general, an individual must have a net worth of $2 million or less to be eligible for an award of their costs. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, no explicit provision explained how the net worth calculation applied to joint filers.

Net worth threshold applies separately to each joint filer.—The $2 million net worth requirement applies separately to each joint filer in determining whether a couple is eligible to be awarded the costs they incur in litigation and administrative proceedings involving their tax liability. Thus, a married couple filing jointly may recover litigation costs if the net worth of each spouse is less than $2 million; a couple could conceivably have a net worth up to $4 million and still be eligible to receive an award of their costs. This provision codifies the Tax Court's holdings in J.H. Swanson, 106 TC 76, Dec. 51,155, and K. Hong, 100 TC 88, Dec. 48,853.

Effective date. The separate joint filer threshold applies to proceedings commenced after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1453(a), adding Code Sec. 7430(c)(4)(D); Act Sec. 1453(b). Law at ¶ 5717. Committee Report at ¶ 12,965.

Estates and Trusts

¶ 1037

Background

Persons who substantially prevail in actions brought by or against the United States in connection with any tax (including interest or penalties) may be awarded the costs they incur in connection with any administrative proceedings or litigation provided that they meet certain net worth requirements. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, no net worth threshold was provided for trusts or estates.

Separate net worth threshold provided for estates and trusts.—An estate or trust that substantially prevails in litigation against the IRS may be awarded the costs it incurred in that litigation and related administrative proceedings provided that the net worth of the estate or trust is $2 million or less. Thus, the threshold for the award of costs to estates and trusts is the same as that provided for individuals. The net worth of trustees, executors, beneficiaries or heirs has no effect on the award of litigation costs.

The net worth of an estate is measured on the date of the decedent's death. The net worth of a trust is determined on the last day of the tax year involved in the proceeding.

Effective date. The estate and trust threshold applies to proceedings commenced after August 5, 1997.

ELECTRONIC FUNDS TRANSFERS

Extension for Small Businesses

¶ 1040

Background

Code Sec. 6302(h), as added by section 523 of the North American Free Trade Agreement Implementation Act (P.L. 103-182), requires taxpayers with federal depository taxes in excess of certain specified thresholds to transfer the deposits electronically. In order to achieve the applicable percentage for 1997 of taxes subject to the Electronic Federal Tax Payment System (EFTPS), which was developed in response to the new requirements, all employers that deposited more than $50,000 of tax in 1995 were required to begin using EFTPS by January 1, 1997. However, section 1809 of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) delayed that date for taxpayers not currently within the new system until July 1, 1997, and on June 2, 1997, the IRS, in IR-97-32, announced that it will not impose penalties through December 31, 1997, on businesses that make timely deposits using paper federal tax deposit coupons while converting to EFTPS.

Waiver of penalty on small businesses failing to make tax payments electronically.—Penalties under Code Sec. 6302(h) for failure to make federal tax deposits using the Electronic Federal Tax Payment System (EFTPS) will not be imposed for failures that occur before July 1, 1998, if the taxpayer was first required to use the electronic funds transfer system on or after July 1, 1997.

Effective date. The provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 931. Law at ¶ 7014. Committee Report at ¶ 10,655.

DISCLOSURE OF RETURN INFORMATION

Department of Veterans Affairs

¶ 1043

Background

Code Sec. 6103 prohibits disclosure of tax returns and return information, except to the extent specifically authorized therein. The IRS is permitted to disclose self-employment tax information and certain other tax information to the Department of Veterans Affairs (DVA) for the purpose of assisting the DVA in determining eligibility for, and establishing correct benefit amounts under, certain of its needs-based pension, health care, and other payments. The DVA disclosure provision was scheduled to expire after September 30, 1998.

Provision allowing disclosure of certain tax information to the Department of Veterans Affairs extended.—Code Sec. 6103(l)(7)(D)(viii), which permits the IRS to disclose certain return information to the Department of Veterans Affairs (DVA), has been extended. The permitted disclosure to the DVA of self—employment tax information and certain other tax information supplied to the IRS was originally scheduled to expire September 30, 1998, but has been extended by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 through September 30, 2003.

Effective date. The extension of this permitted disclosure provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Financial Management Service

¶ 1046

Background

Under prior law, the IRS was not permitted to disclose return information to the Treasury Department's Financial Management Service for the purpose of implementing levy provisions.

Disclosure to financial management service.—The IRS may disclose otherwise confidential return information to the Treasury Department's Financial Management Service in serving a notice of levy or release of levy with respect to any applicable government payment. The IRS may disclose return information, including taxpayer identity information, the amount of any unpaid liabilities (including penalties and interest) and the type of tax and tax period to which the unpaid liability relates.

The return information may be used by officers and employees of the Financial Management Service only for the purpose of, and to the extent necessary in, transferring levied funds in satisfaction of the levy, maintaining appropriate agency records in regard to such levy or the release thereof, notifying the taxpayer and the agency certifying such payment that the levy has been honored, or in the defense of any litigation ensuing from the honor of such levy.

The term applicable government payment means any federal payment (other than a payment for which eligibility is based on the income or assets, or both, of a payee) certified to the Financial Management Service for disbursement, and any other payment which is certified to the Financial Management Service for disbursement and which the IRS designates by published notice.

Effective date. These disclosure rules apply to levies issued after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1026(a), adding Code Sec. 6103(k)(8); Act Sec. 1026(b), amending Code Sec. 6103(p) and Title 5, Sec. 552a of the U.S. Code; Act Sec. 1026(c). Law at ¶ 5613. Committee Report at ¶ 11,240.

D.C. Retirement Protection Act

¶ 1047

Background

Generally, returns and return information are confidential. Government officers and employees who have access to that information in connection with their government service are forbidden from disclosing the information contained in those returns unless they are specifically authorized by statute to do so. An exception to the anti-disclosure provisions was not provided with regard to return information necessary to verify whether an individual was eligible for benefits under the District of Columbia Retirement Act.

IRS disclosure of return information for purposes of the District of Columbia Retirement Protection Act.—Upon written request, the IRS must disclose return information necessary to determine an individual's eligibility and amount of benefits under the District of Columbia Retirement Protection Act. The IRS is required to furnish such information only if it is not available from the Social Security Administration. The request may seek information regarding wage income under Code Sec. 3121(a) or Code Sec. 3401(a); an individual's name, address, and taxpayer identification number; the identities of the payers of wage income; the taxpayer's identity; and the taxpayer's occupational status.

The request for information may be made by:

(1) a duly authorized officer or employee of the Department of Treasury;

(2) a trustee or designated officer or employee of a trustee as defined in the District of Columbia Retirement Protection Act of 1997; or

(3) any actuary engaged by a trustee, under the District of Columbia Retirement Protection Act of 1997, whose duties require the disclosure solely to determine an individual's eligibility for benefits, or the correct amount of the individual's benefits, under the District of Columbia Retirement Protection Act of 1997.

Background

Judicial or administrative proceedings. The same information may also be disclosed in a judicial or administrative proceeding in order to determine an individual's eligibility for, or the correct amount of, benefits under the District of Columbia Retirement Protection Act of 1997.

Effective date. The provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 11024(b) of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, adding new Code Sec. 6103(l)(16) and amending Code Sec. 6103(a)(3), (i)(7)(B)(i), (p)(3)(A) and (4) and Code Sec. 7213(a)(2). Law at ¶ 5613 and 5712.

Medicare Beneficiaries

¶ 1049

Background

Generally, returns and return information are confidential. Government officers and employees who have access to that information in connection with their government service are forbidden from disclosing the information contained in those returns unless they are specifically authorized by statute to do so. A specific authorization exists for a data-match program to identity Medicaid secondary payer situations. Under this program, Social Security Administration and IRS information is used to identify cases where a Medicare beneficiary (or the spouse) has employer-based health coverage. The authorization was scheduled to expire on October 1, 1998.

Medicaid secondary payer (MSP) data match program made permanent.—The exception from the prohibition on disclosure of return information for the Medicare secondary payer (MSP) data match program was made permanent by the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. This program utilizes social security administration data and Internal Revenue Service data to identify potential secondary insurance payers for purposes of the MSP program.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

INFORMATION REPORTING

Sale of Residence

¶ 1050

Background

A real estate reporting person, as defined in Code Sec. 6045(e)(2), is required to report real estate transactions on Form 1099-S, "Proceeds from Real Estate Transactions." For sales and exchanges occurring on or before May 6, 1997, the reporting rules applied even where the gain from the sale of a principal residence was excluded under the Code Sec. 121 one-time exclusion of gain rule.

Reporting requirements for real estate closing information eased.—Sales of principal residences with a gross sales price of $250,000 or less ($500,000 or less in the case of married sellers) are excepted from the real estate transaction reporting requirement of Code Sec. 6045(e), provided certain requirements are met. The effect of the provision is to except real estate transactions from reporting requirements where the gain from the sale or exchange is exempt from tax under Code Sec. 121, as amended by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997. See ¶ 129.

To be eligible for the exception, the person who would otherwise be required to file the information return must obtain certain written assurances from the seller of the real estate, in a form acceptable to the Secretary of the Treasury. The written assurances must provide that:

(1) the residence is the seller's principal residence, as defined by Code Sec. 121;

(2) no financing of the seller is federally subsidized indebtedness if the taxpayer is required to report such information for purposes of Code Sec. 121; and

(3) the full amount of gain on the sale or exchange is excludable from gross income under Code Sec. 121(a).

If written assurances are provided that the seller is married, the exception applies to a gross sales price of $500,000 or less.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to increase the exception amount if it is determined that the increase would not materially reduce revenues.

Effective date. The provision applies to sales and exchanges after May 6, 1997. For special effective date rules, see ¶ 129.

Act Sec. 312(c), adding Code Sec. 6045(e)(5); Act Sec. 312(d)[e]. Law at ¶ 5599. Committee Report at ¶ 10,317.

Payment to Attorneys

¶ 1052

Background ___

Persons engaged in a trade or business, and making payments of attorney fees in the course of that trade or business, are generally required to report such fees. Under prior law, however, if the payment was a gross amount and it was not known what portion was the attorney's fee, no reporting was required on any portion of the payment.

Payments to attorneys subject to additional reporting requirements.— Any person engaged in a trade or business and making any payment to an attorney in the course of the taxpayer's trade or business in connection with legal services (whether or not such services are performed for the taxpayer) must file an information return with the IRS and a statement with the attorney with respect to such payment, even if the payment is a gross amount and it is not known what portion is the attorney's fee. The House Committee Report indicates that it is anticipated that this gross proceeds reporting would be required on Form 1099-B, which is currently used by brokers to report gross proceeds. The only exception to this new reporting requirement would be for payments that are to be reported on either Form 1099–MISC (or would be reported on Form 1099–MISC but for the "under $600" limitation) or on Form W-2.

Payments to corporations. The present exemption in Reg. § 1.6041-3(c) from reporting for payments made to corporations will not apply to payments made to attorneys. According to the House Committee Report, reporting will be required under both Code Sec. 6041 and Code Sec. 6045 for payments to corporations that provide legal services. The House Committee Report also indicates that the exemption of Reg. § 1.6041-3(g) from reporting payments of salaries or profits paid or distributed by a partnership to the individual partners would continue to apply to both sections (since these amounts are required to be reported on Schedule K-1).

Reporting requirement details. The House Committee Report provides a number of supplementary details regarding the new reporting requirement. First, the provision applies to payments made to attorneys regardless of whether the attorney is the exclusive payee. Second, payments to law firms are payments to attorneys and, therefore, are subject to this reporting provision. Third, attorneys are required to promptly supply their taxpayer identification numbers (TINs) to persons required to file these information reports; failure to do so could result in the attorney being subject to penalty and the payments being subject to backup withholding. Fourth, it is indicated that the IRS should administer this provision so that there is no overlap between reporting under Code Sec. 6041 and reporting under Code Sec. 6045. For example, if two payments are simultaneously made to an attorney, one of which represents the attorney's fee and the second of which represents the settlement with the attorney's client, the first payment would be reported under Code Sec. 6041 and the second payment would not be reported under either Code Sec. 6041 or Code Sec. 6045, since it is known that the entire second payment represents the settlement with the client (and therefore no portion of it represents income to the attorney).

Effective date. These reporting requirements apply to payments made after December 31, 1997.

Expanded Social Security Records for Tax Enforcement

¶ 1053

Background

The Secretary of Health and Human Services is not required to grant the Secretary of the Treasury access to the information collected in the federal case registry of child support orders. Furthermore, the Commissioner of Social Security is not required to share the information collected on applications for social security numbers for individuals who have not yet attained the age of 18 with the Secretary of the Treasury.

Enforcement efforts for tax benefits based on support or residence of children.—The Health and Human Services (HHS) Office of Child Support Enforcement is directed to collect information about the social security numbers of children at the time when it collects the information regarding the children's birth dates, beginning no later than October 1, 1999. The children's social security numbers are also to be included in the federal case registry of child support orders, beginning no later than October 1, 1999.

The Secretary of the Treasury is to have access to the information collected in the federal case registry of child support orders for the purpose of the administration of those Internal Revenue Code provisions that provide tax benefits based on the support or residence of children. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of HHS are to consult with each other to resolve implementation issues. They are to report to Congress on the issues resolved during the consultation.

Required information on social security number applications. The Commissioner of Social Security is required to share with the Secretary of the Treasury that information collected on applications for social security numbers (SSNs) for individuals who have not yet attained the age of 18. The Secretary of the Treasury is entitled to such information for the purpose of the administration of those Internal Revenue Code provisions that provide tax benefits based on the support or residence of children.

Effective date. The provisions regarding expansion of coordinated enforcement efforts of the IRS and the HHS Office of Child Support Enforcement take effect on October 1, 1998. The provisions regarding submission of SSNs on applications apply to applications made after the date which is 180 days after August 5, 1997 and to information obtained on before, or after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1090. Law at ¶ 7037. Committee Report at ¶ 11,560.

Payments Made by Federal Agencies

¶ 1055

Background

The head of each federal executive agency must file an information return indicating the name, address, and taxpayer identification number (TIN) of each person (including corporations) with which the agency enters into a contract, under Code Sec. 6050M. The Secretary of the Treasury has the authority to require that the returns be in such form and be made at such time as is necessary to make the returns useful as a source of information for collection purposes. The Treasury is given the authority both to establish minimum amounts for which no reporting is necessary as well as to extend the reporting requirements to federal license grantors and subcontractors of federal contracts. Under prior law, Reg. § 1.6050M-1(c)(1)(i) operated to provide that no reporting was required if the contract was for $25,000 or less.

Contract reporting requirements of executive federal agencies expanded.—The Code Sec. 6041A rules that require the filing of information returns regarding payments of remuneration of $600 or more for services apply to remuneration paid by a federal executive agency to a corporation, notwithstanding Reg. § 1.6050M-1(c)(1)(i), which provides a $25,000 reporting threshold. Contrary to the text of the Act, the House Committee Report indicates that this lower reporting requirement threshold also applies to remuneration paid to any other person. Also, the House Committee Report indicates that a copy of the reported information must be sent to the service provider. An exception to this reporting requirement is provided for services under certain classified or confidential contracts, and any other services that may be excepted under regulations issued after August 5, 1997.

Effective date. The lowering of the information reporting requirement threshold applies to returns, the due date for which (without regard to extensions), is more than 90 days after August 5, 1997 (November 3, 1997).

Registration of Confidential Corporate Tax Shelters

¶ 1058

Background

Tax shelter registration. An organizer of a tax shelter is required to register the shelter with the IRS. If the principal organizer does not do so, this requirement may fall upon others. Under prior law, only those who participated in the organization of the shelter or persons who participated in its sale or management were subject to this requirement (Code Sec. 6111(b)). The shelter's identification number must be furnished to each investor who purchases or acquires an interest in the shelter. Failure to furnish this number to the tax shelter investors will subject the organizer to a $100 penalty for each such failure (Code Sec. 6707(b)). For this purpose a tax shelter is defined in Code Sec. 6111(c). A penalty may be imposed against an organizer who fails without reasonable cause to timely register the shelter or who provides false or incomplete information with respect to it (Code Sec. 6707(a)(1)).

Substantial understatements penalty. A 20-percent accuracy-related penalty applies to substantial understatements. In determining whether a substantial understatement exists, the amount of the understatement is reduced by any portion attributable to an item if (1) the treatment of the item on the return is or was supported by substantial authority or (2) facts relevant to the tax treatment of the item were adequately disclosed on the return or on a statement attached to the return and there is a reasonable basis for such treatment. However, with respect to tax shelter items of noncorporate taxpayers, the penalty may be avoided only if the taxpayer establishes that, in addition to having substantial authority for his position, he reasonably believed that the treatment claimed was more likely than not the proper treatment of the item. This reduction in the understatement is unavailable to corporations for their tax shelter items. The reduction in the understatement for items disclosed on the return is inapplicable to both corporate and noncorporate tax shelters. For this purpose, under prior law, a tax shelter was a partnership or other entity, plan, or arrangement the principal purpose of which is the avoidance or evasion of federal income tax.

Tax shelter registration requirements expanded and tax shelter penalties modified.—The definition of tax shelter is expanded for purposes of the registration and notification requirements to include "confidential corporate tax shelters." Under the new provision the person required to satisfy the registration requirements may in certain cases include individuals who discussed participation in such a shelter. The rules regarding the substantial underpayment penalty have been modified with respect to multi-party financing transactions and new penalties for the failure to register a confidential tax shelter have been enacted.

Tax shelter registration. An organizer of a "tax shelter" is required to register the shelter with the IRS and to furnish the shelter's identification number to each investor who purchases or acquires an interest in the shelter (Code Sec. 6111). The definition of a tax shelter for these purposes includes certain investments from which a person could reasonably infer from the offering for sale that certain ratios will be met, as well as certain other requirements (see Code Sec. 6111(c)). For these purposes, the new "confidential corporate tax shelters" provisions treat an offer to participate in a "confidential corporate tax shelter" as an offer for sale.

The definition of a "confidential corporate tax shelter" is any investment, plan, arrangement or transaction:

(1) that has as a significant purpose the tax avoidance or evasion by a corporate participant;

(2) that is offered to any potential participant under conditions of confidentiality; and

(3) for which the tax shelter promoters may receive total fees in excess of $100,000.

A transaction is offered under conditions of confidentiality if:

(1) an offeree (or any person acting on its behalf) has an understanding or agreement with or for the benefit of any promoter to restrict or limit the offeree's disclosure of the tax shelter or any significant tax features of the tax shelter; or

(2) the promoter claims, knows or has reason to know (or the promoter causes another person to claim or otherwise knows or has reason to know that a party other than the potential offeree claims) that the transaction (or one or more aspects of its structure) is proprietary to the promoter or any party other than the offeree, or is otherwise protected from disclosure or use.

The term "promoter" includes specified related parties within the meaning of Code Sec. 267 or Code Sec. 707 who participate in the organization, management or sale of the tax shelter.

A promoter of a corporate tax shelter is required to register the shelter with the IRS not later than day on which the tax shelter is first offered for sale to potential users. If the promoter is not a U.S. person, and if a required registration is not otherwise made, then each U.S. person who participated in discussions is required to register the shelter. An exception to this special rule provides that registration is not required if the U.S. person who participated in discussions notifies the promoter in writing not later than 90 days after discussions began that the U.S. person will not participate in the shelter and the U.S. person does not in fact participate in the shelter. For these purposes, an offer to participate in a "confidential corporate tax shelter" is treated as an offer for sale.

Penalties. The penalty for failing to timely register a "confidential corporate tax shelter" (see above discussion) is the greater of $10,000 or 50 percent of the fees paid to all promoters with respect to offerings prior to the date of late registration (this part of the penalty does not apply to fee payments with respect to offerings after late registration). The penalty is applicable to promoters and to actual participants in any corporate tax shelter who were required to register the tax shelter but did not. With respect to participants, however, the 50-percent penalty is based only on fees paid by that participant. Intentional disregard of the requirement to register by either a promoter or a participant increases the 50 percent penalty to 75 percent of the applicable fees.

Substantial understatement penalty. For purposes of the substantial understatement penalty, the amount of the understatement is reduced by any portion attributable to an item if the treatment of the item on the return is or was supported by substantial authority, or facts relevant to the tax treatment of the item were adequately disclosed on the return or on a statement attached to the return. However, this latter exception is applicable only if there was a reasonable basis for the tax treatment of the item. Under the new provisions, a corporation does not have a reasonable basis for its tax treatment of an item attributable to a multi-party financing transaction if the treatment does not clearly reflect the income of the corporation.

Another modification to the substantial understatement penalty rules affects the special tax shelter rules. A tax shelter is now defined as an entity that has as a significant purpose (rather than as a principal purpose under prior law) the avoidance or evasion of Federal income tax.

Treasury report. The House Committee Report directs the Treasury Department, in consultation with the Department of Justice, to issue a report, due one year after August 5, 1997, on the following tax shelter issues:

(1) enforcement efforts with respect to corporate tax shelters and with respect to lawyers, accountants, and others who provide opinions regarding corporate tax shelters;

(2) an evaluation of the sufficiency of penalties; and

(3) an evaluation of whether confidential tax shelter registration should be extended to transactions in which the investor, or the potential investor, is not a corporation.

Effective date. The "confidential corporate tax shelter" registration provision applies to any tax shelter interests offered to potential participants after the date the IRS issues guidance with respect to the filing and other requirements described above. The modifications to the substantial understatement penalty apply to items with respect to transactions entered into after August 5, 1997.

Purchasers of Fish

¶ 1061

Background

For payments made after December 31, 1997, a person who is engaged in the trade or business of purchasing fish for resale is required to file an information return reporting purchases of $600 or more during a calendar year from any person engaged in the trade or business of catching fish. Under Code Sec. 6050R(c)(1), as originally enacted by the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188), each person whose name is required to be on the return must be furnished with a statement listing the name and address of the person filing the return, as well as the amount shown on the return. There was no requirement to include a telephone number.

Information returns relating to certain purchasers of fish.—Every person required to file an information return relating to the cash purchase of fish for resale must now furnish a statement to each person to whom reportable cash payments were made listing the telephone number of the information contact, in addition to a name and address and the amount shown on the return, as originally required under Code Sec. 6050R(c).

Effective date. The provision is effective for payments made after December 31, 1997.

Montana Demonstration Project

¶ 1064

Background

The long-standing practice of filing federal tax forms with the federal government and state tax forms with the state government results in duplicative reporting. Montana and the IRS have cooperatively developed a system to combine state and federal employment tax reporting onto one form.

Any unauthorized disclosure of a taxpayer's federal tax return information to state officials constituted a felony under Code Sec. 6103. The IRS's interpretation of Code Sec. 6103 hindered the project, because it considered the inclusion of the taxpayer's name, address, TIN, and signature on the combined form to constitute an unauthorized disclosure.

Combined federal and state employment tax reporting.—Montana taxpayers are to report state and federal employment tax information on one form under a demonstration project developed jointly by the IRS and the State of Montana. The five-year project is designed to test the feasibility and desirability of expanding combined federal and state tax reporting. The project is limited to employment tax reporting and to the disclosure of the taxpayer's name, address, TIN and signature. A taxpayer's signature and identity may be disclosed notwithstanding the confidentiality and disclosure requirements under Code Sec. 6103.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 976(a); Act Sec. 976(b); Act Sec. 976(c), adding Code Sec. 6103(d)(5). Law at ¶ 5613. Committee Report at ¶ 10,925.

DISASTER AREAS

Deadline Extensions

¶ 1067

Background

The IRS is authorized under Code Sec. 6081 to grant a reasonable extension of time of up to six months (except in the case of taxpayers who are abroad) for the filing of returns, declarations, statements, and documents. However, the IRS cannot administratively extend certain deadlines set by law. Furthermore, although the IRS cannot extend the deadlines for employment tax returns or tax deposits, it has abated penalties for the late filing of employment tax returns and late deposits of taxes for employers in certain areas that have been declared disaster areas. However, interest must be charged from the original due date until the tax is paid.

Authority to postpone certain tax-related deadlines by reason of presidentially declared disaster.—The IRS may prescribe regulations to postpone certain deadlines, for up to 90 days, for taxpayers affected by a presidentially declared disaster area. The deadlines that may be postponed are the same as those that may be postponed by reason of service in a combat zone. They include the deadlines for (1) the filing of any return of income, estate, or gift tax (except for employment or withholding taxes), (2) the payment of any income, estate, or gift tax (except employment or withholding taxes), (3) the filing of a Tax Court petition for redetermination of a deficiency or review of a Tax Court decision, (4) the allowance of a credit or refund, (5) the filing of a claim for credit or refund, (6) the bringing of any suit on such claim for credit or refund, (7) the assessment of any tax, (8) the giving or making of any notice or demand for payment of any tax or with respect to any liability to the IRS in respect of any tax, (9) the collection by levy or otherwise of any tax liability, (10) the bringing of a suit by the United States, or any officer on its behalf, with respect to any tax liability, and (11) any other act required or permitted under the related regulations. The period of the postponement may also be disregarded in determining the amount of any credit or refund.

A Presidentially-declared disaster is defined in Code Sec. 1033(h)(3) to mean any disaster which, with respect to the area in which the property is located, resulted in a subsequent determination by the President that the area warrants assistance by the Federal Government under the Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act.

Interest on overpayments and underpayments. The postponement under this provision does not apply to the determination of interest on any overpayment or underpayment. However, see ¶ 1009 for a special provision which requires the IRS to abate the assessment of interest penalties in Presidentially-declared disaster areas if the time for filing an income tax return and paying income tax is extended.

Effective date. The provision applies with respect to any period for performing an act that did not expire before August 5, 1997.

Disclosure of Audited Jurors

¶ 1070

Background

The disclosure of returns and return information may be authorized in connection with certain judicial and administrative tax proceedings. Under prior law, in a criminal or civil tax proceeding, the Secretary of the Treasury could have been required to disclose whether a prospective juror had been the subject of an audit or other tax investigation.

Repeal of authority to disclose juror information.—The Secretary of the Treasury is no longer authorized under Code Sec. 6103(h) to disclose whether a prospective juror in a criminal or civil tax proceeding has been subject to an audit or other tax investigation.

Effective date. The repeal of the provision applies to judicial proceedings commenced after August 5, 1997.

Chapter 11

Estimated Tax, Withholding, Employment Taxes

ESTIMATED TAX

Filing Threshold for Individuals

¶ 1101

Background

Under prior law, the amount of the de minimis threshold for an underpayment of estimated tax for individuals was $500.

Increase in de minimis threshold for underpayment of estimated tax.— The amount of the de minimis threshold for an underpayment of estimated tax for individuals has been increased from $500 to $1,000. Accordingly, additions to tax will not be imposed where the total tax liability for the year, reduced by any withheld tax and estimated tax payments, is less than $1,000.

Effective date. The provision is effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1202(a), amending Code Sec. 6654(e)(1); Act Sec. 1202(b). Law at ¶ 5693. Committee Report at ¶ 12,125.

Estimated Tax Safe Harbor for Individuals

¶ 1103

Background

There are several safe harbors under which individual taxpayers may avoid a penalty for failing to make required estimated tax payments. Under prior law, an individual who had adjusted gross income in excess of $150,000 for the preceding year could avoid the estimated tax penalty for the current year if the individual paid at least the lesser of 90 percent of the current year's tax, or 110 percent of the preceding year's tax.

Estimated tax safe harbor modified for individuals.—The safe harbor provision for individual taxpayers with adjusted gross income of more than $150,000 has been changed. Although these individuals may still avoid the estimated tax penalty by paying at least 90 percent of the current year's tax, the 110 percent safe harbor rule has been changed as follows:

(1) If the preceding tax year begins in 1998, 1999, or 2000, the new safe harbor percentage is 105 percent.

(2) If the preceding tax year begins in 2001, the new safe harbor percentage is 112 percent.

(3) If the preceding tax year is 2002 or thereafter, the safe harbor percentage is 110 percent.

Example. Assume Jeff Brown has adjusted gross income of $160,000 in 2001. In order to use this safe harbor provision to avoid an estimated tax penalty for that year, he would have had to pay in at least the lesser of 90% of his 2001 liability or 105% of his tax liability for 2000 during 2001.

Planning Note. According to the legislative history of this provision, for tax years beginning in 1998, the safe harbor provision of 110 percent of the prior year's liability has been changed to "100 percent of the prior year's liability." In addition, no estimated tax penalty will be imposed under Code Sec. 6654 or Code Sec. 6655 for any period before January 1, 1998, for any payment the due date of which is before January 16, 1998, to the extent that an underpayment is created or increased by a provision of this new legislation.

Effective date. This provision applies with respect to any estimated tax installment payment due for tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1091(b), amending Code Sec. 6654(d)(1)(C)(i); Act Sec. 1091(b). Law at ¶ 5693. Committee Report at ¶ 11,565.

Waiver of Estimated Tax Penalties Caused by Act

¶ 1105

Background

A penalty is imposed upon all taxpayers that fail to pay a certain percentage of their taxes, their estimated tax, on a quarterly basis. For both corporate and noncorporate taxpayers, the penalty is imposed regardless of whether there is reasonable cause for the underpayment. Because major tax legislation causes understandable difficulty in estimating tax for the initial periods following enactment, it has become routine for tax acts to contain provisions waiving penalties for failure to pay estimated tax for certain periods after the date of enactment.

Waiver of estimated tax penalties.—Taxpayers will not be liable for estimated tax penalties to the extent an underpayment was created or increased by any provision of the Act. This waiver applies only to underpayments attributable to periods before January 1, 1998, and for payments due before January 16, 1998.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1(d). Law at ¶ 7001. Committee Report at ¶ 10,110.

Large Corporate Underpayments

¶ 1108

Background

The large corporate underpayment interest rate generally applies to an underpayment that exceeds $100,000. The rate applies to periods beginning 30 days after the earliest of the date on which the first letter of proposed deficiency, a statutory notice of deficiency, or a nondeficiency letter or notice of assessment or proposed assessment is sent. Under prior law, the rate applied even if the first letter or notice of deficiency was for an amount of $100,000 or less.

Certain notices do not start interest at the large corporate underpayment rate.—The period to which interest applies at the large corporate underpayment rate does not begin with reference to the mailing of a letter or notice of deficiency, proposed deficiency, assessment or proposed assessment if the amount set forth is not greater than $100,000 (without regard to interest or penalties). Therefore, with respect to such a letter or notice, interest continues to accrue at the basic underpayment rate (the federal short-term rate plus three percentage points). The interest rate does not increase to the large corporate underpayment rate (the federal short-term rate plus five percentage points) until 30 days after the IRS issues a letter or notice showing an amount that exceeds $100,000.

Effective date. The provision is effective for purposes of determining interest for periods after December 31, 1997.

PAYMENT OF TAX

Commercially Acceptable Means

¶ 1111

Background

Payment of taxes may be made by check or money order to the extent and under the conditions provided by the regulations issued under Code Sec. 6311. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, no other means of payment was permitted.

Commercially acceptable means of paying taxes.—The IRS is authorized to accept payment of taxes by any commercially acceptable means that the Secretary deems appropriate (e.g., credit cards, debit cards, or charge cards) to the extent provided in Treasury regulations. These regulations will (1) specify which methods of payment will be acceptable, (2) determine when payment by such means will be considered received, (3) identify types of nontax matters related to payment by such means that are to be resolved by persons ultimately liable for payment and financial intermediaries, without the involvement of the Secretary, and (4) ensure that financial intermediaries will not be involved in resolution of tax matters.

Expanding the permissible means of paying taxes raises important issues. These include liability for tax payments, resolution of billing errors and other disputes, creditor status, and privacy protections.

Liability for tax payments. If a taxpayer pays taxes by means of a check, money order, or other means, such as by credit card, debit card, or charge card, and the amount paid is subsequently charged back to the Secretary, the taxpayer remains liable for payment and for all penalties and additions as if payment had not been tendered.

A different rule applies if payment is guaranteed by a financial institution. Such guarantees would arise if payment were made by means of a guaranteed draft (certified, treasurer's or cashier's check) or if a financial institution expressly guaranteed a credit card, charge card, or debit card payment. Under these circumstances, the United States will not only have a right to payment from the taxpayer, but will also have a lien upon the assets of the financial institution. In the case of a check or draft, the United States will have a lien upon all the assets of the financial institution on which it was drawn; in the case of a money order, upon all the assets of the issuer; and in the case of an express guarantee, upon all the assets of the institution making the guarantee. Moreover, the lien will have priority over all other claims against the financial institution, issuer, or guaranteeing institution except the costs of administration and the reimbursement of the United States for the amount spent in the redemption of the circulating notes of the financial institution.

Resolution of disputes. Billing errors and other disputes create potential conflicts between provisions in the Internal Revenue Code (Code) on the one hand and the Truth-in-Lending Act (TILA) and the Electronic Funds Transfer Act (EFTA) on the other. The Code provides mechanisms for the determination of tax liability, defenses, and other taxpayer protections and for the resolution of disputes with respect to those liabilities. TILA includes methods for determining credit card liabilities, defenses, and other consumer protections, and provisions for resolving disputes with respect to these liabilities.

If credit cards are accepted as a method for payment of taxes, neither section 161 of TILA (relating to correction of billing errors) nor any similar provision of state law will apply if the error alleged relates to the underlying tax liability. These provisions are applicable, however, if the error is a computational error or numerical transposition in the credit card transaction, or an issue as to whether the taxpayer authorized payment of the taxes by use of the credit card. A similar rule applies to debit card users with respect to section 908 of EFTA (relating to error resolution). Finally, payment of taxes is not subject to section 170 of TILA (relating to claims of cardholders against card issuers).

Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the Code provided for refunds only to the person who made the overpayment (generally the taxpayer). Code Sec. 6311 provides, however, that if a taxpayer is entitled to a refund resulting from the correction of a billing error made under section 161 of TILA or section 908 of EFTA, the IRS is authorized to use the appropriate debit card or credit card system to credit the taxpayer's account.

Creditor status. Various responsibilities and obligations are imposed on creditors under the TILA. Under certain limited circumstances, the IRS could be included within the TILA's definition of "creditor." Code Sec. 6311, however, now explicitly provides that the IRS will not be treated as a creditor for purposes the TILA.

Privacy protections. If the IRS accepts credit card charges from taxpayers, it will have to disclose tax information to financial institutions in order to obtain payment and resolve billing disputes. This raises a concern about the sharing of tax information by financial institutions with private credit bureaus and direct mail marketers.

Code Sec. 6311 includes a general rule prohibiting any person from disclosing information relating to credit or debit card transactions obtained pursuant to Code Sec. 6103(k)(8) (see below), except for purposes directly related to the processing of such transactions, or the billing or collection of amounts charged or debited as a result of such transactions.

Exceptions are made to the general rule for information to be used for certain purposes. Debit or credit card issuers or others directly involved in the processing of credit card transactions, or the billing or collection of amounts debited or credited to such accounts may use and disclose information for purposes directly related to:

(1) statistical risk and profitability assessment;

(2) transferring receivables;

(3) auditing account information;

(4) complying with federal, state, or local law; or

(5) properly authorized civil, criminal, or regulatory investigation by federal, state, or local authorities.

In addition, debit or credit card issuers, or others acting on behalf of such issuers, may use such information for purposes directly related to servicing the issuer's accounts. Code Sec. 6103 warns, however, that use and disclosure of information pursuant to these rules may be made only to the extent authorized by written procedures promulgated by the IRS.

Disclosure authorization. The Secretary is given the authority to disclose returns or return information to financial institutions and others to the extent necessary for the administration of Code Sec. 6311. Disclosure of information for purposes other than to accept payment by check or money order may only be made to the extent authorized by written procedures authorized by the Secretary. In addition, Code Sec. 7431 (relating to civil damages for unauthorized disclosure of returns and return information) is amended to state that any reference to Code Sec. 6103 will be treated as including a reference to Code Sec. 6311 (confidentiality of information).

Authority of IRS to enter into contracts. The IRS is authorized to enter into contracts to obtain services related to receiving payment by other means if the cost is beneficial to the government. However, the IRS may not pay any fee or provide any other information under such contracts.

Effective date. The effective date is the date nine months after August 5, 1997 (May 5, 1998).

EMPLOYMENT TAX STATUS

Retail Securities Brokers

¶ 1114

Background

In determining whether a worker is an employee or independent contractor for employment tax purposes, the IRS may use the fact that instructions are provided by the business to the worker as an indication of employment status. One factor in determining the weight to be given the existence of instructions in reaching a conclusion as to whether a business has the right to control workers is whether the instructions are imposed only in compliance with governmental or governing body regulations. The IRS training manual indicates that if a business requires its workers to comply with rules established by a third party (such as municipal building codes, fire regulations, or the like) the fact that such rules are imposed should carry little weight in determining a worker's status. However, until the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, no specific rule existed concerning the weight to be given to instructions from broker-dealers to affiliated service representatives that are provided to the registered representatives merely to ensure compliance with state and federal investor protection laws.

Employment status of representatives of broker-dealers not determined by instructions provided by service recipients.—The Act provides that, for purposes of determining whether a registered representative of a securities broker-dealer is an employee for federal tax purposes, no weight is to be given to instructions from the service recipient that are given only in compliance with investor protection standards imposed by the federal government, any state government, or a governing body pursuant to a delegation by a federal or state agency. This monitoring performed by brokerage houses to ensure compliance with investor protection laws is not to be taken into account by the IRS in determining the employment status of registered representatives.

Effective date. This provision applies to services performed after December 31, 1997. However, the House Committee Report states that no inference is intended that the treatment under the provision is not present law.

SELF-EMPLOYMENT TAX

Termination Payments to Insurance Salespersons

¶ 1117

Background

Taxes are imposed on an individual's net earnings from self-employment. Typically, net earnings are an individual's gross income from a trade or business minus any allowable deductions that are attributable to the business. Many insurance salespersons operate as independent contractors. As such, they must include payments received from an insurance company in net earnings from self-employment. However, a number of courts have determined that termination payments received by a salesperson were not includible in net earnings from self-employment. The rationale was that the termination payments were not "derived" from the salesperson's trade or business and, therefore, were not includible.

Background

Termination payments of former insurance salespersons excludable.— Termination payments received by former insurance salespersons are excludable from net earnings from self employment under the new law if certain requirements are met. The exclusion for insurance salespersons who worked as independent contractors applies if (1) the amount is received after termination of the individual's agreement to perform services for the company, (2) the individual performs no services for the company after the termination and before the close of the tax year, (3) the payments are conditioned upon the salesperson agreeing not to compete with the company for at least one year following termination, and (4) the amount of the payment depends primarily on policies sold by or credited to the individual during the last year of the agreement and/or the extent to which the policies remain in force for some period after the termination, and does not depend on the length of service or overall earnings from services performed for the company. Eligibility for the payment may be based on length of service.

Planning Note. This exclusion codifies recent case law holding that the termination payments were not "derived" from the salesperson's trade or business and, therefore, were not includible in income (W.R. Jackson, 108 TC 130, CCH Dec. 51,965; Milligan, CA-9, 94-2 USTC ¶ 50,565, rev'g Dec. 48,632(M), TC Memo. 1992-655). Exclusion from income does not apply to termination payments in the form of deferred compensation. The delineated conditions for exclusion will be strictly applied when examining termination payments. Accordingly, the insurance salesperson and the insurance company must carefully craft their employment arrangement and structure payments to comply with this new exclusion.

Social Security Act change. The new law also amends the Social Security Act to provide that excludable termination payments are not treated as earnings for purposes of determining social security benefits.

Effective date. This provision is effective for payments after December 31, 1997.

FUTA TAX

Surcharge Extension

¶ 1120

Background

Under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA), a 6.2 percent gross tax rate is imposed on the first $7,000 paid annually by covered employers to each employee. Employers with no delinquent federal loans may credit 5.4 percentage points against the 6.2 percent rate on their state returns, making the minimum net federal unemployment tax rate 0.8 percent. In 1976, Congress added a temporary surtax of 0.2 percent of taxable wages to the permanent FUTA tax rate, giving the current 0.8 percent FUTA tax rate two components: (1) a permanent tax rate of 0.6 percent and (2) a temporary surtax rate of 0.2 percent. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, this surtax was scheduled to expire after 1998.

Background

FUTA temporary surtax extended.—The Federal Unemployment Tax Act temporary surtax rate of 0.2 percent is extended through December 31, 2007.

Effective date. Effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1035, amending Code Sec. 3301. Law at ¶ 5467. Committee Report at ¶ 11,315.

FUTA Exemption for Election Workers

¶ 1123

Background

The Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) requires that a state provide unemployment insurance coverage to most workers in state and local government jobs. Although there are certain exceptions to this broad requirement, there was no exception for individuals employed as election workers.

Election workers are exempted from FUTA coverage.—FUTA requires a state to cover under its unemployment compensation laws services performed in the employ of a state or local government, unless a specific exception has been provided. Election workers and election officials who receive less than $1,000 in a calendar year for services performed are excepted from FUTA and state UI coverage.

Effective date. This provision applies with respect to services performed after August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 5405(a) of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, amending Code Sec. 3309(b)(3)(D) and (E), and adding Code Sec. 3309(b)(3)(F); Act Sec. 5405(b) of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. Law at ¶ 5468B. Committee Report at ¶ 20,055.

FUTA Exemption for Inmates

¶ 1126

Background

Federal law requires state unemployment programs to cover most state and local government jobs. An exception is provided for services for a government agency performed by inmates of custodial or penal institutions. However, no similar exception for inmates working in private sector jobs.

Wages earned by inmates excluded from FUTA.—The Act makes it clear that services provided by inmates in private-sector jobs are also exempted from state unemployment coverage.

Effective date. This provision applies to services performed after January 1, 1994.

Act Sec. 5406(a) of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, amending Code Sec. 3306(c)(19) and (20), and adding Code Sec. 3306(c)(21); Act Sec. 5406(b) of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. Law at ¶ 5468. Committee Report at ¶ 20,065.

FUTA Exemption for Religious Schools

¶ 1129

Background

Federal law requires states to provide unemployment insurance coverage for most jobs with nonprofit organizations in the same manner as private-sector jobs. However, an exception is permitted for jobs that are supervised or controlled by a church or association of churches. Prior to the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, this exception did not extend to employment in religious elementary or secondary schools.

Employment in a religious school exempted from FUTA coverage.—Unless a specific exception applies, jobs in nonprofit organizations are subject to the federal unemployment tax and must be covered by state unemployment insurance as are jobs in for-profit organizations. Services performed in the employ of either (1) a church (or association of churches) or (2) an organization that is operated primarily for religious purposes and that is operated, supervised, controlled, or principally supported by a church (or association of churches) are specifically exempted from this coverage.

The Balanced Budget Act of 1997 broadens this exception to include employment in a tax-exempt elementary or secondary school (described in Code Sec. 501(c)(3)), that is operated primarily for religious purposes without regard to whether the school is operated, controlled, supervised, or principally supported by a church (or association of churches). Thus, this exemption includes religious schools that are operated by lay boards.

Effective date. This provision applies with respect to service performed after August 5, 1997.

WITHHOLDING

Federal Employees in Puerto Rico

¶ 1132

Background

The Treasury Secretary is authorized to enter into agreements providing for the withholding of state income taxes from the wages of federal employees in a state. Prior law defined a state as including a state, territory, or possession of the United States. In P. Romero, (CA-FC), 38 F.3d 1204, the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit invalidated an agreement with Puerto Rico because, as a commonwealth, Puerto Rico was not encompassed within the definition of a state.

Withholding of commonwealth income taxes from the wages of federal employees.—The new law expands the definition of a state for purposes of the Treasury Secretary's authority to enter into agreements providing for the withholding of state income taxes from the wages of federal employees in the state. States now include commonwealths in addition to territories, and possessions. Accordingly, the Treasury Secretary has the authority to enter into a withholding agreement with Puerto Rico.

This provision effectively overturns P. Romero (CA-FC, 38 F3d 1204).

Effective date. This provision is effective on January 1, 1998.

Chapter 12

Excise Taxes

AIRPORT AND AIRWAY TRUST FUND TAXES

Extension and Modification

¶ 1201

Background

Fuel taxes. The taxes on aviation fuel, aviation gasoline, and noncommercial aviation were scheduled to terminate on September 30, 2007.

Air passenger tax. Prior law imposed taxes on persons and property using air transportation, and the taxes were scheduled to expire after September 30, 1997. Domestic air passenger transportation was subject to an excise tax equal to 10 percent of the amount paid for the transportation. The tax did not specifically apply to payments to airlines from credit card and other companies in exchange for the right to award frequent flyer or other reduced air travel rights.

International air passenger transportation was subject to a $6 departure excise tax imposed on passengers departing the United States, but no tax was imposed on passengers arriving in the United States from other countries.

Transportation between the 48 contiguous states and Alaska or Hawaii, or between Alaska and Hawaii, is treated as part domestic and part international. However, prior to amendment by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 questions arose whether such a single international flight segment was subject to tax on both arrival and departure.

Under prior law, the air passenger ticket and freight excise taxes were collected from passengers and freight shippers by the commercial air carriers. Prior to amendment by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, carriers were not secondarily liable.

Airport and Airway Trust Fund excise taxes extended and modified.—The Airport and Airway Trust Fund excise taxes are extended for 10 years, for theperiod from October 1, 1997, through September 30, 2007. The extended taxes include:

(1) the domestic and international air passenger excise taxes;

(2) the air cargo excise tax; and

(3) the noncommercial aviation fuels taxes.

The domestic commercial air passenger transportation tax rates are modified and other provisions are modified in several respects including subjecting payments for certain flight awards to the excise tax. The tax rate for international travel is also modified and now applies to both arrivals and departures, although special rules apply to Alaska and Hawaii. Flights beginning or ending at rural airports also have special rules. Certain of the new tax rates are inflation adjusted.

Fuel Taxes. The taxes on aviation fuel, aviation gasoline, and noncommercial aviation are extended from September 30, 1997, to September 30, 2007. The 4.3-cents-per-gallon excise tax on aviation gasoline and jet fuel will be deposited in the Airport and Airway Trust Fund, rather than in the General Fund, beginning with fuels sold or removed after September 30, 1997.

Domestic commercial air passenger transportation taxes modified. The domestic air passenger excise tax is changed to a tax equal to the total of nine percent of the gross amount paid by the passenger for the transportation plus a $1 fixed amount per flight segment. The nine percent rate and the fixed dollar amount per flight segment are adjusted as follows:

Domestic Segments beginning	Rate of passenger tax	Per flight segment charge
After 9/30/97 and before 10/1/98	9%	$1.00
After 9/30/98 and before 10/1/99	8%	$2.00
After 9/30/99 and before 2000	7.5%	$2.25
During 2000	7.5%	$2.50
During 2001	7.5%	$2.75
During 2002	7.5%	$3.00

The passenger taxes are extended to September 30, 2007, and the flight segment charge is adjusted for inflation after 2002, (see below).

All transportation between points within the 48 contiguous states, and within Hawaii or Alaska, other than domestic segments associated with international transportation, is subject to tax at the 7.5-percent rate and the fixed segment charge. In the case of amounts paid outside the United States for taxable transportation, these taxes only apply to segments which begin and end in the United States.

The IRS is specifically authorized to disregard accounting allocations or other arrangements that have the effect of artificially reducing the base to which the 7.5-percent tax is applied. According to the Conference Committee Report, no inference is intended regarding treatment of these payments under prior law.

Flight segment. The term flight segment is defined as transportation involving a single takeoff and a single landing. For example, travel from New York to San Francisco, with an intermediate stop in Chicago, would, according to the Conference Committee Report, consist of two flight segments without regard as to whether the passenger changed aircraft in Chicago. There is no change in the number of flight segments for which a passenger is charged in the case of transportation routing changes initiated by the air carrier, provided there is no change in the fare charged. This rule would apply to flight changes for travel between the same origin and destination as a result of aircraft mechanical-problems, or to a diversion to another intermediate or destination airport because of bad weather conditions.

Example (1). On December 1, 1997, Lindy Berg purchases a $900 ticket to fly between Boston and Seattle with an intermediate stop in Chicago. She left the next day, but because of a snow storm in Chicago, the plane landed in Detroit. At no additional charge, Lindy takes a flight to Denver and then on to Seattle. Lindy incurs a tax of $83 ($2 (for two flight segments of $1 each) + $81 ($900 ticket × .09)). Lindy is not charged for the third flight because it was due to changes initiated by the air carrier, and there was no change in the fare charged.

Rural airports. The tax on flight segments is not applicable to a domestic segment beginning or ending at a rural airport. The tax on amounts paid for domestic transportation is applicable to flights to and from rural airports at a rate of 7.5 percent. Thus, the higher domestic rates for flights before October 1, 1999, are not applicable to a segment beginning or ending at a rural airport. For transportation with segments that do not begin or end at a rural airport (in addition to segments involving a rural airport), a mixed rate applies. The 7.5-percent rate applies to the portion of the amount paid for transportation that bears the same proportion as the miles in domestic segments that begin or end at rural airports bears to total miles in the transportation.

Example (2). On December 1, 1997, Rick Toven purchases transportation for $800 to fly from a rural airport in Snowville to Denver and then on to Houston. The total transportation is 1,200 miles, with 300 miles of the total involving the flight from the rural airport. Therefore, 25 percent of the transportation or $200 (300 miles ÷ 1200 total miles × $800) involves travel from a rural airport and is taxed at the 7.5-percent rate. The remaining 75 percent of the transportation, $600, is subject to the regular rate of 9 percent. Toven incurs a tax of $70 ($1 (for one taxable flight segment) + $15 ($200 × .075) + $54 ($600 × .09)). Toven does not incur a $1 flight segment tax for the segment from the rural airport to Denver.

A rural airport, for these purposes, is any airport that had fewer than 100,000 commercial passengers departing in the second preceding calendar year and

(1) is not within 75 miles of an airport that had at least 100,000 commercial passengers departing in the second preceding calendar year; or

(2) is receiving essential air service subsidies as of the date of enactment of this provision.

Thus, for 1998 an airport that had 90,000 commercial passengers in 1996 and was receiving essential air service subsidies on the date of enactment would qualify as a rural airport, even if it was 50 miles from an airport that had one million passengers in 1996.

Flight awards. Amounts paid to an air carrier (or any related person) for the right to award free or reduced rate air transportation are treated for purposes of the domestic air passenger excise tax as an amount paid for taxable transportation. Examples of such taxable amounts, according to the Conference Committee Report include:

(1) payments for frequent flyer miles purchased by credit card companies, telephone companies, rental car companies, television networks, restaurants and hotels, and other businesses for distribution to their customers and others; and

(2) amounts received by airlines pursuant to joint venture credit card or other marketing arrangements.

International travel facilities. A tax of $12 on any amount paid (whether within or without the United States) for any transportation of any person by air, if such transportation begins or ends in the United States. Thus, this tax is now applicable to all international arrivals and departures. However, this tax is not applicable to any transportation that is taxable in its entirety under the domestic air passenger excise tax rules.

Alaska and Hawaii. As under prior law, transportation between the 48 contiguous States and Alaska or Hawaii, or between Alaska and Hawaii, continue to be treated as part domestic and part international. However, the new amendments clarify that such a single international flight segment (between the 48 contiguous States and Alaska or Hawaii, or between Alaska and Hawaii) is due only on departure and at a reduced rate of $6. Thus only one $6 per passenger international tax is applicable despite the fact that the flight both departs into and arrives from international airspace. On a flight from Los Angeles to Hawaii in December, 1997, a passenger would be taxed at the nine-percent rate for the portion of the fare applicable to U.S. territorial miles, $1 per flight segment, and the $6 for the international segment rate.

Travel between Alaska or Hawaii and foreign countries, including U.S. possessions, is taxed exclusively as international travel and would be subject to the $12 tax.

Inflation adjustment. Beginning on January 1, 2003, and each January 1 thereafter, the fixed dollar amount per domestic flight segment will be indexed annually for inflation occurring after 2001, measured by changes in the Consumer Price Index rounded to the nearest 10 cents. The base year for the adjustment is 2001.

With regard to the tax on the use of international travel facilities, the $12 amount is indexed in the same manner beginning in 1999, with 1997 as the base year. The beginning of the domestic segment is treated as the taxable event. Similarly, the $6 rate applicable to Alaska and Hawaii is indexed beginning in 1999.

Secondary liability for tax. Although transportation providers are liable for collecting and remitting commercial air transportation taxes, liability for the tax is imposed on passengers. This is modified to impose secondary liability on air carriers providing the initial segment on transportation beginning or ending in the United States.

Effective dates. These provisions are generally effective on or after October 1, 1997, however, following are a number of exceptions:

(1) Ticket taxes. The provisions modifying ticket taxes are effective for transportation beginning on or after October 1, 1997. However, with regard to the tax on international travel, the new rates are generally applicable to amounts paid for tickets after October 1, 1997, unless the amounts were paid after August 12, 1997 for transportation beginning after September 30, 1997. The provision providing for the secondary liability of carriers for the international travel tax is also applicable to taxes due under these rules.

(2) Fuel taxes. The extension of the general aviation fuels excise taxes is effective on October 1, 1997.

(3) Mileage awards. Amendments impacting mileage awards generally apply to amounts paid after September 30, 1997. However, payments made after June 11, 1997, and before October 1, 1997, by one member of a controlled group for a right which is described in Code Sec. 4261(e)(3) and furnished by another member of the group after September 30, 1997, are treated as paid after September 30, 1997. For this purpose, all persons treated as a single employer under Code Sec. 52(a) or (b) are treated as members of a controlled group. Code Sec. 52(a) generally requires only 50-percent control to qualify as a consolidated group, and Code Sec. 52(b) contains special related-party rules for partnerships and proprietorships.

(4) Airport and Airway Trust Fund. The amendments increasing the deposits into the Airport and Airway Trust Fund apply with respect to taxes received in the Treasury on and after October 1, 1997.

(5) Delayed deposits of taxes. Regardless of the deposit requirements of Code Sec. 6302, the due date for deposits of commercial air passenger transportation taxes imposed by Code Sec. 4261 (which would otherwise be required to be made after August 14, 1997, and before October 1, 1997), is October 10, 1997. Similarly, the due date is October 5, 1998, for deposits with respect to (1) commercial air passenger transportation taxes imposed by Code Sec. 4261 (which would otherwise be required to be made after August 14, 1998, and before October 1, 1998) and (2) commercial air cargo and aviation fuels taxes under Code Secs. 4081(a)(2)(A)(ii), 4091 and 4271 (which would otherwise be required to be made after July 31, 1998, and before October 1, 1998).

Emergency Medical Aircraft

¶ 1206

Background

The Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) provided that fixed-wing aircraft that are equipped for and used exclusively to provide emergency medical services are exempt from the aviation excise taxes. The Act did not specify the basis for applying the exemption. A technical correction makes it clear that the exemption is to be applied on a flight-by-flight basis.

Aviation excise tax exemption.—The Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) did not specify the basis for applying the emergency medical services exemption from the aviation excise taxes. A technical correction makes it clear that the exemption is to be applied on a flight-by-flight basis.

Effective date. The provision is effective as if included in the Small Business Job Protection Act (P.L. 104-188). As a result, the provision is effective as of August 27, 1996.

Act Sec. 1601(f)(4), amending Code Secs. 4041(a)(2), 4041(l), 4092(b), and 4261(g) and sections 1609(h)(1) and (4) of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996; Act Sec. 1601(j). Law at ¶ 5473, 5487, 5503, and 7076. Committee Report at ¶ 13,660.

DIESEL, GASOLINE, AND SPECIAL MOTOR FUELS

Fuel Used in Recreational Boats

¶ 1209

Background

Under prior law, diesel fuel used by recreational motorboats was subject to an excise tax of 24.3 cents per gallon. This tax was originally imposed in order to replace revenue lost when the excise tax on certain luxury boats was repealed. In 1996, the excise tax on diesel fuel used by recreational boats was temporarily suspended through December 31, 1997.

Repeal of excise tax on diesel fuel used in recreational motorboats.—The 24.3 cents-per-gallon diesel fuel tax imposed on diesel fuel used in recreational motorboats is repealed. The tax on diesel fuel used in diesel-powered trains is still subject to taxation.

Effective date. The repeal is effective on January 1, 1998.

Act Sec. 902(a), amending Code Sec. 6421(e)(2)(B); Act Sec. 902(b), amending Code Secs. 4041(a)(1) and 4083(a)(3); Act Sec. 902(c). Law at ¶ 5473, 5483, and 5669. Committee Report at ¶ 10,520.

Kerosene Taxed as Diesel Fuel

¶ 1211

Background

Under prior law, kerosene was not subject to excise tax unless it was blended with taxable diesel fuel or was sold for use as aviation fuel. When kerosene is blended with dyed diesel fuel to be used in a nontaxable use, the dye concentration of the fuel mixture must be adjusted to ensure that it meets IRS requirements for untaxed, dyed diesel fuel. Kerosene also is used in space heaters, and as with other heating oil uses, was not subject to excise tax. Another nontaxable use of kerosene includes feedstock use in the petrochemical industry.

Diesel fuel excise tax rules extended to kerosene.—The diesel fuel excise tax rules have generally been extended to kerosene. Thus, the diesel fuel tax rate of 24.3 cents per gallon for fuel used as a transportation motor fuel is extended to kerosene.

Kerosene is now taxed when it is removed from a registered terminal unless it is indelibly dyed and destined for a nontaxable use. Registration as a terminal facility eligible to handle non-tax-paid diesel fuel and kerosene is conditional on the facility offering its customers dyeing for nontaxable sales of diesel fuel and kerosene. Aviation-grade kerosene that is removed from the terminal by a registered producer of aviation fuel is not subject to the dyeing requirement if the person receiving the kerosene is registered under Code Sec. 4101 with respect to the tax imposed by Code Sec. 4091.

The IRS is authorized to issue regulations allowing tax-free sales of kerosene to wholesale distributors who satisfy registration requirements and who sell kerosene exclusively to retailers eligible for refunds with respect to undyed kerosene sold by them for a nontaxable use.

Feedstock kerosene that a registered industrial user receives by pipeline or vessel also is exempt from the dyeing requirement. Other feedstock kerosene would be exempt from the dyeing requirement to the extent and under conditions (including satisfaction of registration and certification requirements) prescribed by IRS regulations.

Refunds. Refund procedures are to be provided under which registered ultimate vendors may claim refunds of the tax paid on:

(1) kerosene sold from a pump which is not suitable for use in fueling any diesel-powered highway vehicle or train; or

(2) kerosene blended with heating oil to be used during periods of extreme or unseasonable cold.

The minimum amount for vendor refunds of tax paid on kerosene is $100.

Floor stock tax. A floor stock tax of 24.4 cents per gallon is imposed on kerosene held by any person on July 1, 1998. The floor stock tax must be paid on orbefore August 31, 1998. Kerosene is held by a person for these purposes if title has passed to that person, whether or not delivery has been made.

The floor stock tax does not apply to kerosene:

(1) held by any person exclusively for any use to the extent a credit or refund of the Code Sec. 4081 tax is allowable for such use;

(2) held in the tank of a motor vehicle or motorboat;

(3) held on July 1, 1998, by "any person" if the aggregate amount of kerosene held by such person on that date does not exceed 2,000 gallons (amounts excluded in (1) and (2) are not counted in the 2,000 gallons) and proper information is submitted to the IRS. The term "any person" treats all members of a controlled group, as defined in Code Sec. 1563, as one person, but substitutes 50 percent for 80 percent. Similarly, nonincorporated persons under common control are treated as any person; or

(4) to the extent that the tax has been, or will be, imposed under Code Sec. 4081 or Code Sec. 4091.

All other provisions applicable to Code Sec. 4081 taxes, including penalties, that are not inconsistent with the above provisions, apply to the floor stock tax.

Effective date. This provision is effective on July 1, 1998. The floor stock tax is generally imposed on kerosene held by a person on July 1, 1998, see above for exceptions.

Adjustment for Btu Equivalency

¶ 1216

Background

Currently, excise taxes are imposed on motor fuels of all kinds used in highway transportation. These taxes are deposited into the Highway Trust Fund to finance the federal highway system. Special motor fuels that contain fewer Btu's per gallon than gasoline include liquefied petroleum gas (propane), liquefied natural gas, methanol from natural gas, and compressed natural gas (CNG). Under prior law, gasoline and many special motor fuels were taxed at the same rate of 18.3 cents per gallon (CNG and methanol were taxed at reduced rates).

Before the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 was enacted, consumers who used one of the alternative fuels paid more federal excise taxes than those who used gasoline because it requires more gallons of the lower-energy-content fuel than gasoline to travel the same distance. Thus, the consumer using an alternative fuel paid disproportionately higher excise taxes into the Highway Trust Fund than those whose fuel of choice was gasoline.

Tax certain alternative fuels based on energy equivalency to gasoline.—The excise tax on certain alternative fuels is reduced to reflect the underlying intent that fuel should be taxed in proportion to its use on federal highways. These fuels have rates that are now lower than gasoline because it requires more of each of these fuels to go a mile than it does for gasoline.

In order to more accurately reflect the fuel equivalency to gasoline, the rate of tax for propane is reduced to 13.6 cents per gallon. The rates for liquefied natural gas and methanol from natural gas are also reduced to 11.9 and 9.15 cents per gallon, respectively. These reductions will be effective through September 30, 1999.

After September 30, 1999, these three fuels will be taxed according to their British thermal unit (Btu) equivalency to the 4.3 cents-per-gallon rate of gasoline. There is no change on the taxing of compressed natural gas.

Effective date. This provision is effective on October 1, 1997.

Gasoline Chain Retailers

¶ 1219

Background

Under the gasoline excise tax refund rules, a wholesale distributor may claim gasoline tax refunds on behalf of exempt customers, such as state and local governments, when gas is sold in bulk quantities. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, retailers could not claim refunds on behalf of exempt customers.

Wholesale distributor defined.—For purposes of applying the gasoline excise tax refund rules, the definition of a wholesale distributor is expanded to include operators of multiple gasoline retail outlets. More specifically, a wholesale distributor includes any person who makes retail sales of gasoline at 10 or more retail motor fuel outlets.

Effective date. The provision applies to sales after August 5, 1997.

Skydiving Transportation

¶ 1221

Background

A 10-percent excise tax is imposed on amounts paid for certain transportation of persons by air. There is also a fuels tax imposed on noncommercial aviation. According to the Senate Finance Committee Report for the Airport and Airway Revenue Act of 1970 (P.L. 91-258), an aircraft is subject to either the air transportation tax or the aviation fuels tax, but not to both, in regards to any one trip. Under Technical Advice Memorandum 9407001, a taxpayer's transportation of recreational skydivers for compensation to airborne drop points constituted the transportation of persons and was thus subject to the air transportation tax. However, the TAM noted that if the taxpayer used an aircraft in its skydiving training school, the transportation of persons would be incidental to the training and the flight would be subject to the fuels tax.

Background

Exemption of skydiving flights from air transportation tax.—Any air transportation used exclusively for the purpose of skydiving is exempted from the air transportation excise taxes, regardless of whether skydiving instruction is offered to any of the passengers. As a result, skydiving flights are taxed as noncommercial aviation and are subject to the aviation fuels tax.

Effective date. The provision applies to amounts paid after September 30, 1997. The provision addressing the exemption for skydiving flights treated as noncommercial aviation takes effect October 1, 1997.

Highway Trust Fund

¶ 1223

Background

Currently, the Highway Trust Fund receives its revenues from taxes on 20 cents per gallon on highway diesel fuel and 14 cents per gallon on highway gasoline and special motor fuels. In addition, a tax of 4.3 cents-per-gallon applies to highway and other fuels. Before the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the revenue from the 4.3 cents-per-gallon permanent excise tax was allocated to the General Fund.

Transfer of General Fund highway fuels tax revenues to the Highway Trust Fund.—The 4.3 cents-per-gallon excise tax from fuels is transferred to the Highway Trust Fund from the General Fund starting on October 1, 1997. In apportioning the money, 80 percent of the Highway Trust Fund allocation goes to the Highway Account, with the remaining 20 percent going to the Mass Transit Account.

Delayed deposit of highway motor fuel taxes. The deposit of excise taxes imposed upon gasoline, diesel fuel, and kerosene under Code Sec. 4081, and special motor fuels under Code Sec. 4041 that would otherwise be required to be made after July 31, 1998 and before October 1, 1998 has been postponed until October 5, 1998.

Effective date. This provision is effective for taxes received after September 30, 1997.

AVIATION FUEL

Fixed-Base Operators

¶ 1227

Background

An excise tax is imposed on the sale of aviation fuel by any producer (defined to include a wholesale distributor) under Code Sec. 4091. Fuel sold at many rural airports is sold by retail dealers who do not qualify as wholesale distributors. This fuel is purchased by the retailers tax-paid. In certain instances, fuel that has been purchased tax-paid by a retailer will be resold to a producer. A producer that purchased fuel from a retail dealer in order to resell it to a customer incurred a second tax but was not able, under prior law, to receive a refund of the first tax so as to eliminate the double taxation.

Refund of prior excise tax paid by producers of fuel.—If a registered producer of aviation fuel establishes that a prior excise tax was paid, and not credited or refunded, on aviation fuel held by the producer, an amount equal to the tax paid will be refunded without interest to the producer in the same manner as if the amount were an overpayment of tax.

Effective date. The provision applies to fuel acquired by producers after September 30, 1997.

ALCOHOL FUELS

Effective Date Clarification

¶ 1230

Background

The expedited refund provision that applies to blenders of tax-paid gasoline and ethanol, which had expired for mixtures sold or used after September 30, 1995, was reinstated under the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) for the period beginning on the date of enactment (August 20, 1996) to mixtures sold or used before October 1, 1999. The refund provision did not apply from October 1, 1995, through August 19, 1996.

Ethanol blender refund period.—The expedited refund provision available to persons who blend tax-paid gasoline and ethanol, which was reinstated under the Small Business Job Protection Act (P.L. 104-188), is effective retroactive to the provision's expiration after September 30, 1995. Claims for refunds of tax paid during the period running from October 1, 1995, to August 20, 1996 (date of enactment of the Small Business Job Protection Act (P.L. 104-188)), must be filed before October 4, 1997.

Effective date. The provision is effective as if included in Subtitle G of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996. As a result, it is effective on January 1, 1994.

HEAVY TRUCKS

Nontaxable Repairs and Modifications

¶ 1233

Background

A 12-percent excise tax applies to the first retail sale of new or remanufactured heavy trucks, heavy trailers, and highway tractors. However, the Senate Finance Committee Report to the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-647) stated that, for purposes of determining whether the manufacture of a new truck has occurred when repair or manufacture extends the useful life of a vehicle, a 75-percent ratio of repair costs to the full retail price of a comparable new truck is to be used as a safe harbor. Rev. Rul. 91-27 (1991-1 CB 192) provided guidance in applying the safe harbor.

Certain repairs and modifications not treated as manufacture.—Heavy trucks, heavy trailers, and highway tractors that are repaired or modified are not treated as manufactured or produced for purposes of the 12-percent retail excise tax if the cost of the repairs and modifications does not exceed 75 percent of the retail price of a comparable new vehicle.

Effective date. The provision is effective on January 1, 1998.

Certification for Resale

¶ 1236

Background

Under prior law, the 12-percent excise tax for the first retail sale of new or remanufactured heavy trucks, heavy trailers, and highway tractors did not apply to vehicles sold for resale or long-term leasing, provided that the purchaser satisfied certain registration requirements.

Replacement of registration requirement with certification requirement for certain sales of trucks, trailers, and tractors.—The registration requirement with respect to the resale or long-term leasing of heavy trucks, heavy trailers, and highway tractors has been replaced with a certification requirement. The IRS is authorized to issue regulations to permit vehicle purchasers to execute a statement, under penalties of perjury, on the sale invoice that the sale is for resale purposes.

Effective date. The provision is effective on January 1, 1998.

Treatment of Tires

¶ 1239

Background

Code Sec. 4071 imposes an excise tax on tires over 40 pounds based upon their weight. Code Sec. 4051 imposes a 12-percent retail excise tax on heavy trucks and trailers (including highway tractors) based upon the sales price of the heavy truck or trailer. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, tires were taxed separately and their value was excluded from the sales price for purposes of computing the tax on heavy trucks and trailers. This factual determination of "value" caused many audit challenges.

Credit for tires on heavy trucks and trailers.—In order to simplify the computation of the 12-percent excise tax on heavy trucks and trailers (Code Sec. 4051), the value of tires on taxable trucks and trailers is now subject to the tax. However, a credit for the tire tax imposed by Code Sec. 4071 may be claimed. Previously, taxpayers excluded the value of the tires from the sale price of the truck or trailer on which the Code Sec. 4051 tax was imposed.

Effective date. The credit takes effect January 1, 1998.

After-Market Alterations to Heavy Trucks

¶ 1241

Background

Under current law, an excise tax is imposed on the retail sale of heavy trucks and trailers. This tax specifically applies to sales of the truck trailer chassis and bodies. Certain trucks and trailers with a gross vehicle weight under the weight set forth in the Code are not subject to the tax. The tax is 12 percent of the sales price. The tax will no longer be imposed as of October 1, 1999.

The tax is also imposed on the purchase and installation of parts and accessories within six months after the original purchase. However, the tax does not apply to after-market installations that are deemed de minimis. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, parts and accessories with an aggregate price that did not exceed $200 (including installation charges) were deemed de minimis.

Increase de minimis limit for after-market alterations.—An excise tax on the after-market installation of parts and accessories to vehicles classified as heavy trucks within six months after the vehicle's purchase will be imposed only if the aggregate price of the parts, accessories and installation costs during the period exceeds $1000. Previously, a $200 limit applied.

Effective date. This amendment applies to installations on vehicles sold after August 5, 1997.

LUXURY CARS

Phaseout of Luxury Tax on Automobiles

¶ 1242

Background

An excise tax is imposed on the sale of automobiles whose price exceeds a designated amount of $36,000 in 1997. For 1997, the tax is eight percent of the excess of the sale price over the designated amount, but will decline by one percentage point per year until reaching three percent in 2002. The tax will expire on December 31, 2002.

The tax applies to the first retail sale after manufacture, production, or importation of an automobile, but not to subsequent sales. Under Code Sec. 4003, however, a 10-percent tax is imposed on the separate purchase of a vehicle and "parts and accessories therefore" if the sum of the separate purchases exceeds the designated amount. The rate of tax on separate purchases is not determined by reference to the rate of tax on the purchase of luxury automobiles. Under prior law, it was not clear whether the phaseout reduction and expiration date applied to separate purchases of the vehicle and parts as well as to new luxury automobiles.

Phaseout of luxury tax clarified.— For 1997, the luxury car tax imposed by Code Sec. 4001 is eight percent of the excess of the sale price over a $36,000 (for 1997) threshold, but will decline by one percentage point per year until reaching three percent in 2002. The tax will expire on December 31, 2002.

Code Sec. 4003 imposes a 10-percent tax on the separate purchase of a vehicle and parts and accessories therefore if the sum of the separate purchases exceeds the designated amount. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, it was not clear that the phaseout reduction and expiration date for the luxury car tax on new automobiles described above was also applicable to the separate purchase of a vehicle and parts and accessories. A technical amendment clarifies that the phaseout reduction and expiration date is to apply to both.

Effective date. The amendment is effective for sales after August 5, 1997.

After-Market Alterations to Luxury Cars

¶ 1245

Background

Under present law, an excise tax is imposed on the retail sale of luxury cars. The tax is eight percent of the amount by which the sale price exceeds an inflation-adjusted base of $36,000 in 1997. This tax is being phased out at a rate of one percent per year through the year 2002, after which time the tax will no longer be imposed.

Background

The tax is also imposed on any purchase and installation of parts and accessories within six months after the original purchase.

However, the tax does not apply to after-market installations of parts and accessories that are deemed de minimis. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, installation of parts and accessories with an aggregate price that did not exceed $200 (including installation charges) were deemed de minimis.

Increase de minimis limit for after-market alterations.—An excise tax on after-market installation of parts and accessories to a luxury car within six months after the vehicle's purchase will be imposed only if the aggregate price of the parts, accessories and installation charges during the period exceeds $1,000. Previously, a $200 limitation applied. The change was made by Congress to reduce the number of excise tax return filers, many of whom were required to report a very small amount of tax.

Effective date. The amendment applies to installations on vehicles sold after August 5, 1997.

Electric and Clean-Fuel Vehicles

¶ 1247

Background

The luxury tax on automobiles is imposed on the first retail sale after manufacture, production, or importation of the automobile. The excise tax is imposed on the excess of the sales price over a threshold amount, adjusted for inflation. For 1997, the tax rate is eight percent and the threshold amount, as adjusted for inflation, is $36,000. The tax rate will be reduced to three percent by the year 2002 and will expire after December 31, 2002. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the same threshold amount, as adjusted for inflation, applied to all vehicles.

Exemption from luxury automobile classification.—The luxury tax on automobiles is imposed on the first retail sale after manufacture, production, or importation of the automobile. The excise tax is imposed on the excess of the sales price over a threshold amount above which the excise tax applies. The threshold, or "applicable amount," is $30,000, which is adjusted for inflation ($36,000 for 1997), for vehicles other than certain clean-burning fuel vehicles and electric vehicles. Under the new law, in the case of certain clean-burning vehicles and electric vehicles, the threshold of $30,000, as adjusted for inflation, is modified to exempt from the excise tax the cost of producing an automobile with environmental benefits.

Modification for clean-fuel vehicles. If the taxpayer purchases a passenger vehicle to which qualified clean-fuel vehicle property, as defined by Code Sec. 179A(c)(1)(A), has been installed, the threshold amount takes into account the value of the components installed. The applicable amount is $30,000, as adjusted for inflation, plus the increase in the price of the vehicle, as determined under Code Sec. 4002, due to the installation of the qualified clean-fuel vehicle property.

> Example. On October 1, 1997, Joe Clean purchases a passenger automobile for $43,000 to which retrofit parts and components have been added to make the vehicle a clean-burning vehicle. If Clean had purchased the automobile without having certain components replaced to make it a clean-burning vehicle, the cost of the automobile would have been $39,000. The 1997 threshold amount of $36,000 is increased to $40,000 to reflect the $4,000 value of the components. Clean must pay an excise tax of $240 or eight percent on $3,000, which is the excess of the $43,000 sales price over the $40,000 modified threshold.

Modification for electric vehicles. If a taxpayer purchases a vehicle produced by an original equipment manufacturer that is designed to be propelled primarily by electricity ("purpose built passenger vehicle"), the applicable amount is 150 percent of $30,000, as adjusted for inflation.

Effective date. The provisions apply to sales and installations occurring after August 5, 1997.

ENVIRONMENTAL TAXES

Imported Recycled Halon-1211

¶ 1248

Background

Under current law, an excise tax is imposed on the manufacturer or importer for the sale or use of ozone-depleting chemicals. However, current law provides a tax exemption for otherwise taxable chemicals that are recovered and recycled within the United States. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, imported recycled halon-1211 was also tax-exempt when obtained from countries that are signatories to the Montreal Protocol on Substances That Deplete the Ozone Layer.

Excise tax on imported recycled halon-1211.—Imported recycled halon-1211 is no longer exempt from the excise tax on ozone-depleting chemicals. According to the Conference Committee Report, a non-ozone depleting substitute for halon-1211 is being developed. Thus, allowing importers of recycled halon-1211 to benefit from the current excise tax exemption could destroy the attempt to produce non-ozone depleting chemicals.

Effective date. The provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Leaking Underground Storage Tanks

¶ 1251

Background

In order to fund cleanup costs associated with leaking underground storage tanks, an excise tax of 0.01 cents per gallon was imposed on gasoline, diesel fuel, special motor fuels, aviation fuels, and fuels used on inland waterways. This tax expired after December 31, 1995.

Reinstatement of LUST Trust Fund taxes.—The Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund tax of 0.01 cents per gallon is reinstated for the period beginning after September 30, 1997, and before April 1, 2005. The tax is imposedon the sale of gasoline, diesel fuel (included fuel used in trains), special motor fuels (other than liquefied petroleum gas), aviation fuels, and inland waterways fuels.

Effective date. The provision takes effect on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1033, amending Code Sec. 4081(d)(3). Law at ¶ 5479. Committee Report at ¶ 11,290.

COMMUNICATIONS TAX

Pre-paid Telephone Cards

¶ 1253

Background

A three-percent excise tax is imposed on amounts paid for local and long-distance telephone services. Generally, the company providing the telephone service collects the tax from consumers and pays it over to the IRS. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the application of the communications tax to long-distance pre-paid telephone cards was uncertain.

Pre-paid phone cards subject to communications tax.—The bill clarifies that the three percent excise tax imposed on long-distance telephone service applies to amounts paid by third parties to communication service providers for pre-paid telephone cards. As a result, prepaid telephone cards offered by service stations, convenience stores, and other companies not in business of telecommunications that offer phone cards to their customers will be subject to the tax. A prepaid telephone card is any card or other arrangement that entitles a holder to obtain communications services and pay for the services in advance.

For purposes of the tax, the face amount of a prepaid card is treated as the amount paid for communications services. This amount is treated as paid when the card is transferred by any telecommunications carrier to any person who is not a carrier.

Value of service offered. In the case of any prepaid telephone card where a user is entitled to other than a specific dollar amount, such as a "unit card" or a "minute card," the face amount is to be determined under regulations issued by the IRS. The Conference Committee Report indicates that the tax applicable to such cards be based on the retail value of the telephone service offered to the consumer. The Conference Committee Report notes that the Federal Communications Commission generally requires telecommunications carriers to file a tariff listing the prices of their various service offerings including the price of units or minutes offered via prepaid telephone cards. In this case, the excise tax will apply to the number of units or minutes multiplied by the tariffed price of the units or minutes at the time the prepaid telephone card is sold by a telecommunications carrier to a person who is not a telecommunications carrier. Although the Conference Committee Report acknowledges that this tariffed value may not in all cases correspond to the over-the-counter price that the final customer may pay to the card, the tariffed price is the best way to achieve neutral treatment of "dollar cards" and "unit" or "minute cards." The Conference Report indicates that, if a prepaid card does not have an underlying tariff, tarrifs for comparable services should be applied.

The Conference Committee Report states that in the case where a communications service provider requires certain customers to prepay for their services as assurance that payment is made by the customer for services to be provided, these provisions will not apply if the customer is entitled to a full cash refund for the value of any unused service. These payments are to be considered deposits.

Effective date. The provision applies to amounts paid in calendar months beginning more than 60 days after August 5, 1997 (October 5, 1997).

TAX ON VACCINES

Uniform Tax Rate Structure

¶ 1255

Background

A manufacturer's excise tax is imposed on the sale of certain commonly prescribed vaccines in order to provide funding for the Vaccine Injury Compensation Trust Fund. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, diphtheria, pertussis, and tetanus (DPT) was taxed at a rate of $4.56 per dose; diphtheria and tetanus (DT) was taxed at $.06 per dose; measles, mumps, and rubella (MMR) was taxed at $4.44 per dose; and polio vaccine was taxed at $0.29 per dose. Generally, if the vaccine fell within more than one of the above-listed categories, the amount of tax imposed was the sum of the tax imposed for each listed vaccine.

Simplification of vaccine tax.—In order to simplify the vaccine tax, a new single tax rate of $0.75 per dose is imposed on any listed vaccine component. Vaccines containing more than one component are taxed at a rate of $0.75 multiplied by the number of components. Thus, for example, the DPT (diphtheria, pertussis and tetanus) is taxed at a rate of $2.25 ($3 \times 0.75$) per dose.

In addition, three new vaccines are added to the list of taxable vaccines as a result of the Centers for Disease Control's recommendation that these vaccines be widely administered to children in the U.S. The new taxable vaccines include HIB (haemophilus influenza type B), Hepatitis B, and any vaccine against chicken pox. These newly listed vaccines are also subject to the 0.75 per dose excise tax.

Effective date. The new rate structure goes into effect for vaccine sales beginning after August 5, 1997. According to the Conference Committee Report, no floor stocks tax is to be collected, or floor stock refunds permitted, for vaccines held on the effective date. For purposes of determining a claim for a refund or credit filed before January 1, 1999, relating to vaccines that were destroyed or returned to the manufacturer after August 5, 1997, the credit or refund shall is on $0.75 per dose tax rate.

CIGARETTE TAX

Rate Increases

¶ 1257

Background

Excise taxes imposed on tobacco products include a $12 per thousand tax on small cigarettes ($25.20 per thousand large cigarettes); a $1.125 per thousand tax on small cigars (up to $30 per 1,000 large cigars); a $0.0075 per 50 papers tax on cigarette papers; a $0.15 per 50 tubes tax on cigarette tubes; a $0.12 per pound tax on chewing tobacco; a $0.36 per pound tax on snuff; and a $0.675 per pound tax on pipe tobacco. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, there was no excise tax imposed on tobacco that could be sold to consumers for making cigarettes.

Excise tax on tobacco products increased.—The Act increases the excise taxes imposed on tobacco products as follows: a $19.50 per thousand tax on small cigarettes ($17 per thousand on cigarettes removed during 2000 or 2001); a $40.95 per thousand tax on large cigarettes ($35.70 per thousand on cigarettes removed during 2000 or 2001); a $1.828 per thousand tax on small cigars ($1.594 per thousand on cigars removed during 2000 or 2001); a tax equal to 20.719 percent of the price sold on large cigars (18.063 percent on cigars removed during 2000 or 2001) but not more than $48.75 per thousand ($42.50 per thousand on cigars removed during 2000 or 2001); a 1.22 cents per 50 papers tax on cigarette papers (1.06 cents on cigarette papers removed during 2000 or 2001); a 2.44 cents per 50 tubes tax on cigarette tubes (2.13 cents on cigarette tubes removed during 2000 or 2001); a 19.5 cents per pound tax on chewing tobacco (17 cents on chewing tobacco removed during 2000 or 2001); a 58.5 cents per pound tax on snuff (51 cents onsnuff removed during 2000 or 2001); and a $1.0969 per pound tax on pipe tobacco (95.67 cents on pipe tobacco removed during 2000 or 2001).

Excise tax added for roll-your-own-tobacco. In addition to the increase in the excise tax rate for existing categories of tobacco products, the excise tax is extended to roll-your-own tobacco. Roll-your-own tobacco is tobacco that, due to its appearance, type, packaging or labeling, is suitable and likely to be offered to, or purchased by, consumers for making cigarettes. The tax imposed on roll-your-own-tobacco, manufactured in, or imported into the United States is $1.0969 per pound (95.67 cents on roll-your-own tobacco removed during 2000 or 2001). A proportionate tax is imposed at the applicable rate on all fractional parts of a pound.

Credit against tobacco industry settlement agreement. An amount equal to the increase in excise taxes for cigarettes, smokeless tobacco and roll-your-own tobacco will be credited against total settlement payments made by parties under future federal legislation implementing the proposed tobacco industry settlement agreement of June 20, 1997.

Compliance provisions for tobacco products headed for export. The exemption from the tobacco tax that applies to exported tobacco products and cigarette papers and tubes will apply only to articles marketed for export. The products or papers must be marked, labeled or bear notices, in accordance with regulations prescribed by Secretary of the Treasury.

Civil penalty for exported products. Civil penalties are imposed to persons who sell, reland, or receive within U.S. jurisdiction tobacco products or cigarette papers or tubes that are labeled or shipped for exportation. The civil penalty also applies to persons who sell or receive relanded tobacco products or cigarette papers and tubes, and persons who aid or abet in the selling, relanding or receiving of such products, papers and tubes. The penalty is imposed unless the exemption from the tobacco tax for exported products papers and tubes applies under Code Sec. 5704.

The penalty imposed is equal to the greater of $1,000 or five times the amount of the tax otherwise imposed. All products and papers relanded within U.S. jurisdiction, as well as all vessels, vehicles, and aircraft used in the relanding (or in removing the products, papers, and tubes from the place of relanding) are forfeited to the United States. The penalty is in addition to other penalties under Title 26.

Civil penalties also apply if restrictions imposed on the importation of previously exported tobacco products are violated. Tobacco products and cigarette papers and tubes that were previously exported from the United States may only be imported or brought into the United States as provided for in Code Sec. 5704(d). References to exportation in Code Sec. 5704(d), Code Sec. 5761 and other provisions that the Secretary of the Treasury provides for in regulations include a reference to shipment to the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

Miscellaneous provisions. The Act provides the following miscellaneous provisions affecting the tobacco excise tax:

(1) Importers as well as manufacturers are generally required to be qualified in order to engage in the tobacco products business (i.e., obtain a permit, etc.).

(2) The tax on cigarette papers under Code Sec. 5701(c) applies regardless of the number of papers in the book.

(3) The term "internal revenue bond", as used in the definition of removal under Code Sec. 5701(c), refers to internal revenue bond under Code Sec. 5704(c).

(4) The Secretary of the Treasury may reject a permit to commence business as a manufacturer or importer of tobacco products or as an export warehouse proprietor if minimum manufacturing activity requirements, as prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, are not carried out on the business premises.

Effective date. The provisions apply to articles removed after December 31, 1999. For this purpose, the term "removed," is defined under Code Sec. 5702(k), as amended by the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. The provision coordinating the increase in tobacco excise taxes with the proposed tobacco industry settlement agreement is effective immediately after the applicable excise tax increases become effective.

Special transitional rule for certain manufacturers and importers. A special transitional rule applies to persons that are engaged in business as a manufacturer of roll-your-own tobacco or as an importer of tobacco products or cigarette papers or tubes on August 5, 1997. If an application to engage in business under subchapter B of Chapter 52 is submitted before January 1, 2000, the applicants may continue to engage in business pending final action on the application. All provisions of Chapter 52 apply to the applicant as if the applicant were a holder of a permit under Chapter 52 to engage in business.

Floor Stocks Taxes

¶ 1258

Floor stocks taxes imposed.—Floor stocks taxes are imposed in connection with the increase in the excise tax rate for tobacco products and cigarette papers and tubes manufactured in or imported into the United States (see ¶ 1257). Products, papers and tubes that are removed before tax increase date and held forsale, will be taxed in an amount that is the difference between the tax determined under the old tax rate and the tax determined under the new tax rate. The tax increase date means January 1, 2000, and January 1, 2002. A credit of $500 is allowed against the amount of floor stocks taxes imposed. The credit may not exceed the amount of floor stocks taxes on any tax increase date.

The person holding cigarettes on any tax increase date is liable for the tax. The tax is to be paid on or before April 1 following any tax increase date, in a manner prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The Secretary of the Treasury has the authority to provide for an exemption from floor stocks taxes in the case of cigarettes held in vending machines.

Act Sec. 9302(j) of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. Law at ¶ 5572. Committee Report at ¶ 20,085.

ARROWS

Component Parts of Arrows

¶ 1270

Background

Under prior law, an excise tax of 11 percent of the selling price of a completed arrow was imposed on the sale by the manufacturer, producer, or importer of an arrow that was 18 inches or more in length or was suitable for use with a taxable bow.

Excise tax on component parts of certain arrows.—An excise tax of 12.4 percent of the selling price of a completed arrow is imposed on the sale of the four component parts of an arrow (i.e., shaft, point, nock and vane) by the manufacturer, producer, or importer. The tax applies to the component parts used in the manufacture of an arrow that, after its assembly, is 18 inches or more in length or is suitable for use with a taxable bow (i.e., bows having a draw weight of 10 pounds or more).

Effective date. The provision is effective for arrow components sold after September 30, 1997.

DISTILLED SPIRITS

Returns to Distilled Spirits Plant

¶ 1271

Background

When domestic distilled spirits are returned to bonded premises, the excise taxes that had been paid are credited or refunded. However, the tax imposed on imported bottled spirits when they were withdrawn from customs custody was not credited or refunded when the spirits were returned to bonded premises.

Credit or refund for imported spirits available.—In order to alleviate the disparity in the treatment of domestic and imported spirits, refunds or credits of excise taxes on imported distilled spirits are now available for distilled spirits that are returned to distilled spirits plants.

Effective date. The provision takes effect on the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins at least 180 days after August 5, 1997 (April 1, 1998).

Act Sec. 1411(a), amending Code Sec. 5008(c)(1); Act Sec. 1411(b). Law at ¶ 5541. Committee Report at ¶ 12,755.

Export Bonds

¶ 1272

Background

A bond is required of an exporter who withdraws distilled spirits from a bonded warehouse for export or transportation to a customs bonded warehouse without payment of excise tax. The bond could be canceled "on the submission of such evidence, records, and certification indicating exportation" as the IRS may have prescribed by regulations.

Background

Requirements for certification of export bonds relaxed.—Bonds that are required by an exporter to withdraw distilled spirits from warehouses without payment of excise tax may now be canceled if there is proof of exportation, rather than upon submission of evidence of the spirit's exportation. The IRS may issue regulations stipulating such proof.

Effective date. The provision takes effect on the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins at least 180 days after August 5, 1997 (April 1, 1998).

Act Sec. 1412(a), amending Code Sec. 5175(c); Act Sec. 1412(b). Law at ¶ 5555. Committee Report at ¶ 12,760.

Maintenance of Records on Premises

¶ 1273

Background

Under prior law, records and reports relating to the production, storage, denaturation, and processing activities of distilled spirits were required to be kept on the premises where the operations covered by the records and reports were carried on.

Records may be kept off the premises.—Records and reports that are required of proprietors of distilled spirits plants may be maintained at locations other than on the plant premises.

Effective date. The provision is effective on the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins at least 180 days after August 5, 1997 (April 1, 1998).

Act Sec. 1413(a), amending Code Sec. 5207(c); Act Sec. 1413(b). Law at ¶ 5557. Committee Report at ¶ 12,765.

Fermented Material

¶ 1274

Background

Prior to the enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, a distilled spirits plant could only receive beer, which would be used in the production of spirits, if the beer was produced on contiguous brewery premises.

Transfers from a brewery may be received at a distilled spirits plant.—Beer may now be brought from any brewery for use in production of spirits. In addition, the beer is exempt from excise tax. This will alleviate disparities in the treatment of different types of alcoholic beverages in connection with federal excise taxes.

Effective date. The provision takes effect on the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins at least 180 days after August 5, 1997 (April 1, 1998).

Wholesale Dealers and Sign Requirement

¶ 1275

Background

A wholesale liquor dealer was required to post a sign that identified the business place as a wholesale liquor establishment. Failure to post the sign would subject the dealer to a penalty.

Requirement to post sign repealed.—Wholesale liquor dealers are no longer required to post a sign identifying their businesses as such. Thus, the penalty for failure to post a sign is no longer applicable.

Effective date. The rules relating to required sign posting by wholesalers are effective on August 5, 1997.

Hard Cider

¶ 1276

Background

Alcoholic beverages are currently subject to an excise tax, which differs depending upon how the product is classified. Wine is taxed at a rate of $1.07 per gallon, unless the winery is permitted to claim a credit against the tax of 90 cents per gallon on the first 100,000 gallons produced annually. Under prior law, hard cider, which is apple cider containing alcohol, was taxed as if it were wine.

Rate of alcohol excise tax reduced on certain hard ciders.—The excise tax rate is reduced from $1.07 to 22.6 cents per gallon for apple cider that has an alcohol content not in excess of seven percent. This reduction comports to the belief that cider is in more direct competition with beer as opposed to wine. Although cider is now taxed similarly to beer, the classification of cider is not changed, however, and is still considered wine.

There is no reduction in the amount of tax imposed on those parties who produce less than 100,000 gallons of cider a year. These producers are still allowed the existing credit permitted for small wineries, but at the rate of 5.6 cents per gallon instead of the existing 90 cents per gallon permitted for wine. Thus, the effective after credit tax rate on small producers will remain at 17 cents per gallon (22.6 cents minus 5.6 cents). Production of cider is still taken into account and aggregated with other beverages when determining whether a producer qualifies for a tax credit for small producers.

Effective date. This provision is effective on October 1, 1997.

Collection Point Study

¶ 1277

Background

Currently, an excise tax of $13.50 per proof gallon is levied on distilled spirits. The timing of this tax depends on whether or not the spirits are bottled domestically. The tax is imposed for both domestically produced spirits and those produced abroad and imported to the United States for domestic bottling at the time the beverages leave the distillery. This tax is imposed regardless of when the ultimate sale occurs, if at all. Bottled spirits imported into the United States are taxed when they are removed from the first customs bonded warehouse in which they were kept upon delivery to the United States.

Alcohol that is derived from fruit is allowed a tax credit which effectively reduces the tax liability at the time of payment, which would differ depending on where the spirits were bottled.

Study feasibility of moving collection point for distilled spirits excise tax.—The point in the production, distribution and purchase cycle at which the distilled spirits excise tax is imposed is being studied by the Treasury Department. Specifically, the option of imposing the tax at the time when the spirits are removed from the registered wholesale warehouse is to be considered, giving special attention to administrative issues such as effects on tax compliance by the taxpayer.

The study is also to determine the number of taxpayers who will be affected by any future change in the timing of this tax collection, as well as any changes in financial responsibilities required. Additionally, the issues concerning separation of nontax-paid distilled spirits from those eligible for the tax and Treasury Department budgetary and staffing capabilities need to be explored.

Effective date. This study is to be completed and transmitted to the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Ways and Means no later than March 31, 1998.

WINE

Wine Returned to Bond

¶ 1280

Background

A credit or refund of the excise tax on domestic wine was available only if the wine returned to bond was unmerchantable. Further, the returned wine must then be treated as wine in bond on the premises of a bonded wine seller.

Credit or refund available for merchantable wine.—A credit or refund is now available for all domestic wine returned to bond, whether or not the wine is unmerchantable.

Effective date. The provision is effective on the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins at least 180 days after August 5, 1997 (April 1, 1998).

Act Sec. 1416(a), amending Code Sec. 5044(a); Act Sec. 1416(b), amending Code Secs. 5044 and 5361; Act Sec. 1416(c). Law at ¶ 5545 and 5561. Committee Report at ¶ 12,780.

Sugar Content

¶ 1281

Background

Only wines made exclusively from loganberries, currants, or gooseberries may use up to 60 percent (by volume) sugar to correct natural deficiencies. Other wines are generally subject to a 35-percent limitation. Wines made with sugar in excess of the applicable limitation must be labeled "substandard."

Sugar limits increased on certain wines.—In order to correct high acid content in certain wines, up to 60 percent (by volume) sugar may be used in any wine made from juice, such as cranberry or plum juice. The juice must have an acid content of 20 or more parts per thousand before any correction of the fruit or berry.

Effective date. The above provision takes effect on the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins 180 days after August 5, 1997 (April 1, 1998).

Act Sec. 1417(a), amending Code Sec. 5384(b)(2)(D); Act Sec. 1417(b). Law at ¶ 5565. Committee Report at ¶ 12,785.

Wine Imported in Bulk

¶ 1282

Background

Imported wine that was removed from customs custody was subject to tax upon its removal.

Transfer of wine imported in bulk.—Wine that is imported in bulk may be withdrawn from customs custody and transferred to a bonded wine cellar without payment of tax on the wine. The winery that receives the wine is liable for the tax imposed on the withdrawn wine from customs custody, and the wine importer is relieved of the tax liability.

Effective date. The above provision takes effect on the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins at least 180 days after August 5, 1997 (April 1, 1998).

Act Sec. 1422(a), adding Code Sec. 5418; Act Sec. 1422(c). Law at ¶ 5563. Committee Report at ¶ 12,825.

Wine Labels

¶ 1283

Background

Before the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, there were regulations providing that certain semi-generic terms such as "Chablis" or "Burgundy" could be used on wine labels to reflect geographic origin. However, any deviations from industry standards and accepted norms dealing with either the source of the grapes or the process used to make the wine had to be clearly indicated on the label.

Also, under prior law, the Secretary of the Treasury had the discretion to eliminate currently listed semi-generic names.

Codify treasury department regulations regulating wine labels.—The regulations permitting the use of certain terms are codified in an attempt to clarify the current status of the law concerning the labelling of wine. These terms, which reflect the geographic origin and the process by which the wine is produced, are allowed provided that any deviation from industry norms for the term is clearly marked on the label.

> Example. Some of the terms that are included in the definition of a semi-generic term include: Angelica, Burgundy, Claret, Chablis, Chianti, Malaga, Marsala, Madiera, Moselle, Port, Rhine Wine or Hock, Sauterne, Haut Sauterne, and Tokay.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

BEER

Withdrawal for Destruction

¶ 1285

Background

Exemption from excise tax, for beer withdrawn from a brewery, was only allowed when beer was removed for export, when unfit for beverage use, for laboratory analysis, for research, development or testing, for personal or family use of the brewer, or as supplies for certain vessels and aircraft.

Beer withdrawn for destruction.—Beer that is removed from a brewery for destruction is exempted from tax, subject to Treasury regulations.

Effective date. The exemption takes effect on the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins at least 180 days after August 5, 1997 (April 1, 1998).

Act Sec. 1419(a), adding Code Sec. 5053(h); Act Sec. 1419(b). Law at ¶ 5547. Committee Report at ¶ 12,795.

Use at Embassies

¶ 1286

Background

Under prior law, an exemption from excise tax only applied to imported beer, withdrawn from customs bonded warehouses, used for the family and official use of representatives of foreign governments or public international organizations.

Exemption available for beer withdrawn for embassy use.—Domestically produced beer, as well as imported beer, may now be withdrawn from a custom bonded warehouse free of excise tax. In addition, beer may be withdrawn from a brewery, without payment of the excise tax, for transfer to any customs bonded warehouse. The beer must be consumed in the United States by, and used for the family or official use of, representatives of foreign countries or public international organizations.

Effective date. The provision is effective on the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins at least 180 days after August 5, 1997 (April 1, 1998).

Drawback on Exported Beer

¶ 1287

Background

A domestic producer of beer for export was allowed a drawback on the tax paid on the beer on the "submission of such evidence, records and certificates indicating exportation" as required by regulations.

Drawback on exported beer without records.—A domestic producer of exported beer may recover the tax ("drawback") paid on the beer if there is proof of exportation, as the IRS may require by regulations. This is a relaxation of the certification requirement to recover the tax.

Effective date. The above provision is effective on the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins at least 180 days after August 5, 1997 (April 1, 1998).

Imports Transferred to Brewery

¶ 1288

Background

Imported beer that was removed from customs custody was subject to tax upon its removal.

Transfer of beer imported in bulk.—Beer that is imported in bulk may be withdrawn from customs custody and transferred to a brewery without payment of tax on the beer. The brewer that receives the beer is liable for the tax imposed on the withdrawn beer from customs custody, and the beer importer is relieved of the tax liability.

Effective date. The provision is effective on the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins at least 180 days after August 5, 1997 (April 1, 1998).

OTHER EXCISE TAX

Registration Requirements for Tax-Free Sales

¶ 1290

Background

Manufacturers and retailers ordinarily must pay excise tax on sales. Certain sales are exempt from these excise taxes if the seller, the purchaser, and any second purchaser are registered with the IRS. Prior to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the IRS could waive the registration requirement for the purchaser and second purchaser only in certain cases.

Authority for IRS to grant exemptions from excise tax registration requirements.—The IRS may now issue regulations waiving in all instances the requirement that purchasers and second purchasers register in order for a sale described in Code Sec. 4221 to be exempt from excise taxes imposed on manufacturers and retailers. The new rule does not change the present-law requirement that sellers register.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Repeal of Deadwood

¶ 1291

Background

Under prior law, the Code had provisions giving temporary reductions for the tax on piggyback trailers if they were sold before July 18, 1985, and for the removal of hard minerals from a deep seabed before June 28, 1990. These provisions have been repealed as they are out of date and unneeded.

In addition, an excise tax is imposed on the sale or use of ozone-depleting chemicals on the manufacturer and the importer of the chemicals. In 1996, the base tax amount was $5.80 per pound. It will be increased by 45 cents every year after 1995.

Repeal of excess deadwood provisions.—The following provisions are removed from the Internal Revenue Code as they are no longer relevant and are "deadwood":

> Code Sec. 4051(d) (relating to temporary reductions in tax for piggy-back trailers sold before July 18, 1985);
> Subchapter F of chapter 36 (relating to the taxation of hard mineral removal from deep seabeds before June 28, 1990).

Code Sec. 4681(b)(1)(B) is amended to eliminate references to tax rates applicable to ozone-depleting chemicals sold or used before 1996.

Code Sec. 4682(g) is amended to eliminate references to expired provisions relating to the taxation of the treatment of methyl chloroform, halons, and chemicals used in rigid foam insulation.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1432(a), amending Code Sec. 4051; Act Sec. 1432(b), repealing Code Secs. 4495, 4496, 4497, and 4498; Act Sec. 1432(c), repealing Code Sec. 4681(b)(1)(B) and (C), adding new Code Sec. 4681(b)(1)(B), and amendingCode Sec. 4682(g). ¶ 1292

Background

The Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) repealed a provision allowing purchasers of diesel-powered automobiles and light trucks to claim an advance refund on the amount of diesel fuel tax they would be expected to pay over the life of the vehicle. However, several highway trust fund provisions relating to the diesel fuel tax credit were inadvertently left in the Internal Revenue Code.

Advance refunds of diesel fuel tax.—The Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) repealed Code Sec. 6427(g), which allowed purchasers of diesel-powered automobiles and light trucks to claim an advance refund on the amount of diesel fuel tax they would be expected to pay over the life of the vehicle. However, several highway trust fund provisions relating to the diesel fuel tax credit were inadvertently left in the Internal Revenue Code. These provisions, in Code Sec. 9503(c)(2)(A) and (e)(5) have been stricken.

Effective date. The provision is effective for vehicles purchased after August 20, 1997.

¶ 1294

Background

Code Sec. 15 provides rules for determining the amount of tax due when a rate change takes effect on other than the first day of a taxpayer's tax year. In such case, all taxpayers must follow the statutory procedure for tax proration outlined in Code Sec. 15. The proration rules of Code Sec. 15 apply unless the law that makes the rate change specifically provides that the rate change is not to be considered a change in rate for Code Sec. 15 purposes.

Tax proration under Code Sec. 15 not required.—The Act specifically provides no amendments made by the Act are to be treated as a change of tax rate for purposes of Code Sec. 15. Thus, taxpayers will not have to prorate their income tax liability should the Act's amendments operate to change their rate of tax during the tax year.

Effective date. This provision is effective on August 5, 1997.

Act Sec. 1(c). Law at ¶ 7001.

CODE SECTIONS ADDED, AMENDED OR REPEALED BY THE TAXPAYER RELIEF ACT OF 1997, THE BALANCED BUDGET ACT OF 1997, AND THE TAXPAYER BROWSING PROTECTION ACT OF 1997.

The law as amended by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 (P.L. 105-34), the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (P.L. 105-33), and the Taxpayer Browsing Protection Act of 1997 (P.L. 105-35) is shown below. For your convenience, all three laws are presented in one consolidated section. Amendments from the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 have no headings. Amendments from the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 are listed under the heading "Balanced Budget Act." Amendments from the Taxpayer Browsing Protection Act of 1997 are listed under the heading "Taxpayer Browsing Act."

[¶ 5001] CODE SEC. 1. TAX IMPOSED.

(h) Maximum Capital Gains Rate.—

(1) In general.—If a taxpayer has a net capital gain for any taxable year, the tax imposed by this section for such taxable year shall not exceed the sum of—

(A) a tax computed at the rates and in the same manner as if this subsection had not been enacted on the greater of—

(i) taxable income reduced by the net capital gain, or

(ii) the lesser of—

(I) the amount of taxable income taxed at a rate below 28 percent, or

(II) taxable income reduced by the adjusted net capital gain, plus

(B) 25 percent of the excess (if any) of—

(i) the unrecaptured section 1250 gain (or, if less, the net capital gain), over

(ii) the excess (if any) of—

(I) the sum of the amount on which tax is determined under subparagraph (A) plus the net capital gain, over

(II) taxable income, plus

(C) 28 percent of the amount of taxable income in excess of the sum of—

(i) the adjusted net capital gain, plus

(ii) the sum of the amounts on which tax is determined under subparagraphs (A) and (B), plus

(D) 10 percent of so much of the taxpayer's adjusted net capital gain (or, if less, taxable income) as does not exceed the excess (if any) of—

(i) the amount of taxable income which would (without regard to this paragraph) be taxed at a rate below 28 percent, over

(ii) the taxable income reduced by the adjusted net capital gain, plus

(E) 20 percent of the taxpayer's adjusted net capital gain (or, if less, taxable income) in excess of the amount on which a tax is determined under subparagraph (D).

(2) Reduced capital gain rates for qualified 5-year gain.—

(A) Reduction in 10-percent rate.—In the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 2000, the rate under paragraph (1)(D) shall be 8 percent with respect to so much of the amount to which the 10-percent rate would otherwise apply as does not exceed qualified 5-year gain, and 10 percent with respect to the remainder of such amount.

(B) Reduction in 20-percent rate.—The rate under paragraph (1)(E) shall be 18 percent with respect to so much of the amount to which the 20-percent rate would otherwise apply as does not exceed the lesser of—

(i) the excess of qualified 5-year gain over the amount of such gain taken into account under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, or

(ii) the amount of qualified 5-year gain (determined by taking into account only property the holding period for which begins after December 31, 2000), and 20 percent with respect to the remainder of such amount. For purposes of determining under the preceding sentence whether the holding period of property begins after December 31, 2000, the holding period of property acquired pursuant to the exercise of an option (or other right or obligation to acquire property) shall include the period such option (or other right or obligation) was held.

(3) NET CAPITAL GAIN TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT AS INVESTMENT INCOME.—For purposes of this subsection, the net capital gain for any taxable year shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the amount which the taxpayer takes into account as investment income under section 163(d)(4)(B)(iii).

(4) ADJUSTED NET CAPITAL GAIN.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "adjusted net capital gain" means net capital gain determined without regard to—

(A) collectibles gain,

(B) unrecaptured section 1250 gain,

(C) section 1202 gain, and

(D) mid-term gain.

(5) COLLECTIBLES GAIN.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "collectibles gain" means gain from the sale or exchange of a collectible (as defined in section 408(m) without regard to paragraph (3) thereof) which is a capital asset held for more than 1 year but only to the extent such gain is taken into account in computing gross income.

(B) PARTNERSHIPS, ETC.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), any gain from the sale of an interest in a partnership, S corporation, or trust which is attributable to unrealized appreciation in the value of collectibles shall be treated as gain from the sale or exchange of a collectible. Rules similar to the rules of section 751 shall apply for purposes of the preceding sentence.

(6) UNRECAPTURED SECTION 1250 GAIN.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "unrecaptured section 1250 gain" means the amount of long-term capital gain which would be treated as ordinary income if—

(i) section 1250(b)(1) included all depreciation and the applicable percentage under section 1250(a) were 100 percent, and

(ii) in the case of gain properly taken into account after July 28, 1997, only gain from section 1250 property held for more than 18 months were taken into account.

(B) LIMITATION WITH RESPECT TO SECTION 1231 PROPERTY.—The amount of unrecaptured section 1250 gain from sales, exchanges, and conversions described in section 1231(a)(3)(A) for any taxable year shall not exceed the excess of the net section 1231 gain (as defined in section 1231(c)(3)) for such year over the amount treated as ordinary income under section 1231(c)(1) for such year.

(C) PRE-MAY 7, 1997, GAIN.—In the case of a taxable year which includes May 7, 1997, subparagraph (A) shall be applied by taking into account only the gain properly taken into account for the portion of the taxable year after May 6, 1997.

(7) SECTION 1202 GAIN.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "section 1202 gain" means an amount equal to the gain excluded from gross income under section 1202(a).

(8) MID-TERM GAIN.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "mid-term gain" means the amount which would be adjusted net capital gain for the taxable year if—

(A) adjusted net capital gain were determined by taking into account only the gain or loss properly taken into account after July 28, 1997, from property held for more than 1 year but not more than 18 months, and

(B) paragraph (3) and section 1212 did not apply.

(9) QUALIFIED 5-YEAR GAIN.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "qualified 5-year gain" means the amount of long-term capital gain which would be computed for the taxable year if only gains from the sale or exchange of property held by the taxpayer for more than 5 years were taken into account. The determination under the preceding sentence shall be made without regard to collectibles gain, unrecaptured section 1250 gain (determined without regard to subparagraph (B) of paragraph (6)), section 1202 gain, or mid-term gain.

(10) PRE-EFFECTIVE DATE GAIN.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a taxable year which includes May 7, 1997, gains and losses properly taken into account for the portion of the taxable year before May 7, 1997, shall be taken into account in determining mid-term gain as if such gains and losses were described in paragraph (8)(A).

(B) SPECIAL RULES FOR PASS-THRU ENTITIES.—In applying subparagraph (A) with respect to any pass-thru entity, the determination of when gains and loss are properly taken into account shall be made at the entity level.

(C) PASS-THRU ENTITY DEFINED.—For purposes of subparagraph (B), the term "pass-thru entity" means—

(i) a regulated investment company,

(ii) a real estate investment trust,

(iii) an S corporation,

(iv) a partnership,

(v) an estate or trust, and

(vi) a common trust fund.

(11) TREATMENT OF PASS-THRU ENTITIES.—The Secretary may prescribe such regulations as are appropriate (including regulations requiring reporting) to apply this subsection in the case of sales and exchanges by pass-thru entities (as defined in paragraph (10)(C)) and of interests in such entities.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 311(a) amended Code Sec. 1(h) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 1(h) read as follows:

(h) MAXIMUM CAPITAL GAINS RATE.—If a taxpayer has a net capital gain for any taxable year, then the tax imposed by this section shall not exceed the sum of—

(1) a tax computed at the rates and in the same manner as if this subsection had not been enacted on the greater of—

(A) taxable income reduced by the amount of the net capital gain, or

(B) the amount of taxable income taxed at a rate below 28 percent, plus

(2) a tax of 28 percent of the amount of taxable income in excess of the amount determined under paragraph (1).

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the net capital gain for any taxable year shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the amount which the taxpayer elects to take into account as investment income for the taxable year under section 163(d)(4)(B)(iii).

The above amendment generally applies to tax years ending after May 6, 1997. For a special rule, see Act Sec. 311(e), below.

Act Sec. 311(e) provides:

(e) ELECTION TO RECOGNIZE GAIN ON ASSETS HELD ON JANUARY 1, 2001.—For purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986—

(1) IN GENERAL.—A taxpayer other than a corporation may elect to treat—

(A) any readily tradable stock (which is a capital asset) held by such taxpayer on January 1, 2001, and not sold before the next business day after such date, as having been sold on such next business day for an amount equal to its closing market price on such next business day (and as having been reacquired on such next business day for an amount equal to such closing market price), and

(B) any other capital asset or property used in the trade or business (as defined in section 1231(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) held by the taxpayer on January 1, 2001, as having been sold on such date for an amount equal to its fair market value on such date (and as having been reacquired on such date for an amount equal to such fair market value).

(2) TREATMENT OF GAIN OR LOSS.—

(A) Any gain resulting from an election under paragraph (1) shall be treated as received or accrued on the date the asset is treated as sold under paragraph (1) and shall be recognized notwithstanding any provision of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(B) Any loss resulting from an election under paragraph (1) shall not be allowed for any taxable year.

(3) ELECTION.—An election under paragraph (1) shall be made in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate may prescribe and shall specify the assets for which such election is made. Such an election, once made with respect to any asset, shall be irrevocable.

(4) READILY TRADABLE STOCK.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "readily tradable stock" means any stock which, as of January 1, 2001, is readily tradable on an established securities market or otherwise.

[¶ 5003] CODE SEC. 23. ADOPTION EXPENSES.

(a) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT.—

* * *

(2) YEAR CREDIT ALLOWED.—The credit under paragraph (1) with respect to any expense shall be allowed—

(A) in the case of any expense paid or incurred before the taxable year in which such adoption becomes final, for the taxable year following the taxable year during which such expense is paid or incurred, and

(B) in the case of an expense paid or incurred during or after the taxable year in which such adoption becomes final, for the taxable year in which such expense is paid or incurred.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1601(h)(2)(A) amended Code Sec. 23(a)(2) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 23(a)(2) read as follows:

(2) YEAR CREDIT ALLOWED.—The credit under paragraph (1) with respect to any expense shall be allowed—

(A) for the taxable year following the taxable year during which such expense is paid or incurred, or

(B) in the case of an expense which is paid or incurred during the taxable year in which the adoption becomes final, for such taxable year.

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 to which it relates [effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

(b) LIMITATIONS.—

(2) INCOME LIMITATION.—

* * *

(B) DETERMINATION OF ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), adjusted gross income shall be determined without regard to sections 911, 931, and 933.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 122. Committee Reports at ¶ 13,685.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1601(h)(2)(B) amended Code Sec. 23(b)(2)(B) by striking "determined—" and all that follows and inserting "determined without regard to sections 911, 931, and 933.". Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 23(b)(2)(B) read as follows:

(B) DETERMINATION OF ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), adjusted gross income shall be determined—

(i) without regard to sections 911, 931, and 933, and

(ii) after the application of sections 86, 135, 137, 219, and 469.

[¶ 5005] CODE SEC. 24. CHILD TAX CREDIT.

(a) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT.—There shall be allowed as a credit against the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year with respect to each qualifying child of the taxpayer an amount equal to $500 ($400 in the case of taxable years beginning in 1998).

(b) LIMITATION BASED ON ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amount of the credit allowable under subsection (a) shall be reduced (but not below zero) by $50 for each $1,000 (or fraction thereof) by which the taxpayer's modified adjusted gross income exceeds the threshold amount. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "modified adjusted gross income" means adjusted gross income increased by any amount excluded from gross income under section 911, 931, or 933.

(2) THRESHOLD AMOUNT.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term "threshold amount" means—

(A) $110,000 in the case of a joint return,

(B) $75,000 in the case of an individual who is not married, and

(C) $55,000 in the case of a married individual filing a separate return.

For purposes of this paragraph, marital status shall be determined under section 7703.

(c) QUALIFYING CHILD.—For purposes of this section—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualifying child" means any individual if—

(A) the taxpayer is allowed a deduction under section 151 with respect to such individual for the taxable year,

(B) such individual has not attained the age of 17 as of the close of the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins, and

(C) such individual bears a relationship to the taxpayer described in section 32(c)(3)(B).

(2) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN NONCITIZENS.—The term "qualifying child" shall not include any individual who would not be a dependent if the first sentence of section 152(b)(3) were applied without regard to all that follows "resident of the United States".

(d) ADDITIONAL CREDIT FOR FAMILIES WITH 3 OR MORE CHILDREN.—

(1) In general.—In the case of a taxpayer with 3 or more qualifying children for any taxable year, the amount of the credit allowed under this section shall be equal to the greater of—

(A) the amount of the credit allowed under this section (without regard to this subsection and after application of the limitation under section 26), or

(B) the alternative credit amount determined under paragraph (2).

(2) Alternative credit amount.—For purposes of this subsection, the alternative credit amount is the amount of the credit which would be allowed under this section if the limitation under paragraph (3) were applied in lieu of the limitation under section 26.

(3) Limitation.—The limitation under this paragraph for any taxable year is the limitation under section 26 (without regard to this subsection)—

(A) increased by the taxpayer's social security taxes for such taxable year, and

(B) reduced by the sum of—

(i) the credits allowed under this part other than under subpart C or this section, and

(ii) the credit allowed under section 32 without regard to subsection (m) thereof.

(4) Unused credit to be refundable.—If the amount of the credit under paragraph (1)(B) exceeds the amount of the credit under paragraph (1)(A), such excess shall be treated as a credit to which subpart C applies. The rule of section 32(h) shall apply to such excess.

(5) Social security taxes.—For purposes of paragraph (3)—

(A) In general.—The term "social security taxes" means, with respect to any taxpayer for any taxable year—

(i) the amount of the taxes imposed by sections 3101 and 3201(a) on amounts received by the taxpayer during the calendar year in which the taxable year begins,

(ii) 50 percent of the taxes imposed by section 1401 on the self-employment income of the taxpayer for the taxable year, and

(iii) 50 percent of the taxes imposed by section 3211(a)(1) on amounts received by the taxpayer during the calendar year in which the taxable year begins.

(B) Coordination with special refund of social security taxes.—The term "social security taxes" shall not include any taxes to the extent the taxpayer is entitled to a special refund of such taxes under section 6413(c).

(C) Special rule.—Any amounts paid pursuant to an agreement under section 3121(l) (relating to agreements entered into by American employers with respect to foreign affiliates) which are equivalent to the taxes referred to in subparagraph (A)(i) shall be treated as taxes referred to in such subparagraph.

(e) Identification Requirement.—No credit shall be allowed under this section to a taxpayer with respect to any qualifying child unless the taxpayer includes the name and taxpayer identification number of such qualifying child on the return of tax for the taxable year.

(f) Taxable Year Must Be Full Taxable Year.—Except in the case of a taxable year closed by reason of the death of the taxpayer, no credit shall be allowable under this section in the case of a taxable year covering a period of less than 12 months.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 119. Committee Reports at ¶ 10,115.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 101(a) amended subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 by inserting after Code Sec. 23 a new Code Sec. 24 to read as above.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

[¶ 5007] CODE SEC. 25. INTEREST ON CERTAIN HOME MORTGAGES.

(e) Special Rules and Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

* * *

(7) Principal residence.—The term "principal residence" has the same meaning as when used in section 121.

* * *

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 129. Committee Reports at ¶ 10,315.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 312(d)(1) amended Code Sec. 25(e)(7) by striking "section 1034" and inserting "section 121".

The above amendment applies to sales and exchanges after May 6, 1997.

[¶ 5009] CODE SEC. 25A. HOPE AND LIFETIME LEARNING CREDITS.

(a) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT.—In the case of an individual, there shall be allowed as a credit against the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year the amount equal to the sum of—

(1) the Hope Scholarship Credit, plus

(2) the Lifetime Learning Credit.

(b) HOPE SCHOLARSHIP CREDIT.—

(1) PER STUDENT CREDIT.—In the case of any eligible student for whom an election is in effect under this section for any taxable year, the Hope Scholarship Credit is an amount equal to the sum of—

(A) 100 percent of so much of the qualified tuition and related expenses paid by the taxpayer during the taxable year (for education furnished to the eligible student during any academic period beginning in such taxable year) as does not exceed $1,000, plus

(B) 50 percent of such expenses so paid as exceeds $1,000 but does not exceed the applicable limit.

(2) LIMITATIONS APPLICABLE TO HOPE SCHOLARSHIP CREDIT.—

(A) CREDIT ALLOWED ONLY FOR 2 TAXABLE YEARS.—An election to have this section apply with respect to any eligible student for purposes of the Hope Scholarship Credit under subsection (a)(1) may not be made for any taxable year if such an election (by the taxpayer or any other individual) is in effect with respect to such student for any 2 prior taxable years.

(B) CREDIT ALLOWED FOR YEAR ONLY IF INDIVIDUAL IS AT LEAST 1/2 TIME STUDENT FOR PORTION OF YEAR.—The Hope Scholarship Credit under subsection (a)(1) shall not be allowed for a taxable year with respect to the qualified tuition and related expenses of an individual unless such individual is an eligible student for at least one academic period which begins during such year.

(C) CREDIT ALLOWED ONLY FOR FIRST 2 YEARS OF POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION.—The Hope Scholarship Credit under subsection (a)(1) shall not be allowed for a taxable year with respect to the qualified tuition and related expenses of an eligible student if the student has completed (before the beginning of such taxable year) the first 2 years of postsecondary education at an eligible educational institution.

(D) DENIAL OF CREDIT IF STUDENT CONVICTED OF A FELONY DRUG OFFENSE.—The Hope Scholarship Credit under subsection (a)(1) shall not be allowed for qualified tuition and related expenses for the enrollment or attendance of a student for any academic period if such student has been convicted of a Federal or State felony offense consisting of the possession or distribution of a controlled substance before the end of the taxable year with or within which such period ends.

(3) ELIGIBLE STUDENT.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "eligible student" means, with respect to any academic period, a student who—

(A) meets the requirements of section 484(a)(1) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1091(a)(1)), as in effect on the date of the enactment of this section, and

(B) is carrying at least ½ the normal full-time work load for the course of study the student is pursuing.

(4) APPLICABLE LIMIT.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(B), the applicable limit for any taxable year is an amount equal to 2 times the dollar amount in effect under paragraph (1)(A) for such taxable year.

(c) LIFETIME LEARNING CREDIT.—

(1) PER TAXPAYER CREDIT.—The Lifetime Learning Credit for any taxpayer for any taxable year is an amount equal to 20 percent of so much of the qualified tuition and related expenses paid by the taxpayer during the taxable year (for education furnished during any academic period beginning in such taxable year) as does not exceed $10,000 ($5,000 in the case of taxable years beginning before January 1, 2003).

(2) SPECIAL RULES FOR DETERMINING EXPENSES.—

(A) COORDINATION WITH HOPE SCHOLARSHIP.—The qualified tuition and related expenses with respect to an individual who is an eligible student for whom a Hope Scholarship Credit under subsection (a)(1) is allowed for the taxable year shall not be taken into account under this subsection.

(B) Expenses eligible for lifetime learning credit.—For purposes of paragraph (1), qualified tuition and related expenses shall include expenses described in subsection (f)(1) with respect to any course of instruction at an eligible educational institution to acquire or improve job skills of the individual.

(d) Limitation Based on Modified Adjusted Gross Income.—

(1) In general.—The amount which would (but for this subsection) be taken into account under subsection (a) for the taxable year shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the amount determined under paragraph (2).

(2) Amount of reduction.—The amount determined under this paragraph is the amount which bears the same ratio to the amount which would be so taken into account as—

(A) the excess of—

(i) the taxpayer's modified adjusted gross income for such taxable year, over

(ii) $40,000 ($80,000 in the case of a joint return), bears to

(B) $10,000 ($20,000 in the case of a joint return).

(3) Modified adjusted gross income.—The term "modified adjusted gross income" means the adjusted gross income of the taxpayer for the taxable year increased by any amount excluded from gross income under section 911, 931, or 933.

(e) Election To Have Section Apply.—

(1) In general.—No credit shall be allowed under subsection (a) for a taxable year with respect to the qualified tuition and related expenses of an individual unless the taxpayer elects to have this section apply with respect to such individual for such year.

(2) Coordination with exclusions.—An election under this subsection shall not take effect with respect to an individual for any taxable year if any portion of any distribution during such taxable year from an education individual retirement account is excluded from gross income under section 530(d)(2).

(f) Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

(1) Qualified tuition and related expenses.—

(A) In general.—The term "qualified tuition and related expenses" means tuition and fees required for the enrollment or attendance of—

(i) the taxpayer,

(ii) the taxpayer's spouse, or

(iii) any dependent of the taxpayer with respect to whom the taxpayer is allowed a deduction under section 151, at an eligible educational institution for courses of instruction of such individual at such institution.

(B) Exception for education involving sports, etc.—Such term does not include expenses with respect to any course or other education involving sports, games, or hobbies, unless such course or other education is part of the individual's degree program.

(C) Exception for nonacademic fees.—Such term does not include student activity fees, athletic fees, insurance expenses, or other expenses unrelated to an individual's academic course of instruction.

(2) Eligible educational institution.—The term "eligible educational institution" means an institution—

(A) which is described in section 481 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1088), as in effect on the date of the enactment of this section, and

(B) which is eligible to participate in a program under title IV of such Act.

(g) Special Rules.—

(1) Identification requirement.—No credit shall be allowed under subsection (a) to a taxpayer with respect to the qualified tuition and related expenses of an individual unless the taxpayer includes the name and taxpayer identification number of such individual on the return of tax for the taxable year.

(2) Adjustment for certain scholarships, etc.—The amount of qualified tuition and related expenses otherwise taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to an individual for an academic period shall be reduced (before the application of subsections (b), (c), and (d)) by the sum of any amounts paid for the benefit of such individual which are allocable to such period as—

(A) a qualified scholarship which is excludable from gross income under section 117,

(B) an educational assistance allowance under chapter 30, 31, 32, 34, or 35 of title 38, United States Code, or under chapter 1606 of title 10, United States Code, and

(C) a payment (other than a gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance within the meaning of section 102(a)) for such individual's educational expenses, or attributable to such individual's enrollment at an eligible educational institution, which is excludable from gross income under any law of the United States.

(3) TREATMENT OF EXPENSES PAID BY DEPENDENT.—If a deduction under section 151 with respect to an individual is allowed to another taxpayer for a taxable year beginning in the calendar year in which such individual's taxable year begins—

(A) no credit shall be allowed under subsection (a) to such individual for such individual's taxable year, and

(B) qualified tuition and related expenses paid by such individual during such individual's taxable year shall be treated for purposes of this section as paid by such other taxpayer.

(4) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN PREPAYMENTS.—If qualified tuition and related expenses are paid by the taxpayer during a taxable year for an academic period which begins during the first 3 months following such taxable year, such academic period shall be treated for purposes of this section as beginning during such taxable year.

(5) DENIAL OF DOUBLE BENEFIT.—No credit shall be allowed under this section for any expense for which a deduction is allowed under any other provision of this chapter.

(6) NO CREDIT FOR MARRIED INDIVIDUALS FILING SEPARATE RETURNS.—If the taxpayer is a married individual (within the meaning of section 7703), this section shall apply only if the taxpayer and the taxpayer's spouse file a joint return for the taxable year.

(7) NONRESIDENT ALIENS.—If the taxpayer is a nonresident alien individual for any portion of the taxable year, this section shall apply only if such individual is treated as a resident alien of the United States for purposes of this chapter by reason of an election under subsection (g) or (h) of section 6013.

(h) INFLATION ADJUSTMENTS.—

(1) DOLLAR LIMITATION ON AMOUNT OF CREDIT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a taxable year beginning after 2001, each of the $1,000 amounts under subsection (b)(1) shall be increased by an amount equal to—

(i) such dollar amount, multiplied by

(ii) the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for the calendar year in which the taxable year begins, determined by substituting "calendar year 2000" for "calendar year 1992" in subparagraph (B) thereof.

(B) ROUNDING.—If any amount as adjusted under subparagraph (A) is not a multiple of $100, such amount shall be rounded to the next lowest multiple of $100.

(2) INCOME LIMITS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a taxable year beginning after 2001, the $40,000 and $80,000 amounts in subsection (d)(2) shall each be increased by an amount equal to—

(i) such dollar amount, multiplied by

(ii) the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for the calendar year in which the taxable year begins, determined by substituting "calendar year 2000" for "calendar year 1992" in subparagraph (B) thereof.

(B) ROUNDING.—If any amount as adjusted under subparagraph (A) is not a multiple of $1,000, such amount shall be rounded to the next lowest multiple of $1,000.

(i) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary may prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out this section, including regulations providing for a recapture of the credit allowed under this section in cases where there is a refund in a subsequent taxable year of any amount which was taken into account in determining the amount of such credit.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1601(f)(1)(A) amended Code Sec. 30A by changing the heading to read as above. Prior to amendment, the heading of Code Sec. 30A read as follows:

SEC. 30A. PUERTO RICAN ECONOMIC ACTIVITY CREDIT.

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provisions of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which it relates [generally effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1995.—CCH.].

[¶ 5015] CODE SEC. 32. EARNED INCOME.

(c) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section—

(2) EARNED INCOME.—

* * *

(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A)—

(i) the earned income of an individual shall be computed without regard to any community property laws,

(ii) no amount received as a pension or annuity shall be taken into account,

(iii) no amount to which section 871(a) applies (relating to income of nonresident alien individuals not connected with United States business) shall be taken into account,

(iv) no amount received for services provided by an individual while the individual is an inmate at a penal institution shall be taken into account, and

(v) no amount described in subparagraph (A) received for service performed in work activities as defined in paragraph (4) or (7) of section 407(d) of the Social Security Act to which the taxpayer is assigned under any State program under part A of title IV of such Act, but only to the extent such amount is subsidized under such State program.

(4) TREATMENT OF MILITARY PERSONNEL STATIONED OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.—For purposes of paragraphs (1)(A)(ii)(I) and (3)(E), the principal place of abode of a member of the Armed Forces of the United States shall be treated as in the United States during any period during which such member is stationed outside the United States while serving on extended active duty with the Armed Forces of the United States. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "extended active duty" means any period of active duty pursuant to a call or order to such duty for a period in excess of 90 days or for an indefinite period.

(5) MODIFIED ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—

* * *

(B) CERTAIN AMOUNTS DISREGARDED.—An amount is described in this subparagraph if it is—

(i) the amount of losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets in excess of gains from such sales or exchanges to the extent such amount does not exceed the amount under section 1211(b)(1),

(ii) the net loss from estates and trusts,

(iii) the excess (if any) of amounts described in subsection (i)(2)(C)(ii) over the amounts described in subsection (i)(2)(C)(i) (relating to nonbusiness rents and royalties),

(iv) 75 percent of the net loss from the carrying on of trades or businesses, computed separately with respect to—

(I) trades or businesses (other than farming) conducted as sole proprietorships,

(II) trades or businesses of farming conducted as sole proprietorships, and

(III) other trades or businesses[,]

(v) interest received or accrued during the taxable year which is exempt from tax imposed by this chapter, and

(vi) amounts received as a pension or annuity, and any distributions or payments received from an individual retirement plan, by the taxpayer during the taxable year to the extent not included in gross income.

For purposes of clause (iv), there shall not be taken into account items which are attributable to a trade or business which consists of the performance of services by the taxpayer as an employee. Clause (vi) shall not include any amount which is not includible in gross income by reason of section 402(c), 403(a)(4), 403(b), 408(d)(3), (4), or (5), or 457(e)(10).

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 312(d)(2) amended Code Sec. 32(c)(4) by striking "(as defined in section 1034(h)(3))" after "extended active duty" and by adding at the end a new sentence to read as above.

The above amendment generally applies to sales and exchanges after May 6, 1997.

Act Sec. 1085(b) amended Code Sec. 32(c)(5)(B)(iv) by striking "50 percent" and inserting "75 percent".

Act Sec. 1085(c) amended Code Sec. 32(c)(2)(B) by striking "and" at the end of clause (iii), by striking the period at the end of clause (iv) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end a new clause (v) to read as above.

Act Sec. 1085(d)(1)-(4) amended Code Sec. 32(c)(5)(B) by striking "and" at the end of clause (iii), by striking the period at the end of clause (iv)(III), by inserting after clause (iv)(III) new clauses (v) and (vi) to read as above, and by adding at the end a new sentence to read as above.

The above amendments apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

(k) RESTRICTIONS ON TAXPAYERS WHO IMPROPERLY CLAIMED CREDIT IN PRIOR YEAR.—

(1) TAXPAYERS MAKING PRIOR FRAUDULENT OR RECKLESS CLAIMS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—No credit shall be allowed under this section for any taxable year in the disallowance period.

(B) DISALLOWANCE PERIOD.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the disallowance period is—

(i) the period of 10 taxable years after the most recent taxable year for which there was a final determination that the taxpayer's claim of credit under this section was due to fraud, and

(ii) the period of 2 taxable years after the most recent taxable year for which there was a final determination that the taxpayer's claim of credit under this section was due to reckless or intentional disregard of rules and regulations (but not due to fraud).

(2) TAXPAYERS MAKING IMPROPER PRIOR CLAIMS.—In the case of a taxpayer who is denied credit under this section for any taxable year as a result of the deficiency procedures under subchapter B of chapter 63, no credit shall be allowed under this section for any subsequent taxable year unless the taxpayer provides such information as the Secretary may require to demonstrate eligibility for such credit.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1085(a)(1) amended Code Sec. 32 by redesignating subsections (k) and (l) [and (m) as added by Act Sec. 101(b)] as subsections (l) and (m) [and (n)], respectively, and by inserting after subsection (j) a new subsection (k) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

(l) COORDINATION WITH CERTAIN MEANS-TESTED PROGRAMS.—For purposes of—

(1) the United States Housing Act of 1937,

(2) title V of the Housing Act of 1949,

(3) section 101 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965,

(4) sections 221(d)(3), 235, and 236 of the National Housing Act, and

(5) the Food Stamp Act of 1977, any refund made to an individual (or the spouse of an individual) by reason of this section, and any payment made to such individual (or such spouse) by an employer under section 3507, shall not be treated as income (and shall not be taken into account in determining resources for the month of its receipt and the following month).

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1085(a)(1) amended Code Sec. 32 by redesignating subsection (k) as subsection (l).

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

(m) IDENTIFICATION NUMBERS.—Solely for purposes of subsections (c)(1)(F) and (c)(3)(D), a taxpayer identification number means a social security number issued to an individual by the Social Security Administration (other than a social security number issued pursuant to clause (II) (or that portion of clause (III) that relates to clause (II)) of section 205(c)(2)(B)(i) of the Social Security Act).

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1085(a)(1) amended Code Sec. 32 by redesignating subsection (l) as subsection (m).

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

(m) [(n)] SUPPLEMENTAL CHILD CREDIT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a taxpayer with respect to whom a credit is allowed under section 24 for the taxable year, there shall be allowed as a credit under this section an amount equal to the supplemental child credit (if any) determined for such taxpayer for such taxable year under paragraph (2). Such credit shall be in addition to the credit allowed under subsection (a).

(2) SUPPLEMENTAL CHILD CREDIT.—For purposes of this subsection, the supplemental child credit is an amount equal to the excess (if any) of—

(A) the amount determined under section 24(d)(1)(A), over

(B) the amount determined under section 24(d)(1)(B).

The amounts referred to in subparagraphs (A) and (B) shall be determined as if section 24(d) applied to all taxpayers.

(3) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 24.—The amount of the credit under section 24 shall be reduced by the amount of the credit allowed under this subsection.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 101(b) amended Code Sec. 32 by adding a new subsection (m)[(n)] to read as above.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

[¶ 5017] CODE SEC. 39. CARRYBACK AND CARRYFORWARD OF UNUSED CREDITS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) 1-YEAR CARRYBACK AND 20-YEAR CARRYFORWARD.—If the sum of the business credit carryforwards to the taxable year plus the amount of the current year business credit for the taxable year exceeds the amount of the limitation imposed by subsection (c) of section 38 for such taxable year (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "unused credit year"), such excess (to the extent attributable to the amount of the current year business credit) shall be—

(A) a business credit carryback to each of the 1 taxable years preceding the unused credit year, and

(B) a business credit carryforward to each of the 20 taxable years following the unused credit year, and, subject to the limitations imposed by subsections (b) and (c), shall be taken into account under the provisions of section 38(a) in the manner provided in section 38(a).

(2) AMOUNT CARRIED TO EACH YEAR.—

(A) ENTIRE AMOUNT CARRIED TO FIRST YEAR.—The entire amount of the unused credit for an unused credit year shall be carried to the earliest of the 22 taxable years to which (by reason of paragraph (1)) such credit may be carried.

(B) AMOUNT CARRIED TO OTHER 21 YEARS.—The amount of the unused credit for the unused credit year shall be carried to each of the other 21 taxable years to the extent that such unused credit may not be taken into account under section 38(a) for a prior taxable year because of the limitations of subsections (b) and (c).

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1083(a)(1) amended Code Sec. 39(a)(1) by striking "3" each place it appears and inserting "1" and by striking "15" each place it appears and inserting "20".

Act Sec. 1083(a)(2) amended Code Sec. 39(a)(2) by striking "18" each place it appears and inserting "22" and by striking "17" each place it appears and inserting "21".

The above amendments apply to credits arising in tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

(d) TRANSITIONAL RULES.—

(8) NO CARRYBACK OF DC ZONE CREDITS BEFORE EFFECTIVE DATE.—No portion of the unused business credit for any taxable year which is attributable to the credits allowable under subchapter U by reason of section 1400 may be carried back to a taxable year ending before the date of the enactment of section 1400.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 601(b)(1) amended Code Sec. 41(c)(4)(B) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 41(c)(4)(B) read as follows:

(B) ELECTION.—An election under this paragraph may be made only for the first taxable year of the taxpayer beginning after June 30, 1996. Such an election shall apply to the taxable year for which made and all succeeding taxable years unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary.

The above amendment applies to amounts paid or incurred after May 31, 1997.

(h) TERMINATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—This section shall not apply to any amount paid or incurred—

(A) after June 30, 1995, and before July 1, 1996, or

(B) after June 30, 1998.

Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, in the case of a taxpayer making an election under subsection (c)(4) for its first taxable year beginning after June 30, 1996, and before July 1, 1997, this section shall apply to amounts paid or incurred during the 24-month period beginning with the first month of such year. The 24 months referred to in the preceding sentence shall be reduced by the number of full months after June 1996 (and before the first month of such first taxable year) during which the taxpayer paid or incurred any amount which is taken into account in determining the credit under this section.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 604(a) amended Code Sec. 45C by striking subsection (e). Prior to being stricken, Code Sec. 45C(e) read as follows:

(e) TERMINATION.—This section shall not apply to any amount paid or incurred—

(1) after December 31, 1994, and before July 1, 1996, or

(2) after May 31, 1997.

The above amendment applies to amounts paid or incurred after May 31, 1997.

[¶ 5023] CODE SEC. 51. AMOUNT OF CREDIT.

(a) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT.—For purposes of section 38, the amount of the work opportunity credit determined under this section for the taxable year shall be equal to 40 percent of the qualified first-year wages for such year.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 603(d)(1) amended Code Sec. 51(a) by striking "35 percent" and inserting "40 percent".

The above amendment applies to individuals who begin work for the employer after September 30, 1997.

(c) WAGES DEFINED.—For purposes of this subpart—

* * *

(4) TERMINATION.—The term "wages" shall not include any amount paid or incurred to an individual who begins work for the employer—

(A) after December 31, 1994, and before October 1, 1996, or

(B) after June 30, 1998.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 603(a) amended Code Sec. 51(c)(4)(B) by striking "September 30, 1997" and inserting "June 30, 1998".

The above amendment applies to individuals who begin work for the employer after September 30, 1997.

(d) MEMBERS OF TARGETED GROUPS.—For purposes of this subpart—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An individual is a member of a targeted group if such individual is—

(A) a qualified IV-A recipient,

(B) a qualified veteran,

(C) a qualified ex-felon,

(D) a high-risk youth,

(E) a vocational rehabilitation referral,

(F) a qualified summer youth employee,

(G) a qualified food stamp recipient, or

(H) a qualified SSI recipient.

(2) QUALIFIED IV-A RECIPIENT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified IV-A recipient" means any individual who is certified by the designated local agency as being a member of a family receiving assistance under a IV-A program for any 9 months during the 18-month period ending on the hiring date.

(3) QUALIFIED VETERAN.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified veteran" means any veteran who is certified by the designated local agency as being a member of a family receiving assistance under a food stamp program under the Food Stamp Act of 1977 for at least a 3-month period ending during the 12-month period ending on the hiring date.

(9) ELIGIBLE WORK INCENTIVE EMPLOYEES.—The term "eligible work incentive employee" means an individual who has been certified by the designated local agency as being eligible for financial assistance under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act and as having continually received such financial assistance during the 90-day period which immediately precedes the date on which such individual is hired by the employer.

(9) QUALIFIED SSI RECIPIENT.—The term "qualified SSI recipient" means any individual who is certified by the designated local agency as receiving supplemental security income benefits under title XVI of the Social Security Act (including supplemental security income benefits of the type described in section 1616 of such Act or section 212 of Public Law 93-66) for any month ending within the 60-day period ending on the hiring date.

(10) HIRING DATE.—The term "hiring date" means the day the individual is hired by the employer.

(11) DESIGNATED LOCAL AGENCY.—The term "designated local agency" means a State employment security agency established in accordance with the Act of June 6, 1933, as amended (29 U.S.C. 49-49n).

(12) SPECIAL RULES FOR CERTIFICATIONS.—

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 603(b)(1) amended Code Sec. 51(d)(2)(A) by striking all that follows "a IV-A program" and inserting "for any 9 months during the 18-month period ending on the hiring date.".

Act Sec. 603(b)(2) amended Code Sec. 51(d)(3)(A) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 51(d)(3)(A) read as follows:

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified veteran" means any veteran who is certified by the designated local agency as being—

(i) a member of a family receiving assistance under a IV-A program (as defined in paragraph (2)(B)) for at least a 9-month period ending during the 12-month period ending on the hiring date, or

(ii) a member of a family receiving assistance under a food stamp program under the Food Stamp Act of 1977 for at least a 3-month period ending during the 12-month period ending on the hiring date.

Act Sec. 603(c)(1) amended Code Sec. 51(d)(1) by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (F), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (G) and inserting ", or", and by adding a new subparagraph (H) to read as above.

Act Sec. 603(c)(2) amended Code Sec. 51(d) by redesignating paragraphs (9), (10), and (11) as paragraphs (10), (11), and (12), respectively, and by inserting after paragraph (8) a new paragraph (9) to read as above.

The above amendments apply to individuals who begin work for the employer after September 30, 1997.

Balanced Budget Act

Act Sec. 5514(a)(1) struck the change made by the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-193), which amended Code Sec. 51(d)(9) by striking all that followed "agency as" and inserted "being eligible for financial assistance under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act and as having continually received such financial assistance during the 90-day period which immediately precedes the date on which such individual is hired by the employer". Thus, the amendment to Code Sec. 51(d)(9) by P.L. 104-193 never took effect.

The above amendment is effective on July 1, 1997.

(i) CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS INELIGIBLE.—

(3) INDIVIDUALS NOT MEETING MINIMUM EMPLOYMENT PERIODS.—

(A) REDUCTION OF CREDIT FOR INDIVIDUALS PERFORMING FEWER THAN 400 HOURS OF SERVICE.—In the case of an individual who has performed at least 120 hours, but less than 400 hours, of service for the employer, subsection (a) shall be applied by substituting "25 percent" for "40 percent".

(B) DENIAL OF CREDIT FOR INDIVIDUALS PERFORMING FEWER THAN 120 HOURS OF SERVICE.—No wages shall be taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to any individual unless such individual has performed at least 120 hours of service for the employer.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 318. Committee Reports at ¶ 10,445.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 603(d)(2) amended Code Sec. 51(i)(3) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 51(i)(3) read as follows:

(3) INDIVIDUALS NOT MEETING MINIMUM EMPLOYMENT PERIOD.—No wages shall be taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to any individual unless such individual either—

(A) is employed by the employer at least 180 days (20 days in the case of a qualified summer youth employee), or

(B) has completed at least 400 hours (120 hours in the case of a qualified summer youth employee) of services performed for the employer.

The above amendment applies to individuals who begin work for the employer after September 30, 1997.

[¶ 5025] CODE SEC. 51A. TEMPORARY INCENTIVES FOR EMPLOYING LONG-TERM FAMILY ASSISTANCE RECIPIENTS.

(a) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT.—For purposes of section 38, the amount of the welfare-to-work credit determined under this section for the taxable year shall be equal to—

(1) 35 percent of the qualified first-year wages for such year, and

(2) 50 percent of the qualified second-year wages for such year.

(b) QUALIFIED WAGES DEFINED.—For purposes of this section—

(1) In general.—The term "qualified wages" means the wages paid or incurred by the employer during the taxable year to individuals who are long-term family assistance recipients.

(2) Qualified first-year wages.—The term "qualified first-year wages" means, with respect to any individual, qualified wages attributable to service rendered during the 1-year period beginning with the day the individual begins work for the employer.

(3) Qualified second-year wages.—The term "qualified second-year wages" means, with respect to any individual, qualified wages attributable to service rendered during the 1-year period beginning on the day after the last day of the 1-year period with respect to such individual determined under paragraph (2).

(4) Only first $10,000 of wages per year taken into account.—The amount of the qualified first-year wages, and the amount of qualified second-year wages, which may be taken into account with respect to any individual shall not exceed $10,000 per year.

(5) Wages.—

(A) In general.—The term "wages" has the meaning given such term by section 51(c), without regard to paragraph (4) thereof.

(B) Certain amounts treated as wages.—The term "wages" includes amounts paid or incurred by the employer which are excludable from such recipient's gross income under—

(i) section 105 (relating to amounts received under accident and health plans),

(ii) section 106 (relating to contributions by employer to accident and health plans),

(iii) section 127 (relating to educational assistance programs) or would be so excludable but for section 127(d), but only to the extent paid or incurred to a person not related to the employer, or

(iv) section 129 (relating to dependent care assistance programs).

The amount treated as wages by clause (i) or (ii) for any period shall be based on the reasonable cost of coverage for the period, but shall not exceed the applicable premium for the period under section 4980B(f)(4).

(C) Special rules for agricultural and railway labor.—If such recipient is an employee to whom subparagraph (A) or (B) of section 51(h)(1) applies, rules similar to the rules of such subparagraphs shall apply except that—

(i) such subparagraph (A) shall be applied by substituting "$10,000" for "$6,000", and

(ii) such subparagraph (B) shall be applied by substituting "$833.33" for "$500".

(c) Long-Term Family Assistance Recipients.—For purposes of this section—

(1) In general.—The term "long-term family assistance recipient" means any individual who is certified by the designated local agency (as defined in section 51(d)(10))—

(A) as being a member of a family receiving assistance under a IV-A program (as defined in section 51(d)(2)(B)) for at least the 18-month period ending on the hiring date,

(B)(i) as being a member of a family receiving such assistance for 18 months beginning after the date of the enactment of this section, and

(ii) as having a hiring date which is not more than 2 years after the end of the earliest such 18-month period, or

(C)(i) as being a member of a family which ceased to be eligible after the date of the enactment of this section for such assistance by reason of any limitation imposed by Federal or State law on the maximum period such assistance is payable to a family, and

(ii) as having a hiring date which is not more than 2 years after the date of such cessation.

(2) Hiring date.—The term "hiring date" has the meaning given such term by section 51(d).

(d) Certain Rules To Apply.—

(1) In general.—Rules similar to the rules of section 52, and subsections (d)(11), (f), (g), (i) (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997), (j), and (k) of section 51, shall apply for purposes of this section.

(2) Credit to be part of general business credit, etc.—References to section 51 in section 38(b), 280C(a), and 1396(c)(3) shall be treated as including references to this section.

(e) COORDINATION WITH WORK OPPORTUNITY CREDIT.—If a credit is allowed under this section to an employer with respect to an individual for any taxable year, then for purposes of applying section 51 to such employer, such individual shall not be treated as a member of a targeted group for such taxable year.

(f) TERMINATION.—This section shall not apply to individuals who begin work for the employer after April 30, 1999.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 320. Committee Reports at ¶ 10,485.]

Amendment Notes

Act. Sec. 801(a) amended subpart F of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 by inserting after Code Sec. 51 a new Code Sec. 51A to read as above.

The above amendment applies to individuals who begin work for the employer after December 31, 1997.

[¶ 5027] CODE SEC. 52. SPECIAL RULES.

(c) TAX-EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS.—No credit shall be allowed under section 38 for any work opportunity credit determined under this subpart to any organization (other than a cooperative described in section 521) which is exempt from income tax under this chapter.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1601(b) amended Code Sec. 52(c) by striking "targeted jobs credit" and inserting "work opportunity credit".

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which it relates [effective for individuals who begin to work for the employer after September 30, 1996.—CCH.].

[¶ 5029] CODE SEC. 55. ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX IMPOSED.

(b) TENTATIVE MINIMUM TAX.—For purposes of this part—

(1) AMOUNT OF TENTATIVE TAX.—

(A) NONCORPORATE TAXPAYERS.—

* * *

(ii) TAXABLE EXCESS.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "taxable excess" means so much of the alternative minimum taxable income for the taxable year as exceeds the exemption amount.

* * *

(3) MAXIMUM RATE OF TAX ON NET CAPITAL GAIN OF NONCORPORATE TAXPAYERS.—The amount determined under the first sentence of paragraph (1)(A)(i) shall not exceed the sum of—

(A) the amount determined under such first sentence computed at the rates and in the same manner as if this paragraph had not been enacted on the taxable excess reduced by the lesser of—

(i) the net capital gain, or

(ii) the sum of—

(I) the adjusted net capital gain, plus

(II) the unrecaptured section 1250 gain, plus

(B) 25 percent of the lesser of—

(i) the unrecaptured section 1250 gain, or

(ii) the amount of taxable excess in excess of the sum of—

(I) the adjusted net capital gain, plus

(II) the amount on which a tax is determined under subparagraph (A), plus

(C) 10 percent of so much of the taxpayer's adjusted net capital gain (or, if less, taxable excess) as does not exceed the amount on which a tax is determined under section 1(h)(1)(D), plus

(D) 20 percent of the taxpayer's adjusted net capital gain (or, if less, taxable excess) in excess of the amount on which tax is determined under subparagraph (C).

In the case of taxable years beginning after December 31, 2000, rules similar to the rules of section 1(h)(2) shall apply for purposes of subparagraphs (C) and (D). Terms used in this paragraph which are also used in section 1(h) shall have the respective meanings given such terms by section 1(h).

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 311(b)(1) amended Code Sec. 55(b) by adding a new paragraph (3) to read as above.

The above amendment generally applies to tax years ending after May 6, 1997. For a special rule, see Act Sec. 311(e) following Code Sec. 1(h), above.

Act Sec. 311(b)(2)(A) amended Code Sec. 55(b)(1)(A)(ii) by striking "clause (i)" and inserting "this subsection".

The above amendment applies to tax years ending after May 6, 1997.

(c) REGULAR TAX.—

[Caution: Code Sec. 55(c)(1), below, as amended by Act Sec. 1601(b)(2)(A) of P.L. 104-188 but prior to amendment by Act Sec. 1401(b)(3) of P.L. 104-188, applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1995, and before January 1, 2000.—CCH.]

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the term "regular tax" means the regular tax liability for the taxable year (as defined in section 26(b)) reduced by the foreign tax credit allowable under section 27(a), the section 936 credit allowable under section 27(b), and the Puerto Rico economic activity credit under section 30A. Such terms shall not include any tax imposed by section 402(d) and shall not include any increase in tax under section 49(b) or 50(a) or subsection (j) or (k) of section 42.

[Caution: Code Sec. 55(c)(1), below, as amended by Act Secs. 1601(b)(2)(A) and 1401(b)(3) of P.L. 104-188, applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1999.—CCH.]

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the term "regular tax" means the regular tax liability for the taxable year (as defined in section 26(b)) reduced by the foreign tax credit allowable under section 27(a), the section 936 credit allowable under section 27(b), and the Puerto Rico economic activity credit under section 30A. Such terms shall not include any increase in tax under section 49(b) or 50(a) or subsection (j) or (k) of section 42.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1601(f)(1)(C) amended Code Sec. 55(c)(1) by striking "Puerto Rican" and inserting "Puerto Rico".

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which it relates [generally effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1995.—CCH.].

(e) EXEMPTION FOR SMALL CORPORATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The tentative minimum tax of a corporation shall be zero for any taxable year if—

(A) such corporation met the $5,000,000 gross receipts test of section 448(c) for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1996, and

(B) such corporation would meet such test for the taxable year and all prior taxable years beginning after such first taxable year if such test were applied by substituting "$7,500,000" for "$5,000,000".

(2) PROSPECTIVE APPLICATION OF MINIMUM TAX IF SMALL CORPORATION CEASES TO BE SMALL.—In the case of a corporation whose tentative minimum tax is zero for any prior taxable year by reason of paragraph (1), the application of this part for taxable years beginning with the first taxable year such corporation ceases to be described in paragraph (1) shall be determined with the following modifications:

(A) Section 56(a)(1) (relating to depreciation) and section 56(a)(5) (relating to pollution control facilities) shall apply only to property placed in service on or after the change date.

(B) Section 56(a)(2) (relating to mining exploration and development costs) shall apply only to costs paid or incurred on or after the change date.

(C) Section 56(a)(3) (relating to treatment of long-term contracts) shall apply only to contracts entered into on or after the change date.

(D) Section 56(a)(4) (relating to alternative net operating loss deduction) shall apply in the same manner as if, in section 56(d)(2), the change date were substituted for "January 1, 1987" and the day before the change date were substituted for "December 31, 1986" each place it appears.

(E) Section 56(g)(2)(B) (relating to limitation on allowance of negative adjustments based on adjusted current earnings) shall apply only to prior taxable years beginning on or after the change date.

(F) Section 56(g)(4)(A) (relating to adjustment for depreciation to adjusted current earnings) shall not apply.

(G) Subparagraphs (D) and (F) of section 56(g)(4) (relating to other earnings and profits adjustments and depletion) shall apply in the same manner as if the day before the change date were substituted for "December 31, 1989" each place it appears therein.

(3) EXCEPTION.—The modifications in paragraph (2) shall not apply to—

(A) any item acquired by the corporation in a transaction to which section 381 applies, and

(B) any property the basis of which in the hands of the corporation is determined by reference to the basis of the property in the hands of the transferor, if such item or property was subject to any provision referred to in paragraph (2) while held by the transferor.

(4) CHANGE DATE.—For purposes of paragraph (2), the change date is the first day of the first taxable year for which the taxpayer ceases to be described in paragraph (1).

(5) LIMITATION ON USE OF CREDIT FOR PRIOR YEAR MINIMUM TAX LIABILITY.—In the case of a taxpayer whose tentative minimum tax for any taxable year is zero by reason of paragraph (1), section 53(c) shall be applied for such year by reducing the amount otherwise taken into account under section 53(c)(1) by 25 percent of so much of such amount as exceeds $25,000. Rules similar to the rules of section 38(c)(3)(B) shall apply for purposes of the preceding sentence.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 303 and 525. Committee Reports at ¶ 10,295 and 10,335.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 401(a) amended Code Sec. 55 by adding at the end a new subsection (e) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

[¶ 5031] CODE SEC. 56. ADJUSTMENTS IN COMPUTING ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAXABLE INCOME.

(a) ADJUSTMENTS APPLICABLE TO ALL TAXPAYERS.—In determining the amount of the alternative minimum taxable income for any taxable year the following treatment shall apply (in lieu of the treatment applicable for purposes of computing the regular tax):

(1) DEPRECIATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—

(i) PROPERTY OTHER THAN CERTAIN PERSONAL PROPERTY.—Except as provided in clause (ii), the depreciation deduction allowable under section 167 with respect to any tangible property placed in service after December 31, 1986, shall be determined under the alternative system of section 168(g). In the case of property placed in service after December 31, 1998, the preceding sentence shall not apply but clause (ii) shall continue to apply.

(5) POLLUTION CONTROL FACILITIES.—In the case of any certified pollution control facility placed in service after December 31, 1986, the deduction allowable under section 169 (without regard to section 291) shall be determined under the alternative system of section 168(g). In the case of such a facility placed in service after December 31, 1998, such deduction shall be determined under section 168 using the straight line method.

(6) ADJUSTED BASIS.—The adjusted basis of any property to which paragraph (1) or (5) applies (or with respect to which there are any expenditures to which paragraph (2) or subsection (b)(2) applies) shall be determined on the basis of the treatment prescribed in paragraph (1), (2), or (5), or subsection (b)(2), whichever applies.

(7) SECTION 87 not applicable.—Section 87 (relating to alcohol fuel credit) shall not apply.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 402(a) amended Code Sec. 56(a)(1)(A)(i) by adding a new sentence to read as above.

Act Sec. 402(b) amended Code Sec. 56(a)(5) by adding a new sentence to read as above.

The above amendments are effective on the date of enactment of this Act.

Act Sec. 403(a) amended Code Sec. 56(a) by striking paragraph (6) and by redesignating paragraphs (7)-(8) as paragraphs (6) and (7), respectively. Prior to being stricken, Code Sec. 56(a)(6) read as follows:

(6) INSTALLMENT SALES OF CERTAIN PROPERTY.—In the case of any disposition after March 1, 1986, of any property described in section 1221(1), income from such disposition shall be determined without regard to the installment method under section 453. This paragraph shall not apply to any disposition with respect to which an election is in effect under section 453(l)(2)(B).

The above amendment applies to dispositions in tax years beginning after December 31, 1987. For a special rule, see Act Sec. 403(b)(2), below.

Act Sec. 403(b)(2) provides:

(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR 1987.—In the case of taxable years beginning in 1987, the last sentence of section 56(a)(6) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as in effect for such taxable years) shall be applied by inserting "or in the case of a taxpayer using the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, any disposition described in section 453C(e)(1)(B)(ii)" after "section 453C(e)(4)".

(e) QUALIFIED HOUSING INTEREST.—For purposes of this part—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified housing interest" means interest which is qualified residence interest (as defined in section 163(h)(3)) and is paid or accrued during the taxable year on indebtedness which is incurred in acquiring, constructing, or substantially improving any property which—

(A) is the principal residence (within the meaning of section 121) of the taxpayer at the time such interest accrues, or

(B) is a qualified dwelling which is a qualified residence (within the meaning of section 163(h)(4)).

Such term also includes interest on any indebtedness resulting from the refinancing of indebtedness meeting the requirements of the preceding sentence; but only to the extent that the amount of the indebtedness resulting from such refinancing does not exceed the amount of the refinanced indebtedness immediately before the refinancing.

* * *

(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR INDEBTEDNESS INCURRED BEFORE JULY 1, 1982.—The term "qualified housing interest" includes interest which is qualified residence interest (as defined in section 163(h)(3)) and is paid or accrued on indebtedness which—

(A) was incurred by the taxpayer before July 1, 1982, and

(B) is secured by property which, at the time such indebtedness was incurred, was—

(i) the principal residence (within the meaning of section 121) of the taxpayer, or

(ii) a qualified dwelling used by the taxpayer (or any member of his family (within the meaning of section 267(c)(4))).

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 312(d)(1) amended Code Sec. 56(e)(1)(A) and (3)(B)(i) by striking "section 1034" and inserting "section 121".

The above amendment applies to sales and exchanges after May 6, 1997.

(g) ADJUSTMENTS BASED ON ADJUSTED CURRENT EARNINGS.—

(4) ADJUSTMENTS.—In determining adjusted current earnings, the following adjustments shall apply:

(B) INCLUSION OF ITEMS INCLUDED FOR PURPOSES OF COMPUTING EARNINGS AND PROFITS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any amount which is excluded from gross income for purposes of computing alternative minimum taxable income but is taken into account in determining the amount of earnings and profits—

(I) such amount shall be included in income in the same manner as if such amount were includible in gross income for purposes of computing alternative minimum taxable income, and

(II) the amount of such income shall be reduced by any deduction which would have been allowable in computing alternative minimum taxable income if such amount were includible in gross income.

The preceding sentence shall not apply in the case of any amount excluded from gross income under section 108 (or the corresponding provisions of prior law). In the case of any insurance company taxable under section 831(b), this clause shall not apply to any amount not described in section 834(b).

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1212(a) amended Code Sec. 56(g)(4)(B)(i) by adding at the end a new sentence to read as above.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

[¶ 5033] CODE SEC. 57. ITEMS OF TAX PREFERENCE.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—For purposes of this part, the items of tax preference determined under this section are—

* * *

(7) EXCLUSION FOR GAINS ON SALE OF CERTAIN SMALL BUSINESS STOCK.—An amount equal to 42 percent of the amount excluded from gross income for the taxable year under section 1202.

* * *

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 303. Committee Reports at ¶ 10,295.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 311(b)(2)(B) amended Code Sec. 57(a)(7) by striking "one-half" and inserting "42 percent".

The above amendment applies to tax years ending after May 6, 1997.

(a) ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX FOREIGN TAX CREDIT.—For purposes of this part—

(2) LIMITATION TO 90 PERCENT OF TAX.—

* * *

(C) [Stricken.]

(3)[(4)] ELECTION TO USE SIMPLIFIED SECTION 904 LIMITATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In determining the alternative minimum tax foreign tax credit for any taxable year to which an election under this paragraph applies—

(i) subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) shall not apply, and

(ii) the limitation of section 904 shall be based on the proportion which—

(I) the taxpayer's taxable income (as determined for purposes of the regular tax) from sources without the United States (but not in excess of the taxpayer's entire alternative minimum taxable income), bears to

(II) the taxpayer's entire alternative minimum taxable income for the taxable year.

(B) ELECTION.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—An election under this paragraph may be made only for the taxpayer's first taxable year which begins after December 31, 1997, and for which the taxpayer claims an alternative minimum tax foreign tax credit.

(ii) ELECTION REVOCABLE ONLY WITH CONSENT.—An election under this paragraph, once made, shall apply to the taxable year for which made and all subsequent taxable years unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1057(a) amended Code Sec. 59(a)(2) by striking subparagraph (C). Prior to being stricken, Code Sec. 59(a)(2)(C) read as follows:

(C) EXCEPTION.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any domestic corporation if—

(i) more than 50 percent of the stock of such domestic corporation (by vote and value) is owned by United States persons who are not members of an affiliated group (as defined in section 1504 of such Code) which includes such corporation,

(ii) all of the activities of such corporation are conducted in 1 foreign country with which the United States has an income tax treaty in effect and such treaty provides for the exchange of information between such foreign country and the United States,

(iii) all of the current earnings and profits of such corporation are distributed at least annually (other than current earnings and profits retained for normal maintenance or capital replacements or improvements of an existing business), and

(iv) all of such distributions by such corporation to United States persons are used by such persons in a trade or business conducted in the United States.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Act Sec. 1103(a) amended Code Sec. 59(a) by adding at the end a new paragraph (3)[(4)] to read as above.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

(j) TREATMENT OF UNEARNED INCOME OF MINOR CHILDREN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a child to whom section 1(g) applies, the exemption amount for purposes of section 55 shall not exceed the sum of—

(A) such child's earned income (as defined in section 911(d)(2)) for the taxable year, plus

(B) $5,000.

(2) INFLATION ADJUSTMENT.—In the case of any taxable year beginning in a calendar year after 1998, the dollar amount in paragraph (1)(B) shall be increased by an amount equal to the product of—

(A) such dollar amount, and

(B) the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for the calendar year in which the taxable year begins, determined by substituting "1997" for "1992" in subparagraph (B) thereof.

If any increase determined under the preceding sentence is not a multiple of $50, such increase shall be rounded to the nearest multiple of $50.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 185, 907 and 910. Committee Reports at ¶ 11,395, 11,625 and 12,120.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1201(b)(1) amended Code Sec. 59(j) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 59(j) read as follows:

(j) TREATMENT OF UNEARNED INCOME OF MINOR CHILDREN.—

(1) LIMITATION ON EXEMPTION AMOUNT.—In the case of a child to whom section 1(g) applies, the exemption amount for purposes of section 55 shall not exceed the sum of—

(A) such child's earned income (as defined in section 911(d)(2)) for the taxable year, plus

(B) twice the amount in effect for the taxable year under section 63(c)(5)(A) (or, if greater, the child's share of the unused parental minimum tax exemption).

(2) LIMITATION BASED ON PARENTAL MINIMUM TAX.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a child to whom section 1(g) applies, the amount of the tax imposed by section 55 shall not exceed such child's share of the allocable parental minimum tax.

(B) ALLOCABLE PARENTAL MINIMUM TAX.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term "allocable parental minimum tax" means the excess of—

(i) the tax which would be imposed by section 55 on the parent if—

(I) the amount of the parent's tentative minimum tax were increased by the aggregate of the tentative minimum taxes of all children of the parent to whom section 1(g) applies and

(II) the amount of the parent's regular tax were increased by the aggregate of the regular taxes of all children of the parent to whom section 1(g) applies, over

(ii) the tax imposed by section 55 on the parent without regard to this subparagraph.

(C) CHILD SHARE.—A child's share of any allocable parental minimum tax shall be determined under rules similar to the rules of section 1(g)(3)(B).

(D) OTHER RULES MADE APPLICABLE.—For purposes of this paragraph, rules similar to the rules of paragraphs (3)(D), (5), and (6) of section 1(g) shall apply.

(3) UNUSED PARENTAL MINIMUM TAX EXEMPTION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "unused parental minimum tax exemption" means the excess (if any) of—

(i) the exemption amount applicable to the parent under section 55(d), over

(ii) the parent's alternative minimum taxable income.

(B) CERTAIN RULES MADE APPLICABLE.—A child's share of any unused parental minimum tax exemption shall be determined under rules similar to the rules of section 1(g)(3)(B), and rules similar to the rules of paragraphs (3)(D) and (5) of section 1(g) shall apply for purposes of this paragraph.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

[¶ 5037] CODE SEC. 62. ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME DEFINED.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—For purposes of this subtitle, the term "adjusted gross income" means, in the case of an individual, gross income minus the following deductions:

(2) CERTAIN TRADE AND BUSINESS DEDUCTIONS OF EMPLOYEES.—

* * *

(C) CERTAIN EXPENSES OF OFFICIALS.—The deductions allowed by section 162 which consist of expenses paid or incurred with respect to services performed by an official as an employee of a

(c) STANDARD DEDUCTION.—For purposes of this subtitle—

* * *

(4) ADJUSTMENTS FOR INFLATION.—In the case of any taxable year beginning in a calendar year after 1988, each dollar amount contained in paragraph (2) or (5) or subsection (f) shall be increased by an amount equal to—

(A) such dollar amount, multiplied by

(B) the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for the calendar year in which the taxable year begins, by substituting for "calendar year 1992" in subparagraph (B) thereof—

(i) "calendar year 1987" in the case of the dollar amounts contained in paragraph (2) or (5)(A) or subsection (f), and

(ii) "calendar year 1997" in the case of the dollar amount contained in paragraph (5)(B).

(5) LIMITATION ON BASIC STANDARD DEDUCTION IN THE CASE OF CERTAIN DEPENDENTS.—In the case of an individual with respect to whom a deduction under section 151 is allowable to another taxpayer for a taxable year beginning in the calendar year in which the individual's taxable year begins, the basic standard deduction applicable to such individual for such individual's taxable year shall not exceed the greater of—

(A) $500, or

(B) the sum of $250 and such individual's earned income.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 101. Committee Reports at ¶ 12,115.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1201(a)(1) amended Code Sec. 63(c)(5) by striking "shall not exceed" and all that follows and inserting "shall not exceed the greater of —(A) $500, or (B) the sum of $250 and such individual's earned income.". Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 63(c)(5) read as follows:

(5) LIMITATION ON BASIC STANDARD DEDUCTION IN THE CASE OF CERTAIN DEPENDENTS.—In the case of an individual with respect to whom a deduction under section 151 is allowable to another taxpayer for a taxable year beginning in the calendar year in which the individual's taxable year begins, the basic standard deduction applicable to such individual for such individual's taxable year shall not exceed the greater of—

(A) $500, or

(B) such individual's earned income.

Act Sec. 1201(a)(2)(A)-(B) amended Code Sec. 63(c)(4) by striking "(5)(A)" in the material preceding subparagraph (A) and inserting "(5)", and by striking "by substituting" and all that follows in subparagraph (B) and inserting "by substituting for 'calendar year 1992' in subparagraph (B) thereof—" and clauses (i) and (ii) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 63(c)(4)(B) read as follows:

(B) the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for the calendar year in which the taxable year begins, by substituting "calendar year 1987" for "calendar year 1992 " in subparagraph (B) thereof.

The above amendments apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1075(a) amended Code Sec. 72(d)(1)(B) by adding new clause (iv) to read as above.

Act Sec. 1075(b)(1)-(2) amended Code Sec. 72(d)(1)(B)(iii) by inserting the text after the heading and before the table to read as above, and by striking "primary" in the table.

The above amendments apply with respect to annuity starting dates beginning after December 31, 1997.

(t) 10-PERCENT ADDITIONAL TAX ON EARLY DISTRIBUTIONS FROM QUALIFIED RETIREMENT PLANS.—

(2) SUBSECTION NOT TO APPLY TO CERTAIN DISTRIBUTIONS.—Except as provided in paragraphs (3) and (4), paragraph (1) shall not apply to any of the following distributions:

(E) DISTRIBUTIONS FROM INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT PLANS FOR HIGHER EDUCATION EXPENSES.—Distributions to an individual from an individual retirement plan to the extent such distributions do not exceed the qualified higher education expenses (as defined in paragraph (7)) of the taxpayer for the taxable year. Distributions shall not be taken into account under the preceding sentence if such distributions are described in subparagraph (A), (C), or (D) or to the extent paragraph (1) does not apply to such distributions by reason of subparagraph (B).

(F) DISTRIBUTIONS FROM CERTAIN PLANS FOR FIRST HOME PURCHASES.—Distributions to an individual from an individual retirement plan which are qualified first-time homebuyer distributions (as defined in paragraph (8)). Distributions shall not be taken into account under the preceding sentence if such distributions are described in subparagraph (A), (C), (D), or (E) or to the extent paragraph (1) does not apply to such distributions by reason of subparagraph (B).

(7) QUALIFIED HIGHER EDUCATION EXPENSES.—For purposes of paragraph (2)(E)—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified higher education expenses" means qualified higher education expenses (as defined in section 529(e)(3)) for education furnished to—

(i) the taxpayer,

(ii) the taxpayer's spouse, or

(iii) any child (as defined in section 151(c)(3)) or grandchild of the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse, at an eligible educational institution (as defined in section 529(e)(5)).

(B) COORDINATION WITH OTHER BENEFITS.—The amount of qualified higher education expenses for any taxable year shall be reduced as provided in section 25A(g)(2).

(8) QUALIFIED FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER DISTRIBUTIONS.—For purposes of paragraph (2)(F)—

(A) In general.—The term "qualified first-time homebuyer distribution" means any payment or distribution received by an individual to the extent such payment or distribution is used by the individual before the close of the 120th day after the day on which such payment or distribution is received to pay qualified acquisition costs with respect to a principal residence of a first-time homebuyer who is such individual, the spouse of such individual, or any child, grandchild, or ancestor of such individual or the individual's spouse.

(B) Lifetime dollar limitation.—The aggregate amount of payments or distributions received by an individual which may be treated as qualified first-time homebuyer distributions for any taxable year shall not exceed the excess (if any) of—

(i) $10,000, over

(ii) the aggregate amounts treated as qualified first-time homebuyer distributions with respect to such individual for all prior taxable years.

(C) Qualified acquisition costs.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term "qualified acquisition costs" means the costs of acquiring, constructing, or reconstructing a residence. Such term includes any usual or reasonable settlement, financing, or other closing costs.

(D) First-time homebuyer: other definitions.—For purposes of this paragraph—

(i) First-time homebuyer.—The term "first-time homebuyer" means any individual if—

(I) such individual (and if married, such individual's spouse) had no present ownership interest in a principal residence during the 2-year period ending on the date of acquisition of the principal residence to which this paragraph applies, and

(II) subsection (h) or (k) of section 1034 (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this paragraph) did not suspend the running of any period of time specified in section 1034 (as so in effect) with respect to such individual on the day before the date the distribution is applied pursuant to subparagraph (A).

(ii) Principal residence.—The term "principal residence" has the same meaning as when used in section 121.

(iii) Date of acquisition.—The term "date of acquisition" means the date—

(I) on which a binding contract to acquire the principal residence to which subparagraph (A) applies is entered into, or

(II) on which construction or reconstruction of such a principal residence is commenced.

(E) Special rule where delay in acquisition.—If any distribution from any individual retirement plan fails to meet the requirements of subparagraph (A) solely by reason of a delay or cancellation of the purchase or construction of the residence, the amount of the distribution may be contributed to an individual retirement plan as provided in section 408(d)(3)(A)(i) (determined by substituting "120 days" for "60 days" in such section), except that—

(i) section 408(d)(3)(B) shall not be applied to such contribution, and

(ii) such amount shall not be taken into account in determining whether section 408(d)(3)(B) applies to any other amount.

The above amendments apply to payments and distributions in tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

[¶ 5043] CODE SEC. 101. CERTAIN DEATH BENEFITS.

(a) Proceeds of Life Insurance Contracts Payable by Reason of Death.—

(2) Transfer for valuable consideration.—In the case of a transfer for a valuable consideration, by assignment or otherwise, of a life insurance contract or any interest therein, the amount excluded from gross income by paragraph (1) shall not exceed an amount equal to the sum of the actual value of such consideration and the premiums and other amounts subsequently paid by the transferee. The preceding sentence shall not apply in the case of such a transfer—

(A) if such contract or interest therein has a basis for determining gain or loss in the hands of a transferee determined in whole or in part by reference to such basis of such contract or interest therein in the hands of the transferor, or

(B) if such transfer is to the insured, to a partner of the insured, to a partnership in which the insured is a partner, or to a corporation in which the insured is a shareholder or officer.

The term "other amounts" in the first sentence of this paragraph includes interest paid or accrued by the transferee on indebtedness with respect to such contract or any interest therein if such interest paid or accrued is not allowable as a deduction by reason of section 264(a)(4).

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1084(b)(2) amended Code Sec. 101(a)(2) by adding at the end a new flush sentence to read as above.

Act Sec. 1084(d) provides:

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to contracts issued after June 8, 1997, in taxable years ending after such date. For purposes of the preceding sentence, any material increase in the death benefit or other material change in the contract shall be treated as a new contract but the addition of covered lives shall be treated as a new contract only with respect to such additional covered lives. For purposes of this subsection, an increase in the death benefit under a policy or contract issued in connection with a lapse described in section 501(d)(2) of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 shall not be treated as a new contract.

(h) SURVIVOR BENEFITS ATTRIBUTABLE TO SERVICE BY A PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICER WHO IS KILLED IN THE LINE OF DUTY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Gross income shall not include any amount paid as a survivor annuity on account of the death of a public safety officer (as such term is defined in section 1204 of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968) killed in the line of duty—

(A) if such annuity is provided, under a governmental plan which meets the requirements of section 401(a), to the spouse (or a former spouse) of the public safety officer or to a child of such officer; and

(B) to the extent such annuity is attributable to such officer's service as a public safety officer.

(2) EXCEPTIONS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to the death of any public safety officer if, as determined in accordance with the provisions of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968—

(A) the death was caused by the intentional misconduct of the officer or by such officer's intention to bring about such officer's death;

(B) the officer was voluntarily intoxicated (as defined in section 1204 of such Act) at the time of death;

(C) the officer was performing such officer's duties in a grossly negligent manner at the time of death; or

(D) the payment is to an individual whose actions were a substantial contributing factor to the death of the officer.

(f) STUDENT LOANS.—

* * *

(2) STUDENT LOAN.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "student loan" means any loan to an individual to assist the individual in attending an educational organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) made by—

(A) the United States, or an instrumentality or agency thereof,

(B) a State, territory, or possession of the United States, or the District of Columbia, or any political subdivision thereof,

(C) a public benefit corporation—

(i) which is exempt from taxation under section 501(c)(3),

(ii) which has assumed control over a State, county, or municipal hospital, and

(iii) whose employees have been deemed to be public employees under State law, or

(D) any educational organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) if such loan is made—

(i) pursuant to an agreement with any entity described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) under which the funds from which the loan was made were provided to such educational organization, or

(ii) pursuant to a program of such educational organization which is designed to encourage its students to serve in occupations with unmet needs or in areas with unmet needs and under which the services provided by the students (or former students) are for or under the direction of a governmental unit or an organization described in section 501(c)(3) and exempt from tax under section 501(a).

The term "student loan" includes any loan made by an educational organization so described or by an organization exempt from tax under section 501(a) to refinance a loan meeting the requirements of the preceding sentence.

(3) EXCEPTION FOR DISCHARGES ON ACCOUNT OF SERVICES PERFORMED FOR CERTAIN LENDERS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to the discharge of a loan made by an organization described in paragraph (2)(D) (or by an organization described in paragraph (2)(E) from funds provided by an organization described in paragraph (2)(D)) if the discharge is on account of services performed for either such organization.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 225(a)(1) amended Code Sec. 108(f)(2) by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (B) and by striking subparagraph (D) and inserting a new subparagraph (D) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 108(f)(2)(D) read as follows:

(D) any educational organization so described pursuant to an agreement with any entity described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) under which the funds from which the loan was made were provided to such educational organization.

Act Sec. 225(a)(2) amended Code Sec. 108(f) by adding a new paragraph (3) to read as above.

The above amendments apply to discharges of indebtedness after the date of the enactment of this Act.

[¶ 5047] CODE SEC. 110. QUALIFIED LESSEE CONSTRUCTION ALLOWANCES FOR SHORT-TERM LEASES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Gross income of a lessee does not include any amount received in cash (or treated as a rent reduction) by a lessee from a lessor—

(1) under a short-term lease of retail space, and

(2) for the purpose of such lessee's constructing or improving qualified long-term real property for use in such lessee's trade or business at such retail space, but only to the extent that such amount does not exceed the amount expended by the lessee for such construction or improvement.

(b) CONSISTENT TREATMENT BY LESSOR.—Qualified long-term real property constructed or improved in connection with any amount excluded from a lessee's income by reason of subsection (a) shall be treated as nonresidential real property of the lessor (including for purposes of section 168(i)(8)(B)).

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) QUALIFIED LONG-TERM REAL PROPERTY.—The term "qualified long-term real property" means nonresidential real property which is part of, or otherwise present at, the retail space referred to in subsection (a) and which reverts to the lessor at the termination of the lease.

(2) SHORT-TERM LEASE.—The term "short-term lease" means a lease (or other agreement for occupancy or use) of retail space for 15 years or less (as determined under the rules of section 168(i)(3)).

(3) RETAIL SPACE.—The term "retail space" means real property leased, occupied, or otherwise used by a lessee in its trade or business of selling tangible personal property or services to the general public.

(d) Information Required To Be Furnished to Secretary.—Under regulations, the lessee and lessor described in subsection (a) shall, at such times and in such manner as may be provided in such regulations, furnish to the Secretary—

(1) information concerning the amounts received (or treated as a rent reduction) and expended as described in subsection (a), and

(2) any other information which the Secretary deems necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1213(a) amended part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 by inserting after Code Sec. 109 a new Code Sec. 110 to read as above.

The above amendment applies to leases entered into after the date of the enactment of this Act.

[¶ 5049] CODE SEC. 121. EXCLUSION OF GAIN FROM SALE OF PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE.

(a) Exclusion.—Gross income shall not include gain from the sale or exchange of property if, during the 5-year period ending on the date of the sale or exchange, such property has been owned and used by the taxpayer as the taxpayer's principal residence for periods aggregating 2 years or more.

(b) Limitations.—

(1) In general.—The amount of gain excluded from gross income under subsection (a) with respect to any sale or exchange shall not exceed $250,000.

(2) $500,000 limitation for certain joint returns.—Paragraph (1) shall be applied by substituting "$500,000" for "$250,000" if—

(A) a husband and wife make a joint return for the taxable year of the sale or exchange of the property,

(B) either spouse meets the ownership requirements of subsection (a) with respect to such property,

(C) both spouses meet the use requirements of subsection (a) with respect to such property, and

(D) neither spouse is ineligible for the benefits of subsection (a) with respect to such property by reason of paragraph (3).

(3) Application to only 1 sale or exchange every 2 years.—

(A) In general.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to any sale or exchange by the taxpayer if, during the 2-year period ending on the date of such sale or exchange, there was any other sale or exchange by the taxpayer to which subsection (a) applied.

(B) Pre-May 7, 1997, sales not taken into account.—Subparagraph (A) shall be applied without regard to any sale or exchange before May 7, 1997.

(c) Exclusion for Taxpayers Failing To Meet Certain Requirements.—

(1) In general.—In the case of a sale or exchange to which this subsection applies, the ownership and use requirements of subsection (a) shall not apply and subsection (b)(3) shall not apply; but the amount of gain excluded from gross income under subsection (a) with respect to such sale or exchange shall not exceed—

(A) the amount which bears the same ratio to the amount which would be so excluded under this section if such requirements had been met, as

(B) the shorter of—

(i) the aggregate periods, during the 5-year period ending on the date of such sale or exchange, such property has been owned and used by the taxpayer as the taxpayer's principal residence, or

(ii) the period after the date of the most recent prior sale or exchange by the taxpayer to which subsection (a) applied and before the date of such sale or exchange, bears to 2 years.

(2) Sales and exchanges to which subsection applies.—This subsection shall apply to any sale or exchange if—

(A) subsection (a) would not (but for this subsection) apply to such sale or exchange by reason of—

(i) a failure to meet the ownership and use requirements of subsection (a), or

(ii) subsection (b)(3), and

(B) such sale or exchange is by reason of a change in place of employment, health, or, to the extent provided in regulations, unforeseen circumstances.

(d) SPECIAL RULES.—

(1) JOINT RETURNS.—If a husband and wife make a joint return for the taxable year of the sale or exchange of the property, subsections (a) and (c) shall apply if either spouse meets the ownership and use requirements of subsection (a) with respect to such property.

(2) PROPERTY OF DECEASED SPOUSE.—For purposes of this section, in the case of an unmarried individual whose spouse is deceased on the date of the sale or exchange of property, the period such unmarried individual owned and used such property shall include the period such deceased spouse owned and used such property before death.

(3) PROPERTY OWNED BY SPOUSE OR FORMER SPOUSE.—For purposes of this section—

(A) PROPERTY TRANSFERRED TO INDIVIDUAL FROM SPOUSE OR FORMER SPOUSE.—In the case of an individual holding property transferred to such individual in a transaction described in section 1041(a), the period such individual owns such property shall include the period the transferor owned the property.

(B) PROPERTY USED BY FORMER SPOUSE PURSUANT TO DIVORCE DECREE, ETC.—Solely for purposes of this section, an individual shall be treated as using property as such individual's principal residence during any period of ownership while such individual's spouse or former spouse is granted use of the property under a divorce or separation instrument (as defined in section 71(b)(2)).

(4) TENANT-STOCKHOLDER IN COOPERATIVE HOUSING CORPORATION.—For purposes of this section, if the taxpayer holds stock as a tenant-stockholder (as defined in section 216) in a cooperative housing corporation (as defined in such section), then—

(A) the holding requirements of subsection (a) shall be applied to the holding of such stock, and

(B) the use requirements of subsection (a) shall be applied to the house or apartment which the taxpayer was entitled to occupy as such stockholder.

(5) INVOLUNTARY CONVERSIONS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the destruction, theft, seizure, requisition, or condemnation of property shall be treated as the sale of such property.

(B) APPLICATION OF SECTION 1033.—In applying section 1033 (relating to involuntary conversions), the amount realized from the sale or exchange of property shall be treated as being the amount determined without regard to this section, reduced by the amount of gain not included in gross income pursuant to this section.

(C) PROPERTY ACQUIRED AFTER INVOLUNTARY CONVERSION.—If the basis of the property sold or exchanged is determined (in whole or in part) under section 1033(b) (relating to basis of property acquired through involuntary conversion), then the holding and use by the taxpayer of the converted property shall be treated as holding and use by the taxpayer of the property sold or exchanged.

(6) RECOGNITION OF GAIN ATTRIBUTABLE TO DEPRECIATION.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to so much of the gain from the sale of any property as does not exceed the portion of the depreciation adjustments (as defined in section 1250(b)(3)) attributable to periods after May 6, 1997, in respect of such property.

(7) DETERMINATION OF USE DURING PERIODS OF OUT-OF-RESIDENCE CARE.—In the case of a taxpayer who—

(A) becomes physically or mentally incapable of self-care, and

(B) owns property and uses such property as the taxpayer's principal residence during the 5-year period described in subsection (a) for periods aggregating at least 1 year, then the taxpayer shall be treated as using such property as the taxpayer's principal residence during any time during such 5-year period in which the taxpayer owns the property and resides in any facility (including a nursing home) licensed by a State or political subdivision to care for an individual in the taxpayer's condition.

(8) SALES OF REMAINDER INTERESTS.—For purposes of this section—

(A) IN GENERAL.—At the election of the taxpayer, this section shall not fail to apply to the sale or exchange of an interest in a principal residence by reason of such interest being a remainder interest in such residence, but this section shall not apply to any other interest in such residence which is sold or exchanged separately.

(B) EXCEPTION FOR SALES TO RELATED PARTIES.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any sale to, or exchange with, any person who bears a relationship to the taxpayer which is described in section 267(b) or 707(b).

(e) DENIAL OF EXCLUSION FOR EXPATRIATES.—This section shall not apply to any sale or exchange by an individual if the treatment provided by section 877(a)(1) applies to such individual.

(f) ELECTION TO HAVE SECTION NOT APPLY.—This section shall not apply to any sale or exchange with respect to which the taxpayer elects not to have this section apply.

(g) RESIDENCES ACQUIRED IN ROLLOVERS UNDER SECTION 1034.—For purposes of this section, in the case of property the acquisition of which by the taxpayer resulted under section 1034 (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this section) in the nonrecognition of any part of the gain realized on the sale or exchange of another residence, in determining the period for which the taxpayer has owned and used such property as the taxpayer's principal residence, there shall be included the aggregate periods for which such other residence (and each prior residence taken into account under section 1223(7) in determining the holding period of such property) had been so owned and used.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 129. Committee Reports at ¶ 10,315.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 312(a) amended Code Sec. 121 to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 121 read as follows:

SEC. 121. ONE-TIME EXCLUSION OF GAIN FROM SALE OF PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE BY INDIVIDUAL WHO HAS ATTAINED AGE 55.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—At the election of the taxpayer, gross income does not include gain from the sale or exchange of property if—

(1) the taxpayer has attained the age of 55 before the date of such sale or exchange, and

(2) during the 5-year period ending on the date of the sale or exchange, such property has been owned and used by the taxpayer as his principal residence for periods aggregating 3 years or more.

(b) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) DOLLAR LIMITATION.—The amount of the gain excluded from gross income under subsection (a) shall not exceed $125,000 ($62,500 in the case of a separate return by a married individual).

(2) APPLICATION TO ONLY ONE SALE OR EXCHANGE.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to any sale or exchange by the taxpayer if an election by the taxpayer or his spouse under subsection (a) with respect to any other sale or exchange is in effect.

(3) ADDITIONAL ELECTION IF PRIOR SALE WAS MADE ON OR BEFORE JULY 26, 1978.—In the case of any sale or exchange after July 26, 1978, this section shall be applied by not taking into account any election made with respect to a sale or exchange on or before such date.

(c) ELECTION.—An election under subsection (a) may be made or revoked at any time before the expiration of the period for making a claim for credit or refund of the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year in which the sale or exchange occurred, and shall be made or revoked in such manner as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe. In the case of a taxpayer who is married, an election under subsection (a) or a revocation thereof may be made only if his spouse joins in such election or revocation.

(d) SPECIAL RULES.—

(1) PROPERTY HELD JOINTLY BY HUSBAND AND WIFE.—For purposes of this section, if—

(A) property is held by a husband and wife as joint tenants, tenants by the entirety, or community property,

(B) such husband and wife make a joint return under section 6013 for the taxable year of the sale or exchange, and

(C) one spouse satisfies the age, holding, and use requirements of subsection (a) with respect to such property, then both husband and wife shall be treated as satisfying the age, holding, and use requirements of subsection (a) with respect to such property.

(2) PROPERTY OF DECEASED SPOUSE.—For purposes of this section, in the case of an unmarried individual whose spouse is deceased on the date of the sale or exchange of property, if—

(A) the deceased spouse (during the 5-year period ending on the date of the sale or exchange) satisfied the holding and use requirements of subsection (a)(2) with respect to such property, and

(B) no election by the deceased spouse under subsection (a) is in effect with respect to a prior sale or exchange, then such individual shall be treated as satisfying the holding and use requirements of subsection (a)(2) with respect to such property.

(3) TENANT-STOCKHOLDER IN COOPERATIVE HOUSING CORPORATION.—For purposes of this section, if the taxpayer holds stock as a tenant-stockholder (as defined in section 216) in a cooperative housing corporation (as defined in such section), then—

(A) the holding requirements of subsection (a)(2) shall be applied to the holding of such stock, and

(B) the use requirements of subsection (a)(2) shall be applied to the house or apartment which the taxpayer was entitled to occupy as such stockholder.

(4) INVOLUNTARY CONVERSIONS.—For purposes of this section, the destruction, theft, seizure, requisition, or condemnation of property shall be treated as the sale of such property.

(5) PROPERTY USED IN PART AS PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE.—In the case of property only a portion of which, during the 5-year period ending on the date of the sale or exchange, has been owned and used by the taxpayer as his principal residence for periods aggregating 3 years or more, this section shall apply with respect to so much of the gain from the sale or exchange of such property as is determined, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, to be attributable to the portion of the property so owned and used by the taxpayer.

(6) DETERMINATION OF MARITAL STATUS.—In the case of any sale or exchange, for purposes of this section—

(A) the determination of whether an individual is married shall be made as of the date of the sale or exchange; and

(B) an individual legally separated from his spouse under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance shall not be considered as married.

(7) APPLICATION OF sections 1033 and 1034S1034.—In applying sections 1033 (relating to involuntary conversions) and 1034 (relating to sale or exchange of residence), the amount realized from the sale or exchange of property shall be treated as being the amount determined without regard to this section, reduced by the amount of gain not included in gross income pursuant to an election under this section.

(8) PROPERTY ACQUIRED AFTER INVOLUNTARY CONVERSION.—If the basis of the property sold or exchanged is determined (in whole or in part) under subsection (b) of section 1033 (relating to basis of property acquired through involuntary conversion), then the holding and use by the taxpayer of the converted property shall be treated as holding and use by the taxpayer of the property sold or exchanged.

(9) DETERMINATION OF USE DURING PERIODS OF OUT-OF-RESIDENCE CARE.—In the case of a taxpayer who—

(A) becomes physically or mentally incapable of self-care, and

(B) owns property and uses such property as the taxpayer's principal residence during the 5-year period described in subsection (a)(2) for periods aggregating at least 1 year, then the taxpayer shall be treated as using such property as the taxpayer's principal residence during any time during such 5-year period in which the taxpayer owns the property and resides in any facility (including a nursing home) licensed by a State or political subdivision to care for an individual in the taxpayer's condition.

The above amendment generally applies to sales and exchanges after May 6, 1997. For special rules, see Act Sec. 312(d)(e)-(4), below.

Act Sec. 312(d)(e)-(4) provides:

(2) SALES BEFORE DATE OF ENACTMENT.—At the election of the taxpayer, the amendments made by this section shall not apply to any sale or exchange before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) CERTAIN SALES WITHIN 2 YEARS AFTER DATE OF ENACTMENT.—Section 121 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as amended by this section) shall be applied without regard to subsection (c)(2)(B) thereof in the case of any sale or exchange of property during the 2-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act if the taxpayer held such property on the date of the enactment of this Act and fails to meet the ownership and use requirements of subsection (a) thereof with respect to such property.

(4) BINDING CONTRACTS.—At the election of the taxpayer, the amendments made by this section shall not apply to a sale or exchange after the date of the enactment of this Act, if—

(A) such sale or exchange is pursuant to a contract which was binding on such date, or

(B) without regard to such amendments, gain would not be recognized under section 1034 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act) on such sale or exchange by reason of a new residence acquired on or before such date or with respect to the acquisition of which by the taxpayer a binding contract was in effect on such date.

This paragraph shall not apply to any sale or exchange by an individual if the treatment provided by section 877(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 applies to such individual.

(d) TERMINATION.—This section shall not apply to expenses paid with respect to courses beginning after May 31, 2000.

* * *

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 156. Committee Reports at ¶ 10,215.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 221(a) amended Code Sec. 127(d) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 127(d) read as follows:

(d) TERMINATION.—This section shall not apply to taxable years beginning after May 31, 1997. In the case of any taxable year beginning in 1997, only expenses paid with respect to courses beginning before July 1, 1997, shall be taken into account in determining the amount excluded under this section.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

[¶ 5053] CODE SEC. 130. CERTAIN PERSONAL INJURY LIABILITY ASSIGNMENTS.

(c) QUALIFIED ASSIGNMENT.—For purposes of this section, the term "qualified assignment" means any assignment of a liability to make periodic payments as damages (whether by suit or agreement), or as compensation under any workmen's compensation act, on account of personal injury or sickness (in a case involving physical injury or physical sickness)—

(1) if the assignee assumes such liability from a person who is a party to the suit or agreement, or the workmen's compensation claim, and

(2) if—

(A) such periodic payments are fixed and determinable as to amount and time of payment,

(B) such periodic payments cannot be accelerated, deferred, increased, or decreased by the recipient of such payments,

(C) the assignee's obligation on account of the personal injuries or sickness is no greater than the obligation of the person who assigned the liability, and

(D) such periodic payments are excludable from the gross income of the recipient under paragraph (1) or (2) of section 104(a).

The determination for purposes of this chapter of when the recipient is treated as having received any payment with respect to which there has been a qualified assignment shall be made without regard to any provision of such assignment which grants the recipient rights as a creditor greater than those of a general creditor.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 347. Committee Reports at ¶ 10,840.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 962(a)(1)-(3) amended Code Sec. 130(c) by inserting ", or as compensation under any workmen's compensation act," after "(whether by suit or agreement)" in the material preceding paragraph (1), by inserting "or the workmen's compensation claim," after "agreement," in paragraph (1), and by striking "section 104(a)(2)" in paragraph (2)(D) and inserting "paragraph (1) or (2) of section 104(a)".

The above amendment applies to claims under workmen's compensation acts filed after the date of the enactment of this Act.

[¶ 5055] CODE SEC. 132. CERTAIN FRINGE BENEFITS.

(e) DE MINIMIS FRINGE DEFINED.—For purposes of this section—

* * *

(2) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN EATING FACILITIES.—The operation by an employer of any eating facility for employees shall be treated as a de minimis fringe if—

(A) such facility is located on or near the business premises of the employer, and

(B) revenue derived from such facility normally equals or exceeds the direct operating costs of such facility.

The preceding sentence shall apply with respect to any highly compensated employee only if access to the facility is available on substantially the same terms to each member of a group of employees which is defined under a reasonable classification set up by the employer which does not discriminate in favor of highly compensated employees. For purposes of subparagraph (B), an employee entitled under section 119 to exclude the value of a meal provided at such facility shall be treated as having paid an amount for such meal equal to the direct operating costs of the facility attributable to such meal.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 970(a) amended Code Sec. 132(e)(2) by adding at the end a new sentence to read as above.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

(f) QUALIFIED TRANSPORTATION FRINGE.—

(4) BENEFIT NOT IN LIEU OF COMPENSATION.—Subsection (a)(5) shall not apply to any qualified transportation fringe unless such benefit is provided in addition to (and not in lieu of) any compensation otherwise payable to the employee. This paragraph shall not apply to any qualified parking provided in lieu of compensation which otherwise would have been includible in gross income of the employee, and no amount shall be included in the gross income of the employee solely because the employee may choose between the qualified parking and compensation.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 131 and 332. Committee Reports at ¶ 10,880 and 11,455.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1072(a) amended Code Sec. 132(f)(4) by adding at the end a new sentence to read as above.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

[¶ 5057] CODE SEC. 135. INCOME FROM UNITED STATES SAVINGS BONDS USED TO PAY HIGHER EDUCATION TUITION AND FEES.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(2) QUALIFIED HIGHER EDUCATION EXPENSES.—

(C) CONTRIBUTIONS TO QUALIFIED STATE TUITION PROGRAM.—Such term shall include any contribution to a qualified State tuition program (as defined in section 529) on behalf of a designated beneficiary (as defined in such section), or to an education individual retirement account (as defined in section 530) on behalf of an account beneficiary, who is an individual described in subparagraph (A); but there shall be no increase in the investment in the contract for purposes of applying section 529(c)(3)(A) by reason of any portion of such contribution which is not includible in gross income by reason of this subparagraph.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 211(c) amended Code Sec. 135(c)(2) by adding a new subparagraph (C) to read as above.

Act Sec. 213(e)(2) amended Code Sec. 135(c)(2)(C), as added by Act Sec. 211(c), by inserting ", or to an education individual retirement account (as defined in section 530) on behalf of an account beneficiary," after "(as defined in such section)".

The above amendments apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

(d) SPECIAL RULES.—

(2) COORDINATION WITH HIGHER EDUCATION CREDIT.—The amount of the qualified higher education expenses otherwise taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to the education of an individual shall be reduced (before the application of subsection (b)) by the amount of such expenses which are taken into account in determining the credit allowable to the taxpayer or any other person under section 25A with respect to such expenses.

(3) NO EXCLUSION FOR MARRIED INDIVIDUALS FILING SEPARATE RETURNS.—If the taxpayer is a married individual (within the meaning of section 7703), this section shall apply only if the taxpayer and his spouse file a joint return for the taxable year.

(4) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary may prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out this section, including regulations requiring record keeping and information reporting.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 139, 145 and 149. Committee Reports at ¶ 10,135, 10,175 and 10,185.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 201(d) amended Code Sec. 135(d) by redesignating paragraphs (2) and (3) as paragraphs (3) and (4), respectively, and by inserting after paragraph (1) a new paragraph (2) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to expenses paid after December 31, 1997 (in tax years ending after such date), for education furnished in academic periods beginning after such date.

[¶ 5059] CODE SEC. 137. ADOPTION ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS.

(b) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) DOLLAR LIMITATION.—The aggregate of the amounts paid or expenses incurred which may be taken into account under subsection (a) for all taxable years with respect to the adoption of a child by the taxpayer shall not exceed $5,000 ($6,000, in the case of a child with special needs).

* * *

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 125. Committee Reports at ¶ 13,695.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1601(h)(2)(C) amended Code Sec. 137(b)(1) by striking "amount excludable from gross income" and inserting "of the amounts paid or expenses incurred which may be taken into account".

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which it relates [effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

[Caution: Code Sec. 138, below, as added by Act Sec. 4006(a) of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.—CCH.]

[¶ 5060] CODE SEC. 138. MEDICARE+CHOICE MSA.

(a) EXCLUSION.—Gross income shall not include any payment to the Medicare+Choice MSA of an individual by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under part C of title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

(b) MEDICARE+CHOICE MSA.—For purposes of this section, the term "Medicare+Choice MSA" means a medical savings account (as defined in section 220(d))—

(1) which is designated as a Medicare+Choice MSA,

(2) with respect to which no contribution may be made other than—

(A) a contribution made by the Secretary of Health and Human Services pursuant to part C of title XVIII of the Social Security Act, or

(B) a trustee-to-trustee transfer described in subsection (c)(4),

(3) the governing instrument of which provides that trustee-to-trustee transfers described in subsection (c)(4) may be made to and from such account, and

(4) which is established in connection with an MSA plan described in section 1859(b)(3) of the Social Security Act.

(c) SPECIAL RULES FOR DISTRIBUTIONS.—

(1) DISTRIBUTIONS FOR QUALIFIED MEDICAL EXPENSES.—In applying section 220 to a Medicare+Choice MSA—

(A) qualified medical expenses shall not include amounts paid for medical care for any individual other than the account holder, and

(B) section 220(d)(2)(C) shall not apply.

(2) PENALTY FOR DISTRIBUTIONS FROM MEDICARE+CHOICE MSA NOT USED FOR QUALIFIED MEDICAL EXPENSES IF MINIMUM BALANCE NOT MAINTAINED.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The tax imposed by this chapter for any taxable year in which there is a payment or distribution from a Medicare+Choice MSA which is not used exclusively to pay the qualified medical expenses of the account holder shall be increased by 50 percent of the excess (if any) of—

(i) the amount of such payment or distribution, over

(ii) the excess (if any) of—

(I) the fair market value of the assets in such MSA as of the close of the calendar year preceding the calendar year in which the taxable year begins, over

(II) an amount equal to 60 percent of the deductible under the Medicare+Choice MSA plan covering the account holder as of January 1 of the calendar year in which the taxable year begins.

Section 220(f)(4) shall not apply to any payment or distribution from a Medicare+Choice MSA.

(B) EXCEPTIONS.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply if the payment or distribution is made on or after the date the account holder—

(i) becomes disabled within the meaning of section 72(m)(7), or

(ii) dies.

(C) SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)—

(i) all Medicare+Choice MSAs of the account holder shall be treated as 1 account,

(ii) all payments and distributions not used exclusively to pay the qualified medical expenses of the account holder during any taxable year shall be treated as 1 distribution, and

(iii) any distribution of property shall be taken into account at its fair market value on the date of the distribution.

(3) WITHDRAWAL OF ERRONEOUS CONTRIBUTIONS.—Section 220(f)(2) and paragraph (2) of this subsection shall not apply to any payment or distribution from a Medicare+Choice MSA to the Secretary of Health and Human Services of an erroneous contribution to such MSA and of the net income attributable to such contribution.

(4) TRUSTEE-TO-TRUSTEE TRANSFERS.—Section 220(f)(2) and paragraph (2) of this subsection shall not apply to any trustee-to-trustee transfer from a Medicare+Choice MSA of an account holder to another Medicare+Choice MSA of such account holder.

(d) SPECIAL RULES FOR TREATMENT OF ACCOUNT AFTER DEATH OF ACCOUNT HOLDER.—In applying section 220(f)(8)(A) to an account which was a Medicare+Choice MSA of a decedent, the rules of section 220(f) shall apply in lieu of the rules of subsection (c) of this section with respect to the spouse as the account holder of such Medicare+Choice MSA.

(e) REPORTS.—In the case of a Medicare+Choice MSA, the report under section 220(h)—

(1) shall include the fair market value of the assets in such Medicare+Choice MSA as of the close of each calendar year, and

(2) shall be furnished to the account holder—

(A) not later than January 31 of the calendar year following the calendar year to which such reports relate, and

(B) in such manner as the Secretary prescribes in such regulations.

(f) COORDINATION WITH LIMITATION ON NUMBER OF TAXPAYERS HAVING MEDICAL SAVINGS ACCOUNTS.—Subsection (i) of section 220 shall not apply to an individual with respect to a Medicare+Choice MSA, and Medicare+Choice MSA's shall not be taken into account in determining whether the numerical limitations under section 220(j) are exceeded.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 312(d)(1) amended Code Sec. 143(i)(1)(C)(i)(I) by striking "section 1034" and inserting "section 121".

The above amendment generally applies to sales and exchanges after May 6, 1997.

(k) OTHER DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section—

(11) SPECIAL RULES FOR RESIDENCES LOCATED IN DISASTER AREAS.—In the case of a residence located in an area determined by the President to warrant assistance from the Federal Government under the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (as in effect on the date of the enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997), this section shall be applied with the following modifications to financing provided with respect to such residence within 2 years after the date of the disaster declaration:

(A) Subsection (d) (relating to 3-year requirement) shall not apply.

(B) Subsections (e) and (f) (relating to purchase price requirement and income requirement) shall be applied as if such residence were a targeted area residence.

The preceding sentence shall apply only with respect to bonds issued after December 31, 1996, and before January 1, 1999.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 914 amended Code Sec. 143(k) by adding at the end a new paragraph (11) to read as above.

(c) TEMPORARY PERIOD EXCEPTION.—

* * *

(2) LIMITATION ON TEMPORARY PERIOD FOR POOLED FINANCINGS.—

(B) SHORTER TEMPORARY PERIOD FOR LOAN REPAYMENTS, ETC.—Subparagraph (A) shall be applied by substituting "3 months" for "6 months" with respect to the proceeds from the sale or repayment of any loan which are to be used to make or finance any loan. For purposes of the preceding sentence, a nonpurpose investment shall not be treated as a loan.

(C) BONDS USED TO PROVIDE CONSTRUCTION FINANCING.—In the case of an issue described in subparagraph (A) any portion of which is used to make or finance loans for construction expenditures (within the meaning of subsection (f)(4)(C)(iv)—

(i) rules similar to the rules of subsection (f)(4)(C)(v) shall apply, and

(ii) subparagraph (A) shall be applied with respect to such portion by substituting "2 years" for "6 months".

(D) EXCEPTION FOR MORTGAGE REVENUE BONDS.—This paragraph shall not apply to any qualified mortgage bond or qualified veterans' mortgage bond.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1444(a) amended Code Sec. 148(c)(2) by striking subparagraph (B) and by redesignating subparagraphs (C), (D), and (E) as subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D), respectively. Prior to being stricken, Code Sec. 148(c)(2)(B) read as follows:

(B) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN STUDENT LOAN POOLS.—In the case of the proceeds of an issue to be used to make or finance loans under a program described in section 144(b)(1)(A), subparagraph (A) shall be applied by substituting "18 months" for "6 months". The preceding sentence shall not apply to any bond issued after December 31, 1988.

The above amendment applies to bonds issued after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) SPECIAL RULES FOR REASONABLY REQUIRED RESERVE OR REPLACEMENT FUND.—

(3) [Stricken.]

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1443 amended Code Sec. 148(d) by striking paragraph (3). Prior to being stricken, Code Sec. 148(d)(3) read as follows:

(3) LIMITATION ON INVESTMENT IN NONPURPOSE INVESTMENTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A bond which is part of an issue which does not meet the requirements of subparagraph (B) shall be treated as an arbitrage bond.

(B) REQUIREMENTS.—An issue meets the requirements of this subparagraph only if—

(i) at no time during any bond year may the amount invested in nonpurpose investments with a yield materially higher than the yield on the issue exceed 150 percent of the debt service on the issue for the bond year, and

(ii) the aggregate amount invested as provided in clause (i) is promptly and appropriately reduced as the amount of outstanding bonds of the issue is reduced (or, in the case of a qualified mortgage bond or a qualified veterans' mortgage bond, as the mortgages are repaid).

(C) EXCEPTIONS FOR TEMPORARY PERIOD.—Subparagraph (B) shall not apply to—

(i) proceeds of the issue invested for an initial temporary period until such proceeds are needed for the governmental purpose of the issue, and

(ii) temporary investment periods related to debt service.

(D) DEBT SERVICE DEFINED.—For purposes of this paragraph, the debt service on the issue for any bond year is the scheduled amount of interest and amortization of principal payable for such year with respect to such issue. For purposes of the preceding sentence, there shall not be taken into account amounts scheduled with respect to any bond which has been redeemed before the beginning of the bond year.

(E) NO DISPOSITION IN CASE OF LOSS.—This paragraph shall not require the sale or disposition of any investment if such sale or disposition would result in a loss which exceeds the amount which, but for such sale or disposition, would at the time of such sale or disposition—

(i) be paid to the United States, or,

(ii) in the case of a qualified veterans' mortgage bond, be paid or credited mortgagors under section 143(g)(3)(A).

(F) EXCEPTION FOR GOVERNMENTAL USE BONDS AND QUALIFIED 501(C)(3) BONDS.—This paragraph shall not apply to any bond which is not a private activity bond or which is a qualified 501(c)(3) bond.

The above amendment applies to bonds issued after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(f) REQUIRED REBATE TO THE UNITED STATES.—

(4) SPECIAL RULES FOR APPLYING PARAGRAPH (2).—

* * *

(B) TEMPORARY INVESTMENTS.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary—

(ii) ADDITIONAL PERIOD FOR CERTAIN BONDS.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—In the case of an issue described in subclause (II), clause (i) shall be applied by substituting "1 year" for "6 months" each place it appears with respect to the portion of the proceeds of the issue which are not expended in accordance with clause (i) if such portion does not exceed 5 percent of the proceeds of the issue.

(C) EXCEPTION FROM REBATE FOR CERTAIN PROCEEDS TO BE USED TO FINANCE CONSTRUCTION EXPENDITURES.—

(xvii) TREATMENT OF BONA FIDE DEBT SERVICE FUNDS.—If the spending requirements of clause (ii) are met with respect to the available construction proceeds of a construction issue, then paragraph (2) shall not apply to earnings on a bona fide debt service fund for such issue.

(D) EXCEPTION FOR GOVERMENTAL UNITS ISSUING $5,000,000 OR LESS OF BONDS.—

(vii) INCREASE IN EXCEPTION FOR BONDS FINANCING PUBLIC SCHOOL CAPITAL EXPENDITURES.—Each of the $5,000,000 amounts in the preceding provisions of this subparagraph shall be increased by the lesser of $5,000,000 or so much of the aggregate face amount of the bonds as are attributable to financing the construction (within the meaning of subparagraph (C)(iv)) of public school facilities.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 223(a) amended Code Sec. 148(f)(4)(D) by adding at the end a new clause (vii) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to bonds issued after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1441 amended Code Sec. 148(f)(4)(B)(ii)(I) by striking "the lesser of 5 percent of the proceeds of the issue or $100,000" and inserting "5 percent of the proceeds of the issue".

Act Sec. 1442 amended Code Sec. 148(f)(4)(C) by adding at the end a new clause (xvii) to read as above.

Act Sec. 1444(b) amended Code Sec. 148(f)(4) by striking subparagraph (E). Prior to being stricken, Code Sec. 148(f)(4)(E) read as follows:

(E) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN QUALIFIED STUDENT LOAN BONDS.

(i) IN GENERAL.—In determining the aggregate amount earned on nonpurpose investments acquired with gross proceeds of an issue of bonds for a program described in section 144(b)(1)(A), the amount earned from investment of net proceeds of such issue during the initial temporary period under subsection (c) shall not be taken into account to the extent that the amount so earned is used to pay the reasonable—

(I) administrative costs of such program attributable to such issue and the costs of carrying such issue, and

(II) costs of issuing such issue, but only to the extent such costs were financed with proceeds of such issue and for which the issuer was not reimbursed. Amounts designated as interest on student loans shall not be taken into account in determining whether the issuer is reimbursed for such costs. Except as otherwise hereafter provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, costs described in subclause (I) paid from amounts earned as described in the first sentence of this clause may also be taken into account in determining the yield on the student loans under a program described in section 144(b)(1)(A).

(ii) ONLY ARBITRAGE ON AMOUNTS LOANED DURING TEMPORARY PERIOD TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT FOR ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS, ETC.—The amount earned from investment of net proceeds of an issue during the initial temporary period under subsection (c) shall be taken into account under clause (i)(I) only to the extent attributable to proceeds which were used to make or finance (not later than the close of such period) student loans under a program described in section 144(b)(1)(A).

(iii) ELECTION.—This subparagraph shall not apply to any issue if the issuer elects not to have this subparagraph apply to such issue.

(iv) TERMINATION.—This subparagraph shall not apply to any bond issued after December 31, 1988.

The above amendments apply to bonds issued after the date of the enactment of this Act.

[¶ 5067] CODE SEC. 162. TRADE OR BUSINESS EXPENSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business, including—

(1) a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered;

(2) traveling expenses (including amounts expended for meals and lodging other than amounts which are lavish or extravagant under the circumstances) while away from home in the pursuit of a trade or business; and

(3) rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession, for purposes of the trade or business, of property to which the taxpayer has not taken or is not taking title or in which he has no equity.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the place of residence of a Member of Congress (including any Delegate and Resident Commissioner) within the State, congressional district, or possession which he represents in Congress shall be considered his home, but amounts expended by such Members within each taxable year for living expenses shall not be deductible for income tax purposes in excess of $3,000. For purposes of paragraph (2), the taxpayer shall not be treated as being temporarily away from home during any period of employment if such period exceeds 1 year. The preceding sentence shall not apply to any Federal employee during any period for which such employee is certified by the Attorney General (or the designee thereof) as traveling on behalf of the United States in temporary duty status to investigate, or provide support services for the investigation of, a Federal crime.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1204(a) amended Code Sec. 162(a) by adding at the end a new sentence to read as above.

The above amendment applies to amounts paid or incurred with respect to tax years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(l) SPECIAL RULES FOR HEALTH INSURANCE COSTS OF SELF-EMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS.—

(1) ALLOWANCE OF DEDUCTION.—

* * *

(B) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable percentage shall be determined under the following table:

For taxable years beginning in calendar year—	The applicable percentage is—
1997	40
1998 and 1999	45
2000 and 2001	50
2002	60
2003 through 2005	80
2006	90
2007 and thereafter	100

(2) LIMITATIONS.—

* * *

(B) OTHER COVERAGE.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any taxpayer for any calendar month for which the taxpayer is eligible to participate in any subsidized health plan maintained by any employer of the taxpayer or of the spouse of the taxpayer. The preceding sentence shall be applied separately with respect to—

(i) plans which include coverage for qualified long-term care services (as defined in section 7702B(c)) or are qualified long-term care insurance contracts (as defined in section 7702B(b)), and

(ii) plans which do not include such coverage and are not such contracts.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 934(a) amended Code Sec. 162(l)(1)(B) by amending the table to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 162(l)(1)(B) read as follows:

(B) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable percentage shall be determined under the following table:

For taxable years beginning in calendar year—	The applicable percentage is—
1997	40 percent
1998 through 2002	45 percent
2003	50 percent
2004	60 percent
2005	70 percent
2006 or thereafter	80 percent

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1602(c) amended Code Sec. 162(l)(2)(B) by adding at the end a new sentence to read as above.

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-191) to which such amendment relates.

(o) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN REIMBURSED EXPENSES OF RURAL MAIL CARRIERS.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—In the case of any employee of the United States Postal Service who performs services involving the collection and delivery of mail on a rural route and who receives qualified reimbursements for the expenses incurred by such employee for the use of a vehicle in performing such services—

(A) the amount allowable as a deduction under this chapter for the use of a vehicle in performing such services shall be equal to the amount of such qualified reimbursements; and

(B) such qualified reimbursements shall be treated as paid under a reimbursement or other expense allowance arrangement for purposes of section 62(a)(2)(A) (and section 62(c) shall not apply to such qualified reimbursements).

(2) DEFINITION OF QUALIFIED REIMBURSEMENTS.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "qualified reimbursements" means the amounts paid by the United States Postal Service to employees as an equipment maintenance allowance under the 1991 collective bargaining agreement between the United States Postal Service and the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association. Amounts paid as an equipment maintenance allowance by such Postal Service under later collective bargaining agreements that supersede the 1991 agreement shall be considered qualified reimbursements if such amounts do not exceed the amounts that would have been paid under the 1991 agreement, adjusted for changes in the Consumer Price Index (as defined in section 1(f)(5)) since 1991.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1203(a) amended Code Sec. 162 by redesignating subsection (o) as subsection (p) and by inserting after subsection (n) a new subsection (o) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

(p) CROSS REFERENCE.—

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

[¶ 5069] CODE SEC. 163. INTEREST.

(h) DISALLOWANCE OF DEDUCTION FOR PERSONAL INTEREST.—

* * *

(2) PERSONAL INTEREST.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "personal interest" means any interest allowable as a deduction under this chapter other than—

(A) interest paid or accrued on indebtedness properly allocable to a trade or business (other than the trade or business of performing services as an employee),

(B) any investment interest (within the meaning of subsection (d)),

(C) any interest which is taken into account under section 469 in computing income or loss from a passive activity of the taxpayer,

(D) any qualified residence interest (within the meaning of paragraph (3)), and

(E) any interest payable under section 6601 on any unpaid portion of the tax imposed by section 2001 for the period during which an extension of time for payment of such tax is in effect under section 6163.

* * *

(5) [(4)] OTHER DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) QUALIFIED RESIDENCE.—For purposes of this subsection—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified residence" means—

(I) the principal residence (within the meaning of section 121) of the taxpayer, and

(II) 1 other residence of the taxpayer which is selected by the taxpayer for purposes of this subsection for the taxable year and which is used by the taxpayer as a residence (within the meaning of section 280A(d)(1)).

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 312(d)(1) amended Code Sec. 163(h)(4)(A)(i)(I) by striking "section 1034" and inserting "section 121".

The above amendment applies to sales and exchanges after May 6, 1997.

Act Sec. 503(b)(2)(B) amended Code Sec. 163(h)(2)(E) by striking "or 6166" and all that follows and inserting a period. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 163(h)(2)(E) read as follows:

(E) any interest payable under section 6601 on any unpaid portion of the tax imposed by section 2001 for the period during which an extension of time for payment of such tax is in effect under section 6163 or 6166 or under section 6166A (as in effect before its repeal by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981).

The above amendment generally applies to estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1997. For a special rule, see Act Sec. 503(d)(2), below.

Act Sec. 503(d)(2) provides:

(2) ELECTION.—In the case of the estate of any decedent dying before January 1, 1998, with respect to which there is an election under section 6166 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, the executor of the estate may elect to have the amendments made by this section apply with respect to installments due after the effective date of the election; except that the 2-percent portion of such installments shall be equal to the amount which would be the 4-percent portion of such installments without regard to such election. Such an election shall be made before January 1, 1999 in the manner prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury and, once made, is irrevocable.

(j) LIMITATION ON DEDUCTION FOR INTEREST ON CERTAIN INDEBTEDNESS.—

(2) CORPORATIONS TO WHICH SUBSECTION APPLIES.—

* * *

(B) EXCESS INTEREST EXPENSE.—

* * *

(iii) EXCESS LIMITATION.—For purposes of clause (ii), the term "excess limitation" means the excess (if any) of—

(I) 50 percent of the adjusted taxable income of the corporation, over

(II) the corporation's net interest expense.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1604(g)(1) amended Code Sec. 163(j)(2)(B)(iii) by striking "clause (i)" and inserting "clause (ii)".

The above amendment is effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(k) SECTION 6166 INTEREST.—No deduction shall be allowed under this section for any interest payable under section 6601 on any unpaid portion of the tax imposed by section 2001 for the period during which an extension of time for payment of such tax is in effect under section 6166.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 503(b)(2)(A) amended Code Sec. 163 by redesignating subsection (k) as subsection (l) and by inserting after subsection (j) a new subsection (k) to read as above.

The above amendment generally applies to estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1997. For a special rule, see Act Sec. 503(d)(2) in the amendment notes following Code Sec. 163(h), above.

(l) DISALLOWANCE OF DEDUCTION ON CERTAIN DEBT INSTRUMENTS OF CORPORATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—No deduction shall be allowed under this chapter for any interest paid or accrued on a disqualified debt instrument.

(2) DISQUALIFIED DEBT INSTRUMENT.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "disqualified debt instrument" means any indebtedness of a corporation which is payable in equity of the issuer or a related party.

(3) SPECIAL RULES FOR AMOUNTS PAYABLE IN EQUITY.—For purposes of paragraph (2), indebtedness shall be treated as payable in equity of the issuer or a related party only if—

(A) a substantial amount of the principal or interest is required to be paid or converted, or at the option of the issuer or a related party is payable in, or convertible into, such equity,

(B) a substantial amount of the principal or interest is required to be determined, or at the option of the issuer or a related party is determined, by reference to the value of such equity, or

(C) the indebtedness is part of an arrangement which is reasonably expected to result in a transaction described in subparagraph (A) or (B).

For purposes of this paragraph, principal or interest shall be treated as required to be so paid, converted, or determined if it may be required at the option of the holder or a related party and there is a substantial certainty the option will be exercised.

(4) RELATED PARTY.—For purposes of this subsection, a person is a related party with respect to another person if such person bears a relationship to such other person described in section 267(b) or 707(b).

(5) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this subsection, including regulations preventing avoidance of this subsection through the use of an issuer other than a corporation.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1005(a) amended Code Sec. 163, as amended by title V, by redesignating subsection (l) as subsection (m) and by inserting after subsection (k) a new subsection (l) to read as above.

The above amendment generally applies to disqualified debt instruments issued after June 8, 1997. For a transitional rule, see Act Sec. 1005(b)(2)(A)-(C), below.

Act Sec. 1005(b)(2)(A)-(C) provides:

(2) TRANSITION RULE.—The amendment made by this section shall not apply to any instrument issued after June 8, 1997, if such instrument is—

(A) issued pursuant to a written agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described on or before such date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the issuance.

(i) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section—

(8) TREATMENT OF LEASEHOLD IMPROVEMENTS.—

* * *

(C) CROSS REFERENCE.—

For treatment of qualified long-term real property constructed or improved in connection with cash or rent reduction from lessor to lessee, see section 110(b).

* * *

(14) QUALIFIED RENT-TO-OWN PROPERTY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified rent-to-own property" means property held by a rent-to-own dealer for purposes of being subject to a rent-to-own contract.

(B) RENT-TO-OWN DEALER.—The term "rent-to-own dealer" means a person that, in the ordinary course of business, regularly enters into rent-to-own contracts with customers for the use of consumer property, if a substantial portion of those contracts terminate and the property is returned to such person before the receipt of all payments required to transfer ownership of the property from such person to the customer.

(C) CONSUMER PROPERTY.—The term "consumer property" means tangible personal property of a type generally used within the home for personal use.

(D) RENT-TO-OWN CONTRACT.—The term "rent-to-own contract" means any lease for the use of consumer property between a rent-to-own dealer and a customer who is an individual which—

(i) is titled "Rent-to-Own Agreement" or "Lease Agreement with Ownership Option," or uses other similar language,

(ii) provides for level (or decreasing where no payment is less than 40 percent of the largest payment), regular periodic payments (for a payment period which is a week or month),

(iii) provides that legal title to such property remains with the rent-to-own dealer until the customer makes all the payments described in clause (ii) or early purchase payments required under the contract to acquire legal title to the item of property,

(iv) provides a beginning date and a maximum period of time for which the contract may be in effect that does not exceed 156 weeks or 36 months from such beginning date (including renewals or options to extend),

(v) provides for payments within the 156-week or 36-month period that, in the aggregate, generally exceed the normal retail price of the consumer property plus interest,

(vi) provides for payments under the contract that, in the aggregate, do not exceed $10,000 per item of consumer property,

(vii) provides that the customer does not have any legal obligation to make all the payments referred to in clause (ii) set forth under the contract, and that at the end of each payment period the customer may either continue to use the consumer property by making the payment for the next payment period or return such property to the rent-to-own dealer in good working order, in which case the customer does not incur any further obligations under the contract and is not entitled to a return of any payments previously made under the contract, and (viii) provides that the customer has no right to sell, sublease, mortgage, pawn, pledge, encumber, or otherwise dispose of the consumer property until all the payments stated in the contract have been made.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1086(b)(3) amended Code Sec. 168(i) by adding at the end a new paragraph (14) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to property placed in service after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Act Sec. 1213(c) amended Code Sec. 168(i)(8) by adding at the end a new subparagraph (C) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to leases entered into after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(j) PROPERTY ON INDIAN RESERVATIONS.—

* * *

(6) INDIAN RESERVATION DEFINED.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "Indian reservation" means a reservation, as defined in—

(A) section 3(d) of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1452(d)), or

(B) section 4(10) of the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 1903(10)).

For purposes of the preceding sentence, such section 3(d) shall be applied by treating the term "former Indian reservations in Oklahoma" as including only lands which are within the jurisdictional area of an Oklahoma Indian tribe (as determined by the Secretary of the Interior) and are recognized by such Secretary as eligible for trust land status under 25 CFR Part 151 (as in effect on the date of the enactment of this sentence).

(ii) after June 30, 1998.

(6) SPECIAL RULE FOR CONTRIBUTIONS OF COMPUTER TECHNOLOGY AND EQUIPMENT FOR ELEMENTARY OR SECONDARY SCHOOL PURPOSES.—

(A) LIMIT ON REDUCTION.—In the case of a qualified elementary or secondary educational contribution, the reduction under paragraph (1)(A) shall be no greater than the amount determined under paragraph (3)(B).

(B) QUALIFIED ELEMENTARY OR SECONDARY EDUCATIONAL CONTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term "qualified elementary or secondary educational contribution" means a charitable contribution by a corporation of any computer technology or equipment, but only if—

(i) the contribution is to—

(I) an educational organization described in subsection (b)(1)(A)(ii), or

(II) an entity described in section 501(c)(3) and exempt from tax under section 501(a) (other than an entity described in subclause (I)) that is organized primarily for purposes of supporting elementary and secondary education,

(ii) the contribution is made not later than 2 years after the date the taxpayer acquired the property (or in the case of property constructed by the taxpayer, the date the construction of the property is substantially completed),

(iii) the original use of the property is by the donor or the donee,

(iv) substantially all of the use of the property by the donee is for use within the United States for educational purposes in any of the grades K0912 that are related to the purpose or function of the organization or entity,

(v) the property is not transferred by the donee in exchange for money, other property, or services, except for shipping, installation and transfer costs,

(vi) the property will fit productively into the entity's education plan, and

(vii) the entity's use and disposition of the property will be in accordance with the provisions of clauses (iv) and (v).

(C) CONTRIBUTION TO PRIVATE FOUNDATION.—A contribution by a corporation of any computer technology or equipment to a private foundation (as defined in section 509) shall be treated as a qualified elementary or secondary educational contribution for purposes of this paragraph if—

(i) the contribution to the private foundation satisfies the requirements of clauses (ii) and (v) of subparagraph (B), and

(ii) within 30 days after such contribution, the private foundation—

(I) contributes the property to an entity described in clause (i) of subparagraph (B) that satisfies the requirements of clauses (iv) through (vii) of subparagraph (B), and

(II) notifies the donor of such contribution.

(D) SPECIAL RULE RELATING TO CONSTRUCTION OF PROPERTY.—For the purposes of this paragraph, the rules of paragraph (4)(C) shall apply.

(E) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this paragraph—

(i) COMPUTER TECHNOLOGY OR EQUIPMENT.—The term "computer technology or equipment" means computer software (as defined by section 197(e)(3)(B)), computer or peripheral equipment (as defined by section 168(i)(2)(B)), and fiber optic cable related to computer use.

(ii) CORPORATION.—The term "corporation" has the meaning given to such term by paragraph (4)(D).

(F) TERMINATION.—This paragraph shall not apply to any contribution made during any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1999.

(b) NET OPERATING LOSS CARRYBACKS AND CARRYOVERS.—

(1) YEARS TO WHICH LOSS MAY BE CARRIED.—

(A) GENERAL RULE.—Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, a net operating loss for any taxable year—

(i) shall be a net operating loss carryback to each of the 2 taxable years preceding the taxable year of such loss, and

(ii) shall be a net operating loss carryover to each of the 20 taxable years following the taxable year of the loss.

(F) RETENTION OF 3-YEAR CARRYBACK IN CERTAIN CASES.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (A)(i) shall be applied by substituting "3 years" for "2 years" with respect to the portion of the net operating loss for the taxable year which is an eligible loss with respect to the taxpayer.

(ii) ELIGIBLE LOSS.—For purposes of clause (i), the term "eligible loss" means—

(I) in the case of an individual, losses of property arising from fire, storm, shipwreck, or other casualty, or from theft,

(II) in the case of a taxpayer which is a small business, net operating losses attributable to Presidentially declared disasters (as defined in section 1033(h)(3)), and

(III) in the case of a taxpayer engaged in the trade or business of farming (as defined in section 263A(e)(4)), net operating losses attributable to such Presidentially declared disasters.

(iii) SMALL BUSINESS.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term "small business" means a corporation or partnership which meets the gross receipts test of section 448(c) for the taxable year in which the loss arose (or, in the case of a sole proprietorship, which would meet such test if such proprietorship were a corporation).

Act Sec. 1082(b) amended Code Sec. 172(b)(1) by adding at the end a new subparagraph (F) to read as above.

The above amendments apply to net operating losses for tax years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

[¶ 5081] CODE SEC. 198. EXPENSING OF ENVIRONMENTAL REMEDIATION COSTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—A taxpayer may elect to treat any qualified environmental remediation expenditure which is paid or incurred by the taxpayer as an expense which is not chargeable to capital account. Any expenditure which is so treated shall be allowed as a deduction for the taxable year in which it is paid or incurred.

(b) Qualified Environmental Remediation Expenditure.—For purposes of this section—

(1) In general.—The term "qualified environmental remediation expenditure" means any expenditure—

(A) which is otherwise chargeable to capital account, and

(B) which is paid or incurred in connection with the abatement or control of hazardous substances at a qualified contaminated site.

(2) Special rule for expenditures for depreciable property.—Such term shall not include any expenditure for the acquisition of property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation which is used in connection with the abatement or control of hazardous substances at a qualified contaminated site; except that the portion of the allowance under section 167 for such property which is otherwise allocated to such site shall be treated as a qualified environmental remediation expenditure.

(c) Qualified Contaminated Site.—For purposes of this section—

(1) Qualified contaminated site.—

(A) In general.—The term "qualified contaminated site" means any area—

(i) which is held by the taxpayer for use in a trade or business or for the production of income, or which is property described in section 1221(1) in the hands of the taxpayer,

(ii) which is within a targeted area, and

(iii) at or on which there has been a release (or threat of release) or disposal of any hazardous substance.

(B) Taxpayer must receive statement from State environmental agency.—An area shall be treated as a qualified contaminated site with respect to expenditures paid or incurred during any taxable year only if the taxpayer receives a statement from the appropriate agency of the State in which such area is located that such area meets the requirements of clauses (ii) and (iii) of subparagraph (A).

(C) Appropriate State agency.—For purposes of subparagraph (B), the chief executive officer of each State may, in consultation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, designate the appropriate State environmental agency within 60 days of the date of the enactment of this section. If the chief executive officer of a State has not designated an appropriate State environmental agency within such 60-day period, the appropriate environmental agency for such State shall be designated by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

(2) Targeted area.—

(A) In general.—The term "targeted area" means—

(i) any population census tract with a poverty rate of not less than 20 percent,

(ii) a population census tract with a population of less than 2,000 if—

(I) more than 75 percent of such tract is zoned for commercial or industrial use, and

(II) such tract is contiguous to 1 or more other population census tracts which meet the requirement of clause (i) without regard to this clause,

(iii) any empowerment zone or enterprise community (and any supplemental zone designated on December 21, 1994), and

(iv) any site announced before February 1, 1997, as being included as a brownfields pilot project of the Environmental Protection Agency.

(B) National priorities listed sites not included.—Such term shall not include any site which is on, or proposed for, the national priorities list under section 105(a)(8)(B) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (as in effect on the date of the enactment of this section).

(C) Certain rules to apply.—For purposes of this paragraph the rules of sections 1392(b)(4) and 1393(a)(9) shall apply.

(d) Hazardous Substance.—For purposes of this section—

(1) In general.—The term "hazardous substance" means—

(A) any substance which is a hazardous substance as defined in section 101(14) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980, and

(B) any substance which is designated as a hazardous substance under section 102 of such Act.

(2) Exception.—Such term shall not include any substance with respect to which a removal or remedial action is not permitted under section 104 of such Act by reason of subsection (a)(3) thereof.

(e) Deduction Recaptured as Ordinary Income on Sale, Etc.—Solely for purposes of section 1245, in the case of property to which a qualified environmental remediation expenditure would have been capitalized but for this section—

(1) the deduction allowed by this section for such expenditure shall be treated as a deduction for depreciation, and

(2) such property (if not otherwise section 1245 property) shall be treated as section 1245 property solely for purposes of applying section 1245 to such deduction.

(f) Coordination With Other Provisions.—Sections 280B and 468 shall not apply to amounts which are treated as expenses under this section.

(g) Regulations.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section.

(h) Termination.—This section shall not apply to expenditures paid or incurred after December 31, 2000.

(c) Special Rules for Certain Married Individuals.—

(1) In general.—In the case of an individual to whom this paragraph applies for the taxable year, the limitation of paragraph (1) of subsection (b) shall be equal to the lesser of—

(A) the dollar amount in effect under subsection (b)(1)(A) for the taxable year, or

(B) the sum of—

(i) the compensation includible in such individual's gross income for the taxable year, plus

(ii) the compensation includible in the gross income of such individual's spouse for the taxable year reduced by—

(I) the amount allowed as a deduction under subsection (a) to such spouse for such taxable year, and

(II) the amount of any contribution on behalf of such spouse to a Roth IRA under section 408A for such taxable year.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 302(c) amended Code Sec. 219(c)(1)(B)(ii) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 219(c)(1)(B)(ii) read as follows:

(ii) the compensation includible in the gross income of such individual's spouse for the taxable year reduced by the amount allowed as a deduction under subsection (a) to such spouse for such taxable year.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

(g) LIMITATION ON DEDUCTION FOR ACTIVE PARTICIPANTS IN CERTAIN PENSION PLANS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If (for any part of any plan year ending with or within a taxable year) an individual is an active participant, each of the dollar limitations contained in subsections (b)(1)(A) and (c)(1)(A) for such taxable year shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the amount determined under paragraph (2).

(2) AMOUNT OF REDUCTION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The amount determined under this paragraph with respect to any dollar limitation shall be the amount which bears the same ratio to such limitation as—

(i) the excess of—

(I) the taxpayer's adjusted gross income for such taxable year, over

(II) the applicable dollar amount, bears to

(ii) $10,000 ($20,000 in the case of a joint return for a taxable year beginning after December 31, 2006).

(3) ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME; APPLICABLE DOLLAR AMOUNT.—For purposes of this subsection—

* * *

(B) APPLICABLE DOLLAR AMOUNT.—The term "applicable dollar amount" means the following:

(i) In the case of a taxpayer filing a joint return:

For taxable years beginning in:	The applicable dollar amount is:
1998	$50,000
1999	$51,000
2000	$52,000
2001	$53,000
2002	$54,000
2003	$60,000
2004	$65,000
2005	$70,000
2006	$75,000
2007 and thereafter	$80,000

(ii) In the case of any other taxpayer (other than a married individual filing a separate return):

For taxable years beginning in:	The applicable dollar amount is:
1998	$30,000
1999	$31,000
2000	$32,000
2001	$33,000
2002	$34,000
2003	$40,000
2004	$45,000
2005 and thereafter	$50,000

(iii) In the case of a married individual filing a separate return, zero.

* * *

(7) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN SPOUSES.—In the case of an individual who is an active participant at no time during any plan year ending with or within the taxable year but whose spouse is an active participant for any part of any such plan year—

(A) the applicable dollar amount under paragraph (3)(B)(i) with respect to the taxpayer shall be $150,000, and

(B) the amount applicable under paragraph (2)(A)(ii) shall be $10,000.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 301(a)(1) amended Code Sec. 219(g)(3)(B) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 219(g)(3)(B) read as follows:

(B) APPLICABLE DOLLAR AMOUNT.—The term "applicable dollar amount" means—

(i) in the case of a taxpayer filing a joint return, $40,000,

(ii) in the case of any other taxpayer (other than a married individual filing a separate return), $25,000, and

(iii) in the case of a married individual filing a separate return, zero.

Act Sec. 301(a)(2) amended Code Sec. 219(g)(2)(A)(ii) by inserting "($20,000 in the case of a joint return for a taxable year beginning after December 31, 2006)".

Act Sec. 301(b)(1)-(2) amended Code Sec. 219(g) by striking "or the individual's spouse" after "an individual" in paragraph (1), and by adding at the end a new paragraph (7) to read as above.

The above amendments apply to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Balanced Budget Act

Act Sec. 4006(b)(2) amended Code Sec. 220(b) by adding at the end a new paragraph (7) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

* * *

(3) PERMITTED INSURANCE.—The term "permitted insurance" means—

(A) insurance if substantially all of the coverage provided under such insurance relates to—

(i) liabilities incurred under workers' compensation laws,

(ii) tort liabilities,

(iii) liabilities relating to ownership or use of property, or

(iv) such other similar liabilities as the Secretary may specify by regulations,

(B) insurance for a specified disease or illness, and

(C) insurance paying a fixed amount per day (or other period) of hospitalization.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1602(a)(2) amended Code Sec. 220(c)(3) by striking subparagraph (A) and redesignating subparagraphs (B) through (D) as subparagraphs (A) through (C), respectively. Prior to being stricken, Code Sec. 220(c)(3)(A) read as follows:

(A) Medicare supplemental insurance,

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-191) to which it relates [effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

(d) MEDICAL SAVINGS ACCOUNT.—For purposes of this section—

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1602(a)(3) amended Code Sec. 220(d)(2)(C) by striking "an eligible individual" and inserting "described in clauses (i) and (ii) of subsection (c)(1)(A)".

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-191) to which it relates [effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

[¶ 5089] CODE SEC. 221. INTEREST ON EDUCATION LOANS.

(a) ALLOWANCE OF DEDUCTION.—In the case of an individual, there shall be allowed as a deduction for the taxable year an amount equal to the interest paid by the taxpayer during the taxable year on any qualified education loan.

(b) MAXIMUM DEDUCTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the deduction allowed by subsection (a) for the taxable year shall not exceed the amount determined in accordance with the following table:

In the case of taxable years beginning in:	The dollar amount is:
1998	$1,000
1999	$1,500
2000	$2,000
2001 or thereafter	$2,500

(2) LIMITATION BASED ON MODIFIED ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The amount which would (but for this paragraph) be allowable as a deduction under this section shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the amount determined under subparagraph (B).

(B) AMOUNT OF REDUCTION.—The amount determined under this subparagraph is the amount which bears the same ratio to the amount which would be so taken into account as—

(i) the excess of—

(I) the taxpayer's modified adjusted gross income for such taxable year, over

(II) $40,000 ($60,000 in the case of a joint return), bears to

(ii) $15,000.

(C) MODIFIED ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—The term "modified adjusted gross income" means adjusted gross income determined—

(i) without regard to this section and sections 135, 137, 911, 931, and 933, and

(ii) after application of sections 86, 219, and 469.

For purposes of sections 86, 135, 137, 219, and 469, adjusted gross income shall be determined without regard to the deduction allowed under this section.

(c) DEPENDENTS NOT ELIGIBLE FOR DEDUCTION.—No deduction shall be allowed by this section to an individual for the taxable year if a deduction under section 151 with respect to such individual is allowed to another taxpayer for the taxable year beginning in the calendar year in which such individual's taxable year begins.

(d) LIMIT ON PERIOD DEDUCTION ALLOWED.—A deduction shall be allowed under this section only with respect to interest paid on any qualified education loan during the first 60 months (whether or not consecutive) in which interest payments are required. For purposes of this paragraph, any loan and all refinancings of such loan shall be treated as 1 loan.

(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) QUALIFIED EDUCATION LOAN.—The term "qualified education loan" means any indebtedness incurred to pay qualified higher education expenses—

(A) which are incurred on behalf of the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, or any dependent of the taxpayer as of the time the indebtedness was incurred,

(B) which are paid or incurred within a reasonable period of time before or after the indebtedness is incurred, and

(C) which are attributable to education furnished during a period during which the recipient was an eligible student.

Such term includes indebtedness used to refinance indebtedness which qualifies as a qualified education loan. The term "qualified education loan" shall not include any indebtedness owed to a person who is related (within the meaning of section 267(b) or 707(b)(1)) to the taxpayer.

(2) QUALIFIED HIGHER EDUCATION EXPENSES.—The term "qualified higher education expenses" means the cost of attendance (as defined in section 472 of the Higher Education Act of 1965, 20 U.S.C. 1087ll, as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act) at an eligible educational institution, reduced by the sum of—

(A) the amount excluded from gross income under section 127, 135, or 530 by reason of such expenses, and

(B) the amount of any scholarship, allowance, or payment described in section 25A(g)(2).

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "eligible educational institution" has the same meaning given such term by section 25A(f)(2), except that such term shall also include an institution conducting an internship or residency program leading to a degree or certificate awarded by an institution of higher education, a hospital, or a health care facility which offers postgraduate training.

(3) ELIGIBLE STUDENT.—The term "eligible student" has the meaning given such term by section 25A(b)(3).

(4) DEPENDENT.—The term "dependent" has the meaning given such term by section 152.

(f) SPECIAL RULES.—

(1) DENIAL OF DOUBLE BENEFIT.—No deduction shall be allowed under this section for any amount for which a deduction is allowable under any other provision of this chapter.

(2) MARRIED COUPLES MUST FILE JOINT RETURN.—If the taxpayer is married at the close of the taxable year, the deduction shall be allowed under subsection (a) only if the taxpayer and the taxpayer's spouse file a joint return for the taxable year.

(3) MARITAL STATUS.—Marital status shall be determined in accordance with section 7703.

(g) INFLATION ADJUSTMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a taxable year beginning after 2002, the $40,000 and $60,000 amounts in subsection (b)(2) shall each be increased by an amount equal to—

(A) such dollar amount, multiplied by

(B) the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for the calendar year in which the taxable year begins, determined by substituting "calendar year 2001" for "calendar year 1992" in subparagraph (B) thereof.

(2) ROUNDING.—If any amount as adjusted under paragraph (1) is not a multiple of $5,000, such amount shall be rounded to the next lowest multiple of $5,000.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 157. Committee Reports at ¶ 10,145.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 202(a) amended part VII of subchapter B of chapter 1 by redesignating Code Sec. 221 as Code Sec. 222 and by inserting after Code Sec. 220 a new Code Sec. 221 to read as above.

Act Sec. 202(e) provides:

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to any qualified education loan (as defined in section 221(e)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by this section) incurred on, before, or after the date of the enactment of this Act, but only with respect to—

(1) any loan interest payment due and paid after December 31, 1997, and

(2) the portion of the 60-month period referred to in section 221(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by this section) after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 202(a) amended part VII of subchapter B of chapter 1 by redesignating Code Sec. 221 as Code Sec. 222.

Act Sec. 202(e) provides:

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to any qualified education loan (as defined in section 221(e)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by this section) incurred on, before, or after the date of the enactment of this Act, but only with respect to—

(1) any loan interest payment due and paid after December 31, 1997, and

(2) the portion of the 60-month period referred to in section 221(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by this section) after December 31, 1997.

[¶ 5093] CODE SEC. 246. RULES APPLYING TO DEDUCTIONS FOR DIVIDENDS RECEIVED.

(c) EXCLUSION OF CERTAIN DIVIDENDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—No deduction shall be allowed under section 243, 244, or 245, in respect of any dividend on any share of stock—

(A) which is held by the taxpayer for 45 days or less during the 90-day period beginning on the date which is 45 days before the date on which such share becomes ex-dividend with respect to such dividend, or

(B) to the extent that the taxpayer is under an obligation (whether pursuant to a short sale or otherwise) to make related payments with respect to positions in substantially similar or related property.

(2) 90-DAY RULE IN THE CASE OF CERTAIN PREFERENCE DIVIDENDS.—In the case of stock having preference in dividends, if the taxpayer receives dividends with respect to such stock which are attributable to a period or periods aggregating in excess of 366 days, paragraph (1)(A) shall be applied—

(A) by substituting "90 days" for "45 days" each place it appears, and

(B) by substituting "180-day period" for "90-day period".

(3) DETERMINATION OF HOLDING PERIODS.—For purposes of this subsection, in determining the period for which the taxpayer has held any share of stock—

(A) the day of disposition, but not the day of acquisition, shall be taken into account, and

(B) paragraph (4) of section 1223 shall not apply.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 517. Committee Reports at ¶ 11,185.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1015(a) amended Code Sec. 246(c)(1)(A) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 246(c)(1)(A) read as follows:

(A) which is held by the taxpayer for 45 days or less or,

Act Sec. 1015(b)(1) amended Code Sec. 246(c)(2) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 246(c)(2) read as follows:

(2) 90-DAY RULE IN THE CASE OF CERTAIN PREFERENCE DIVIDENDS.—In the case of any stock having preference in dividends, the holding period specified in paragraph (1)(A) shall be 90 days in lieu of 45 days if the taxpayer receives dividends with respect to such stock which are attributable to a period or periods aggregating in excess of 366 days.

Act Sec. 1015(b)(2) amended Code Sec. 246(c)(3) by adding "and" at the end of subparagraph (A), by striking subparagraph (B), and by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (B). Prior to being stricken, Code Sec. 246(c)(3)(B) read as follows:

(B) there shall not be taken into account any day which is more than 45 days (or 90 days in the case of stock to which paragraph (2) applies) after the date on which such share becomes ex-dividend, and

The above amendments generally apply to dividends received or accrued after the 30th day after the date of the enactment of this Act. For a transitional rule, see Act Sec. 1015(c)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1015(c)(2) provides:

(2) TRANSITIONAL RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to dividends received or accrued during the 2-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act if—

(A) the dividend is paid with respect to stock held by the taxpayer on June 8, 1997, and all times thereafter until the dividend is received,

(B) such stock is continuously subject to a position described in section 246(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 on June 8, 1997, and all times thereafter until the dividend is received, and

(C) such stock and position are clearly identified in the taxpayer's records within 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Stock shall not be treated as meeting the requirement of subparagraph (B) if the position is sold, closed, or otherwise terminated and reestablished.

[¶ 5095] CODE SEC. 263. CAPITAL EXPENDITURES.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—No deduction shall be allowed for—

(1) Any amount paid out for new buildings or for permanent improvements or betterments made to increase the value of any property or estate. This paragraph shall not apply to—

(A) expenditures for the development of mines or deposits deductible under section 616,

(B) research and experimental expenditures deductible under section 174,

(C) soil and water conservation expenditures deductible under section 175,

(D) expenditures by farmers for fertilizer, etc., deductible under section 180,

(E) expenditures for removal of architectural and transportation barriers to the handicapped and elderly which the taxpayer elects to deduct under section 190,

(F) expenditures for tertiary injectants with respect to which a deduction is allowed under section 193;

(G) expenditures for which a deduction is allowed under section 179*; or*

(H) expenditures for which a deduction is allowed under section 179A.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1604(a)(1) amended Code Sec. 263(a)(1) by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (F), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (G) and inserting "; or", and by adding at the end a new subparagraph (H) to read as above.

The above amendment is effective as if included in the amendments made by Act Sec. 1913 of the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (P.L. 102-486) [effective for property placed in service after June 30, 1993.—CCH.].

[¶ 5097] CODE SEC. 264. CERTAIN AMOUNTS PAID IN CONNECTION WITH INSURANCE CONTRACTS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—No deduction shall be allowed for—

(1) Premiums on any life insurance policy, or endowment or annuity contract, if the taxpayer is directly or indirectly a beneficiary under the policy or contract.

* * *

(4) Except as provided in subsection (d), any interest paid or accrued on any indebtedness with respect to 1 or more life insurance policies owned by the taxpayer covering the life of any individual, or any endowment or annuity contracts owned by the taxpayer covering any individual.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1084(a)(1) amended Code Sec. 264(a)(1) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 264(a)(1) read as follows:

(1) Premiums paid on any life insurance policy covering the life of any officer or employee, or of any person financially interested in any trade or business carried on by the taxpayer, when the taxpayer is directly or indirectly a beneficiary under such policy.

Act Sec. 1084(b)(1) amended Code Sec. 264(a)(4) by striking "individual, who" and all that follows and inserting "individual.". Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 264(a)(4) read as follows:

(4) Except as provided in subsection (d), any interest paid or accrued on any indebtedness with respect to 1 or more life insurance policies owned by the taxpayer covering the life of any individual, or any endowment or annuity contracts owned by the taxpayer covering any individual, who—

(A) is or was an officer or employee, or

(B) is or was financially interested in, any trade or business carried on (currently or formerly) by the taxpayer.

Act Sec. 1084(d)[(f)] provides:

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to contracts issued after June 8, 1997, in taxable years ending after such date. For purposes of the preceding sentence, any material increase in the death benefit or other material change in the contract shall be treated as a new contract but the addition of covered lives shall be treated as a new contract only with respect to such additional covered lives. For purposes of this subsection, an increase in the death benefit under a policy or contract issued in connection with a lapse described in section 501(d)(2) of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 shall not be treated as a new contract.

Act Sec. 1602(f)(1) amended Code Sec. 264(a)(4) by striking subparagraph (A) and all that follows through "by the taxpayer." and inserting new subparagraphs (A) and (B) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 264(a)(4)(A) and the material that followed it read as follows:

(4) Except as provided in subsection (d), any interest paid or accrued on any indebtedness with respect to 1 or more life insurance policies owned by the taxpayer covering the life of any individual, or any endowment or annuity contracts owned by the taxpayer covering any individual, who—

(A) is an officer or employee of, or

(B) is financially interested in, any trade or business carried on by the taxpayer.

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-191) to which it relates [generally effective for interest paid or accrued after October 13, 1995.—CCH.].

(b) EXCEPTIONS TO SUBSECTION (a)(1).—Subsection (a)(1) shall not apply to—

(1) any annuity contract described in section 72(s)(5), and

(2) any annuity contract to which section 72(u) applies.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1084(a)(2) amended Code Sec. 264 by redesignating subsections (b), (c), and (d) as subsections (c), (d), and (e), respectively, and by inserting after subsection (a) a new subsection (b) to read as above.

For the effective date of the above amendment, see Act Sec. 1084(d)[(f)], in the amendment notes following Code Sec. 264(a), above.

(c) CONTRACTS TREATED AS SINGLE PREMIUM CONTRACTS.—For purposes of subsection (a) (2), a contract shall be treated as a single premium contract—

(1) if substantially all the premiums on the contract are paid within a period of 4 years from the date on which the contract is purchased, or

(2) if an amount is deposited after March 1, 1954, with the insurer for payment of a substantial number of future premiums on the contract.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1084(a)(2) amended Code Sec. 264 by redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (c).

For the effective date of the above amendment, see Act Sec. 1084(d)[(f)], in the amendment notes following Code Sec. 264(a), above.

(d) EXCEPTIONS.—Subsection (a)(3) shall not apply to any amount paid or accrued by a person during a taxable year on indebtedness incurred or continued as part of a plan referred to in subsection (a)(3)—

(1) if no part of 4 of the annual premiums due during the 7-year period (beginning with the date the first premium on the contract to which such plan relates was paid) is paid under such plan by means of indebtedness,

(2) if the total of the amounts paid or accrued by such person during such taxable year for which (without regard to this paragraph) no deduction would be allowable by reason of subsection (a)(3) does not exceed $100,

(3) if such amount was paid or accrued on indebtedness incurred because of an unforeseen substantial loss of income or unforeseen substantial increase in his financial obligations, or

(4) if such indebtedness was incurred in connection with his trade or business.

For purposes of applying paragraph (1), if there is a substantial increase in the premiums on a contract, a new 7-year period described in such paragraph with respect to such contract shall commence on the date the first such increased premium is paid.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1084(a)(2) amended Code Sec. 264 by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d).

For the effective date of the above amendment, see Act Sec. 1084(d)[(f)], in the amendment notes following Code Sec. 264(a), above.

(e) SPECIAL RULES FOR APPLICATION OF SUBSECTION (a)(4).—

(2) INTEREST RATE CAP ON KEY PERSONS AND PRE-1986 CONTRACTS.—

* * *

(B) APPLICABLE RATE OF INTEREST.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)—

* * *

(ii) PRE-1986 CONTRACTS.—In the case of indebtedness on a contract purchased on or before June 20, 1986—

(I) which is a contract providing a fixed rate of interest, the applicable rate of interest for any month shall be the Moody's rate described in clause (i) for the month in which the contract was purchased, or

(II) which is a contract providing a variable rate of interest, the applicable rate of interest for any month in an applicable period shall be such Moody's rate for the third month preceding the first month in such period.

For purposes of subclause (II), the term "applicable period" means the 12-month period beginning on the date the policy is issued (and each successive 12-month period thereafter) unless the taxpayer elects a number of months (not greater than 12) other than such 12-month period to be its applicable period. Such an election shall be made not later than the 90th day after the date of the enactment of this sentence and, if made, shall apply to the taxpayer's first taxable year ending on or after October 13, 1995, and all subsequent taxable years unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary.

(4) 20-PERCENT OWNER.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "20-percent owner" means—

(A) if the taxpayer is a corporation, any person who owns directly 20 percent or more of the outstanding stock of the corporation or stock possessing 20 percent or more of the total combined voting power of all stock of the corporation, or

(B) if the taxpayer is not a corporation, any person who owns 20 percent or more of the capital or profits interest in the taxpayer.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1084(a)(2) amended Code Sec. 264 by redesignating subsection (d) as subsection (e).

For the effective date of the above amendment, see Act Sec. 1084(d)[(f)], in the amendment notes following Code Sec. 264(a), above.

Act Sec. 1602(f)(2) amended the last two sentences of Code Sec. 264(d)(2)(B)(ii) to read as above. Prior to amendment, the last two sentences of Code Sec. 264(d)(2)(B)(ii) read as follows:

For purposes of subclause (II), the taxpayer shall elect an applicable period for such contract on its return of tax imposed by this chapter for its first taxable year ending on or after October 13, 1995. Such applicable period shall be for any number of months (not greater than 12) specified in the election and may not be changed by the taxpayer without the consent of the Secretary.

Act Sec. 1602(f)(3) amended Code Sec. 264(d)(4)(B) by striking "the employer" and inserting "the taxpayer".

The above amendments are effective as if included in the provisions of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-191) to which they relate [generally effective for interest paid or accrued after October 13, 1995.—CCH.].

(f) PRO RATA ALLOCATION OF INTEREST EXPENSE TO POLICY CASH VALUES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—No deduction shall be allowed for that portion of the taxpayer's interest expense which is allocable to unborrowed policy cash values.

(2) ALLOCATION.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the portion of the taxpayer's interest expense which is allocable to unborrowed policy cash values is an amount which bears the same ratio to such interest expense as—

(A) the taxpayer's average unborrowed policy cash values of life insurance policies, and annuity and endowment contracts, issued after June 8, 1997, bears to

(B) the sum of—

(i) in the case of assets of the taxpayer which are life insurance policies or annuity or endowment contracts, the average unborrowed policy cash values of such policies and contracts, and

(ii) in the case of assets of the taxpayer not described in clause (i), the average adjusted bases (within the meaning of section 1016) of such assets.

(3) UNBORROWED POLICY CASH VALUE.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "unborrowed policy cash value" means, with respect to any life insurance policy or annuity or endowment contract, the excess of—

(A) the cash surrender value of such policy or contract determined without regard to any surrender charge, over

(B) the amount of any loan with respect to such policy or contract.

(4) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN POLICIES AND CONTRACTS.—

(A) POLICIES AND CONTRACTS COVERING 20-PERCENT OWNERS, OFFICERS, DIRECTORS, AND EMPLOYEES.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any policy or contract owned by an entity engaged in a trade or business if such policy or contract covers only 1 individual and if such individual is (at the time first covered by the policy or contract)—

(i) a 20-percent owner of such entity, or

(ii) an individual (not described in clause (i)) who is an officer, director, or employee of such trade or business.

A policy or contract covering a 20-percent owner of such entity shall not be treated as failing to meet the requirements of the preceding sentence by reason of covering the joint lives of such owner and such owner's spouse.

(B) CONTRACTS SUBJECT TO CURRENT INCOME INCLUSION.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any annuity contract to which section 72(u) applies.

(C) COORDINATION WITH PARAGRAPH (2).—Any policy or contract to which paragraph (1) does not apply by reason of this paragraph shall not be taken into account under paragraph (2).

(D) 20-PERCENT OWNER.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term "20-percent owner" has the meaning given such term by subsection (e)(4).

(5) EXCEPTION FOR POLICIES AND CONTRACTS HELD BY NATURAL PERSONS; TREATMENT OF PARTNERSHIPS AND S CORPORATIONS.—

(A) Policies and contracts held by natural persons.—

(i) In general.—This subsection shall not apply to any policy or contract held by a natural person.

(ii) Exception where business is beneficiary.—If a trade or business is directly or indirectly the beneficiary under any policy or contract, such policy or contract shall be treated as held by such trade or business and not by a natural person.

(iii) Special rules.—

(I) Certain trades or businesses not taken into account.—Clause (ii) shall not apply to any trade or business carried on as a sole proprietorship and to any trade or business performing services as an employee.

(II) Limitation on unborrowed cash value.—The amount of the unborrowed cash value of any policy or contract which is taken into account by reason of clause (ii) shall not exceed the benefit to which the trade or business is directly or indirectly entitled under the policy or contract.

(iv) Reporting.—The Secretary shall require such reporting from policyholders and issuers as is necessary to carry out clause (ii). Any report required under the preceding sentence shall be treated as a statement referred to in section 6724(d)(1).

(B) Treatment of partnerships and S corporations.—In the case of a partnership or S corporation, this subsection shall be applied at the partnership and corporate levels.

(6) Special rules.—

(A) Coordination with subsection (a) and section 265.—If interest on any indebtedness is disallowed under subsection (a) or section 265—

(i) such disallowed interest shall not be taken into account for purposes of applying this subsection, and

(ii) the amount otherwise taken into account under paragraph (2)(B) shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the amount of such indebtedness.

(B) Coordination with section 263A.—This subsection shall be applied before the application of section 263A (relating to capitalization of certain expenses where taxpayer produces property).

(7) Interest expense.—The term "interest expense" means the aggregate amount allowable to the taxpayer as a deduction for interest (within the meaning of section 265(b)(4)) for the taxable year (determined without regard to this subsection, section 265(b), and section 291).

(8) Aggregation rules.—

(A) In general.—All members of a controlled group (within the meaning of subsection (d)(5)(B)) shall be treated as 1 taxpayer for purposes of this subsection.

(B) Treatment of insurance companies.—This subsection shall not apply to an insurance company subject to tax under subchapter L, and subparagraph (A) shall be applied without regard to any member of an affiliated group which is an insurance company.

(b) Pro Rata Allocation of Interest Expense of Financial Institutions to Tax-Exempt Interest.—

(4) Definitions.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) Interest expense.—The term "interest expense" means the aggregate amount allowable to the taxpayer as a deduction for interest for the taxable year (determined without regard to this subsection, section 264, and section 291). For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "interest" includes amounts (whether or not designated as interest) paid in respect of deposits, investment certificates, or withdrawable or repurchasable shares.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1084(c)[(e)] amended Code Sec. 265(b)(4)(A) by inserting ", section 264," before "and section 291".

Act Sec. 1084(d)[(f)] provides:

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to contracts issued after June 8, 1997, in taxable years ending after such date. For purposes of the preceding sentence, any material increase in the death benefit or other material change in the contract shall be treated as a new contract but the addition of covered lives shall be treated as a new contract only with respect to such additional covered lives. For purposes of this subsection, an increase in the death benefit under a policy or contract issued in connection with a lapse described in section 501(d)(2) of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 shall not be treated as a new contract.

(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any expenses for food or beverages consumed while away from home (within the meaning of section 162(a)(2)) by an individual during, or incident to, the period of duty subject to the hours of service limitations of the Department of Transportation, paragraph (1) shall be applied by substituting "the applicable percentage" for "50 percent".

(B) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term "applicable percentage" means the percentage determined under the following table:

For taxable years beginning in calendar year—	The applicable percentage is—
1998 or 1999	55
2000 or 2001	60
2002 or 2003	65

(1) CERTAIN BUSINESS USE.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to any item to the extent such item is allocable to a portion of the dwelling unit which is exclusively used on a regular basis—

(A) as the principal place of business for any trade or business of the taxpayer,

(B) as a place of business which is used by patients, clients, or customers in meeting or dealing with the taxpayer in the normal course of his trade or business, or

(C) in the case of a separate structure which is not attached to the dwelling unit, in connection with the taxpayer's trade or business.

In the case of an employee, the preceding sentence shall apply only if the exclusive use referred to in the preceding sentence is for the convenience of his employer. For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term "principal place of business" includes a place of business which is used by the taxpayer for the administrative or management activities of any trade or business of the taxpayer if there is no other fixed location of such trade or business where the taxpayer conducts substantial administrative or management activities of such trade or business.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 312(d)(1) amended Code Sec. 280A(d)(4)(A) by striking "section 1034" and inserting "section 121".

Act Sec. 312(d)[(e)] provides:

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to sales and exchanges after May 6, 1997.

(2) SALES BEFORE DATE OF ENACTMENT.—At the election of the taxpayer, the amendments made by this section shall not apply to any sale or exchange before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) CERTAIN SALES WITHIN 2 YEARS AFTER DATE OF ENACTMENT.—Section 121 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as amended by this section) shall be applied without regard to subsection (c)(2)(B) thereof in the case of any sale or exchange of property during the 2-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act if the taxpayer held such property on the date of the enactment of this Act and fails to meet the ownership and use requirements of subsection (a) thereof with respect to such property.

(4) BINDING CONTRACTS.—At the election of the taxpayer, the amendments made by this section shall not apply to a sale or exchange after the date of the enactment of this Act, if—

(A) such sale or exchange is pursuant to a contract which was binding on such date, or

(B) without regard to such amendments, gain would not be recognized under section 1034 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act) on such sale or exchange by reason of a new residence acquired on or before such date or with respect to the acquisition of which by the taxpayer a binding contract was in effect on such date.

This paragraph shall not apply to any sale or exchange by an individual if the treatment provided by section 877(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 applies to such individual.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 971(a) amended Code Sec. 280F(a)(1) by adding at the end a new subparagraph (C) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to property placed in service after the date of the enactment of this Act and before January 1, 2005.

[¶ 5111] CODE SEC. 304. REDEMPTION THROUGH USE OF RELATED CORPORATIONS.

(a) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN STOCK PURCHASES.—

(1) ACQUISITION BY RELATED CORPORATION (OTHER THAN SUBSIDIARY).—For purposes of sections 302 and 303, if—

(A) one or more persons are in control of each of two corporations, and

(B) in return for property, one of the corporations acquires stock in the other corporation from the person (or persons) so in control, then (unless paragraph (2) applies) such property shall be treated as a distribution in redemption of the stock of the corporation acquiring such stock. To the extent that such distribution is treated as a distribution to which section 301 applies, the transferor and the acquiring corporation shall be treated in the same manner as if the transferor had transferred the stock so acquired to the acquiring corporation in exchange for stock of the acquiring corporation in a transaction to which section 351(a) applies, and then the acquiring corporation had redeemed the stock it was treated as issuing in such transaction.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1013(a) amended the last sentence of Code Sec. 304(a)(1) to read as above. Prior to amendment, the last sentence of Code Sec. 304(a)(1) read as follows:

To the extent that such distribution is treated as a distribution to which section 301 applies, the stock so acquired shall be treated as having been transferred by the person from whom acquired, and as having been received by the corporation acquiring it, as a contribution to the capital of such corporation.

The above amendment generally applies to distributions and acquisitions after June 8, 1997. For a transition rule, see Act Sec. 1013(d)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1013(d)(2) provides:

(2) TRANSITION RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any distribution or acquisition after June 8, 1997, if such distribution or acquisition is—

(A) made pursuant to a written agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described in a public announcement or filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission on or before such date.

(b) SPECIAL RULES FOR APPLICATION OF SUBSECTION (a).—

(5) ACQUISITIONS BY FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any acquisition to which subsection (a) applies in which the acquiring corporation is a foreign corporation, the only earnings and profits taken into account under paragraph (2)(A) shall be those earnings and profits—

(i) which are attributable (under regulations prescribed by the Secretary) to stock of the acquiring corporation owned (within the meaning of section 958(a)) by a corporation or individual which is—

(I) a United States shareholder (within the meaning of section 951(b)) of the acquiring corporation, and

(II) the transferor or a person who bears a relationship to the transferor described in section 267(b) or 707(b), and

(ii) which were accumulated during the period or periods such stock was owned by such person while the acquiring corporation was a controlled foreign corporation.

(B) APPLICATION OF SECTION 1248.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the rules of section 1248(d) shall apply except to the extent otherwise provided by the Secretary.

(C) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as are appropriate to carry out the purposes of this paragraph.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1013(c) amended Code Sec. 304(b) by adding at the end a new paragraph (5) to read as above.

The above amendment generally applies to distributions and acquisitions after June 8, 1997. For a transition rule, see Act Sec. 1013(d)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1013(d)(2) provides:

(2) TRANSITION RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any distribution or acquisition after June 8, 1997, if such distribution or acquisition is—

(A) made pursuant to a written agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described in a public announcement or filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission on or before such date.

(c) SPECIAL RULES WHERE DISTRIBUTION TO SHAREHOLDERS.—In determining control for purposes of this section—

(1) the fact that any corporate transferor distributes part or all of the stock in the corporation which it receives in the exchange to its shareholders shall not be taken into account, and

(2) if the requirements of section 355 are met with respect to such distribution, the shareholders shall be treated as in control of such corporation immediately after the exchange if the shareholders own (immediately after the distribution) stock possessing—

(A) more than 50 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock of such corporation entitled to vote, and

(B) more than 50 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of such corporation.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1012(c)(1) amended Code Sec. 351(c) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 351(c) read as follows:

(c) SPECIAL RULE.—In determining control, for purposes of this section, the fact that any corporate transferor distributes part or all of the stock which it receives in the exchange to its shareholders shall not be taken into account.

The above amendment generally applies to transfers after the date of the enactment of this Act. For a transition rule, see Act Sec. 1012(d)(3), below.

Act Sec. 1012(d)(3), provides:

(3) TRANSITION RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any distribution pursuant to a plan (or series of related transactions) which involves an acquisition described in section 355(e)(2)(A)(ii) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (or, in the case of the amendments made by subsection (c), any transfer) occurring after April 16, 1997, if such acquisition or transfer is—

(A) made pursuant to an agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described on or before such date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the acquisition or transfer.

This paragraph shall not apply to any agreement, ruling request, or public announcement or filing unless it identifies the acquirer of the distributing corporation or any controlled corporation, or the transferee, whichever is applicable.

(e) EXCEPTIONS.—This section shall not apply to—

(1) TRANSFER OF PROPERTY TO AN INVESTMENT COMPANY.—A transfer of property to an investment company. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the determination of whether a company is an investment company shall be made—

(A) by taking into account all stock and securities held by the company, and

(B) by treating as stock and securities—

(i) money,

(ii) stocks and other equity interests in a corporation, evidences of indebtedness, options, forward or futures contracts, notional principal contracts and derivatives,

(iii) any foreign currency,

(iv) any interest in a real estate investment trust, a common trust fund, a regulated investment company, a publicly-traded partnership (as defined in section 7704(b)) or any other equity interest (other than in a corporation) which pursuant to its terms or any other arrangement is readily convertible into, or exchangeable for, any asset described in any preceding clause, this clause or clause (v) or (viii),

(v) except to the extent provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, any interest in a precious metal, unless such metal is used or held in the active conduct of a trade or business after the contribution,

(vi) except as otherwise provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, interests in any entity if substantially all of the assets of such entity consist (directly or indirectly) of any assets described in any preceding clause or clause (viii),

(vii) to the extent provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, any interest in any entity not described in clause (vi), but only to the extent of the value of such interest that is attributable to assets listed in clauses (i) through (v) or clause (viii), or (viii) any other asset specified in regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

The Secretary may prescribe regulations that, under appropriate circumstances, treat any asset described in clauses (i) through (v) as not so listed.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1002(a) amended Code Sec. 351(e)(1) by adding at the end new material to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 351(e)(1) read as follows:

(1) TRANSFER OF PROPERTY TO AN INVESTMENT COMPANY.—A transfer of property to an investment company.

The above amendment generally applies to transfers after June 8, 1997, in tax years ending after such date. For a special rule, see Act Sec. 1002(b)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1002(b)(2), provides:

(2) BINDING CONTRACTS.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall not apply to any transfer pursuant to a written binding contract in effect on June 8, 1997, and at all times thereafter before such transfer if such contract provides for the transfer of a fixed amount of property.

(g) NONQUALIFIED PREFERRED STOCK NOT TREATED AS STOCK.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a person who transfers property to a corporation and receives nonqualified preferred stock—

(A) subsection (a) shall not apply to such transferor,

(B) subsection (b) shall apply to such transferor, and

(C) such nonqualified preferred stock shall be treated as other property for purposes of applying subsection (b).

(2) NONQUALIFIED PREFERRED STOCK.—For purposes of paragraph (1)—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "nonqualified preferred stock" means preferred stock if—

(i) the holder of such stock has the right to require the issuer or a related person to redeem or purchase the stock,

(ii) the issuer or a related person is required to redeem or purchase such stock,

(iii) the issuer or a related person has the right to redeem or purchase the stock and, as of the issue date, it is more likely than not that such right will be exercised, or

(iv) the dividend rate on such stock varies in whole or in part (directly or indirectly) with reference to interest rates, commodity prices, or other similar indices.

(B) LIMITATIONS.—Clauses (i), (ii), and (iii) of subparagraph (A) shall apply only if the right or obligation referred to therein may be exercised within the 20-year period beginning on the issue date of such stock and such right or obligation is not subject to a contingency which, as of the issue date, makes remote the likelihood of the redemption or purchase.

(C) EXCEPTIONS FOR CERTAIN RIGHTS OR OBLIGATIONS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—A right or obligation shall not be treated as described in clause (i), (ii), or (iii) of subparagraph (A) if—

(I) it may be exercised only upon the death, disability, or mental incompetency of the holder, or

(II) in the case of a right or obligation to redeem or purchase stock transferred in connection with the performance of services for the issuer or a related person (and which represents reasonable compensation), it may be exercised only upon the holder's separation from service from the issuer or a related person.

(ii) EXCEPTION.—Clause (i)(I) shall not apply if the stock relinquished in the exchange, or the stock acquired in the exchange is in—

(I) a corporation if any class of stock in such corporation or a related party is readily tradable on an established securities market or otherwise, or

(II) any other corporation if such exchange is part of a transaction or series of transactions in which such corporation is to become a corporation described in subclause (I).

(3) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) PREFERRED STOCK.—The term "preferred stock" means stock which is limited and preferred as to dividends and does not participate in corporate growth to any significant extent.

(B) RELATED PERSON.—A person shall be treated as related to another person if they bear a relationship to such other person described in section 267(b) or 707(b).

(4) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary may prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this subsection and sections 354(a)(2)(C), 355(a)(3)(D), and 356(e). The Secretary may also prescribe regulations, consistent with the treatment under this subsection and such sections, for the treatment of nonqualified preferred stock under other provisions of this title.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1014(a) amended Code Sec. 351 by redesignating subsection (g) as subsection (h), and by inserting after subsection (f) a new subsection (g) to read as above.

The above amendment generally applies to transactions after June 8, 1997. For a transition rule, see Act Sec. 1014(f)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1014(f)(2) provides:

(2) TRANSITION RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any transaction after June 8, 1997, if such transaction is—

(A) made pursuant to a written agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described on or before such date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the transaction.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1014(a) amended Code Sec. 351 by redesignating subsection (g) as subsection (h).

The above amendment generally applies to transactions after June 8, 1997. For a transitional rule, see Act Sec. 1014(f)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1014(f)(2), provides:

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(2) TRANSITION RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any transaction after June 8, 1997, if such transaction is—

(A) made pursuant to a written agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described on or before such date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the transaction.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—

(2) LIMITATIONS.—

* * *

(B) PROPERTY ATTRIBUTABLE TO ACCRUED INTEREST.—Neither paragraph (1) nor so much of section 356 as relates to paragraph (1) shall apply to the extent that any stock (including nonqualified preferred stock, as defined in section 351(g)(2)), securities, or other property received is attributable to interest which has accrued on securities on or after the beginning of the holder's holding period.

(C) NONQUALIFIED PREFERRED STOCK.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Nonqualified preferred stock (as defined in section 351(g)(2)) received in exchange for stock other than nonqualified preferred stock (as so defined) shall not be treated as stock or securities.

(ii) RECAPITALIZATIONS OF FAMILY-OWNED CORPORATIONS.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—Clause (i) shall not apply in the case of a recapitalization under section 368(a)(1)(E) of a family-owned corporation.

(II) FAMILY-OWNED CORPORATION.—For purposes of this clause, except as provided in regulations, the term "family-owned corporation" means any corporation which is described in clause (i) of section 447(d)(2)(C) throughout the 8-year period beginning on the date which is 5 years before the date of the recapitalization. For purposes of the preceding sentence, stock shall not be treated as owned by a family member during any period described in section 355(d)(6)(B).

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1014(b) amended Code Sec. 354(a)(2) by adding at the end a new subparagraph (C) to read as above.

Act Sec. 1014(e)(1) amended Code Sec. 354(a)(2)(B) by inserting "(including nonqualified preferred stock, as defined in section 351(g)(2))" after "stock".

Act Sec. 1014(e)(2) amended Code Sec. 354(a)(3)(A) by inserting "nonqualified preferred stock and" after "including".

The above amendments generally apply to transactions after June 8, 1997. For a transitional rule, see Act Sec. 1014(f)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1014(f)(2) provides:

(2) TRANSITION RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any transaction after June 8, 1997, if such transaction is—

(A) made pursuant to a written agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described on or before such date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the transaction.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1014(c) amended Code Sec. 355(a)(3) by adding at the end a new subparagraph (D) to read as above.

Act Sec. 1014(e)(1) amended Code Sec. 355(a)(3)(C) by inserting "(including nonqualified preferred stock, as defined in section 351(g)(2))" after "stock".

Act Sec. 1014(e)(2) amended Code Sec. 355(a)(4)(A) by inserting "nonqualified preferred stock and" after "including".

The above amendments generally apply to transactions after June 8, 1997. For a transitional rule, see Act Sec. 1014(f)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1014(f)(2) provides:

(2) TRANSITION RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any transaction after June 8, 1997, if such transaction is—

(A) made pursuant to a written agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described on or before such date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the transaction.

(e) Recognition of Gain on Certain Distributions of Stock or Securities In Connection With Acquisitions.—

(1) General rule.—If there is a distribution to which this subsection applies, any stock or securities in the controlled corporation shall not be treated as qualified property for purposes of subsection (c)(2) of this section or section 361(c)(2).

(2) Distributions to which subsection applies.—

(A) In general.—This subsection shall apply to any distribution—

(i) to which this section (or so much of section 356 as relates to this section) applies, and

(ii) which is part of a plan (or series of related transactions) pursuant to which 1 or more persons acquire directly or indirectly stock representing a 50-percent or greater interest in the distributing corporation or any controlled corporation.

(B) Plan presumed to exist in certain cases.—If 1 or more persons acquire directly or indirectly stock representing a 50-percent or greater interest in the distributing corporation or any controlled corporation during the 4-year period beginning on the date which is 2 years before the date of the distribution, such acquisition shall be treated as pursuant to a plan described in subparagraph (A)(ii) unless it is established that the distribution and the acquisition are not pursuant to a plan or series of related transactions.

(C) Certain plans disregarded.—A plan (or series of related transactions) shall not be treated as described in subparagraph (A)(ii) if, immediately after the completion of such plan or transactions, the distributing corporation and all controlled corporations are members of a single affiliated group (as defined in section 1504 without regard to subsection (b) thereof).

(D) Coordination with subsection (d).—This subsection shall not apply to any distribution to which subsection (d) applies.

(3) Special rules relating to acquisitions.—

(A) Certain acquisitions not taken into account.—Except as provided in regulations, the following acquisitions shall not be treated as described in paragraph (2)(A)(ii):

(i) The acquisition of stock in any controlled corporation by the distributing corporation.

(ii) The acquisition by a person of stock in any controlled corporation by reason of holding stock or securities in the distributing corporation.

(iii) The acquisition by a person of stock in any successor corporation of the distributing corporation or any controlled corporation by reason of holding stock or securities in such distributing or controlled corporation.

(iv) The acquisition of stock in a corporation if shareholders owning directly or indirectly stock possessing—

(I) more than 50 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote, and

(II) more than 50 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock, in the distributing corporation or any controlled corporation before such acquisition own directly or indirectly stock possessing such vote and value in such distributing or controlled corporation after such acquisition.

This subparagraph shall not apply to any acquisition if the stock held before the acquisition was acquired pursuant to a plan (or series of related transactions) described in paragraph (2)(A)(ii).

(B) Asset acquisitions.—Except as provided in regulations, for purposes of this subsection, if the assets of the distributing corporation or any controlled corporation are acquired by a successor corporation in a transaction described in subparagraph (A), (C), or (D) of section 368(a)(1) or any other transaction specified in regulations by the Secretary, the shareholders (immediately before the acquisition) of the corporation acquiring such assets shall be treated as acquiring stock in the corporation from which the assets were acquired.

(4) Definition and special rules.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) 50-percent or greater interest.—The term "50-percent or greater interest" has the meaning given such term by subsection (d)(4).

(B) Distributions in title 11 or similar case.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any distribution made in a title 11 or similar case (as defined in section 368(a)(3)).

(C) Aggregation and attribution rules.—

(i) AGGREGATION.—The rules of paragraph (7)(A) of subsection (d) shall apply.

(ii) ATTRIBUTION.—Section 318(a)(2) shall apply in determining whether a person holds stock or securities in any corporation. Except as provided in regulations, section 318(a)(2)(C) shall be applied without regard to the phrase "50 percent or more in value" for purposes of the preceding sentence.

(D) SUCCESSORS AND PREDECESSORS.—For purposes of this subsection, any reference to a controlled corporation or a distributing corporation shall include a reference to any predecessor or successor of such corporation.

(E) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—If there is a distribution to which paragraph (1) applies—

(i) the statutory period for the assessment of any deficiency attributable to any part of the gain recognized under this subsection by reason of such distribution shall not expire before the expiration of 3 years from the date the Secretary is notified by the taxpayer (in such manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe) that such distribution occurred, and

(ii) such deficiency may be assessed before the expiration of such 3-year period notwithstanding the provisions of any other law or rule of law which would otherwise prevent such assessment.

(5) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this subsection, including regulations—

(A) providing for the application of this subsection where there is more than 1 controlled corporation,

(B) treating 2 or more distributions as 1 distribution where necessary to prevent the avoidance of such purposes, and

(C) providing for the application of rules similar to the rules of subsection (d)(6) where appropriate for purposes of paragraph (2)(B).

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1012(a) amended Code Sec. 355 by adding at the end a new subsection (e) to read as above.

The above amendment generally applies to distributions after April 16, 1997, pursuant to a plan (or series of related transactions) which involves an acquisition described in Code Sec. 355(e)(2)(A)(ii) occurring after such date. For a transitional rule, see Act Sec. 1012(d)(3), below.

Act Sec. 1012(d)(3) provides:

(3) TRANSITION RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any distribution pursuant to a plan (or series of related transactions) which involves an acquisition described in section 355(e)(2)(A)(ii) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (or, in the case of the amendments made by subsection (c), any transfer) occurring after April 16, 1997, if such acquisition or transfer is—

(A) made pursuant to an agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described on or before such date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the acquisition or transfer.

This paragraph shall not apply to any agreement, ruling request, or public announcement or filing unless it identifies the acquirer of the distributing corporation or any controlled corporation, or the transferee, whichever is applicable.

(f) SECTION NOT TO APPLY TO CERTAIN INTRAGROUP DISTRIBUTIONS.—Except as provided in regulations, this section (or so much of section 356 as relates to this section) shall not apply to the distribution of stock from 1 member of an affiliated group (as defined in section 1504(a)) to another member of such group if such distribution is part of a plan (or series of related transactions) described in subsection (e)(2)(A)(ii) (determined after the application of subsection (e)).

(e) NONQUALIFIED PREFERRED STOCK TREATED AS OTHER PROPERTY.—For purposes of this section—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the term "other property" includes nonqualified preferred stock (as defined in section 351(g)(2)).

(2) Exception.—The term "other property" does not include nonqualified preferred stock (as so defined) to the extent that, under section 354 or 355, such preferred stock would be permitted to be received without the recognition of gain.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1014(d) amended Code Sec. 356 by redesignating subsections (e) and (f) as subsections (f) and (g), respectively, and by inserting after subsection (d) a new subsection (e) to read as above.

The above amendment generally applies to transactions after June 8, 1997. For a transition rule, see Act Sec. 1014(f)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1014(f)(2) provides:

(2) Transition rule.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any transaction after June 8, 1997, if such transaction is—

(A) made pursuant to a written agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described on or before such date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the transaction.

(f) Exchanges for Section 306 Stock.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, to the extent that any of the other property (or money) is received in exchange for section 306 stock, an amount equal to the fair market value of such other property (or the amount of such money) shall be treated as a distribution of property to which section 301 applies.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1014(d) amended Code Sec. 356 by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f).

The above amendment generally applies to transactions after June 8, 1997. For a transition rule, see Act Sec. 1014(f)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1014(f)(2) provides:

(2) Transition rule.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any transaction after June 8, 1997, if such transaction is—

(A) made pursuant to a written agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described on or before such date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the transaction.

(g) Transactions Involving Gift or Compensation.—

For special rules for a transaction described in section 354, 355, or this section, but which—

(1) results in a gift, see section 2501 and following, or

(2) has the effect of the payment of compensation, see section 61(a)(1).

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1014(d) amended Code Sec. 356 by redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (g).

The above amendment generally applies to transactions after June 8, 1997. For a transition rule, see Act Sec. 1014(f)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1014(f)(2), provides:

(2) Transition rule.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any transaction after June 8, 1997, if such transaction is—

(A) made pursuant to a written agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described on or before such date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the transaction.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1012(b)(2) amended Code Sec. 358 by adding at the end a new subsection (g) to read as above.

The above amendment generally applies to distributions after April 16, 1997, pursuant to a plan (or a series of related transactions) which involves an acquisition described in section 355(e)(2)(A)(ii) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 occurring after such date. For a transitional rule, see Act Sec. 1012(d)(3), below.

Act Sec. 1012(d)(3), provides:

(3) TRANSITION RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any distribution pursuant to a plan (or series of related transactions) which involves an acquisition described in section 355(e)(2)(A)(ii) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (or, in the case of the amendments made by subsection (c), any transfer) occurring after April 16, 1997, if such acquisition or transfer is—

(A) made pursuant to an agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described on or before such date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the acquisition or transfer.

This paragraph shall not apply to any agreement, ruling request, or public announcement or filing unless it identifies the acquirer of the distributing corporation or any controlled corporation, or the transferee, whichever is applicable.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1131(b)(c) amended Code Sec. 367(d)(2)(C) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 367(d)(2)(C) read as follows:

(C) AMOUNTS RECEIVED TREATED AS UNITED STATES SOURCE ORDINARY INCOME.—For purposes of this chapter, any amount included in gross income by reason of this subsection shall be treated as ordinary income from sources within the United States.

Act Sec. 1131(b)(c)(A) amended Code Sec. 367(d) by adding at the end a new paragraph (3) to read as above.

The above amendments are effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(f) OTHER TRANSFERS.—To the extent provided in regulations, if a United States person transfers property to a foreign corporation as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital (in a transaction not otherwise described in this section), such transfer shall be treated as a sale or exchange for an amount equal to the fair market value of the property transferred, and the transferor shall recognize as gain the excess of—

(1) the fair market value of the property so transferred, over

(2) the adjusted basis (for purposes of determining gain) of such property in the hands of the transferor.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1012(c)(2) amended Code Sec. 368(a)(2)(H) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 368(a)(2)(H) read as follows:

(H) SPECIAL RULE FOR DETERMINING WHETHER CERTAIN TRANSACTIONS ARE QUALIFIED UNDER PARAGRAPH (1)(D).—In the case of any transaction with respect to which the requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 354(b)(1) are met, for purposes of determining whether such transaction qualifies under subparagraph (D) of paragraph (1), the term "control" has the meaning given to such term by section 304(c).

The above amendment generally applies to transfers after the date of the enactment of this Act. For a transitional rule, see Act Sec. 1012(d)(3), below.

Act Sec. 1012(d)(3) provides:

(3) TRANSITION RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any distribution pursuant to a plan (or series of related transactions) which involves an acquisition described in section 355(e)(2)(A)(ii) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (or, in the case of the amendments made by subsection (c), any transfer) occurring after April 16, 1997, if such acquisition or transfer is—

(A) made pursuant to an agreement which was binding on such date and at all times thereafter,

(B) described in a ruling request submitted to the Internal Revenue Service on or before such date, or

(C) described on or before such date in a public announcement or in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission required solely by reason of the acquisition or transfer.

This paragraph shall not apply to any agreement, ruling request, or public announcement or filing unless it identifies the acquirer of the distributing corporation or any controlled corporation, or the transferee, whichever is applicable.

[¶ 5131] CODE SEC. 401. QUALIFIED PENSION, PROFIT-SHARING, AND STOCK BONUS PLANS.

(a) REQUIREMENTS FOR QUALIFICATION.—A trust created or organized in the United States and forming part of a stock bonus, pension, or profit-sharing plan of an employer for the exclusive benefit of his employees or their beneficiaries shall constitute a qualified trust under this section—

(1) if contributions are made to the trust by such employer, or employees, or both, or by another employer who is entitled to deduct his contributions under section 404(a)(3)(B) (relating to deduction for contributions to profit-sharing and stock bonus plans), or by a charitable remainder trust pursuant to a qualified gratuitous transfer (as defined in section 664(g)(1)), for the purpose of distributing to such employees or their beneficiaries the corpus and income of the fund accumulated by the trust in accordance with such plan;

(13) ASSIGNMENT AND ALIENATION.—

(C) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN JUDGMENTS AND SETTLEMENTS.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any offset of a participant's benefits provided under a plan against an amount that the participant is ordered or required to pay to the plan if—

(i) the order or requirement to pay arises—

(I) under a judgment of conviction for a crime involving such plan,

(II) under a civil judgment (including a consent order or decree) entered by a court in an action brought in connection with a violation (or alleged violation) of part 4 of subtitle B of title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, or

(III) pursuant to a settlement agreement between the Secretary of Labor and the participant, or a settlement agreement between the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation and the participant, in connection with a violation (or alleged violation) of part 4 of such subtitle by a fiduciary or any other person,

(ii) the judgment, order, decree, or settlement agreement expressly provides for the offset of all or part of the amount ordered or required to be paid to the plan against the participant's benefits provided under the plan, and

(iii) in a case in which the survivor annuity requirements of section 401(a)(11) apply with respect to distributions from the plan to the participant, if the participant has a spouse at the time at which the offset is to be made—

(I) either such spouse has consented in writing to such offset and such consent is witnessed by a notary public or representative of the plan (or it is established to the satisfaction of a plan representative that such consent may not be obtained by reason of circumstances described in section 417(a)(2)(B)), or an election to waive the right of the spouse to either a qualified joint and survivor annuity or a qualified preretirement survivor annuity is in effect in accordance with the requirements of section 417(a),

(II) such spouse is ordered or required in such judgment, order, decree, or settlement to pay an amount to the plan in connection with a violation of part 4 of such subtitle, or

(III) in such judgment, order, decree, or settlement, such spouse retains the right to receive the survivor annuity under a qualified joint and survivor annuity provided pursuant to section 401(a)(11)(A)(i) and under a qualified preretirement survivor annuity provided pursuant to section 401(a)(11)(A)(ii), determined in accordance with subparagraph (D).

A plan shall not be treated as failing to meet the requirements of this subsection, subsection (k), section 403(b), or section 409(d) solely by reason of an offset described in this subparagraph.

(D) SURVIVOR ANNUITY.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The survivor annuity described in subparagraph (C)(iii)(III) shall be determined as if—

(I) the participant terminated employment on the date of the offset,

(II) there was no offset,

(III) the plan permitted commencement of benefits only on or after normal retirement age,

(IV) the plan provided only the minimum-required qualified joint and survivor annuity, and

(V) the amount of the qualified preretirement survivor annuity under the plan is equal to the amount of the survivor annuity payable under the minimum-required qualified joint and survivor annuity.

(ii) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term "minimum-required qualified joint and survivor annuity" means the qualified joint and survivor annuity which is the actuarial equivalent of the participant's accrued benefit (within the meaning of section 411(a)(7)) and under which the survivor annuity is 50 percent of the amount of the annuity which is payable during the joint lives of the participant and the spouse.

(26) ADDITIONAL PARTICIPATION REQUIREMENTS.—

* * *

(H) EXCEPTION FOR STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTAL PLANS.—This paragraph shall not apply to a governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d)) maintained by a State or local government or political subdivision thereof (or agency or instrumentality thereof).

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1502(b) amended Code Sec. 401(a)(13) by adding at the end new subparagraphs (C)-(D) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to judgments, orders, and decrees issued, and settlement agreements entered into, on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Act Sec. 1505(a)(1) amended Code Sec. 401(a)(5) by adding at the end a new subparagraph (G) to read as above.

Act Sec. 1505(a)(2) amended Code Sec. 401(a)(26)(H) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 401(a)(26)(H) read as follows:

(H) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN POLICE OR FIREFIGHTERS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—An employer may elect to have this paragraph applied separately with respect to any classification of qualified public safety employees for whom a separate plan is maintained.

(ii) QUALIFIED PUBLIC SAFETY EMPLOYEE.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term "qualified public safety employee" means any employee of any police department or fire department organized and operated by a State or political subdivision if the employee provides police protection, firefighting services, or emergency medical services for any area within the jurisdiction of such State or political subdivision.

The above amendments apply to tax years beginning on or after the date of enactment of this Act. For a special rule, see Act Sec. 1505(d)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1505(d)(2) provides:

(2) TREATMENT FOR YEARS BEGINNING BEFORE DATE OF ENACTMENT.—A governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) maintained by a State or local government or political subdivision thereof (or agency or instrumentality thereof) shall be treated as satisfying the requirements of sections 401(a)(3), 401(a)(4), 401(a)(26), 401(k), 401(m), 403(b)(1)(D) and (b)(12), and 410 of such Code for all taxable years beginning before the date of enactment of this Act.

Act Sec. 1530(c)(1) amended Code Sec. 401(a)(1) by inserting "or by a charitable remainder trust pursuant to a qualified gratuitous transfer (as defined in section 664(g)(1)), after "stock bonus plans),".

The above amendment applies to transfers made by trusts to, or for the use of, an employee stock ownership plan after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(k) CASH OR DEFERRED ARRANGEMENTS.—

(3) APPLICATION OF PARTICIPATION AND DISCRIMINATION STANDARDS.—

* * *

(G) A governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d)) maintained by a State or local government or political subdivision thereof (or agency or instrumentality thereof) shall be treated as meeting the requirements of this paragraph.

* * *

(7) RURAL COOPERATIVE PLAN.—For purposes of this subsection—

* * *

(B) RURAL COOPERATIVE DEFINED.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term "rural cooperative" means—

(i) any organization which—

(I) is engaged primarily in providing electric service on a mutual or cooperative basis, or

(II) is engaged primarily in providing electric service to the public in its area of service and which is exempt from tax under this subtitle or which is a State or local government (or an agency or instrumentality thereof), other than a municipality (or an agency or instrumentality thereof),

(ii) any organization described in paragraph (4) or (6) of section 501(c) and at least 80 percent of the members of which are organizations described in clause (i),

(iii) a cooperative telephone company described in section 501(c)(12),

(iv) any organization which—

(I) is a mutual irrigation or ditch company described in section 501(c)(12) (without regard to the 85 percent requirement thereof), or

(II) is a district organized under the laws of a State as a municipal corporation for the purpose of irrigation, water conservation, or drainage, and

(v) an organization which is a national association of organizations described in clause (i), (ii),, [sic] (iii), or (iv).

(11) ADOPTION OF SIMPLE PLAN TO MEET NONDISCRIMINATION TESTS.—

(B) CONTRIBUTION REQUIREMENTS.—

* * *

(iii) ADMINISTRATIVE REQUIREMENTS.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—Rules similar to the rules of subparagraphs (B) and (C) of section 408(p)(5) shall apply for purposes of this subparagraph.

(II) NOTICE OF ELECTION PERIOD.—The requirements of this subparagraph shall not be treated as met with respect to any year unless the employer notifies each employee eligible to participate, within a reasonable period of time before the 60th day before the beginning of such year (and, for the first year the employee is so eligible, the 60th day before the first day such employee is so eligible), of the rules similar to the rules of section 408(p)(5)(C) which apply by reason of subclause (I).

(D) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULE.—

(ii) COORDINATION WITH TOP-HEAVY RULES.—A plan meeting the requirements of this paragraph for any year shall not be treated as a top-heavy plan under section 416 for such year if such plan allows only contributions required under this paragraph.

(E) COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT.—The Secretary shall adjust the $6,000 amount under subparagraph (B)(i)(I) at the same time and in the same manner as under section 408(p)(2)(E).

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1505(b) amended Code Sec. 401(k)(3) by adding at the end a new subparagraph (G) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning on or after the date of enactment of this Act. For a special rule, see Act Sec. 1505(d)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1505(d)(2) provides:

(2) TREATMENT FOR YEARS BEGINNING BEFORE DATE OF ENACTMENT.—A governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) maintained by a State or local government or political subdivision thereof (or agency or instrumentality thereof) shall be treated as satisfying the requirements of sections 401(a)(3), 401(a)(4), 401(a)(26), 401(k), 401(m), 403(b)(1)(D) and (b)(12), and 410 of such Code for all taxable years beginning before the date of enactment of this Act.

Act Sec. 1525(a)(1)-(2) amended Code Sec. 401(k)(7)(B) by striking "and" at the end of clause (iii), by redesignating clause (iv) as clause (v), by inserting after clause (iii) a new clause (iv) to read as above, and by striking "or (iii)" in clause (v), as so redesignated, and inserting ", (iii), or (iv)".

The above amendment applies to years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(2)(A) amended Code Sec. 401(k)(11)(D)(ii) by striking the period and inserting "if such plan allows only contributions required under this paragraph.".

Act Sec. 1601(d)(2)(B) amended Code Sec. 401(k)(11) by adding at the end a new subparagraph (E) to read as above.

The above amendments are effective as if included in the provisions of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which they relate [effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

Act Sec. 1601(d)(2)(D) amended Code Sec. 401(k)(11)(B) by adding at the end a new clause (iii) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to calendar years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(m) NONDISCRIMINATION TEST FOR MATCHING CONTRIBUTIONS AND EMPLOYEE CONTRIBUTIONS.—

[Caution: Code Sec. 401(m)(11), below, as added by P.L. 104-188 and amended by Act Sec. 1601(d)(3) of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, applies to years beginning after December 31, 1998.—CCH.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1601(d)(3) amended Code Sec. 401(m)(11) by striking "ALTERNATIVE" and inserting "ADDITIONAL ALTERNATIVE" in the heading.

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which it relates [effective for years beginning after December 31, 1998.—CCH.].

[¶ 5133] CODE SEC. 402. TAXABILITY OF BENEFICIARY OF EMPLOYEES' TRUST.

(g) LIMITATION ON EXCLUSION FOR ELECTIVE DEFERRALS.—

* * *

(9) MATCHING CONTRIBUTIONS ON BEHALF OF SELF-EMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS NOT TREATED AS ELECTIVE EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTIONS.—Except as provided in section 401(k)(3)(D)(ii), any matching contribution described in section 401(m)(4)(A) which is made on behalf of a self-employed individual (as defined in section 401(c)) shall not be treated as an elective employer contribution under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement (as defined in section 401(k)) for purposes of this title.

* * *

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 729. Committee Reports at ¶ 13,215.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1501(a) amended Code Sec. 402(g) by adding at the end a new paragraph (9) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to years beginning after December 31, 1997.

[¶ 5135] CODE SEC. 403. TAXATION OF EMPLOYEE ANNUITIES.

(b) TAXABILITY OF BENEFICIARY UNDER ANNUITY PURCHASED BY Section 501(c)(3) ORGANIZATION OR PUBLIC SCHOOL.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—If—

(A) an annuity contract is purchased—

(i) for an employee by an employer described in section 501(c)(3) which is exempt from tax under section 501(a),

(ii) for an employee (other than an employee described in clause (i)), who performs services for an educational organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii), by an employer which is a State, a political subdivision of a State, or an agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing, or

(iii) for the minister described in section 414(e)(5)(A) by the minister or by an employer,

(3) INCLUDIBLE COMPENSATION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "includible compensation" means, in the case of any employee, the amount of compensation which is received from the employer described in paragraph (1)(A), and which is includible in gross income (computed without regard to section 911) for the most recent period (ending not later than the close of the taxable year) which under paragraph (4) may be counted as one year of service. Such term does not include any amount contributed by the employer for any annuity contract to which this subsection applies. Such term includes—

(A) any elective deferral (as defined in section 402(g)(3)), and

(B) any amount which is contributed or deferred by the employer at the election of the employee and which is not includible in the gross income of the employee by reason of section 125 or 457.

(12) NONDISCRIMINATION REQUIREMENTS.—

(C) STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTAL PLANS.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(D), the requirements of subparagraph (A)(i) (other than those relating to section 401(a)(17)) shall not apply to a governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d)) maintained by a State or local government or political subdivision thereof (or agency or instrumentality thereof).

* * *

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 758 and 776. Committee Reports at ¶ 13,245 and 13,255.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1504(a)(1) amended Code Sec. 403(b)(3) by adding at the end "Such term includes—" and the material that follows through the period at the end of the sentence to read as above.

The above amendment applies to years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1504(b) provides:

(b) REPEAL OF RULES IN SECTION 415(c).—The Secretary of the Treasury shall modify the regulations regarding the exclusion allowance under section 403(b)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to reflect the amendment made by section 1452(a) of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996. Such modification shall take effect for years beginning after December 31, 1999.

Act Sec. 1505(b) amended Code Sec. 403(b)(12) by adding at the end a new subparagraph (C) to read as above.

The above amendment generally applies to tax years beginning on or after the date of enactment of this Act. For a special rule, see Act Sec. 1505(d)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1505(d)(2) provides:

(2) TREATMENT FOR YEARS BEGINNING BEFORE DATE OF ENACTMENT.—A governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) maintained by a State or local government or political subdivision thereof (or agency or instrumentality thereof) shall be treated as satisfying the requirements of sections 401(a)(3), 401(a)(4), 401(a)(26), 401(k), 401(m), 403(b)(1)(D) and (b)(12), and 410 of such Code for all taxable years beginning before the date of enactment of this Act.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(4) provides:

(4) CLARIFICATION OF SECTION 1450.—

(A) Section 403(b)(11) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall not apply with respect to a distribution from a contract described in section 1450(b)(1) of such Act to the extent that such distribution is not includible in income by reason of—

(i) in the case of distributions before January 1, 1998, section 403(b)(8) or 403(b)(10) of such Code (determined after the application of section 1450(b)(2) of such Act), and

(ii) in the case of distributions on and after such date, such section 403(b)(1).

(B) This paragraph shall apply as if included in section 1450 of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(6)(B) amended Code Sec. 403(b)(1)(A) by striking "or" at the end of clause (i), by inserting "or" at the end of clause (ii), and by adding at the end a new clause (iii) to read as above.

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which it relates [effective for years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

[¶ 5137] CODE SEC. 404. DEDUCTION FOR CONTRIBUTIONS OF AN EMPLOYER TO AN EMPLOYEES' TRUST OR ANNUITY PLAN AND COMPENSATION UNDER A DEFERRED-PAYMENT PLAN.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—If contributions are paid by an employer to or under a stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan, or if compensation is paid or accrued on account of any employee under a plan deferring the receipt of such compensation, such contributions or compensation shall not be deductible under this chapter; but if they would otherwise be deductible, they shall be deductible under this section, subject, however, to the following limitations as to the amounts deductible in any year:

(3) STOCK BONUS AND PROFIT-SHARING TRUSTS.—

(A) LIMITS ON DEDUCTIBLE CONTRIBUTIONS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—In the taxable year when paid, if the contributions are paid into a stock bonus or profit-sharing trust, and if such taxable year ends within or with a taxable year of the trust with respect to which the trust is exempt under section 501(a), in an amount not in excess of the greater of—

(I) 15 percent of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the taxable year to the beneficiaries under the stock bonus or profit-sharing plan, or

(II) the amount such employer is required to contribute to such trust under section 401(k)(11) for such year.

(ii) CARRYOVER OF EXCESS CONTRIBUTIONS.—Any amount paid into the trust in any taxable year in excess of the limitation of clause (i) (or the corresponding provision of prior law) shall be deductible in the succeeding taxable years in order of time, but the amount so deductible under this clause in any 1 such succeeding taxable year together with the amount allowable under clause (i) shall not exceed the amount described in subclause (I) or (II) of clause (i), whichever is greater, with respect to such taxable year.

(9) CERTAIN CONTRIBUTIONS TO EMPLOYEE STOCK OWNERSHIP PLANS.—

(C)[(D)] A qualified gratuitous transfer (as defined in section 664(g)(1)) shall have no effect on the amount or amounts otherwise deductible under paragraph (3) or (7) or under this paragraph.

* * *

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 284 and 743. Committee Reports at ¶ 13,435 and 13,620.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1530(c)(2) amended Code Sec. 404(a)(9) by inserting after subparagraph (B) a new subparagraph (C)[(D)] to read as above.

The above amendment applies to transfers made by trusts to, or for the use of, an employee stock ownership plan after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(2)(C)(i) amended Code Sec. 404(a)(3)(A)(i) by striking "not in excess of" and all that follows and inserting "not in excess of the greater of—" and new subclauses (I) and (II) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 404(a)(3)(A)(i) read as follows:

(i) IN GENERAL.—In the taxable year when paid, if the contributions are paid into a stock bonus or profit-sharing trust, and if such taxable year ends within or with a taxable year of the trust with respect to which the trust is exempt under section 501(a), in an amount not in excess of 15 percent of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the taxable year to the beneficiaries under the stock bonus or profit-sharing plan.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(2)(C)(ii) amended Code Sec. 404(a)(3)(A)(ii) by striking "15 percent" and all that follows and inserting "the amount described in subclause (I) or (II) of clause (i), whichever is greater, with respect to such taxable year.". Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 404(a)(3)(A)(ii) read as follows:

(ii) CARRYOVER OF EXCESS CONTRIBUTIONS.—Any amount paid into the trust in any taxable year in excess of the limitation of clause (i) (or the corresponding provision of prior law) shall be deductible in the succeeding taxable years in order of time, but the amount so deductible under this clause in any 1 such succeeding taxable year together with the amount allowable under clause (i) shall not exceed 15 percent of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during such taxable year to the beneficiaries under the plan.

The above amendments are effective as if included in the provisions of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which they relate [effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

[¶ 5139] CODE SEC. 408. INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS.

(i) REPORTS.—The trustee of an individual retirement account and the issuer of an endowment contract described in subsection (b) or an individual retirement annuity shall make such reports regarding such account, contract, or annuity to the Secretary and to the individuals for whom the account, contract, or annuity is, or is to be, maintained with respect to contributions (and the years to which they relate), distributions aggregating $10 or more in any calendar year, and such other matters as the Secretary may require. The reports required by this subsection—

(1) shall be filed at such time and in such manner as the Secretary prescribes, and

(2) shall be furnished to individuals—

(A) not later than January 31 of the calendar year following the calendar year to which such reports relate, and

(B) in such manner as the Secretary prescribes.

In the case of a simple retirement account under subsection (p), only one report under this subsection shall be required to be submitted each calendar year to the Secretary (at the time provided under paragraph (2)) but, in addition to the report under this subsection, there shall be furnished, within 31 days after each calendar year, to the individual on whose behalf the account is maintained a statement with respect to the account balance as of the close of, and the account activity during, such calendar year.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 302(d)(1)-(2) amended Code Sec. 408(i)(1)-(2) by striking "under regulations" following "as the Secretary may require", and by striking "in such regulations" each place it appears. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 408(i)(1)-(2) read as follows

(i) REPORTS.—The trustee of an individual retirement account and the issuer of an endowment contract described in subsection (b) or an individual retirement annuity shall make such reports regarding such account, contract, or annuity to the Secretary and to the individuals for whom the account, contract, or annuity is, or is to be, maintained with respect to contributions (and the years to which they relate), distributions aggregating $10 or more in any calendar year, and such other matters as the Secretary may require under regulations. The reports required by this subsection—

(1) shall be filed at such time and in such manner as the Secretary prescribes in such regulations, and

(2) shall be furnished to individuals—

(A) not later than January 31 of the calendar year following the calendar year to which such reports relate, and

(B) in such manner as the Secretary prescribes in such regulations.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(1)(A) amended Code Sec. 408(i) by striking "30 days" in the last sentence and inserting "31 days".

(k) SIMPLIFIED EMPLOYEE PENSION DEFINED.—

(6) EMPLOYEE MAY ELECT SALARY REDUCTION ARRANGEMENT.—

* * *

(H) TERMINATION.—This paragraph shall not apply to years beginning after December 31, 1996. The preceding sentence shall not apply to a simplified employee pension of an employer if the terms of simplified employee pensions of such employer, as in effect on December 31, 1996, provide that an employee may make the election described in subparagraph (A).

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1601(d)(1)(B) amended Code Sec. 408(k)(6)(H) by striking "if the terms of such pension" and inserting "of an employer if the terms of simplified employee pensions of such employer".

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which it relates [effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

(l) SIMPLIFIED EMPLOYER REPORTS.—

(2) SIMPLE RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS.—

* * *

(B) SUMMARY DESCRIPTION.—The trustee of any simple retirement account established pursuant to a qualified salary reduction arrangement under subsection (p) and the issuer of an annuity established under such an arrangement shall provide to the employer maintaining the arrangement, each year a description containing the following information:

(i) The name and address of the employer and the trustee or issuer.

(ii) The requirements for eligibility for participation.

(iii) The benefits provided with respect to the arrangement.

(iv) The time and method of making elections with respect to the arrangement.

(v) The procedures for, and effects of, withdrawals (including rollovers) from the arrangement.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1601(d)(1)(C)(i)(I)-(II) amended Code Sec. 408(l)(2)(B) by inserting "and the issuer of an annuity established under such an arrangement" after "under subsection (p)", and by inserting in clause (i) "or issuer" after "trustee".

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which it relates [effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

(m) INVESTMENT IN COLLECTIBLES TREATED AS DISTRIBUTIONS.—

* * *

(3) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN COINS AND BULLION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "collectible" shall not include—

(A) any coin which is—

(i) a gold coin described in paragraph (7), (8), (9), or (10) of section 5112(a) of title 31, United States Code,

(ii) a silver coin described in section 5112(e) of title 31, United States Code,

(iii) a platinum coin described in section 5112(k) of title 31, United States Code, or

(iv) a coin issued under the laws of any State, or

(B) any gold, silver, platinum, or palladium bullion of a fineness equal to or exceeding the minimum fineness that a contract market (as described in section 7 of the Commodity Exchange Act, 7 U.S.C. 7) requires for metals which may be delivered in satisfaction of a regulated futures contract, if such bullion is in the physical possession of a trustee described under subsection (a) of this section.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 304(a) amended Code Sec. 408(m)(3) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 408(m)(3) read as follows:

(3) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN COINS.—In the case of an individual retirement account, paragraph (2) shall not apply to—

(A) any gold coin described in paragraph (7), (8), (9), or (10) of section 5112(a) of title 31,

(B) any silver coin described in section 5112(e) of title 31, or

(C) any coin issued under the laws of any State.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

(p) SIMPLE RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS.—

(2) QUALIFIED SALARY REDUCTION ARRANGEMENT.—

(D) ARRANGEMENT MAY BE ONLY PLAN OF EMPLOYER.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—An arrangement shall not be treated as a qualified salary reduction arrangement for any year if the employer (or any predecessor employer) maintained a qualified plan with respect to which contributions were made, or benefits were accrued, for service in any year in the period beginning with the year such arrangement became effective and ending with the year for which the determination is being made. If only individuals other than employees described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of section 410(b)(3) are eligible to participate in such arrangement, then the preceding sentence shall be applied without regard to any qualified plan in which only employees so described are eligible to participate.

* * *

(iii) GRACE PERIOD.—In the case of an employer who establishes and maintains a plan under this subsection for 1 or more years and who fails to meet any requirement of this subsection for any subsequent year due to any acquisition, disposition, or similar transaction involving another such employer, rules similar to the rules of section 410(b)(6)(C) shall apply for purposes of this subsection.

* * *

(5) ADMINISTRATIVE REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of this paragraph are met with respect to any simple retirement account if, under the qualified salary reduction arrangement—

(A) an employer must—

(i) make the elective employer contributions under paragraph (2)(A)(i) not later than the close of the 30-day period following the last day of the month with respect to which the contributions are to be made, and

(ii) make the matching contributions under paragraph (2)(A)(iii) or the nonelective contributions under paragraph (2)(B) not later than the date described in section 404(m)(2)(B),

(B) an employee may elect to terminate participation in such arrangement at any time during the year, except that if an employee so terminates, the arrangement may provide that the employee may not elect to resume participation until the beginning of the next year, and

(C) each employee eligible to participate may elect, during the 60-day period before the beginning of any year (and the 60-day period before the first day such employee is eligible to participate), to participate in the arrangement, or to modify the amounts subject to such arrangement, for such year.

(8) COORDINATION WITH MAXIMUM LIMITATION UNDER SUBSECTION (a).—In the case of any simple retirement account, subsections (a)(1) and (b)(2) shall be applied by substituting "the sum of the dollar amount in effect under paragraph (2)(A)(ii) of this subsection and the employer contribution required under subparagraph (A)(iii) or (B)(i) of paragraph (2) of this subsection, whichever is applicable" for "$2,000".

(8)[(9)] MATCHING CONTRIBUTIONS ON BEHALF OF SELF-EMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS NOT TREATED AS ELECTIVE EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTIONS.—Any matching contribution described in paragraph (2)(A)(iii) which is made on behalf of a self-employed individual (as defined in section 401(c)) shall not be treated as an elective employer contribution to a simple retirement account for purposes of this title.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1501(b) amended Code Sec. 408(p) by adding at the end a new paragraph (8)[(9)] to read as above.

The above amendment applies to years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(1)(D) amended Code Sec. 408(p) by adding at the end a new paragraph (8) to read as above.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(1)(E) amended Code Sec. 408(p)(2)(D)(i) by adding at the end a new sentence to read as above.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(1)(F) amended Code Sec. 408(p)(2)(D) by adding at the end a new clause (iii) to read as above.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(1)(G) amended Code Sec. 408(p)(5) by striking "simplified" and inserting "simple" in the text preceding subparagraph (A).

The above amendments are effective as if included in the provisions of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which they relate [effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

[¶ 5141] CODE SEC. 408A. ROTH IRAS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Except as provided in this section, a Roth IRA shall be treated for purposes of this title in the same manner as an individual retirement plan.

(b) ROTH IRA.—For purposes of this title, the term "Roth IRA" means an individual retirement plan (as defined in section 7701(a)(37)) which is designated (in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe) at the time of establishment of the plan as a Roth IRA. Such designation shall be made in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe.

(c) TREATMENT OF CONTRIBUTIONS.—

(1) NO DEDUCTION ALLOWED.—No deduction shall be allowed under section 219 for a contribution to a Roth IRA.

(2) CONTRIBUTION LIMIT.—The aggregate amount of contributions for any taxable year to all Roth IRAs maintained for the benefit of an individual shall not exceed the excess (if any) of—

(A) the maximum amount allowable as a deduction under section 219 with respect to such individual for such taxable year (computed without regard to subsection (d)(1) or (g) of such section), over

(B) the aggregate amount of contributions for such taxable year to all other individual retirement plans (other than Roth IRAs) maintained for the benefit of the individual.

(3) LIMITS BASED ON MODIFIED ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—

(A) DOLLAR LIMIT.—The amount determined under paragraph (2) for any taxable year shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the amount which bears the same ratio to such amount as—

(i) the excess of—

(I) the taxpayer's adjusted gross income for such taxable year, over

(II) the applicable dollar amount, bears to

(ii) $15,000 ($10,000 in the case of a joint return).

The rules of subparagraphs (B) and (C) of section 219(g)(2) shall apply to any reduction under this subparagraph.

(B) ROLLOVER FROM IRA.—A taxpayer shall not be allowed to make a qualified rollover contribution to a Roth IRA from an individual retirement plan other than a Roth IRA during any taxable year if—

(i) the taxpayer's adjusted gross income for such taxable year exceeds $100,000, or

(ii) the taxpayer is a married individual filing a separate return.

(C) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph—

(i) adjusted gross income shall be determined in the same manner as under section 219(g)(3), except that any amount included in gross income under subsection (d)(3) shall not be taken into account and the deduction under section 219 shall be taken into account, and

(ii) the applicable dollar amount is—

(I) in the case of a taxpayer filing a joint return, $150,000,

(II) in the case of any other taxpayer (other than a married individual filing a separate return), $95,000, and

(III) in the case of a married individual filing a separate return, zero.

(D) MARITAL STATUS.—Section 219(g)(4) shall apply for purposes of this paragraph.

(4) CONTRIBUTIONS PERMITTED AFTER AGE 70½.—Contributions to a Roth IRA may be made even after the individual for whom the account is maintained has attained age 70½.

(5) MANDATORY DISTRIBUTION RULES NOT TO APPLY BEFORE DEATH.—Notwithstanding subsections (a)(6) and (b)(3) of section 408 (relating to required distributions), the following provisions shall not apply to any Roth IRA:

(A) Section 401(a)(9)(A).

(B) The incidental death benefit requirements of section 401(a).

(6) ROLLOVER CONTRIBUTIONS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—No rollover contribution may be made to a Roth IRA unless it is a qualified rollover contribution.

(B) COORDINATION WITH LIMIT.—A qualified rollover contribution shall not be taken into account for purposes of paragraph (2).

(7) TIME WHEN CONTRIBUTIONS MADE.—For purposes of this section, the rule of section 219(f)(3) shall apply.

(d) DISTRIBUTION RULES.—For purposes of this title—

(1) GENERAL RULES.—

(A) EXCLUSIONS FROM GROSS INCOME.—Any qualified distribution from a Roth IRA shall not be includible in gross income.

(B) NONQUALIFIED DISTRIBUTIONS.—In applying section 72 to any distribution from a Roth IRA which is not a qualified distribution, such distribution shall be treated as made from contributions to the Roth IRA to the extent that such distribution, when added to all previous distributions from the Roth IRA, does not exceed the aggregate amount of contributions to the Roth IRA.

(2) QUALIFIED DISTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified distribution" means any payment or distribution—

(i) made on or after the date on which the individual attains age 59½,

(ii) made to a beneficiary (or to the estate of the individual) on or after the death of the individual,

(iii) attributable to the individual's being disabled (within the meaning of section 72(m)(7)), or

(iv) which is a qualified special purpose distribution.

(B) CERTAIN DISTRIBUTIONS WITHIN 5 YEARS.—A payment or distribution shall not be treated as a qualified distribution under subparagraph (A) if—

(i) it is made within the 5-taxable year period beginning with the 1st taxable year for which the individual made a contribution to a Roth IRA (or such individual's spouse made a contribution to a Roth IRA) established for such individual, or

(ii) in the case of a payment or distribution properly allocable (as determined in the manner prescribed by the Secretary) to a qualified rollover contribution from an individual retirement plan other than a Roth IRA (or income allocable thereto), it is made within the 5-taxable year period beginning with the taxable year in which the rollover contribution was made.

(3) ROLLOVERS FROM AN IRA OTHER THAN A ROTH IRA.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding section 408(d)(3), in the case of any distribution to which this paragraph applies—

(i) there shall be included in gross income any amount which would be includible were it not part of a qualified rollover contribution,

(ii) section 72(t) shall not apply, and

(iii) in the case of a distribution before January 1, 1999, any amount required to be included in gross income by reason of this paragraph shall be so included ratably over the 4-taxable year period beginning with the taxable year in which the payment or distribution is made.

(B) DISTRIBUTIONS TO WHICH PARAGRAPH APPLIES.—This paragraph shall apply to a distribution from an individual retirement plan (other than a Roth IRA) maintained for the benefit of an individual which is contributed to a Roth IRA maintained for the benefit of such individual in a qualified rollover contribution.

(C) CONVERSIONS.—The conversion of an individual retirement plan (other than a Roth IRA) to a Roth IRA shall be treated for purposes of this paragraph as a distribution to which this paragraph applies.

(D) CONVERSION OF EXCESS CONTRIBUTIONS.—If, no later than the due date for filing the return of tax for any taxable year (without regard to extensions), an individual transfers, from an individual retirement plan (other than a Roth IRA), contributions for such taxable year (and any earnings allocable thereto) to a Roth IRA, no such amount shall be includible in gross income to the extent no deduction was allowed with respect to such amount.

(E) ADDITIONAL REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—Trustees of Roth IRAs, trustees of individual retirement plans, or both, whichever is appropriate, shall include such additional information in reports required under section 408(i) as the Secretary may require to ensure that amounts required to be included in gross income under subparagraph (A) are so included.

(4) COORDINATION WITH INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS.—Section 408(d)(2) shall be applied separately with respect to Roth IRAs and other individual retirement plans.

(5) QUALIFIED SPECIAL PURPOSE DISTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this section, the term "qualified special purpose distribution" means any distribution to which subparagraph (F) of section 72(t)(2) applies.

(e) QUALIFIED ROLLOVER CONTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this section, the term "qualified rollover contribution" means a rollover contribution to a Roth IRA from another such account, or from an individual retirement plan, but only if such rollover contribution meets the requirements of section 408(d)(3). For purposes of section 408(d)(3)(B), there shall be disregarded any qualified rollover contribution from an individual retirement plan (other than a Roth IRA) to a Roth IRA.

(2) PLAN MAY DISTRIBUTE CASH IN CERTAIN CASES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A plan which otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection or of section 4975(e)(7) shall not be considered to have failed to meet the requirements of section 401(a) merely because under the plan the benefits may be distributed in cash or in the form of employer securities.

(B) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN PLANS RESTRICTED FROM DISTRIBUTING SECURITIES.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—A plan to which this subparagraph applies shall not be treated as failing to meet the requirements of this subsection or section 401(a) merely because it does not permit a participant to exercise the right described in paragraph (1)(A) if such plan provides that the participant entitled to a distribution has a right to receive the distribution in cash, except that such plan may distribute employer securities subject to a requirement that such securities may be resold to the employer under terms which meet the requirements of paragraph (1)(B).

(ii) APPLICABLE PLANS.—This subparagraph shall apply to a plan which otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection or section 4975(e)(7) and which is established and maintained by—

(I) an employer whose charter or bylaws restrict the ownership of substantially all outstanding employer securities to employees or to a trust described in section 401(a), or

(II) an S corporation.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1506(a)(1) amended Code Sec. 409(h)(2) by adding at the end a new subparagraph (B) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1506(a)(2)(A)-(B) amended Code Sec. 409(h)(2), as in effect before the amendment made by Act Sec. 1506(a)(1), by striking "A plan which" in the first sentence and inserting "(A) IN GENERAL.—A plan which", and by striking the last sentence. Prior to amendment, the last sentence of Code Sec. 409(h)(2) read as follows:

In the case of an employer whose charter or bylaws restrict the ownership of substantially all outstanding employer securities to employees or to a trust described in section 401(a), a plan which otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection or section 4975(e)(7) shall not be considered to have failed to meet the requirements of this subsection or of section 401(a) merely because it does not permit a participant to exercise the right described in paragraph (1)(A) if such plan provides that participants entitled to a distribution from the plan shall have a right to receive such distribution in cash except that such plan may distribute employer securities subject to a requirement that such securities may be resold to the employer under terms which meet the requirements of paragraph (1)(B).

The above amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997.

[CCH Explanation at ¶ 758. Committee Reports at ¶ 13,255.]

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1505(a)(3) amended Code Sec. 410(c)(2) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 410(c)(2) read as follows:

(2) A plan described in paragraph (1) shall be treated as meeting the requirements of this section, for purposes of section 401(a), if such plan meets the requirements of section 401(a)(3) as in effect on September 1, 1974.

The above amendments generally applies to tax years beginning on or after the date of enactment of this Act. For a special rule, see Act Sec. 1505(d)(2), below.

Act Sec. 1505(d)(2) provides:

(2) TREATMENT FOR YEARS BEGINNING BEFORE DATE OF ENACTMENT.—A governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) maintained by a State or local government or political subdivision thereof (or agency or instrumentality thereof) shall be treated as satisfying the requirements of sections 401(a)(3), 401(a)(4), 401(a)(26), 401(k), 401(m), 403(b)(1)(D) and (b)(12), and 410 of such Code for all taxable years beginning before the date of enactment of this Act.

(B) EFFECT OF CERTAIN DISTRIBUTIONS.—Notwithstanding paragraph (4), for purposes of determining the employee's accrued benefit under the plan, the plan may disregard service performed by the employee with respect to which he has received—

(i) a distribution of the present value of his entire nonforfeitable benefit if such distribution was in an amount (not more than the dollar limit under section 411 (a)(11)(A)) permitted under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, or

(ii) a distribution of the present value of his nonforfeitable benefit attributable to such service which he elected to receive.

Clause (i) of this subparagraph shall apply only if such distribution was made on termination of the employee's participation in the plan. Clause (ii) of this subparagraph shall apply only if such distribution was made on termination of the employee's participation in the plan or under such other circumstances as may be provided under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

(11) RESTRICTIONS ON CERTAIN MANDATORY DISTRIBUTIONS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—If the present value of any nonforfeitable accrued benefit exceeds $5,000 a plan meets the requirements of this paragraph only if such plan provides that such benefit may not be immediately distributed without the consent of the participant.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1521(c)(1) amended Code Sec. 412(b)(2) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (C), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (D) and inserting ", and", and by inserting after subparagraph (D) a new subparagraph (E) to read as above.

The above amendments generally applies to plan years beginning after December 31, 1998. For a special rule, see Act Sec. 1521(d)(2)(A)-(B) below.

Act Sec. 1521(d)(2)(A)-(B) provides:

(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR UNAMORTIZED BALANCES UNDER EXISTING LAW.—The unamortized balance (as of the close of the plan year prededing the plan's first year beginning in 1999) of any amortization base established under section 412(c)(7)(D)(iii) of such Code and section 302(c)(7)(D)(iii) of such Act (as repealed by subsection (c)(3)) for any plan year beginning before 1999 shall be amortized in equal annual installments (until fully amortized) over a period of years equal to the excess of—

(A) 20 years, over

(B) the number of years since the amortization base was established.

(c) SPECIAL RULES.—

(7) FULL-FUNDING LIMITATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of paragraph (6), the term "full-funding limitation" means the excess (if any) of—

(i) the lesser of (I) the applicable percentage of current liability (including the expected increase in current liability due to benefits accruing during the plan year), or (II) the accrued liability (including normal cost) under the plan (determined under the entry age normal funding method if such accrued liability cannot be directly calculated under the funding method used for the plan), over

* * *

(D) REGULATORY AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may by regulations provide—

(i) for adjustments to the percentage contained in subparagraph (A)(i) to take into account the respective ages or lengths of service of the participants, and

(ii) alternative methods based on factors other than current liability for the determination of the amount taken into account under subparagraph (A)(i).

* * *

(F) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)(i)(I), the applicable percentage shall be determined in accordance with the following table:

In the case of any plan year beginning in—	The applicable percentage is—
1999 or 2000	155
2001 or 2002	160
2003 or 2004	165
2005 and succeeding years	170

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1521(a)(A)[1]-(B)[2] amended Code Sec. 412(c)(7) by striking "150 percent" in subparagraph (A)(i)(I) and inserting "the applicable percentage", and by adding at the end a new subparagraph (F) to read as above.

Act Sec. 1521(c)(3)(A) amended Code Sec. 412(c)(7)(D) by adding "and" at the end of clause (i), by striking ", and" at the end of clause (ii) and inserting a period, and by striking clause (iii). Prior to being stricken, Code Sec. 412(c)(7)(D)(iii) read as follows:

(iii) for the treatment under this section of contributions which would be required to be made under the plan but for the provisions of subparagraph (A)(i)(I).

The above amendments generally apply to plan years beginning after December 31, 1998. For a special rule, see Act Sec. 1521(d)(2)(A)-(B).

Act Sec. 1521(d)(2)(A)-(B) provides:

(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR UNAMORTIZED BALANCES UNDER EXISTING LAW.—The unamortized balance (as of the close of the plan year preceding the plan's first year beginning in 1999) of any amortization base established under section 412(c)(7)(D)(iii) of such Code and section 302(c)(7)(D)(iii) of such Act (as repealed by subsection (c)(3)) for any plan year beginning before 1999 shall be amortized in equal annual installments (until fully amortized) over a period of years equal to the excess of—

(A) 20 years, over

(B) the number of years since the amortization base was established.

* * *

(e) CHURCH PLAN.—

* * *

(5) SPECIAL RULES FOR CHAPLAINS AND SELF-EMPLOYED MINISTERS.—

(A) CERTAIN MINISTERS MAY PARTICIPATE.—For purposes of this part—

(i) IN GENERAL.—A duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church is described in paragraph (3)(B) if, in connection with the exercise of their ministry, the minister—

(I) is a self-employed individual (within the meaning of section 401(c)(1)(B), or

(II) is employed by an organization other than an organization which is described in section 501(c)(3) and with respect to which the minister shares common religious bonds.

(ii) TREATMENT AS EMPLOYER AND EMPLOYEE.—For purposes of sections 403(b)(1)(A) and 404(a)(10), a minister described in clause (i)(I) shall be treated as employed by the minister's own employer which is an organization described in section 501(c)(3) and exempt from tax under section 501(a).

* * *

(C) EFFECT ON NON-DENOMINATIONAL PLANS.—If a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his or her ministry participates in a church plan (within the meaning of this section) and in the exercise of such ministry is employed by an employer not otherwise participating in such church plan, then such employer may exclude such minister from being treated as an employee of such employer for purposes of applying sections 401(a)(3), 401(a)(4), and 401(a)(5), as in effect on September 1, 1974, and sections401(a)(4),401(a)(5), 401(a)(26), 401(k)(3), 401(m), 403(b)(1)(D) (including section 403(b)(12)), and 410 to any stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan (including an annuity described in section 403(b) or a retirement income account described in section 403(b)(9)). The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purpose of, and prevent the abuse of, this subparagraph.

* * *

(E) EXCLUSION.—In the case of a contribution to a church plan made on behalf of a minister described in subparagraph (A)(i)(II), such contribution shall not be included in the gross income of the minister to the extent that such contribution would not be so included if the minister was an employee of a church.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1522(a)(1)-(2) amended Code Sec. 414(e)(5) by striking "not eligible to participate" in subparagraph (C) and inserting "not otherwise participating", and by adding at the end a new subparagraph (E) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Act Sec. 1601(d)(6)(A) amended Code Sec. 414(e)(5)(A) to read as above. Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 414(e)(5)(A) read as follows:

(A) CERTAIN MINISTERS MAY PARTICIPATE.—For purposes of this part—

(i) IN GENERAL.—An employee of a church or a convention or association of churches shall include a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church who, in connection with the exercise of his or her ministry—

(I) is a self-employed individual (within the meaning of section 401(c)(1)(B)), or

(II) is employed by an organization other than an organization described in section 501(c)(3).

(ii) TREATMENT AS EMPLOYER AND EMPLOYEE.—

(I) SELF-EMPLOYED.—A minister described in clause (i)(I) shall be treated as his or her own employer which is an organization described in section 501(c)(3) and which is exempt from tax under section 501(a).

(II) OTHERS.—A minister described in clause (i)(II) shall be treated as employed by an organization described in section 501(c)(3) and exempt from tax under section 501(a).

(n) EMPLOYEE LEASING.—

* * *

(3) REQUIREMENTS.—For purposes of this subsection, the requirements listed in this paragraph are—

(A) paragraphs (3), (4), (7), (16), (17), and (26) of section 401(a),

(B) sections 408(k), 408(p), 410, 411, 415, and 416, and

(C) sections 79, 106, 117(d), 120, 125, 127, 129, 132, 137, 274(j), 505, and 4980B.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1601(h)(2)(D)(i) amended Code Sec. 414(n)(3)(C) by inserting "137," after "132,".

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which it relates [effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

(q) HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEE.—

(9) CERTAIN EMPLOYEES NOT CONSIDERED HIGHLY COMPENSATED AND EXCLUDED EMPLOYEES UNDER PRE-ERISA RULES FOR CHURCH PLANS.—In the case of a church plan (as defined in subsection (e)), no employee shall be considered an officer, a person whose principal duties consist of supervising the work of other employees, or a highly compensated employee for any year unless such employee is a highly compensated employee under paragraph (1) for such year.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1601(d)(7) amended Code Sec. 414(q)(7) (as added by Act Sec. 1462 of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996) by redesignating it as paragraph (9).

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which it relates [effective for years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

(t) APPLICATION OF CONTROLLED GROUP RULES TO CERTAIN EMPLOYEE BENEFITS.—

* * *

(2) APPLICABLE SECTION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "applicable section" means section 79, 106, 117(d), 120, 125, 127, 129, 132, 137, 274(j), 505, or 4980B.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1601(h)(2)(D)(ii) amended Code Sec. 414(t)(2) by inserting "137," after "132,".

The above amendment is effective as if included in the provision of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-188) to which it relates [effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1996.—CCH.].

[¶ 5153] CODE SEC. 415. LIMITATIONS ON BENEFITS AND CONTRIBUTION UNDER QUALIFIED PLANS.

(b) LIMITATION FOR DEFINED BENEFIT PLANS.—

* * *

(2) ANNUAL BENEFIT.—

* * *

(G) SPECIAL LIMITATION FOR QUALIFIED POLICE OR FIREFIGHTERS.—In the case of a qualified participant, subparagraph (C) of this paragraph shall not apply.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1527(a) amended Code Sec. 415(b)(2)(G) by striking "participant—" and all that follows and inserting "participant, subparagraph (C) of this paragraph shall not apply." Prior to amendment, Code Sec. 415(b)(2)(G) read as follows:

(G) SPECIAL LIMITATION FOR QUALIFIED POLICE OR FIREFIGHTERS.—In the case of a qualified participant—

(i) subparagraph (C) shall not reduce the limitation of paragraph (1)(A) to an amount less than $50,000, and

(ii) the rules of subparagraph (F) shall apply.

The Secretary shall adjust the $50,000 amount in clause (i) at the same time and in the same manner as under section 415(d).

The above amendment applies to years beginning after December 31, 1996.

(c) LIMITATION FOR DEFINED CONTRIBUTION PLANS.—

* * *

(6) SPECIAL RULE FOR EMPLOYEE STOCK OWNERSHIP PLANS.—If no more than one-third of the employer contributions to an employee stock ownership plan (as described in section 4975(e)(7)) for a year which are deductible under paragraph (9) of section 404(a) are allocated to highly compensated employees (within the meaning of section 414(q)), the limitations imposed by this section shall not apply to—

(A) forfeitures of employer securities (within the meaning of section 409) under such an employee stock ownership plan if such securities were acquired with the proceeds of a loan (as described in section 404(a)(9)(A)), or

(B) employer contributions to such an employee stock ownership plan which are deductible under section 404(a)(9)(B) and charged against the participant's account.

The amount of any qualified gratuitous transfer (as defined in section 664(g)(1)) allocated to a participant for any limitation year shall not exceed the limitations imposed by this section, but such amount shall not be taken into account in determining whether any other amount exceeds the limitations imposed by this section.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1530(c)(3) amended Code Sec. 415(c)(6) by adding at the end thereof a new sentence to read as above.

The above amendment applies to transfers made by trusts to, or for the use of, an employee stock ownership plan after the date of the enactment of this Act.

[Caution: Code Sec. 415(e), below, was repealed by P.L. 104-188, applicable to limitation years beginning after December 31, 1999.]

(e) LIMITATION IN CASE OF DEFINED BENEFIT PLAN AND DEFINED CONTRIBUTION PLAN FOR SAME EMPLOYEE.—

* * *

(6) SPECIAL RULE FOR QUALIFIED GRATUITOUS TRANSFERS.—Any qualified gratuitous transfer of qualified employer securities (as defined by section 664(g)) shall not be taken into account in calculating, and shall not be subject to, the limitations provided in this subsection.

(7) SPECIAL TRANSITION RULE FOR DEFINED CONTRIBUTION FRACTION FOR YEARS ENDING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1982.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—At the election of the plan administrator, in applying paragraph (3) with respect to any year ending after December 31, 1982, the amount taken into account under paragraph (3)(B) with respect to each participant for all years ending before January 1, 1983, shall be an amount equal to the product of—

(i) the amount determined under paragraph (3)(B) (as in effect for the year ending in 1982) for the year ending in 1982, multiplied by

(ii) the transition fraction.

(B) TRANSITION FRACTION.—The term "transition fraction" means a fraction—

(i) the numerator of which is the lesser of—

(I) $51,875, or

(II) 1.4, multiplied by 25 percent of the compensation of the participant for the year ending in 1981, and

(ii) the denominator of which is the lesser of—

(I) $41,500, or

(II) 25 percent of the compensation of the participant for the year ending in 1981.

(C) PLAN MUST HAVE BEEN IN EXISTENCE ON OR BEFORE JULY 1, 1982.—This paragraph shall apply only to plans which were in existence on or before July 1, 1982.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1504(b) provides:

(b) REPEAL OF RULES IN SECTION 415(e).—The Secretary of the Treasury shall modify the regulations regarding the exclusion allowance under section 403(b)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to reflect the amendment made by section 1452(a) of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996. Such modification shall take effect for years beginning after December 31, 1999.

Act Sec. 1530(c)(4)(A)-(B) amended Code Sec. 415(e) by redesignating paragraph (6) as paragraph (7), and by inserting after paragraph (5) a new paragraph (6) to read as above.

The above amendment applies to transfers made by trusts to, or for the use of, an employee stock ownership plan after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(k) SPECIAL RULES.—

(3) REPAYMENTS OF CASHOUTS UNDER GOVERNMENTAL PLANS.—In the case of any repayment of contributions (including interest thereon) to the governmental plan with respect to an amount previously refunded upon a forfeiture of service credit under the plan or under another governmental plan maintained by a State or local government employer within the same State, any such repayment shall not be taken into account for purposes of this section.

* * *

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1526(b) amended Code Sec. 415(k) by adding at the end a new paragraph (3) to read as above.

The above amendment generally applies to permissive service credit contributions made in years beginning after December 31, 1997. For a transition rule, see Act Sec. 1526(c)(2)(A)-(B), below.

Act Sec. 1526(c)(2)(A)-(B) provides:

(2) TRANSITION RULE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of an eligible participant in a governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986), the limitations of section 415(c)(1) of such Code shall not be applied to reduce the amount of permissive service credit which may be purchased to an amount less than the amount which was allowed to be purchased under the terms of the plan as in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(B) ELIGIBLE PARTICIPANT.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), an eligible participant is an individual who first became a participant in the plan before the first plan year beginning after the last day of the calendar year in which the next regular session (following the date of the enactment of this Act) of the governing body with authority to amend the plan ends.

(n) SPECIAL RULES RELATING TO PURCHASE OF PERMISSIVE SERVICE CREDIT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If an employee makes 1 or more contributions to a defined benefit governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d)) to purchase permissive service credit under such plan, then the requirements of this section shall be treated as met only if—

(A) the requirements of subsection (b) are met, determined by treating the accrued benefit derived from all such contributions as an annual benefit for purposes of subsection (b), or

(B) the requirements of subsection (c) are met, determined by treating all such contributions as annual additions for purposes of subsection (c).

(2) APPLICATION OF LIMIT.—For purposes of—

(A) applying paragraph (1)(A), the plan shall not fail to meet the reduced limit under subsection (b)(2)(C) solely by reason of this subsection, and

(B) applying paragraph (1)(B), the plan shall not fail to meet the percentage limitation under subsection (c)(1)(B) solely by reason of this subsection.

(3) PERMISSIVE SERVICE CREDIT.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "permissive service credit" means service credit—

(i) recognized by the governmental plan for purposes of calculating a participant's benefit under the plan,

(ii) which such participant has not received under such governmental plan, and

(iii) which such participant may receive only by making a voluntary additional contribution, in an amount determined under such governmental plan, which does not exceed the amount necessary to fund the benefit attributable to such service credit.

(B) LIMITATION ON NONQUALIFIED SERVICE CREDIT.—A plan shall fail to meet the requirements of this section if—

(i) more than 5 years of permissive service credit attributable to nonqualified service are taken into account for purposes of this subsection, or

(ii) any permissive service credit attributable to nonqualified service is taken into account under this subsection before the employee has at least 5 years of participation under the plan.

(C) NONQUALIFIED SERVICE.—For purposes of subparagraph (B), the term "nonqualified service" means service for which permissive service credit is allowed other than—

(i) service (including parental, medical, sabbatical, and similar leave) as an employee of the Government of the United States, any State or political subdivision thereof, or any agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing (other than military service or service for credit which was obtained as a result of a repayment described in subsection (k)(3)),

(ii) service (including parental, medical, sabbatical, and similar leave) as an employee (other than as an employee described in clause (i)) of an educational organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) which is a public, private, or sectarian school which provides elementary or secondary education (through grade 12), as determined under State law,

(iii) service as an employee of an association of employees who are described in clause (i), or

(iv) military service (other than qualified military service under section 414(u)) recognized by such governmental plan.

In the case of service described in clauses (i), (ii), or (iii), such service will be nonqualified service if recognition of such service would cause a participant to receive a retirement benefit for the same service under more than one plan.

Amendment Notes

Act Sec. 1526(a) amended Code Sec. 415 by adding at the end a new subsection (n) to read as above.

The above amendment generally applies to permissive service credit contributions made in years beginning after December 31, 1997. For a transition rule, see Act Sec. 1526(c)(2)(A)-(B), below.

Act Sec. 1526(c)(2)(A)-(B) provides:

(2) TRANSITION RULE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of an eligible participant in a governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986), the limitations of section 415(c)(1) of such Code shall not be applied to reduce the amount of permissive service credit which may be purchased to an amount less than the amount which was allowed to be purchased under the terms of the plan as in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.
